What can we do? We twenty-five or more state superintendents and a great host of local and county and district workers; state presidents, who to keep pace with the times must include this in their curriculum of work or be left in the rear. There are some state presidents notably faithful in this line, and results are apparent. There are also National superintendents of related departments, notably Mrs. M. M. Allen of the department of Non-Alcoholic Medication, who has written for one of the Syracuse dailies this year on health topics.

1. Every union should be a committee on sanitary conditions; an interrogation point as to street cleaning, dumping grounds, collecting and disposing of garbage, receptacles, etc.; also on environment, undrained marshes, stagnant water and other typhoid fever prolifics; unhygienic neighborhoods, houses, tenements, etc. The supervision of every passenger steamer which sails from Boston on a ten days' voyage is more severe than of any house in Boston.

2. Every union should be a board of health, co-operating with the state or municipality, or instituting health measures important for the locality.

3. Milk inspection, food supplies, bakeries, the poultry law—all these and more are included in the great subject of household economics. It is estimated that one child in every five is killed by improper feeding or dosing.

4. School Hygiene.—The individual communion cup, sanitary conditions inside and out, ventilation, exercise, cleanly habits, dress, books, attitudes, posture, manners, etc.

5. Petition your state legislatures for

(Continued on page 17.)

Like a Derrick.

Pure Food Lifts the Sick Up.

Only those who have experienced the delicious feeling of returning health and vigor can properly appreciate the value of pure food. When the improper food is left off and scientific food, such as Grape-Nuts, is used in its place, one begins to feel the glow of returning health. It feels as though some powerful derrick was lifting one up into the realms of sunshine once more.

"Some time ago I was taken sick, and got so very low that I thought at times I would never be able to get out again," writes a business man of Wilmington, Del. "One day my wife saw an article in the paper about Grape-Nuts and read it to me. I was so impressed that I asked her to get some. How thankful I am that I did so! I was at that time reduced to a shadow of 75 pounds, but the first week's use of Grape-Nuts brought me to my feet so that I could stand alone. By the second week I could walk out, to the great surprise of all, and now I can get out to my business without any trouble, and I have made the phenomenal gain up to 160 pounds.

"Improper food nearly killed me, but when I left it off and used Grape-Nuts it did not take long to put me back in health." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"Feed right, feel right," is a true axiom. Remember, Grape-Nuts food is for athletes, as well as the sick.

Latest Leaflets

Home Leaflets For Mothers' Meetings

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers. Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.

No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflet

No. 3 Safeguard the Home. Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion—What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.

No. 94 American Liberty—Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.

No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

No. 97 Facts Concerning the Canteen. Margaret Dye Ellis.

L. T. L.

No. 214 Mission of the Senior L. T. L. Herbert C. Shattuck.

No. 215 The Province of the L. T. L. Charles Wesley Burns.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets

Y. W. C. T. U.

No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.

L. T. L.

No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

School Savings Banks.

No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Soldiers and Sailors.

No. 192. What Makes a Good Soldier. Lord Roberts.

Parlor Meetings.

No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Narcotics.

No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?

Food Economics.

No. 216 Part I. Louise C. Purington, M. D.

No. 217 Part II. Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet

No. 18 Experience. The Schoolmaster.

Signal Lights.

No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.

Price, 25c. per 100.

Miscellaneous Leaflets.

God's Nobleman,
White Cross Movement,
The White Shield Society; Its Purpose and Membership,
High Ideals for Schools,
Practical Benefits of the Curfew Law,
Consider the Lilies,
The Power of the White Ribbon,
A Mother's Letter to the Y Girls.

Price, 50c. Per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.

(Continued from page 16.)

health ordinances. For instance and by way of illustration: "We, the undersigned, do most earnestly beseech and petition your honorable bodies to pass a bill with penalty affixed to prohibit expectoration in public buildings, public conveyances and upon sidewalks."

Bills to prevent adulteration of foods; for purity and preservation; also against misbranding and imitation.

New Hampshire.—Mrs. Ada P. Shaw, Wolfboro, superintendent, gives an outline of work very suggestive in this department.

The following statistics are as alive as figures can make them, and to one who reads between the lines they are both vivid and prophetic:

Thirty-five per cent of the 110 unions of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U. report work done in the department of Health and Heredity. An increase of five (eleven) superintendents (local) reported. Six Health meetings have been held; twelve papers on Heredity written and read by members; fifteen discussions on Heredity by members; two sermons preached by local pastors (by request); two unions have taken up special study of Heredity; one address on "Dress Reform," by state superintendent of this department; three unions have used the March, 1902, Responsive Reading programs; one L. T. L. has had lessons on Heredity and Environment; four report day and Sunday-school teachers interested in Heredity; fourteen churches have adopted the individual communion cup this year through the efforts of union workers; five schools visited, and the individual cup now in general use as a result; six report distributing "drinking cup cards" at public places; six report sanitary work in schools; four report an effort this year for the enactment of the curfew law (petitions now in the hands of city council and other officials); nine unions take health magazines, "Good Health," "Health in the Home," etc. Many report public library as having volumes on Health or Heredity (most of them Health), but only three gave the number, which equals 142 (all "Health" but one—"Heredity"). Eight unions have distributed literature furnished by state board of health; one farmer's bulletin, No. 63, to milk dealers; four have worked in sanitary lines with good result; sixteen unions report distributing Health and Heredity literature, but few give the number of pages.

The New Hampshire union petitioned this year for a law, with penalty attached, against expectoration in public places.

At the state convention a plea was made in behalf of the habits of the child, especially the manner of eating and drinking.

Domestic Science and Sanitation.

Mrs. Marion A. MacBride makes the following requests: Please use your influence for the passage and enforcement of a pure food bill by the United States Congress. (The bill has passed the House.)

Ask for a vote in state conventions, and when passed, send copy signed by the state W. C. T. U. officers to Dr. H. W. Wylie, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Ask your representatives in congress to vote for the bill supported by Dr. Wylie, who is our leader, and stands for government honor and home protection. Mr. A. C. True, of the Department of Agriculture, also stands by this bill.

"The Science of Nutrition," by Hon. Edward Atkinson, through the generosity of Mr. Andrew Carnegie, is in nearly every public library in the United States. It contains rules for every-day cooking, prepared by practical and trained teachers. The cooking method advocated is the Aladdin oven.

Sanitation.

Cleanliness in public places must be compulsory if health is to be secured and maintained. Where bad conditions prevail, report to your local board of health. If they are indifferent, appeal to the state board. If the red tape there is too strong, enlist the co-operation of other organizations of women in your vicinity. Women can cut red tape if they will. Newspaper men and women are loyal co-workers.

Louise C. Purington, M. D.
23 Allston street, Dorchester, Boston.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

The Work in Australia.

We note with great pleasure that the Society for the Prevention of Consumption has placed many notices prohibiting expectoration on the footpaths (penalty £20) in our streets, similar notices having been posted in the street cars. A distinct improvement is noticeable.

All friends of boys will be glad to hear that an Anti-Cigaret League is shortly to be formed, with branches in all parts of the state. Gympie union has discussed the local option clauses of the licensing act, and purchased literature on this subject and on the duties of citizenship. At Bundamba the president gave an inspiring gospel address, the keynote being praise for the splendid victory at the recent local option poll.

The president of the Fairfield union, Mrs. M. Wilkins, having returned from a tour around the world during which she attended the B. W. T. A. Conference, was welcomed warmly by her own union, by the district executive, and at the closing gathering of the state executive for the year. At each of these she gave interesting accounts of workers she met in other lands.

Gladstone union and L. T. L. held a most successful picnic on the King's birthday. Their march through the streets with flags and banners attracted much notice. One hundred and sixteen names are now on the roll of this Legion, and instructive blackboard lessons are given.

Very general sympathy will be felt for Mrs. Sagar, one of our oldest and most devoted workers, and Australasian superintendent of agricultural shows, who mourns the death of her husband. Mr. Sagar was a firm friend of our cause and always ready to help in every way that lay in his power.

At the closing meeting of Ithaca union, an autograph tray-cloth was presented to Mrs. Trout for her loving and faithful services. The proceeds augmented the union funds.

Thompson Estate union held a thanksgiving social to celebrate the freedom of their hall from debt. There was a good attendance and several addresses of encouragement were given, each speaker mentioning some personal experiences in connection with the hall. The building was purchased about thirteen years ago, for mothers' meetings, and by untiring energy and devotion on the part of the members, the full price has now been paid. The crowning effort was made by the L. T. L., who by their recent bazaar, realized £5 2s. 3p. for this purpose.

A very pleasant afternoon was recently spent at the home of Mrs. E. B. Harris, state president, when the executive was invited to a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rowntree, who were on a visit to our state. After tea had been served, both the visitors gave interesting accounts of temperance work in England and of different aspects of reform work.

C. A. Brentnall,
Correspondent.

Queensland, Australia.

Lion Coffee States of America

The greatest nation in the world is the greatest consumer of coffee.

Lion Coffee

is the standard beverage of every state and territory of the Union. It's pure—that's why.

Always in 1 lb. air-tight, sealed packages, insuring freshness and uniform quality.

STALL'S BOOKS

DR. STALL

A Man with a Message

Millions of people always await the man with a real message. Dr. Stall has found it so. His books are already circulated in every land.

275th thousand in English.

They are being translated into several languages in Europe and two in Asia.

THE SELF AND SEX SERIES
has the unqualified endorsement of

Dr. Joseph Cook	Bishop Vincent
Rev. C. M. Sheldon	Anthony Comstock
Rev. F. B. Meyer	"Pansy"
Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler	Frances E. Willard
Dr. Francis E. Clark	Lady H. Somerset

Eminent physicians and hundreds of others.

4 BOOKS TO MEN. By Sylvanus Stall, D.D.
What a Young Boy Ought to Know.
What a Young Man Ought to Know.
What a Young Husband Ought to Know.
What a Man of 45 Ought to Know.

4 BOOKS TO WOMEN. By Mrs. Mary Wood-Allen, M.D., and Mrs. Emma F. A. Drake, M.D.
What a Young Girl Ought to Know.
What a Young Woman Ought to Know.
What a Young Wife Ought to Know.
What a Woman of 45 Ought to Know.

$1 per copy, post free. Send for table of contents.

Vir Publishing Co. 78 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia

OIL--SMELTER--MINES.
Dividend-Paying Mining, Oil and Smelter Stocks, Listed and Unlisted, our Specialty.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,
Bankers & Brokers, Fiscal Agents,
Members N. Y. Consolidated Stock Exchange.
66 BROADWAY & 17 NEW ST., NEW YORK.
Booklets giving our successful plan for realizing the large interest and profits of legitimate mining, oil and smelter investments, sub. blanks, full particulars, etc., sent free on application.

PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR
MAN AND BEAST.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED BY
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,
84-90 Beekman Street,
NEW YORK.

Responsive Readings
Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for March Reading,

Christian Citizenship.

By Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford,
National Superintendent of the Department of Christian Citizenship.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Busy Day for the W. C. T. U.

In one day the W. C. T. U. convention at Portland considered the liquor traffic, tobacco, purity, mormonism, mob violence, military appropriations, child labor and the coal strike. Yet we are told that when women get together they talk of nothing but dress and their neighbors. Out upon such vile slanders.—Denver Post.

"Can I ask you one more question, papa, if it ain't foolish?" inquired Bobby, who had been badgering the old gentleman all the evening. "Ya'as, ya'as." "Why is it, papa, that the more a little boy's nose is stopped up, the more he talks through it?"

Noise is not usually a passport to popularity. But the Archbishop of Canterbury by his stentorian voice won the affections many years ago of a Devonshire farmer, who was overheard to say, admiringly, near the bottom of a church where the then Bishop of Exeter was preaching, "I du love the beshup, 'cos he hollers proper."

I would rather see the devil any day than a beautiful woman raising a glass of wine to her lips. Neither the brain nor any part of the nervous circulatory system of the female is so constituted as to resist the insinuating evil effects of wine. Alcohol in any form or shape begins at once to undermine the constitution and moral character as well of womankind. The girl in her later teens who sits down at a dinner party somewhat shyly and with a pretty self-consciousness, but who feels on better terms with herself and those around her after her first sip or two of champagne, has already placed her dainty foot on the topmost rung of the ladder that leads to the bottomless pit of the lowest social life.—Dr. Gordon Stables, of Englind.

'Tis a Pity

To Stay Sick, When a Postal Will Bring Help.

Please note this offer again.

Send no money—just a postal, stating which book you need.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

Just think what that means.

It proves that I have faith in the remedy, and faith in the honesty of people. It shows that I have learned how to cure these diseases, else the offer would ruin me.

Let me convince you. You are waiting when you should be well. When the test is made, I don't want a penny, unless you are glad to pay.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves, which operate the vital organs. I have spent my life in learning how to do it. A weak organ means weak nerve power. It is like a weak engine that needs more steam. To doctor the organ is useless; what it needs is power to act. My Restorative alone brings back that power, and in most of these diseases no other way can cure.

My book will tell you why.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

A "District School" entertainment given by the union at Marietta, Ohio, netted nearly $150.

Miss Verdalyn Lucas won the silver medal by reciting "Old Soapy" at a contest in Ottawa, Ill.

Miss Lois Russell is in the field in Wisconsin, speaking to large audiences and organizing unions.

Mattoon, Ill., union presented Miss Willard's picture, handsomely framed, to the city high school.

A Y of twenty-five members has been organized at Maysville, N. Dak., by Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart.

Reports of Willard Memorial meetings come in from all parts of the country. The treasurer's report will soon show the unions which held them.

"What is the most interesting thing you know about the W. C. T. U.?" was the topic of an experience meeting given by the Central City (Syracuse, N. Y.) union.

The W. C. T. U. of Watertown, N. Y., is strongly advocating the passage of a curfew law for that city. A rummage sale and a medal contest will soon give them working funds.

More than eighty of the boys in blue stationed at Fort Washington, Md., have joined the soldiers' union. A movement is on foot to organize an L. T. L. there for the children.

A "Current Events" social is an appropriate undertaking for an educated class of women like the W. C. T. U. constituency. Houston, Texas, union gave one with satisfactory results.

Hubbard, Minn., W. C. T. U. recently held a debate on the question of restricting foreign immigration. It was decided that immigration should be subject to some restriction. Two new members were gained.

The annual meeting of the board of trustees of the New York State Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Bath was petitioned by New York State W. C. T. U. to abolish the canteen and saloons near the grounds of the home.

Miss Belle Kearney is to be in the east all of April and May. For dates for those two months, and indefinitely after, write to Miss H. Frances Jones, 812 North Twentieth street, Philadelphia, Pa., who has charge of Miss Kearney's itinerary.

Mrs. Addie Northam Fields speaks at the penitentiary in Mexico City every Sunday morning. She deals principally with physiology and hygiene in its relation to alcohol and narcotics. The Mexican government co-operates with Mrs. Fields in every way.

North Carolina W. C. T. U. presented a portrait of Miss Willard to the State Normal and Industrial College on the afternoon of February 17, Memorial Day. The portrait was painted by Mr. W. G. Randall, a North Carolina artist. Mrs. Mary E. Cartland made the presentation, and Dr. McIver accepted it for the college.

The best is none too good for Indiana. The corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hattie W. Brand, is making lecture engagements for Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Miss Marie C. Brehm, Miss Lillian Phelps, Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, Miss Anna A. Gordon and Rev. Frances Townsley. It will be well for National banner holders to look to their laurels.

For thirty years the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been making history. Now these histories are being written and put into enduring form. Mrs. O. S. Garretson, president of No. 1 union of Buffalo, has written a comprehensive and interesting account of Erie county W. C. T. U. from its organization in 1885 to the present.

An interesting feature of a temperance meeting in Ottawa, Ill., was a comparison of the temperate home and the reverse by means of tableaux, poetry and song. "The Cotter's Saturday Night" was read, the pictures illustrating the reading. The opposite kind of a home was illustrated while "Father, dear father, come home with me now," was sung.

Central City, Neb., union showed wisdom in giving a reception to the public school teachers of the town. A close touch between the school, the pupils and the union is thus maintained, and W. C. T. U. work in the school strengthened. A paper on the relation of parent and teacher was read by Mrs. Mary D. Russell, and responded to by one of the professors.

Mrs. E. L. Parmenter, W. C. T. U. president of the twelfth district of Michigan, and for many years leader of the temperance forces at Menominee, is critically ill at her home in that city. Mrs. Parmenter has been an untiring worker in the cause, and her influence and example have been felt in the whole of the upper peninsula. Her many friends are greatly distressed by her illness.

Since the Colorado annual convention that tireless Friend, Ruth H. Spray, its entertainer, together with her union in the mountain town of Salida, has been again waging war on the gambling in that railroad center. They have succeeded this time, compelling the adoption of an ordinance in conformity to state law, and being themselves voting citizens, as well as Christian citizens, they expect to hold the ground they have won.

All the saloons of Council Bluffs, Iowa, are to be visited by committees of the local unions. These committees have already begun their work. The saloonkeepers are at first puzzled to know whether a Bible or a hatchet is to be used, but when the object of the visit is made plain, they answer the questions asked, namely: "Does the Sunday theater interfere with Sunday night saloon trade?" "What attracted you to the saloon trade?" "Did you realize its effect on humanity?" The women wish to be informed by personal inspection of the liquor traffic and the conditions that surround the bar-rooms.

A Vermont correspondent writes as follows: "Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman's itinerary in the Vermont campaign against license was long and arduous. From December 12 until February 3 she covered parts of eight counties, taking long, cold drives at hours early and late, with the thermometer below zero a large part of the time. It was a trip that even a Vermont woman would dread to take. But her brave efforts were well rewarded. During the time she made fifty addresses, and from every appointment came warm words of praise. Many acknowledged that she changed their vote. She will be very welcome in Vermont should she return."

Crowned.

The echo of the roll-call in Heaven has again sounded in the El Reno, Oklahoma, union, and Mrs. Mary L. Ingraham has answered. She was Evangelistic and Purity superintendent, and accomplished much good in her quaint and characteristic way.

One Year For 10 Cents.

A Beautifully Illustrated Magazine for 10 Cents a Year.

A new magazine is being started out in Colorado and for the first year will be sent for 10c. a year.

The idea is to publish stories of adventure, engravings of grand mountain scenery, sketches of lucky "finds" in gold mines, etc. Typical of the West. The first edition will soon be ready to mail. It is really an honor to become a subscriber to the first issue of any paper and here's a chance for our readers. Back of the magazine is an old and solid publishing company that will insure success. Send 10c. for a whole year. Clubs of six 50c. 12 for $1. Or, six years to one person, 50c. Tell all your friends. Postage stamps taken. Send all subscriptions to the Rocky Mountain Magazine, Denver, Colo.

This Man

was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

REPETITION

is the life of advertising—It is also the life of the largest mail-order seed trade in the world—

BURPEE'S!

Were it not for repeat-orders every year from satisfied planters we could not supply the

Best Seeds that Grow

at such moderate prices. We want every one who appreciates quality to write for Burpee's Farm Annual for 1903. Long known as "the Leading American Seed Catalogue," it is better now than ever before. An elegant book of 184 pages, with beautiful colored plates and hundreds of illustrations, it tells the plain truth. Write to-day! Do not delay! It's FREE.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia

STOP Making Medicine Sharks Rich.

Taking drugs and Nostrums, Indian and old woman discoveries. Your stomach is for food not "poisons." Cleanse your system by Nature's Drugless Method. Get into a Vapor Bath Cabinet, steam and sweat the poisons from the blood and system by opening the millions of skin pores, equalizing the circulation. Remove the load and Nature will do the rest. Astonishing are the results. 10 days' trial will surprise you. Physicians and best hospitals cure acute, chronic cases by this method. Delightful bath for men, women and children. Harmless, exhilerating. Write for "New Book" just out FREE. Prices reduced. $5.00 Cabinet $3.50. $10.00 Cabinet $6.10. Catalogue free. Agents Wanted. Big Wages. Address, WORLD MFG. CO., 618 World Bldg., CINCINNATI, O.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. Regular price, $3. SPECIAL PRICE (for 30 days only), $1. By mail, sealed in plain wrapper.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

"Sunshine Powders."

Bright, cheery, helpful and encouraging! Just what you need as a gift to send to a friend, sick or well! They are most attractively prepared by a "shut in." There are thirty powders, jewels of thought, on yellow paper in a white box, tied with a dainty ribbon, and printed directions for taking.

Price 25 cents, postpaid, Address,

MRS. HENRY M. GOODELL,
44 Mentor Ave., Pasadena, Cal.

Have you ever attended a

National W. C. T. U. Convention

Here is YOUR Opportunity to be Present at the Next One

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure NEW subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing BE SURE to mention the name of your nearest railroad station

Circulation Department

UNION SIGNAL
184 La Salle Street, CHICAGO

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

(The Kilgour family are engaged in a desperate struggle to save the idolized youngest son, Claude, from the curse of cigaret smoking and the evil life it had led him into. The death of his brother Willie seemed to arouse his weakened manhood, and he was allowed to go to work in a shop. It is soon found that he is continuing his evil course of stealing, lying, gambling, and using tobacco. Finally he disappears from home in company with two boys older and more depraved than himself.)

Chapter IX.

AT the edge of a small hamlet in the far Georgian Bay district there dwelt in a little log hut, alone and unknown, an old, old man whom the villagers called "Old Man Malatt." Nobody knew whether or not this was his name, and local curiosity concerning the hermit had died out many years before. It was generally believed, however, that the old man was a miser, and that he had stored away in his tiny domicile long-gathered hoards of gold.

One evening, about dusk, a laborer named Will Haldimand was passing the miser's hut. Across his shoulders was slung a bag containing a bushel of plums, a present from his employer, which the lad was carrying home to his widowed mother in the village. Suddenly he stopped short, and retraced his steps back to old man Malatt's den.

"Guess I'll leave a plate of these with the old beggar; it'll please mother," thought Will, who would have blushed deeply at any imputation of a kind thought on his own part. He had formed a habit of frequently leaving some little gift of fruit or vegetable at the old man's door. "What if the niggardly old fellow could buy me up and all the village? I guess he has no happy time of it with no folks, poor old man." Thus would Will excuse himself.

His knock bringing no response, he entered. The old man was crouched up beside his bed, his body contorted, his face to the floor. He was quite dead. The room was disordered, as if everything had been pulled about; but without pausing to take note, the terrified youth fled from the place, shrieking: "Help, help! Murder!"

After a few hours' investigation it was found that robbery had been the motive for the crime. The room had been completely overhauled, but whether or not any booty had been secured the detectives were unable to determine. Evidence indicated that the robber had been interrupted and had hastily fled. The old man had been bound securely with cord, but appearances indicated that he had made a brave fight for life and liberty. He had been dead three days.

Will Haldimand was arrested, though no one believed him capable of the bloody deed. The officers thought best, however, to retain him, explaining that he was kept as the most important witness. It was a time of unspeakable anguish to the horrified lad and to his poor mother, but he was released at the preliminary hearing, no circumstance being found which could point even to a suspicion against him. The murder was adjudged to be the work of tramps, and the provincial detectives were unremitting in their efforts to unravel the mystery.

They did not have a very complicated case on their hands. Three tramps had been seen in the vicinity—all young men, two of them mere youths. These wretched boys were finally traced. Two of them were arrested in Owen Sound, and one had made his way to Port Arthur.

Brought to trial, they stoutly and persistently denied all knowledge of the crime, until each detail was relentlessly, hopelessly fixed upon them by overwhelming circumstantial evidence. Then they confessed, but their confession brought them no favor in the eyes of the court. Evidently the trio did not realize the horror of their deed—indeed, one could scarcely doubt, from their independent demeanor and ill-concealed bravado, that they secretly gloried in the tale of their adventures.

The youngest of the prisoners was a tall youth, apparently seventeen or eighteen years of age, though he insisted that he was only fifteen. He had a muddy, sallow complexion, dark eyebrows and close-cropped dark hair. He gave his name as Dave Adams, and his home as Chicago. It was but a very short time after his arrest that the discovery was made that this boy had disguised his real appearance with walnut stain and hair dye. After he was subjected to a process of vigorous scrubbing and expert manipulation, his countenance was revealed in the clear, beautiful red-and-white English coloring and faultless features of Claude Kilgour.

Almost simultaneously with the arrest of the prisoners, Ralph Kilgour arrived on the scene, accompanied by Mr. Hector Gaspard, man of letters and breeding, city clerk, and father of Adrien, one of the misguided runaways.

The story of the crime can best be told in Claude's own words, when put on the witness stand at the assizes:

"We never intended to kill the old man. We had made our way along without harming anyone. We wouldn't deign to rob a poor person, but we have no use for rich, old curmudgeons who don't help humanity. We are socialists and believe in equal rights for all parties, and that the bloated rich man should be forced into sharing alike with everybody. Whatever we took from anyone who had too much (a series of robberies had been traced to the trio) we always shared up with the first fellow we came to who was in hard luck. When we got to this hamlet we found ourselves down in our luck. We'd been put off the freight and needed money to get on with. We found out about this old man and made up our minds he had got to disburse. He had more hid away than he would ever use. He was an old man, though, so we made up our minds not to scare him or harm him, but just to tell him our views and make him come down reasonably. We waited till dark, and then we started for the place. When we knocked at the door he opened it and asked us who we were, and we told him just some visitors who wanted to see him on important business. We pushed in, and he lit a lantern. My pard (indicating Adrien) told him what we had come for and how we had got to have some of his pile, and if he wouldn't give in quietly we'd get it anyhow. The old man showed fight, so we tied him up and gagged him while we searched the room. We found forty-three dollars in a little tin box on a shelf, and were looking for more when we saw a light. It seemed to be coming across the field. We got frightened, and we made up our minds to quit with what we had. The old man didn't seem scared, but he was very angry. I think he understood we didn't intend to do him any harm, only just to teach him a lesson that it wasn't good for rich men to do as he was doing. Frank told him that we were going to ungag him and set him loose, but that he must promise not to raise any outcry for at least twenty-four hours. Then Adrien and I ungagged him, and he set up such a row that we didn't untie him. Frank took out the revolver and told him if he didn't stop instanter he'd be a dead man. We had begun to be scared at the noise he was making, and Frank did that to frighten him, but Adrien thought maybe Frank was in earnest, and he said:

"'We'll gag him again and leave him here.' The old man was quiet by that time, and Frank said, 'Will you promise to do what we ask?' The old man wouldn't answer, and then Frank and Adrien began to row. Frank was for threatening him till he promised to give in, and Adrien was for leaving him tied there, and getting away. Adrien tried to get away the revolver, and it fell on the floor, and I picked it up and said to the old man: 'Here, now, you'd better give in!' Before God, I didn't intend to shoot, but Frank made a rush for the revolver, and it went off and hit the old man. Adrien said, 'Now you've done it!' and we all got away as quickly as we could."

Cross examination failed to elicit much change in Claude's original story. Adrien Gaspard's evidence substantially agreed with that of Claude's; Frank Fulton denied every detail which would tend to set blame on his own head and charged Claude and Adrien with all responsibility. Adrien stuck to the story of the altercation as related by Claude, but it could not be determined by his evidence as to which of the other two the crime rested upon. Claude stoutly denied any intention to shoot when he picked up the revolver, and he maintained that he had meant nothing in the way of a threat when he advised the old man to surrender. He had picked up the weapon because, although Frank has borrowed it that day, it belonged to him, and he intended to put it into his pocket and end the altercation, but before he could do so, Frank had reached for it and the shooting had occurred.

Thus the issue rested between Frank Fulton, a young man nineteen years old, who had possessed an unsavory reputation as a transgressor from early boyhood, and Claude Kilgour, who, despite his extreme youth, had displayed such a total lack of remorse and emotion, such an unabashed front to the court, that the hearers set him down as the most hardened young reprobate of the three—a degenerate, a moral idiot.

The judge's speech to the jurors was marked by depth of feeling, profound thought and judicial understanding of the case from every standpoint. He used to the uttermost his advantage to point out the awful effects of yellow literature on the youth of the generation, to refer to the evils of cigarets, of bad companionship and of defective home training. He pointed to the late alarming increase of youthful criminals. He likewise discoursed well and soundly upon the prevalent and pernicious practice of the free handling of firearms by foolish, wicked and irresponsible persons, pointing out that scarcely a week, even a day, passed that did not unfold some fresh tragedy of "accidental" shooting. It was becoming too much the fashion to threaten, whether in jest or anger, and in either case it should be regarded and punished as a crime. It would take only heroic measures to check this fast-growing evil, which was engendering in the breasts of many carelessness with regard to the sacredness of human life. Where firearms and threats were freely used in connection with a foul and cowardly robbery, the question of actual intention was an unimportant issue. The life had been taken, human blood shed, and it was high time a grave example should be made.

The verdict was "Guilty." The sentence was, fifteen years imprisonment for the lad Gaspard, and hanging for Frank Fulton and Claude Kilgour.

(To be continued.)

A Layman

Gave Doctor a hint about Coffee.

Speaking of coffee, a doctor of Decaturville, Ohio, says: "We used to analyze coffee at the medical college, and in spite of our laboratory tests, which showed it to contain caffeine, an active poison, I continued to use the drink, and later on found myself affected with serious stomach trouble, indigestion, headaches, etc.

"The headaches came on so regularly and oppressed me so that I found it difficult to attend to my regular duties. One day last November I met a friend whom I had known to be similarly afflicted. His marked improvement in appearance caused me to inquire what he had been doing. He announced that he had, some time ago, quit coffee and was using Postum Food Coffee. To this change he attributed the change in his health.

"I took the hint, even from a layman, and made the same change myself. The first week I noticed a little difference, but not much. The third week the change was almost magical. I have continued with the Postum, and now my digestion is perfect, the nervous headaches have entirely disappeared, and I am well. My own analysis of the Postum Food Coffee shows it to be a pure food drink of strong character, which is a marked contrast to the old-fashioned coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Superior Merit.

Remarkable Curative Properties of a Remedy for Indigestion and Stomach Weakness.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a preparation for the cure of dyspepsia and the various forms of indigestion and stomach trouble, owes its great success as a cure for these troubles to the fact that it is prepared for disease and weakness of the stomach and digestive organs only, and is not recommended or advised for any other disease.

It is not a cure-all, but for any stomach trouble it is undoubtedly the safest, most sensible remedy that can be advised with the prospect of a permanent cure. It is prepared in tablet form, pleasant to taste, composed of vegetable and fruit essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal, every one of which act effectively in digesting the food eaten, thereby resting and invigorating the weak stomach; rest is nature's cure for any disease, but you cannot rest the stomach unless you put into it something that will do its work or assist in the digestion of foods.

That is exactly what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do; one grain of the digestive principle contained in them will digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or similar wholesome foods. They will digest the food whether the stomach is in working order or not, thereby nourishing the body and resting the stomach at the same time, and rest and nourishment is nature's cure for any weakness.

In persons run down in flesh and appetite these tablets build up the strength and increase flesh, because they digest flesh-forming food which the weak stomach cannot do, they increase the flow of gastric juice and prevent fermentation, acidity and sour watery risings.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores at 50 cents per package.

Only One Night to FLORIDA

In addition to its regular 9:00 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. train service for all points south, the "Big Four Route" is running a Pullman drawing room sleeper on its 1:00 p. m. train, daily except Sunday, Chicago to St. Augustine, Florida, via Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Macon and Jacksonville, only 32 hours enroute. This train is known as the "Chicago and Florida Special," and is strictly up to the 20th century mark. Call on agents for rates and tickets via "Big Four-Q & C Route," or address

Chas. S. LaFollette, T. P. A. OR J. C. Tucker, Gen'l Northern Agent

234 Clark St., Chicago

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME

TRAIN TO NURSE

Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free. American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

IS YOUR HUSBAND, SON OR FATHER A

Drunkard

If so, send us your name and address with 4 cts. to cover postage, packing, etc., we will send you a package of our "Secret Cure" free, in a plain package with full directions how to give it secretly in tea, coffee, food, etc. It is odorless and tasteless and will cure this dreadful habit, quietly and permanently without the patient's knowledge or consent. It is a positive and permanent "Secret Cure" for the Drink Habit, and will cost you nothing to try it. Good for both sexes.

MILO DRUG CO., Dept. 137 St. Louis, Mo.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.

CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CONSUMPTION

Parliamentary Difficulties.

Conducted by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin

A Study.

QUES.—What is meant by the motion to reconsider?

ANS.—To consider a second time.

QUES.—When is the motion necessary?

ANS.—After a question has been adopted or rejected or suppressed, it cannot during the same session be again brought before the body except by this motion to reconsider.

QUES.—When is the motion in order?

ANS.—In a series of meetings the same day or the day following; in a local society holding meetings once a week or once a month, during the same meeting or the one following.

QUES.—Can the floor be taken from a member to move to reconsider?

ANS.—It can; but the motion cannot be acted upon while another question is before the house.

QUES.—Can it be made when the motion to adjourn is before the house?

ANS.—It can; even while the vote is being taken a member may secure the floor and move a reconsideration, in which case, as above, it would go on the "record."

QUES.—Suppose a motion has been made and entered in the journal, who can call it up?

ANS.—The mover need not call it up until the next meeting on a succeeding day. If the mover then fails to call it up, any member can do so.

QUES.—When called up where does it rank?

ANS.—It takes precedence of everything except to adjourn or to fix the time to which to adjourn.

QUES.—Who must move to reconsider?

ANS.—Except when the vote is by ballot, one who voted with the prevailing side.

QUES.—Can a vote taken by ballot be reconsidered?

ANS.—It can, except in election of officers. If a member who is present is elected and does not decline, that vote could not be reconsidered.

QUES.—Can any and all other votes be reconsidered?

ANS.—Except to adjourn and to suspend the rules, and an affirmative vote to table or take from the table.

QUES.—Why cannot the motion to table be reconsidered?

ANS.—It is much more direct to move to take from the table.

QUES.—Can the motion to reconsider be itself tabled?

ANS.—It can, but would carry nothing with it.

QUES.—Suppose a motion with an amendment, or with two amendments (an amendment to the amendment), has been carried could the amendments be reconsidered?

ANS.—Not until the vote on the main question has been reconsidered.

QUES.—Is this motion to reconsider debatable?

ANS.—If the motion to be reconsidered was debatable; not otherwise.

QUES.—Suppose the vote was taken under the previous question, and such a vote was reconsidered, would the previous question still hold and so make the main question, otherwise debatable, undebatable?

ANS.—It would not hold, except where the previous question was only partly executed. For instance, if the original motion with an amendment was before the house, and the amendment had been adopted or rejected, and before the principal motion was acted upon a member should move to reconsider the amendment, that main motion would not be debatable, for the previous question is still in force.

QUES.—Could a vote for the previous question be reconsidered?

ANS.—Not after it is partly executed.

QUES.—On a vote to reconsider suppose the "ayes" have it, where is the question?

ANS.—Exactly where it was just before it was voted upon.

QUES.—Could a member speak to the question who spoke when the motion was first before the house?

ANS.—She could not, but she could get in her speech while the body was debating whether they would reconsider.

QUES.—Suppose a motion that requires a two-thirds vote fails to pass, who then would move to reconsider?

ANS.—One who voted against the motion; the same would hold true of a tie vote.

QUES.—Can a secondary motion be reconsidered?

ANS.—It can; in which case it would, of course, take precedence of the main question.

QUES.—Does the motion to reconsider require a two-thirds vote?

ANS.—A majority vote.

QUES.—How many times may a vote be reconsidered?

ANS.—Once only.

QUES.—Do these same rules hold in a committee?

ANS.—Not on all points. A committee can reconsider a vote regardless of the time that has elapsed since it was taken, providing that when the reconsideration was moved every member who voted with the majority is present (this means, of course, before the committee has reported to the body).

This may not be denominated an "exhaustive study," as has been insisted upon by some, but will answer for the present distress, and is (in a sense) "a model" for any "study."

The trouble in understanding "to take from the table" in February "Difficulties," will be fully reconsidered in April UNION SIGNAL.

Portland, Mich.

A traveling man who drove across the country to a little town in western Kansas the other day met a farmer hauling a wagon load of water. "Where do you get water?" he asked. "Up the road about seven miles," the farmer replied. "And you haul water seven miles for your family and stock?" "Yep." "Why in the name of sense don't you dig a well?" asked the traveler. "Because it's just as far one way as the other, stranger."

Relieve Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh.
BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
Cure Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness.
Nothing excels this simple remedy.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH
Polishes quickest, with most brilliant black lustre. Makes old stoves look like new. Nothing so easy. Large package.
MADE BY PROPRIETORS OF RISING SUN STOVE POLISH.

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB.

By JOHN F. COWAN, D. D.

THE fog was thick enough to cut on the night on which the Club met and the street lamp shone a dingy saffron hue; but the members sang, "There is Sunshine in My Soul Today," as heartily as if they were all basking in a Southern California sun glow.

A newspaper reporter who had been drawn in by the rumor that a lot of cheerful lunatics met to throw nose-gays at the world, blinked and scratched his head and actually rolled up the window shade before the second verse was through, as though he expected a burst of sunshine to pour in.

"We ought to have a meeting and a half to devote to Redstone, Col.," said Deacon Hilarious, who was in the chair, and who insisted that the bonnet be passed first for the offering, as he never enjoyed a meeting to the thirty-third degree until he had given something.

"I'm your song-bird for Redstone," sang out O. B. Cheerful. "I'm just from there. It ought to be called Ruddy-stone, Rhinestone, Rubicund stone. Why, the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company has a public school, kindergarten, boys' club, girls' club, cooking class, sewing class, night school, reading-room, recreation hall, gymnasium, and—I shall have to stop to get my breath—all for the benefit of their employes. O, yes, there's a hospital the equal of anything in Chicago, besides the hundreds of sanitary workmen's cottages, with bathrooms, etc., that take the place of huts and tents. They publish an illustrated magazine, entitled "Camp and Plant," and for a nimble dime the August number will tell you the whole story."

Mrs. Confidence Smyle fluttered something white in her hand. It could not be a flag of truce, for optimists never surrender. It proved to be a letter from the alert and optimistic secretary of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, calling attention to an editorial in the "Journal of Education," crediting much of the increase of total abstainers among the young to the temperance education of the past fifteen years. Mr. Robert Woods, of the South End Settlement House, in his recent work, "Americans in Process," also bears strong testimony to the falling off of the saloon business, and this, too, may be attributed largely to temperance education in the public schools.

"Don't let any one think," said Prof. Gleeful, fixing his eye on the reporter with the penetration of a X-ray, "that the human race is deteriorating because we get columns of murders for breakfast. Only the other day Dr. Gunsaulus awarded four medals for heroic life-saving, one to a sailor, one to a policeman, one to a fireman, and one to a fourteen-year-old girl."

"Firemen and policemen are expected to do brave deeds," spoke up Mrs. Thankful Frame, "but how many of you have seen, in the December Century, Dr. Weir Mitchell's recapitulation of seven hundred and seventeen accounts of efforts at life-saving. This article tells of fifty-three children under fifteen years of age who risked their lives to save others."

"But please remember," added Harry Heartsease, "that those who save the body are not the only heroes who sacrifice and risk. St. Bartholomew's church, New York, has enrolled 1,050 street boys in clubs, and provides them attractions to keep them off the streets at night. Besides these it has a men's club of 600 and a working girls' club of 1,300. Its employment office filled over 4,000 applications for work last year, and it has a loan bureau that did a business of $177,000. This is only a part of the story."

Then followed a roll-call in which each member present answered to his name with one good deed of which he had read during the week. This is the way the minutes read:

"Judge Gray, of the Anthracite Strike Commission, sent a Christmas box to Andrew Chippis, the Hungarian boy who testified to working for four cents an hour to pay to the company the debt of his father, who was killed in the mines.

"A club store is run by a Presbyterian minister at West Chester, N. Y., that sells groceries to the poor at cost.

"Mrs. Emma Harkens is rightly called 'the wreck heroine.' After the recent Westfield wreck, she opened her home as a hospital for the wounded and a morgue for the dead, and with a revolver she drove away two ghouls who were attempting to rob the dead and the wounded.

"A woman mill operative in America has saved money enough from the loom to endow the 'Easter Lily' bed in a hospital in India.

"Emma Wilson, a negro woman of Mayesville, S. C., is a female Booker T. Washington, who has established an industrial farm where the children of her race are taught needlework, weaving, dyeing, and will be taught printing and other industries as fast as appliances can be added.

"A great corporation, the Boston Elevated Railway, has adopted a pension system by which all employes over sixty years of age who have served the company fifteen years, and all disabled men who have served twenty-five years, will receive $25 a month. It will cost the company $250,000 a year."

There is also a minute in the Club book, that the newspaper reporter was heard to mutter that he wished to gracious goodness, or words to that effect, that the Optimists' Club would buy out his paper and make him editor; he'd rather be a honey bee than a vulture, any day.

Boston.

PEARLINE 1877

GET a Character with your washing-powder. Consider the damage it can do, and the risk with unknown, untried powders. For twenty odd years PEARLINE has been making washing easy and saving women and fabrics. Satisfy yourself of its safety and economy from women who have used it all their lives. The new, womanly, sensible way of washing began with

PEARLINE. 690

It's Trustworthy

Ferry's Seeds

Seeds the Kind that Leads cost more—yield more.
sold by all dealers.
1903 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.
D. M. Ferry & Co.,
Detroit, Mich.

$1.50 SAMPLE OUTFIT FREE to Agents selling our Flavoring Extracts, Toilet and Laundry Soaps. Large cash profits or elegant premiums easily earned. No money required in advance. Particulars free. KIDD & CO., State and Taylor Streets, CHICAGO, ILLNOIS

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.
GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

THE Y. W. C. T. U. MANUAL

By Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Containing page of errata,
By MRS. CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT
which brings it up to date, at the
SPECIAL PRICE OF
15 Cents Postpaid.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

SPECIAL

Anti-Cigaret
NUMBER OF
The Young Crusader
IS THE February Issue

Price, $2.00 per hundred

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago, Illinois.

Practical Talks with Housekeepers.

By Mrs. L. W. Mitchell.

THERE are a great many people, otherwise not fond of athletics, who are much given to jumping at conclusions. After jumping, they are prone, whenever possible, to rush into print with their conclusions. Thus many senseless controversies are started, the space devoted to which might be better employed for the benefit of inquiring humanity. Because it is reported that thirteen ladies are present to hear a man speak on domestic problems who had recently drawn a feminine audience of three hundred and fifty to hear his address on Browning, the stand is taken that interest in household matters is on the wane and that the country (largely for want of pie) is going to destruction in a bee line.

Isn't is quite likely that the ladies had suspicions that a man who knew how to interpret Browning would have ideas more curious than illuminating on culinary topics? He could talk well about "Pippa passes," certainly, but patties—that was quite another thing!

The busy modern woman has no time to waste on culinary lectures which are not backed up by experience and clinched by ocular demonstration. Glittering generalities may do elsewhere, but in the field of domestic science "seeing's believing." A chef of reputation on the platform would have called out most of the three hundred and fifty Browning ladies, and many of their sisters and cousins and aunts.

O, no, the country is not going to the bow-wows just yet, simply because lovely woman cares more for literature than for baking day! Undoubtedly there is as good pie being made today as at any previous time. Higher education, a certain amount of culture and a few accomplishments may coexist with a strong ambition to shine in the department of domestic duties—why not? The woman of the Browning study-class type is also the one who takes the lead along domestic science lines. Is it credible that "the Vassar girl thinks it a joke where cake falls to dough?" It does not seem to accurately represent the Vassar girl, not the spirit of her alma mater. Instead of laughing, I feel sure she ascertains without delay the cause of failure, and proceeds to make another cake, of which she shall have reason to be proud.

Is her "education a fraud and a humbug unless she can make a pie?" It depends on the view-point as regards pie or what it stands for here. Remember, these are days of wide activities for women. Their talents blossom out in every direction, instead of being folded in a napkin. Thousands have chosen paths leading away from the domestic environment and are living contented, useful lives therein, with never a crumb of piecrust showing on the horizon of their ambition. Clara Barton, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Frances Willard, Louisa M. Alcott, and others who might be named in the bright galaxy, very likely could have made pie, and good pie. It is fortunate for us, however, that they did not.

This is not by way of undervaluing the study and application of domestic science. The health of the nation and its future welfare depend on the woman at the range. Let our daughters be carefully taught along these practical lines, for in spite of changed conditions, matrimony is still the goal to which the majority of women tend. To have the care of a home and administer all its affairs is a fine developer of character. In it labor, far removed from mere drudgery, is dignified and raised to a high plane by loving service. Household tasks of a menial description, if properly regarded and performed in the right spirit, may ennoble and inspire, not degrade. "Sweep a room as to God's laws," and it will "make the action fine."

It is of great importance that the poor should receive instruction in economical and nutritious ways of cooking food, preventing waste and improved methods of work. Is not the prevalence of intemperance among laboring men largely traceable to the contents of their dinner pails? Their heavy, indigestible, badly prepared food seems to them to need something more potent than the bitter, black coffee in their flasks to wash it down. All hail to the work being done by means of various clubs, schools and social settlements to enlighten the ignorance of the poor on these vital points!

To return to our pie. This old-fashioned dish, a sine qua non to most masculine palates, is pronounced injurious and is tabooed in many homes. As a matter of fact, rightly made, of good materials, properly baked, and eaten in moderation, pie is an excellent dessert, well deserving of its popularity.

Puff Paste.—Make this in a cool room, with washed butter, pastry flour and ice water. To one quart of sifted flour allow one pound of butter. Before washing the butter, rub one-fourth into the flour; make a smooth paste with ice water, having the paste about the consistency of the washed butter. Roll (always from you) about one-half inch thick. Place the washed butter on one-half, and fold the other half over it. Cover and place in the ice-chest fifteen minutes; then roll out (in one long strip), fold one-third over the middle third, then the remaining third over that, repeating the process six times. If you have the time to spare, place it in the ice-chest several times between rollings. Make it the day before using, and keep on ice over night in covered dish.

Plain Piecrust.—(For one pie.) Sift into an earthen bowl one-half teaspoonful of salt with one and one-half cups pastry flour. Rub the shortening thoroughly into the flour. Lay aside a large handful on the board, and add ice water until the flour will stick together. Roll thin, but be careful to avoid breaks.

Orange Cream Pie.—Beat the yolks of two eggs with one-half cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour and a speck of salt. Pour these into a pint of boiling milk and cook about three minutes. When cool, flavor with extract of orange and pour into a crust already baked. Make a meringue of the egg-whites and one-half cup of sugar, and brown slightly.

Mock Cherry Pie.—One-half cup of chopped raisins, one cup of chopped cranberries, one-half cup of cold water and one cup of sugar. Fill into an under crust, dot with bits of butter, put on top crust and bake.

Cream Pie.—Beat to a stiff froth the white of one egg, mix a cup of thick, sweet cream with a scant cup of sugar, one tablespoon flour or corn starch, and flavor to taste. Bake in two crusts. If the cream is a trifle sour it may be used, adding a little soda, just enough to correct the acidity.

Chocolate Pie.—Scald one and one-half cups of milk, and add six tablespoonfuls sugar, two tablespoonfuls flour, made smooth in a little water, a little salt and five tablespoonfuls of chocolate dissolved in a little hot water. Stir until well mixed, remove from the fire and pour on the beaten yolks of two eggs. Bake with one crust, make a meringue for the top, and brown.

Banburys.—Cook over steam until thick one cup chopped raisins, juice and grated rind of one lemon, yolks of two eggs, one cup of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of water. Make a rich piecrust, roll thin, and cut in rounds as large as a saucer. Put a tablespoonful of the mixture on one-half, fold the other over and bake a light brown. A great favorite with little folks.

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 18.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

To Friends of Temperance.

Why not get your seeds, etc., of a Temperance Seedsman (a G. T. and S. of T.), especially, when you can get better measure, better premiums, better discounts, bigger packets, and more "extras" than of any other Seedsman in existence? He issues 200,000 Seed Catalogs FULL OF BARGAINS, and will send you one, also two of his best and most valuable Novelties (worth 25 cts.), ALL for ONE DIME, or 12 cents in stamps. Anyone would be sorry, indeed, to miss them. He speaks a word for temperance in his Catalog, and will not even sell tobacco seed. Write to-day, and do not forget to name this paper.

Address A. T. COOK, Hyde Park, N. Y.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

Free to Everyone.

A Priceless Book Sent Free For the Asking.

Piles Cured Without Cutting, Danger, or Detention From Work, by a Simple Home Remedy.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives instant relief and never fails to cure every form of this most troublesome disease. For sale by all druggists at 50c. a package. Thousands have been quickly cured. Ask your druggist for a package of Pyramid Pile Cure, or write for our little book which tells all about the cause and cure of piles. Write your name and address plainly on a postal card, mail to the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and you will receive the book by return mail.

Good Agents Desired

to sell high class mining stocks. Some of our agents make $2,000 per month. MINING INVESTMENT & BROKERAGE CO., 382-3-4 Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal. Reference, State Bank & Trust Co.

SEND 50 CENTS TO M. C. HOPLEY, 1117 The W. C. T. U. Temple, Chicago, for a Frances E. Willard Memorial Calendar. Containing her photograph (never before published), her tomb in Rose Hill cemetery and the W.C.T.U. Red Letter Days.

LADIES! Most profitable home work making sofa pillows, $9 to $15 weekly. Materials free, experience unnecessary, no canvassing, steady work. Send stamped addressed env. New Textile Mfg. Co., Erie St. Chicago

THE DOOM OF KING ALCOHOL

By Mrs. Clara Drake.

A DELIGHTFUL DRAMA FOR AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

Young People's Societies

Will find this especially adapted to their work.

Price, 10 cents.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

CHICAGO.

Just Issued Leaflets

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.
.....CHICAGO.

HINTS ON HOME NURSING

By AMELIA E. GRAESSLE.

Superintendent of the Training School for Nurses. Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital.

Common Emergencies.

UNDER the head of common emergencies, which often arise in the home and require prompt attention, are hemorrhage from cuts and of the nose, burns, sprains, sunstroke and heat exhaustion, fainting, drowning, the lodging of foreign bodies in nose, throat and eyes, and bites of mad dogs and serpents. If an arm or limb has been cut and there is hemorrhage, it may be checked by the use of the tourniquet. This can be made of a knotted handkerchief, tied, and twisted with a stick, just above the wound. The knot should be over the artery, but the tourniquet must not remain on more than a half hour else it will result in the death of the part. Attention must be given to the position of the injured part, keeping it elevated. Morphia may be given for the pain and to secure rest and quiet. Morphia also sustains the heart's action. Water may be given in small quantities to relieve thirst, and the patient should be fed well and often.

Epistaxis, or Nosebleed.

The head and arms of the patient should be elevated and pressure with the fingers should be applied to the nostril from which the blood is flowing. Often a small piece of cotton moistened with vinegar, or a piece of lemon inserted in the nostril, will cause contraction of the blood-vessels. The patient should not blow the nose, as it will disturb the formation of clots. Ice may be applied to the back of the neck and forehead.

Burns.

If there is a severe burn, shock may be looked for. For this a stimulant of black coffee may be given, and a mustard plaster may be applied over the heart. If there is no blister, make a paste of ordinary baking soda and water. Keep it moist, and wrap the affected part in clean cotton in order to exclude the air. If blisters have formed, open at one side, with a needle, and allow the fluid to run out on a piece of cotton. Sweet oil, vaseline, or zinc ointment, may be applied. Wounds caused by burns are very susceptible to infection, hence the necessity for cleanliness. Water may be given in small quantities, to relieve thirst, and the diet should be nutritious.

Sprains.

If the limb or arm is sprained, place it in moderately hot water. Gradually add hot water until the temperature is raised to the degree as hot as the patient can bear. Place the part in a comfortable position and continue hot applications.

Sunstroke.

The symptoms of sunstroke are a high fever, flushed face, and frequently unconsciousness. The patient should be put in a cold bath and rubbed with ice. If this is not possible, cold water may be poured over the patient, from pails, and cold cloths kept on the head. Cold water enemas may be given, and, in fact, the cold water treatment should be kept up until the fever has fallen to normal. If there are signs of rising temperature, the same treatment should be renewed. The patient should be put to bed, and if there is depression, moderate stimulants may be given.

Heat exhaustion is caused by exposure to very high temperature. The common symptom is shock. A hot bath should be given and heat applied to the patient. Stimulants may be given.

Obstruction of Organs.

If there is a foreign substance in the ear—such as an insect, a small particle of coal, or dirt—the patient should be placed on the side with the affected ear upward, and a little warm water or olive oil poured into the ear. The particle will then float to the top. If there is any difficulty in removing the cause of the trouble, an ear specialist should be consulted at once.

A foreign substance in the nose may be removed with a bent hairpin or forceps.

If an obstruction in the throat cannot be removed by drinking water or by swallowing a piece of bread, an emetic of warm salt water or of mustard and water may be given.

A foreign body in the eye may be removed by having the patient look down and then seizing the lid, turning it over and wiping off the particle.

Drowning.

In asphyxia from drowning, if the patient is breathing when taken from the water, he should, if possible, be removed to a nearby house and put into a hot bath, which will act as a stimulant. After the bath, rub briskly with a rough towel. Elevate the head and shoulder and apply heat over the heart and other vital organs. The throat and mouth should be cleared of the mucous to prevent suffocation and to assist the air to the lungs. If the patient stops breathing, resort to artificial respiration. To produce artificial respiration, remove the clothing and quickly dry the body. The mouth, throat and nose should be cleared and the tongue pulled forward. A roll may be made from a coat, or even a piece of wood can be used, to place under the shoulders. The arms near the elbows are grasped and swept horizontally, away from the body, until they meet over the head. This movement raises the ribs and expands the chest as in inspiration. The arms are brought down to the sides, the elbows almost over the pit of the stomach, and pressure is then made on the chest, producing contraction of the chest walls. The arms are held in the latter position a few seconds, and then the movements are repeated. This is done from twelve to fifteen times per minute.

Influenza.

Influenza, commonly called "grippe," though not under the head of emergencies, is a case which frequently calls for prompt attention at home. The patient should be put to bed and given liquid diet. Rubbing with witch-hazel and hot applications will relieve the pain in the head, chest, limbs and back, and the cold may be relieved by giving a sweat. Bathe the feet in hot mustard water, give a drink of hot lemonade and put the patient between blankets, with hot water bottles at the feet and around the body, over the upper blanket. Great care should be taken not to remove the blankets too soon, as more cold may easily be taken when the pores of the skin are open. The patient must be guarded from draughts, and stimulants should be given if the pulse indicates heart failure. La grippe is infectious through the discharges from the nose and throat.

In all emergencies the nurse should remain calm, as loss of presence of mind may cost the patient's life. In notifying a physician, if possible, a written message should be sent, that there may be no mistake and that he may come prepared for his case.

Awful Disease, Cancer of the Lip.

The most frequent location of terrible disease in the male caused from the constant irritation produced by smoking or chewing tobacco. Dr. Bye the Specialist on the Treatment of Cancer, Kansas City, Mo., advises early treatment in such cases, as most cases terminate fatally after the lymphatic glands become envolved under the chin. Mr. N. H. Henderson, of Wilsey, Kansas, was recently cured of a very bad cancer of the lip by the Combination Oils. Persons afflicted with this disease should write the Doctor for an Illustrated Book on the treatment of Cancer and Malignant Diseases. Address Dr. W. O. Bye, 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

BOOKS.

"Glengarry School Days."

Connor's Latest Work.

This new volume fittingly supplements "The Man from Glengarry" in that it deals with some of the same characters, but in a different period. Cloth bound. Illustrated.

Price, - $1.25

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Alice Caldwell Hegan.

A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."

Price, - $1.00 Postpaid.

"Janet Ward."

Margaret E. Sangster.

A meritorious book for girls.

Price, - $1.50 Postpaid.

"The Opportunity Circle."

Faye Huntington.

A story of good deeds accomplished by young earnest hearts.

Price, 50 cents Postpaid.

"David Douglas and His Wife."

Mrs. O. W. Scott.

A practical prohibition story.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

"Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers."

By L. Mabel Freese.

A book helpful alike to the public school or Sunday school teacher and interesting to anyone.

Price, postpaid, 50 Cents.

"How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle."

By Frances E. Willard

A charming book for young people. (Illustrated.)

Price, postpaid, 40c.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Publishers' Notes.

"The Mormon Menace."

THE MORMON MENACE, by Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., LL. D., and Helen M. Fallows, A. M., shortly to be issued by the W. T. P. A., is a timely, valuable, authentic showing of the leprous situation that confronts our nation. Beginning with the history of Mormonism, its rise and progress is traced with an accurate hand. The immoral characters of the Mormon leaders and the monstrous atrocities instigated by them and perpetrated in the name of religion, are depicted with an awful realism, and remind one of the horrors of the Dark Ages, while the puerile, inane declarations of the Mormon faith lead one to wonder if any but unbalanced, weakened intellects can embrace such doctrines.

There is much new and valuable material in this absorbing account of a religion which makes polygamy its essential element. It will form a most valuable addition to the extensive library already issued upon this subject.

Those who have read the advance sheets of this remarkable exposition of the greatest blot upon American history, pronounce it one of the most notable works of its kind which has appeared.

An Average Number.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I cannot tell you what a help THE UNION SIGNAL is and has been to me, but I want to tell you the valuable things I found in one copy. It was an old paper with two clippings taken out and used for our W. C. T. U. column in our town paper, so I did not want to "pass it on" and thought I would cut out anything more we could use in local work.

The first was a helpful poem to slip into a letter to some friend, then a story to show the young girls how they can help the boys to be more truly manly. Just what I wanted for my scrap book for girls. Three more articles for the W. C. T. U. column that only needed a little added to them.

A condensed history of the temperance work from 1885 to the present time. Two helpful articles for local option work. Enough on L. T. L. work to make an interesting union meeting for that department. Enough Y items for Roll Call and one good letter for a Y meeting.

Two articles to be used in a Mother's meeting. Instructions for work from three different superintendents for their departments and eight helpful suggestions for local work that could still be cut out.

If we could only get our members to take and carefully and prayerfully read THE UNION SIGNAL, the question would no longer be, How to make our local meetings interesting, but How to find time for all the work we ought to do.

Yours truly——

Health Studies.

A constituency entirely apart from our own would find valuable and essential knowledge and instruction in the new leaflet "Studies in the Problem of Food," from the pen of Dr. Louise C. Purington, but to our own family of white-ribboners it is absolutely necessary. "Relation of Food to Character," "Food Value," "Its Adaptations and Requirements," "Breakfast Foods," and "What Shall We Drink," are a few of the many things about which we all should know, and Dr. Purington is able skillfully to tell us. Send 5 cents for this leaflet or, better still, for you and your friends 10 copies will be sent for 20 cents.

Dr. Purington's "Nerve Dissipation, Causes and Cure" should be in the hands of every man or woman who suffers from our national disease "Americanitis," which translated means "living at high pressure," and who in our ranks is not a sufferer from that disease? Surely those who make things "go" know the symptoms. A mere reading of the leaflets is restful, and its instructions carried out, sure cure. This leaflet is 2 cents for one copy, or 10 copies for 15 cents.

"The Spiritual Athlete," the third new leaflet, by Dr. Purington, is on a somewhat different order, but is helpful and contains new thoughts and up to date ideas that we want to be posted on as well as the writer. One copy 2 cents. Ten copies 10 cents.

MISS ELIA BOURGE

One of the Beautiful Women of Chicago relates an experience.

Miss ELIA BOURGE, of 47 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., wrote to Dr. Pierce recently, as follows:

"I am glad to be able to testify to the public what your medicine has done for me. I had been troubled with catarrh for a number of years; had used many other remedies but failed to find any change and was about to give up all hope. I at last tried your medicine and found it just what it is represented to be. I used a number of bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and will say that I have not felt as well in several years. My headaches, which had become a common occurrence, have entirely disappeared, as well as the burning sensation I endured through my eyes and nose. My voice has wonderfully improved since using your medicine; I would not be without it, and I shall forever give praise to your worthy medicine."

PUBLIC SINGERS EVERYWHERE

Recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for coughs, nose and throat troubles. It cures Bronchitis, Laryngitis, Weak Lungs, Bleeding from Lungs, public speaker's Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and Suppression or Loss of Voice. This vegetable tonic has ingredients which allay a cough, and at the same time it purifies the blood, thereby getting at the seat of the difficulty, for a cold or catarrh is produced by a stagnation of the blood supply. The "Discovery" purifies the blood by eliminating the corrupt and poisonous accumulations which are the source of many diseases. It gives new life and strength.

E. D. LOE, of Princeton, Mo., sends his sincere thanks to Dr. Pierce, as follows:

"About one year ago I took what our home doctor called La Grippe, and was bothered with a dry hacking cough, also bowel trouble, all summer. People of my acquaintance said I was going fast with quick consumption. Had weighed one hundred and eighty pounds before having Grippe, but had become very thin when I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking five bottles the bowel trouble was completely overcome and my cough was gone."

Sick people, especially those suffering from disease in chronic form, are invited to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter, free.

GIVEN AWAY. No charge is made for Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It is sent FREE on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing ONLY. It is the best modern medical work, containing more than one thousand large pages of valuable advice and information. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.

"The Doom of King Alcohol."

"The Doom of King Alcohol," by Mrs. Clara B. Drake, is a poetical drama in three acts, suitable to be given in a parlor or hall. While it is gracefully written and effectively planned, it is also a strong lesson for temperance, and is especially adapted for the use of a local union. Perhaps nothing is more difficult to secure than material for a good evening's program, but in "The Doom of King Alcohol" this need is fully supplied. The curtain rises with Tellus (the earth) mourning over the desecration of her children, the spirits of the field—Wheat, Barley, Rye, Corn, Hops, Grapes, Apples and Peaches—by King Alcohol.

In the second act King Alcohol and his minions—License, Avarice, Appetite and others—are in the throne room, and listen to the appeals of the Spirits of the fields. License speaks for the King, refusing their requests. The Angel of Prohibition enters and hurls King Alcohol from his throne. The last act shows Tellus again. Around her are the spirits of the fruits and grains rejoicing. Over the ruins of King Alcohol's palace stands the Angel of Prohibition ready for flight.

Those desiring material for an evening's entertainment will be delighted with this little drama. Send for a copy. The price is 10 cents.

Special Anti-Cigaret Issue.

The February YOUNG CRUSADER is a keen weapon against the cigaret. Its sixteen pages of original testimony present the best scientific thought concerning the evils of cigaret smoking. Educators, ministers, physicians, business men and athletes speak to the American boy and girl in clear, unmistakable argument. Among the many contributors are Prof. Burt G. Wilder, of Cornell University; Dr. Nathan S. Davis, Chicago; Charles H. Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, and F. H. Yost, trainer, University of Michigan.

An extra large edition of this number has been issued to meet the demands of L. T. L. workers. Our last Anti-Cigaret CRUSADER was exhausted while calls for more were still coming in. Send your orders early. Remember there are special Anti-Cigaret Programs and all material necessary for use in this department. The price is $2 per hundred.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

March Responsive Reading.

The March responsive reading on "Christian Citizenship" is written by Mrs. Mary Jewett Telford, National superintendent of the department of Christian Citizenship. This reading portrays beautifully the dovetailing of each department and plainly demonstrates that the thought of Christian Citizenship can be woven into each department of work. Make this the subject of an early meeting. Price, 50 cents per hundred.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago

A Temperance Seedsman.

Our readers should not overlook the offer of our friend, A. T. Cook, on page 21. Mr. Cook is for Temperance, as his Catalog shows. His offer is VERY liberal, and no one should miss it.

PERSONAL TO SUBSCRIBERS!

WHEN THE CLOCK RUNS DOWN

what do you do? When your system runs down what should you do? You know the answer to the first question; the answer to the second is found in the wonderful success of that still more wonderful remedy—Vitae-Ore.

When the nerves are unstrung, the muscles loosened, the energy run down, the vitality impaired, it serves as the right key to fit the delicate mechanism of the human system, the right force at the right time to set the machinery in motion to re-wind the energies, to tighten the nerve forces, to replenish the vitality. It is the ideal Blood Vitalizer, Germ Destroyer, Flesh Maker, Disease Curer, Brawn Builder and Health Restorer.

No other remedy can equal its record of cures. No other remedy can be offerea to the public on the terms it is offered. Read our special offer. You are to be the judge!

READ OUR SPECIAL OFFER
TO UNION SIGNAL SUBSCRIBERS AND READERS.

WE WILL SEND to every subscriber or reader of The Union Signal or worthy person recommended by a subscriber, a full-sized One Dollar package of VITAE-ORE, by mail, post paid, sufficient for one month's treatment to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the receiver can truthfully say that its use has done him or her more good than all the drugs or dopes of quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used. Read this over again carefully, and understand that we ask our pay only when it has done you good, and not before. We take all the risk; you have nothing to lose. If it does not benefit you, you pay us nothing. Vitae-Ore is a natural, hard, adamantine rock-like substance—mineral—Ore—mined from the ground like gold and silver, and requires about twenty years for oxidation. It contains free iron, free sulphur and magnesium, and one package will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful efficacious mineral water drunk fresh at the springs. It is a geological discovery, to which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Blood Poisoning, Heart Trouble, Dropsy, Catarrh and Throat Affections, Liver, Kidney and Bladder Ailments, Stomach and La Grippe, Malarial Fever, Nervous Prostration and General Debility, as thousands testify, and as no one, answering this, writing for a package, will deny after using. Vitae-Ore has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced incurable cases than any other known medicine, and will reach every case with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, combination of medicines, or doctor's prescription which it is possible to procure.

Vitae-Ore will do the same for you as it has for hundreds of readers of this paper, if you will give it a trial. Send for a $1 package at our risk. You have nothing to lose but the stamp to answer this announcement. If the medicine does not benefit you write us so and there is no harm done. We want no one's money whom Vitae-Ore cannot benefit. Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try Vitae-Ore on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases; two or three for chronic, obstinate cases. We mean just what we say in this announcement, and will do just what we agree. Write today for a package at our risk and expense, giving your age and ailments, and mention this paper, so we may know that you are entitled to this liberal offer.

Middle Aged and Elderly People Should Use It

As old age approaches the necessity for such a tonic as Vitae-Ore becomes each year more and more manifest. As is generally known all through life there is a slow, steady accumulation of calcareous deposits in the system, marking the transition from the soft, gelatinous condition of infancy to the hard, osseous condition of old age. These calcareous deposits naturally interfere with the functions of the vital organs, and when they become excessive and resist expulsion, result in the dryness and stiffness of old age. In early life these deposits are thrown off, but age has not the power to do so unless assisted by some outside stimulant. Vitae-Ore, apart from its powerful disease-curing, health-restoring action, is just the ideal stimulant for middle aged, elderly people, in that it enters the blood, dissolves the hard calcareous matter, and almost entirely eradicates the ossific deposits so much dreaded by old people. It enriches the blood with the necessary hematinic properties, drives all foreign matter from the circulation and prolongs vigor and activity in both men and women to a ripe old age.

This offer will challenge the attention and consideration, and afterward the gratitude of every living person who desires better health or who suffers pains, ills and diseases which have defied the medical world and grown worse with age. We care not for your skepticism, but ask only your investigation, and at our expense regardless of what ills you have, by sending to us for a package. Address

THEO. NOEL COMPANY,

UNION SIGNAL DEPT.,
Vitae-Ore Building.

CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 11. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, MARCH 12, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2-3
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH 4
CONTRIBUTED:
Glimpses of Neal Dow at Home. By Lillian M. N. Stevens. 5
The Temperance Triumph. By Sanford G. Plumb.—Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home—A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER.
What the Boys Found. By Frances Campbell Sparhawk—Puzzlers' Packet—Youthful Wisdom 7
EDITORIAL:
Neal Dow as a Reformer—The Principle of Prohibition—"Horrible Example of Vermont" 8
Hope for the Lone Star—Toward the Sun-Rising 9
EXPERIENCE CORNER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 11
W. C. T. U. NOTES 12
SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM FOR PROHIBITION RALLY DAY 13
MARCH MAGAZINES 14
ABOUT WOMEN—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 15

Red-Letter Day.

March 20, Prohibition Rally Day.

BIRTHDAY OF GENERAL NEAL DOW.

News of the Week.

Ira D. Sankey, singing evangelist, said to be losing his eyesight.

The Elmira Anchorage, W. C. T. U. rescue home at Elmira, N. Y., destroyed by fire March 7.

Illinois legislature appropriated $5,000 for the famine sufferers in Finland and North Sweden.

Rev. J. R. Campbell succeeds the late Dr. Joseph Parker in the pastorate of City Temple, London.

Influenza is epidemic in St. Louis, where 15,000 persons are said to be suffering from the disease.

General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, sailed for England, after a most successful tour of this country.

James H. Blount, for twenty years a member of Congress from Georgia, and later paramount commissioner to Hawaii, died at Macon, Ga.

Three new 16,000 ton battleships ordered by Congress will be named Vermont, Kansas, and Minnesota, and two 12,000 ton vessels Mississippi and Idaho.

A bill prohibiting the sale of cigarets and cigaret paper to children under 18 years of age passed the Missouri senate March 9. It had previously passed the house.

Secret of restoring lost eye-sight claimed to have been discovered by Prof. Peter Steins, Paris; apparatus invented by him supplies place of eye, while function of seeing is performed by brain.

Turkey gives official recognition to the American Medical College at Beiruth, and concedes the right of the wives and children of Armenians who have become naturalized Americans, to leave the country.

Sixteenth anniversary of death of Henry Ward Beecher observed by great mass meeting in New York. Ex-President Cleveland made the principal address, and plans laid for a great memorial to the distinguished preacher.

For the first time in history of labor organizations in the United States an injunction was granted at St. Louis to restrain ordering of an original strike. The writ was issued on application of the Wabash Road, whose trainmen and firemen voted to strike.

Helen Keller, the deaf, dumb and blind student whose marvelous attainments have astonished the world of science, appeared before the Massachusetts legislative committee and made a plea for the state education and employment of the blind. She has learned to speak mechanically and was understood perfectly.

Popularity Not Our Aim. When we hear a white ribboner bemoaning the fact that the local union to which she belongs is not popular, we are reminded of Mary Lathrap's words when speaking of the dangers attaching to popularity: "When the reformer grows popular he has missed his mission and made terms with the enemy."

A White House Saloon. The liquor seller who bought the sideboard presented to Mrs. Hayes by the young women of Cincinnati has, it was stated on the floor of the national house of representatives, obtained other relics sold from the White House and intends to fit up a "White House Saloon" at the St. Louis Exposition. These valuable mementoes include a mirror presented by Count Rochambeau and bronzes presented by General Patterson to President Jackson. A resolution was offered by a democratic member of the house directing the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds to prepare (in conformity with an act passed in 1900) an inventory of the public property at the executive mansion, the cost if still in use, the price received if sold, to whom, etc. This act was received with ridicule and tabled amid jeers from the republican side.

Lawyers' Wineless Banquet. The eleventh annual banquet of the West Superior, Wis., lawyers was unique in its history inasmuch as it was celebrated without wine or beverage other than cold water. At the instigation of some of the prohibitively inclined members of the bar, this innovation was an experiment. The wine question, it seems, arises each year to trouble the consciences of the attorneys when the subject of their Washington's birthday banquet is agitated. Now that these legislators—whose business it is to pass judgment upon human frailties—have downed the ghost at their feast, their heads and hearts will be lighter, and similar gatherings, looking on, will be likely to take knowledge of them and go and do likewise.

Prohibition Pays. The tax-paying citizen, when his eyes are opened, will be the most ardent of prohibitionists. He will see that the licensed drink traffic is a source of expense rather than a source of revenue, that its drain upon the public resources means even from a money standpoint a balance upon the wrong side of the ledger. We state it mildly when we say that for every dollar the liquor business puts into the treasury it draws out two. Political economists do not hesitate to assert that eighty per cent of the crime and pauperism of the country is chargeable to the saloon. On this basis it is no exaggeration to say that for every dollar it puts in it draws out four. To all who are willing to be convinced, official figures everywhere prove that while the trade piles up wealth for whisky trusts and saloonkeepers, it never fails to impoverish the city or state which fosters and protects it under a license system, however high. If the honest taxpayer wishes to lighten his own burden and have state or city with money enough to carry out laudable improvement schemes, let him lend his influence and give his vote to the prohibition of the liquor traffic and get after the tax dodgers.

Prohibition Rally Day. For the benefit of the many new subscribers secured during the first week of March, the suggestive program for the celebration of Prohibition Rally Day, the birthday anniversary of General Neal Dow, is reprinted on page 13 of this issue. The material furnished in THE UNION SIGNAL of March 5 covers the subject so exhaustively that local workers can prepare for a meeting with very little effort. Extra copies of that issue can be secured by ordering promptly of the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago

Poor Logic. The drink passion, says Professor Eliot, of Harvard, in his summing up of the results of the work of the Committee of Fifty, will forever prompt resistance to restrictive legislation, and prohibition has, of course, failed to subdue this. Because prohibitory law fails to remove the drink appetite from the habitual drinker (just as prohibitory law fails to subdue propensities to murder or to theft), shall we, therefore, as a state or as individual voters, countenance the forming and cultivation of the drink passion by law? Shall we directly, by vote, or indirectly, by influence, help to create appetite?

Prohibition Votes Not Lost. A vote, to the male citizen, is a very precious thing, and, naturally, he does not wish to lose it. This is why a good many temperance people—so they say—do not vote a prohibition ticket. They really believe, some of them, that their votes will be lost. The old abolitionists never came into power as a party; they never elected a candidate; but no one will claim that they ever threw away a vote. As has been aptly said, "Their votes wore holes in the public conscience as drops of water wear holes in the solid earth." They voted for principle for fifty years, or until anti-slavery sentiment became the paramount issue before the country. With the help of the prohibitionists, anti-liquor sentiment is ripening fast, and soon the people are going to solve the drink problem as it solved the slavery question.

Comparative Good. A Semi-teetotal Association has been organized in Great Britain. Its rule is, "No drinks during business hours." Its members are pledged never to use intoxicants except at midday and evening meals. Lord Roberts, who is its promoter and president, recognizes the importance of sobriety for the business men as well as for the soldier, and his wide experience in army life prompts this new effort in the direction of temperance. It is going too far to suit the liquor seller, and while not far enough to suit the teetotaler, it may yet be regarded as an encouraging sign of the times. Railroad corporations and other employers of labor who now require total abstinence of their employes, began by requiring abstinence while on duty only. The comment of an anti-prohibition paper is significant: "A clouded brain," it says, "cannot do safe work. Even semi-teetotalism is full of danger. . . . Not to drink to excess is commendable; not to drink between meals is a distinct improvement over habitual drinking, but how much wiser and better not to touch alcoholic stimulants in any form, at any time!" Every teetotaler will say amen to this sentiment.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

Close of Fifty-Seventh Congress.

Many Important Measures Passed. Speaker Henderson Says Farewell.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 7:—Stirring scenes have been enacted here in Washington during the past week. The filibustering in the House was kept up without a break for one week. Party feeling ran high and it was a common occurrence for a dozen men to be on their feet at one time, some calling for recognition by the chair, others shouting at each other, and all gesticulating wildly.

Next to the last day, about 6 o'clock in the evening, when endurance and patience were well nigh exhausted, when every man's nerves were on edge, Serreno Payne, of New York, leader of the Republican side of the House, read an editorial criticising the filibustering tactics of the Democrats, which had prevented much of the business of the country from being carried to completion. Shouts from the Democratic ranks demanded, "From what paper are you reading?" "The Louisville Courier Journal" was the response. This brought shouts of derision from the Republican side, and instantly as though a match had been touched to a magazine, fifty men were on their feet, and every one shouting. It was a sorry spectacle for the House of Representatives, and more like a ward primary meeting than anything else. Men from both sides rushed toward the front, and it looked for a time as though there might be personal encounters, but wiser counsels prevailed, some one moved a recess until ten o'clock p. m., and calm followed the stor

At ten o'clock the session was resumed, and continued until four-thirty in the morning, when a recess was again taken until ten o'clock. The members who had gone home worn and weary, were promptly in their places at the appointed hour, looking fresh and ready for the closing ceremonies.

As is usual, the scenes in connection with the closing attracted vast crowds. The monotonous roll call was again taken up, making the eightieth time in that legislative day which continued from Thursday, February 26, to Wednesday, March 4. This continuous legislative day prevented the usual morning prayer which, if offered, might have acted as oil upon the troubled waters. A little sparring was indulged in until eleven-thirty, when a resolution of thanks and appreciation was tendered Speaker Henderson, who, after a term of twenty years in Congress retires to private life. His farewell address was eloquent and inspiring, and touched all hearts. At noon when he declared the House adjourned sine die, some one started the hymn "America," and instantly hundreds of small American flags were waving above the heads of the members.

Speaker Henderson had gone to the floor, and many crowded around to say "good-bye." "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," was sung, and later the familiar strain of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," was taken up and sung over and over. Finally the crowd dispersed, and the Fifty-seventh Congress had passed into history.

The number of bills introduced during this Congress aggregated 17,500, of which 2,918 were reported, and more than 2,000 passed. And notwithstanding all the filibustering and consequent delay, the calendar was clearer at the close of this Congress than it ever has been before, only seventy-eight bills remaining undisposed of.

Perhaps the most important reform measure passed, was the "New Hebrides bill," prohibiting Americans from selling intoxicants and opium in the South Pacific Islands having no civilized governments.

The Immigration bill was successfully carried, and with it the prohibition of the sale of liquor in immigrant stations, and in the capitol building. Thank God for this, that at the entrance to this new country, the government of the United States will not tempt to drink those seeking a home among us. And thank God, that no intoxicating liquor can be legally sold under the dome of our Nation's Capitol.

Another $500,000 appropriation granted to make better surroundings for the soldier, is a signal victory. A million dollars in one year for this purpose, will go far toward keeping the canteen where it belongs, "in durance vile."

After repeated efforts, the bill prohibiting pictures and cards as prizes accompanying tobacco and cigarets, was passed.

As I mentioned last week, the Interstate Commerce bill, after passing the House with a large majority vote, was killed in the room of the Interstate Committee, Senator S. B. Elkins of West Virginia, chairman. Just why the vote was delayed we of course cannot tell, but we do know a quorum was present twice that morning. However we will "push the battle to the gates" next year, and with the help of the people in whose interest this bill was drawn, and the blessing of God, we shall succeed.

The anti-polygamy amendment was also lost in the House Judiciary. That the committee are fully aware of the interest on the part of the people, in this measure, was brought forcibly to mind in a conversation with the chairman, Hon. J. J. Jenkins of Wisconsin who said, "We were here ready to hear the report of the sub-committee, for our committee were a unit in declaring that some action must be taken, when we were hastily summoned to the House, and there has been no opportunity for anything to be done since. Next year, we will commence earlier, we will have a longer session, and something will be accomplished."

Thursday morning, March 5, another vast multitude filled the galleries of the Senate to witness the opening exercises of the "Extraordinary Session" called by the President, and the swearing in of new Senators. The floor looked a veritable flower garden; great bushes of roses, and lilacs and lilies, covered desks, chairs, and the floor about. Seventeen Senators were re-elected. Senator Allison of Iowa, enters upon his sixth term, having completed thirty years' continuous service as a United States Senator; many of the newly elected members were children when he began his public career.

Fifteen newly elected Senators were sworn in, among them Apostle Reed Smoot of Utah. Protests from the Ministerial Association of Utah, and from many other organizations including the National W. C. T. U., against the seating of Mr. Smoot, had been presented and filed with the committee on Privileges and Elections.

This transaction shows the absolute need of an anti-polygamy amendment to the Federal Constitution. With the entrance of other states permeated with Mormonism, other polygamist Senators will follow, and unless an amendment forever disfranchising a bigamist and polygamist is affixed to that great wall of defence about our nation, the constitution of the United States, we shall have this battle to wage again and again.

Local Option Bill in Illinois.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

CHICAGO, March 9:—Men and women of Illinois this is for you! The "Chicago Daily News" of March 7th has this to say:

"The republican party is face to face with a crisis as grave as that of the Edwards law of ten or twelve years ago. It is the local option bill that is working wrinkles in the brows of the party leaders."

This means that our law-makers need to hear from a multitude of good men and women from home. Thousands of letters must go at once to fortify them against the influence of the liquor dealers. The gravity of the situation will be apparent when you realize that the question is now hanging in the balance, and the result depends upon instant action. Briefly, the bill provides that a petition signed by twenty-five per cent of the voting population of a county, township, municipality, or even ward of a city gives opportunity to vote as to whether license shall or shall not prevail. Should the bill become law, it will doubtless drive the saloons out of a large per cent of the counties and smaller towns and cities of the state. Let there be no time lost, but do your best to overwhelm your representatives and senators with letters and telegrams in the interest of this bill.

Louisiana's Crusade Against Vice.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, LA., March 9.—The press committee of the Anti-Saloon League of Shreveport has issued an appeal to the people of Louisiana to unite in an aggressive crusade against the vices of intemperance, gambling and immorality. To outlaw this lawless business, so strongly intrenched in the state, there must be widespread organization of both ministers and people, both men and women, irrespective of religious or political creed.

When the notorious Louisiana lottery was driven out of the state, an evil similar to the licensed saloon and equally protected by wealth and political power, the people demanded that it should go, and it was done. May the people see and realize the heinousness of these other evils and demand release from their thraldom!

Caldwell parish has had prohibition for about a year, but several whisky drummers have been securing orders in the parish and shipping by express to parties there. They are now, with members of the firm they represent, indicted by the grand jury for selling liquor in Caldwell parish without a license. The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court in order to settle the legality of the question.

A Crusade Against Vice in California.

Gabrella T. Stickney, Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., March 7.—Christian citizenship is very much to the front just now in this "city of the angels," and a strong effort is being made to eradicate some prominent municipal evils.

Shortly after the seating of the new city council the first of the year the city Christian Endeavor Society and the W. C. T. U., under the state department of Christian Citizenship, held a Sunday afternoon service in the Immanuel Presbyterian church, at which Judge Curtis D. Wilbur of the superior court gave the address for the Endeavorers, and Mrs. Mary G. Tongier represented the W. C. T. U.

At that meeting a resolution was unanimously adopted denouncing the "crib district" and requesting the city council to "take steps to rid this infested district of its immoral tenants and that more aggressive steps be taken to suppress the evil in other sections of the city." Also another resolution asking the same body to take such action "as is necessary to limit the district in which restaurant liquor licenses may be granted to that district in which saloon licenses are now granted," for, be it known that Los Angeles limits the number of saloons to 200, and they mostly in the business center. These resolutions were presented to the city council by a committee representing both societies and were referred to a committee, which has them under consideration.

The indignation of a gambler's wife was the unexpected source from which was started a fire of public indignation against a notorious and so-called respectable gambling resort. The daily papers exposed the law-defying institution until the city officials drove the firm out of the city. That is, just out, for they at once opened business in a barn-like place across the city line, and more than a hundred men daily ride five miles to the place to "play the races." Almost opposite the new location, but inside the city limits, a "social club" had been running for some time in connection with a beer garden, where on Sunday music and dancing drew crowds of boys and girls, who returned home in such an intoxicated condition as to disgrace themselves on the street cars. The Vernon W. C. T. U., in the southwestern part of the city, had not been blind to these things, and on January 26 began a series of gospel temperance meetings. On the last night of the series, many citizens, including the pastors, addressed the audience, and the councilman from the ward was also present and gave a brief address. The result was that a few days later the owner of the social club was arrested for selling liquor without a license and fined, he promising not to again sell liquor upon the grounds. Since then there have been no Sunday dances held.

Against the poolroom a lengthy petition was presented to the county supervisors by a delegation of Vernon men and women. The case is now under consideration. Their labors before the supervisors done, the delegation proceeded to the council chamber, having heard that an ordinance would be introduced to license all social clubs, to enter their protest against such action, but the ordinance did not appear.

Vernon W. C. T. U. has increased its membership during this time of battle, and it gave the twenty-six new members a reception on February 24.

A Quartette of Y's in Michigan.

R. M. Harwood, Correspondent.

PLAINWELL, MICH., March 9.—The principal industry of the thriving little city of Belding is the manufacture of silk. Each of the two mills has a boarding house for its girl employes, and to these the attention of our state president has long been directed as an inviting field for the Y organizer. In January arrangements were made by the local union whereby Miss M. J. Bilz came to the city and organized a Y in each of the boarding houses and one in the city, with a total of forty members. Through her efforts twelve new members were added to Belding union. She also accomplished the preliminary work at Coopersville, which resulted in the organization of a Y a little later by Mrs. Teats, and organized unions at Orleans and Smyrna; all these are in the Fifth district.

As an illustration of what a country union can do to interest young people, we record the offering of prizes by Hopkins Station union to the pupils of all the school districts in their township, between the ages of twelve and sixteen years, for the best essay upon "The Advantages of Total Abstinence from Strong Drink and Tobacco." A cash prize is offered for the best article, a subscription to the Young Crusader for the second best, and a framed picture of Miss Willard to the school district whose pupils won first prize.

No Resubmission For Maine.

Special Correspondence.

AUGUSTA, MAINE, March 5:—The House of Representatives of the Maine legislature voted this morning on the question of resubmission, after devoting two half days to the debate. The friends of resubmission predicted a large growth in the vote in its favor as compared with two years ago, but the calling of the roll showed a gain of only two votes on that side. The senate will not have a half dozen in favor of resubmission.

Legislative Work in Texas.

TERRELL, Tex., March 2:—There are pending in the present legislature a number of bills in which the women of the state are keenly interested. We are most vitally concerned just now about one which, if adopted, would practically destroy the efficiency of our present good "local option" law. This bill has already passed the Senate, but we still hope it will fail in the House. Protests against its adoption are pouring in from all quarters, from the women as well as from the voters.

MRS. MATTIE R. TURNER.

A bill to prohibit the playing of base ball and football on Sunday has been reported favorably in the House. Of course the women, as well as the farmers, are urging the passage of the "bird protection" bill, which seems to be a popular measure.

A bill to prohibit the employment of children in mills and factories is strongly opposed by the factory lobbyists, who claim that there is no need for such a law in Texas, as there are practically no children thus employed. Friends of the measure argue that as "prevention is better than cure," now is the time to secure legislation against child-labor. If such a law would in no way interfere with the present policy of the factories, the query naturally arises, why are these lobbyists spending time and money to defeat it?

Another bill of direct interest to women seeks to provide separate property rights for husband and wife. Another, which our women are championing, asks for the establishment of a "Home and School for Incorrigibles." Hitherto criminal children have been incarcerated with the vilest "toughs," which is not conducive to reformation in the child.

Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard, state president, and Miss Fanny Armstrong, headquarters secretary, are in Austin for the entire session of the legislature. Mrs. Stoddard is well known and highly esteemed in this law-making body as for the past ten years she has attended each session, guarding the interests of temperance and morality, for the great state of Texas. As soon as she learns of a measure which concerns our interests, she dictates a letter to every local president, apprising the constituency of the proposed law. Thus every local union is kept in direct touch with the latest happenings in the capital.

By invitation of the Senate, the noted industrial advocate and authority on scientific cooking, Mrs. Rorer, of Philadelphia, addressed that body on industrial training. Mrs. Stoddard, who is secretary of the Board of Regents of the Girls' Industrial College of Texas, now under course of erection, was asigned the honor of introducing the speaker, who by her logical presentation of her subject, won the interest of the Senators. The interest was augmented by a seven-course dinner cooked by Mrs. Rorer and served to fourteen guests—Regents, Senators and Representatives.

Our Workers.

Mrs. Nannie Curtis, state lecturer, has given full time to field work this winter. She recently gave two magnificent addresses in Terrell, the tangible results of which are nine new members to the local union. From here she went to her home county, Grayson, where she filled several engagements in the interest of the local option campaign now waging fiercely in that county. She organized a union in Collinsville and in Quitman, and lectured at several places in Wood county, which is also in the throes of a campaign. She is now in Brown county where she will fill fourteen appointments. This county is anticipating an election on prohibition.

MRS NANNIE CURTIS.

Mrs. Curtis will next proceed further west, where her services are in demand.

Miss Rhena E. Mosher, National lecturer, has been in Texas a month, and, beginning at Texarkana, where she entered the state, she organized a number of unions, several of them being Y's.

Mrs. Eliza Peterson, president of Texas Thurman W. C. T. U., has done valiant work among the colored people in Grayson county.

The state convention will be held in Ft. Worth May 6-10.

Gospel Temperance Work in Iowa.

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

VOLGA, IA., March 5.—Telegrams have been sent and letters written to our United States Senators asking their vote and influence in favor of the bills in which we are so deeply interested.

Council Bluffs union is immersed in good works, such as enforcing anti-cigaret law, closing Sunday theater, jail services, visiting the sick, etc.

Waterloo union is delighted over the results of a week's meetings in that place, conducted by Mrs. Anna M. Palmer. Parlor Bible expositions were given every afternoon and largely attended. Various churches and the Y. M. C. A. auditorium were freely opened Sundays and evenings to this gentle persuader. Several new members were added to Waterloo union.

Le Grande union, recently reorganized by Rev. A. J. Wheeler, has taken up Sabbath observance work and is endeavoring to secure a curfew law.

Marshalltown has lost two valued members, Rev. and Mrs. Olson, who have removed to Concordia, Kan., where Mr. Olson has accepted the pastorate of a Swedish Baptist church.

Two new unions are reported by Hon. A. C. Rankin, one in Centerville with seven members, and one in Allerton with forty-six members.

Good Reports from Ohio.

Mrs. Anna D. Stillwell, Correspondent.

TROY, O., March 5:—In Columbus and throughout the county work is progressing finely under the leadership of the county president, Mrs. Mary Castle. The Columbus rest room on High street, conducted by the Central and North side unions, furnishes an excellent noon lunch for twelve cents; they make a little money, but the chief object is to provide headquarters, and a noon lunch for working girls. Visiting white ribboners also find it delightful.

We think Ohio was the first state to provide handbooks for the local unions and this year's revised book has received the highest commendation. It contains statement of principles, departments and names of superintendents, new recommendations to officers and local members, helps for organizing, topical programs for each month, welcome service for new members, plan for "Messenger" and membership contest, and state directory of officers and organizers.

Fostoria union has just opened very pleasant reading rooms which are well patronized. Camden recently held a membership contest adding sixty members to a union of eighteen. New unions have been organized at Rocky Ridge and Sugar Grove. Unions and counties are contributing to a "Geneva Fund" to send our state president to the World's Convention.

Miami county had a grand temperance rally in Troy, March 2 and 3, under the auspices of the county ministerial association, following the plan of the state anti-saloon convention. All churches, Sunday Schools, young people's societies, and W. C. T. Unions sent delegates, and fine addresses were made by local and county speakers, by President P. A. Baker, Field Secretary H. G. Furbay, and Attorney W. B. Wheeler of the state Anti-Saloon League, and by Professor Curry of Urbana, on the negro and the temperance question.

Membership Plans in Rhode Island.

Mary E. Olney, Correspondent.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 9.—The Second district convention, held in Woonsocket and presided over by the new district president, Miss Allie E. Parker, was an enthusiastic meeting. Mrs. J. K. Barney was present, assisting throughout the day and giving the evening address.

Mrs. Mary A. Babcock, state president, presented helpful and suggestive thoughts on the army canteen, and Miss Mary E. Olney, corresponding secretary, a plan for the increase of membership. The unions were urged to try to gain at least thirty-five per cent during the year.

An enjoyable feature of the convention was a W. C. T. U. medal contest, at which temperance truths were presented to a large audience.

One union, which has increased its activity to a remarkable extent, recently held a reception to the state officers which was a great success.

Prohibition at Longview.

LONGVIEW, TEX., Feb. 28.—Longview and Gregg county witnessed to-day the greatest political struggle ever waged in this county in the local option fight here. The victory was with the Prohibitionists by a majority of 150, 140 of which was given by this box.

The ladies met at the churches this morning at seven o'clock and held prayer meetings, going to the polls in a body at 8 o'clock, where they worked all day. The children, some 200 strong, marched to the courtyard and sang for several hours.

An anti band from Grand Saline was captured by the prohibition boys with prohibition banners and changed into a pro band.

At the time the result was announced the women and men crowded into the court house and sang "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow" and various songs. The fire bell was tolled when the result was known.

Can Dispense with the Dispensary.

Silena Moore Holman, Correspondent.

FAYETTEVILLE, TENN., March 9.—Two dispensary bills have been presented in the Tennessee legislature. The first was to establish a dispensary in Columbia, a city too large to get the benefit of our new temperance law. They wanted the dispensary as the next best thing to prohibition! A petition signed by 800 people—every preacher in the city, I think, signing it—asking for the dispensary, went up to Nashville. The president of the Tennessee W. C. T. U. was the first to protest against the measure.

The Columbia bill passed the house, but a petition with 1,700 signatures against establishing a dispensary in Columbia has been sent the senate, and it is now believed that the bill will be defeated there. Many who signed the first petition for the dispensary took their names off, and several of the ministers in the city are now preaching against it.

A bill allowing any town in the state to establish a dispensary has been introduced in the senate, and the W. C. T. U. is bringing every force at its command to bear to defeat the measure. All over the state the women are working against it as they have never worked for anything before.

It is said that the leaders of the Anti-Saloon League are individually opposed to the measure, but at this writing they have taken no step against it. An earnest appeal has been made to them to use their utmost influence as an organization, in conjunction with the W. C. T. U., to defeat the bill. We are hoping to be able to prevent the passage of either bill.

Press and Contest Work in Colorado.

Esther A. Gaymon, Correspondent.

DENVER, COLO., March 9.—A new venture by the Rocky Ford union is the publication of a monthly paper devoted to the advancement of temperance sentiment, the purpose of the paper, which is most aptly named "The Arrow," being set forth in one of the editorials as follows:

MRS. DORA A. HOWARD.

"Our purpose is to send some shaft of truth, some arrow of conviction which, happily, piercing the joints of the harness, may mortally wound the legalized liquor traffic in our town."

Each issue of the Arrow is distributed throughout the town, the saloons not being forgotten. For the encouragement of those who may wish to carry out a similar plan we would point out the fact that the expense of printing the first five issues has been almost entirely covered by the receipts for advertisements.

The paper is edited by three members of the union. Mrs. Dora A. Howard, one of the editors, is also press superintendent, and has made a fine record in her department, having secured the publication of over 150 columns of temperance matter since August.

A prize is being offered this year to the press superintendent who has published the largest amount of temperance matter, and Mrs. Howard seems to be entering the race with considerable spirit.

The Rocky Ford union is greatly blessed with many wide-awake working members and it is making an earnest fight against the eight saloons which infest the otherwise beautiful little town.

Another energetic superintendent of this union is Mrs. Augusta Kleinfelter, who as superintendent of Medal Contests is doing some fine work. Assisted by Miss Tomlinson, she has held one contest each month. These contests which have become very popular, and a good audience is always assured.

U. OF MO. LIBRARY

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

Y Plans and Purposes.

My Dear Young Women:—Those of you who keep in close touch with the National Y Branch, either through personal correspondence, or The Union Signal page, know that your general secretary has several "hobbies." You know also that one of these hobbies is that we should make a larger effort, locally, to induce all those persons to really identify themselves with us who say they are as strong temperance men and women as we are.

A fine program (another hobby) is essential in order that the interest of all members may be maintained. We must work along the lines of our departments in order to add to the sum total of the great educative forces that have done more than any other agency to "make the world wider for women," and to "increase the common joy." But at the same time I believe the hour has arrived when we should plan more aggressively to bring into our beautiful bonds all those who are "almost persuaded" "to belong."

How is this to be done? By forming what we might term a "City Federation of Reform Forces." One of the societies that has already undertaken this is the Y at Gardner, Mass., and I have asked Miss Nellie R. Fitch, the president, to tell you about it. Her article will be found on this page. How I wish every local union in the states were arranging for a similar municipal campaign! I hope that Miss Fitch will be able to tell us soon of a glorious victory. As their election occurs this month, we will not have long to wait.

Lest someone should misunderstand and think I would make membership in the W. C. T. U., or even sighing the pledge, a test of Federation fellowship, I should like to explain further. Experience has taught me that it is a good thing to take people at their word. If a man tells me he is just as much interested in the temperance cause as anybody, I can get him to join hands with me and work, if I act at once as though I believe him, ask him to make suggestions and what he thinks of this plan and that. He will grow cordial at once and probably become one of our most enthusiastic supporters. Herein lies the strength of this scheme. We simply treat all who are nominally interested as though they were heart and soul with us and capable of giving advice, and the result is they do become aroused and help us to the extent of closing the saloons of their town, though they may never become aggressive in the wider movement. Have I made myself clear? And would it be worth the while? Out of such an association would certainly come many new recruits for the white ribbon band.

Again, I want to emphasize the observance of April 14. You have received my personal letter concerning it, I hope (one has gone to every local in the United States), but too much cannot be said about it, so I bring it up again. One reason for doing so is that a letter just received from Miss Smart informs me that her interpreter will probably cost $40 per month instead of $30, as we supposed. This will make it necessary for us to plan more largely than we thought. Dear comrades, will you not make this day one of special blessing to you and the work in the far East? Miss Smart is a W. C. T. U. missionary as well as a Y, and the World's union sends her a sum sufficient for all her personal needs, but if she is to do the wonderful work which it is possible to do she must have aid from us, too. I feel that the union of hearts on this day—ten thousand young women with one purpose—will result in most generously supplying the demands. "I know in whom I have believed."

Have you all the Year Books you need? I have still a few hundred copies which I should like to see in the hands of the members.

You are aware that the 1903 edition of the World's Almanac was not nearly adequate to supply the demand. I wish all state and National secretaries would let me know as early as possible how much larger they will make their orders, so that I may determine how much to increase the edition of 1904.

To increase our influence in every way possible, I am yours to command,

Clara Parrish-Wright.

Progress in Washington.

Dear Y Comrades:—A letter from Miss Emma E. Page, who has been making a tour through her county, revealed to me the wonderful help which a county president may lend to a state Y secretary. Her message ran something as follows: "Visited the Y at A. They have forty members. Several promised to take the L. T. L. course of study; send them some leaflets. The school teacher at B. (where there is no union) signed the pledge and, though busy, will read leaflets sent to her and pass them on. At C. I found two charming young women who promised to study our work. Mrs. S., who is in charge of the Band of Mercy at O., is directing the manufacture of a large scrap book, which may be sent to the boys at the Reform School. I suggested that a page of pictures of W. C. T. U. leaders would be valuable. If you have any extra ones, send them to her." She mentioned peculiar conditions found in certain organizations, the personal needs of some of the members and the particular leaflets that would be beneficial in various localities. The list of addresses which she enclosed enables me to reach by letter and leaflet, the gifted young women whom we so much need. Happy the state Y secretary, who has such support from every county president.

The thought has come to me that a news budget might be of advantage to the state Y secretaries. There are experiences, plans of work and suggestions that would be helpful, but which are not of sufficient interest to warrant their publication in The Union Signal. Any secretary wishing to further this scheme may send a letter of not over four hundred words, and I will undertake to have it copied and sent out. I believe I can get it done for fifteen cents each.

Those who are constantly in touch with other workers will not need this as much as we who are isolated. If each will give her best, I believe it can be made a success.

Yours for advance,

Clara L. Ansorge,
State Y Secretary.

Shelton, Wash.

How the Gardner (Mass.) Y Came to Organize its City Federation of Reform Forces.

By Nellie R. Fitch.

In May, 1900, the Massachusetts state Y conference was held in Gardner. At that conference the Y. M. C. A. secretary, in the course of a brief address, said he would like to see a federation of young people's societies formed and working for the temperance cause in Gardner. As the Y president also desired this, the following September the Y arranged for a public address by Mr. Robert H. Maywood, of Boston. The notice of the meeting was sent to different churches in town and with it an invitation to each young people's society to send two representatives to this public meeting to consider forming a temperance federation. The I. O. G. T.'s and W. C. T. U.'s were also invited and the Y. M. C. A.

After the address Mr. Maywood spoke briefly of the purpose and plans of such a federation, and it was temporarily organized, and another meeting appointed at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

At the first regular meeting the Y president was made president of the federation, and a Universalist pastor was made secretary. The federation was called the Union Temperance Committee, to be composed of two representatives from each religious and temperance society in town.

The constitution drawn up was as brief and simple as possible. Meetings were held monthly, members being notified by postal, as we soon learned it was best to keep our doings out of the local papers; to follow the example of the license men and work quietly.

During February extra meetings were held. No public meeting was held, but teams with drivers, interested in no license, were sent out on election day to bring in delinquent no-license voters.

This work was done so well that even the license men themselves thought they had lost, but the strongest "no" precinct failed us by its stay-at-homes, and license won by four votes. But ours was not an inglorious defeat, as the no-license vote was raised by ninety votes.

With God's help we mean to put Gardner in the "no" column his month. It is a town of about 12,000 inhabitants and has had "license" for several years.

There are three lodges of Good Templars among the Scandinavian people in town, and our naturalization committee is helping them to become legal citizens; between thirty and forty have taken out first papers. This seems to be one of the most important branches of the U. T. C.'s work. We are preparing a card list to be used for a check list on election day, which promises to be of much use at this year's and future elections.

Y Gleanings.

Milltown, Me., has a new Y.

Michigan has four new Y's, which fact rejoices the heart of the state president greatly.

Mrs. Elma Moore Rutledge, Tennessee's state secretary, has set her stint for a dozen new Y's this year.

Mrs. Kuhl organized a fine Y at Owaneco, Ill., last month. Nearly all the members are young married women.

The state officers of Ohio will use every penny of Y dues this year for the furtherance of the work among young women.

Mrs. A. J. Chenowerth, of Elkins, is the new state secretary of West Virginia. She is aggressive and is planning much work for her state.

Mrs. Mary Brown Sexton is the new Y secretary for Burlington county, N. J. She is planning definitely for the organization of several new Y's.

Ohio is pushing L. T. L. work among the Y's. This was the subject of Miss Ensign's last letter in the state paper. The state officers are urging the employment of a paid teacher for this work.

Some of the music written by Mr. W. Carroll Radebaugh, of Mason City, Ill., whose mother is a devoted white ribboner, is to be used by Miss Gordon in the new Y and Medal Contest song book.

The largest number of Willard Memorial meetings reported up to date from any state were held in Maryland. Maryland seems also to lead just now in the number of L. T. L.'s conducted by Y's.

The Evanston Y gave a delightful reception in one of the handsomest homes in that classic city. Miss Brehm and Miss Sawyer, state Y secretary, were present. They are in the midst of a membership contest.

Mrs. Bertha Fitch-Forbes, of Sparta, Mich., a former enthusiastic state Y secretary, is frequently honored by the large W. C. T. U. of the place by having all the arrangements for their meetings put into her hands. She also has opportunity to address Christian Endeavor and other young people's societies.

Miss Harriet Montgomery, Nebraska's secretary, was afield a few days recently and organized two new Y's and an L. T. L. One Y, that at Fairmont, starts out with a membership of over forty. If she can organize twelve new Y's before the state convention the young women can have a night at that time. How wonderfully it helps to set a stint!

The very finest local program received up to date comes from the "Ensign" Y of Cleveland, O. The program for the entire year is fully outlined after the order given in the National Year Book, telling at whose home the meeting is to be held, who conducts the devotions, and everything of that sort. The name of every member is given, honorary as well as active, with full addresses appended. We wonder what society will surpass it.

Foreign.

The British Y's have a new post-card out, which has our badge and a cut of the world on it.

Mrs. Emma L. Evans has sent Miss Kara Smart $90.00, first installment to pay for her interpreter.

On November 25 occurred the centenary meeting of the Chinkiang Girls School Branch of the W. C. T. U. The organization was effected in 1887, since when monthly meetings have been held until now, except when hindered by pestilence, riot, and war.

This occasion was one of unusual interest, and numbers of friends, foreign and native, had been invited. Plenty of good music, such as no other girls' school in China can yet produce, was rendered, with literary and declamatory exercises of the first order. A principal feature was the debate on the question: "Is the World Getting Better or Worse?" The editor has heard many spirited debates in lyceums and debating societies among college students, but he never anywhere heard a more clear-cut, logical and analytical presentation of arguments, pro et con, than from these Chinese girls. It was a mental stimulus to all who could understand the language and follow the arguments and deductions. May their tribe increase!—"Central China Record."

GENERAL NEAL DOW.

NEAL DOW IN HIS LIBRARY.

MRS. NEAL DOW.

Glimpses of Neal Dow at Home.

By Lillian M. N. Stevens.

At the time of the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Portland many hundred delegates and visitors attended the reception given by Miss Dow, gladly availing themselves of this opportunity to visit her home and that of her illustrious father, Neal Dow. Roomy as the house is, it was not large enough to hold at one time all those who came, and the great throng that waited on the street for those already admitted to move on and out, was significant of the great interest which centers in this historic home.

One first enters the old fashioned hallway in which Neal Dow in his late years, when the weather was too inclement for him to go outside, used to walk back and forth a sufficient number of times to insure plenty of physical exercise. In this hall is an excellent portrait of Neal Dow and also one of his honored father, who was well known in Portland a half century or more ago as Friend Dow.

"And from its station in the hall
An ancient timepiece says to all,
'Forever—never!
Never—forever!'"

On the right of the hall is the spacious library, containing one of the finest private collections of books in the state. Neal Dow was a great reader, a great student, but like many another great man, he prized the Bible above all other books, never neglecting to read from it daily.

The chair in which he was accustomed to sit is still in its usual place, in fact, everything in the home, now under the careful management of Miss Dow, moves on much the same as in former days except that Neal Dow and Mrs. Dow have passed on from the activities of earth life.

Throughout the house are many costly souvenirs presented to Neal Dow by admiring and grateful friends and organizations in this and other lands. One of the most valuable and cherished testimonials given to him, now has a place in Rest Cottage, it being among the last requests of Neal Dow that this should be given to Miss Willard.

On the 20th day of January, 1830, when he was about twenty-six years old, he married Maria Cornelia Durant Maynard, and on their wedding day they moved into the house built by him directly opposite the home where he was born and brought up. Neal Dow, in his "Reminiscences," describes Mrs. Dow as "a devoted Christian, her daily walk and conversation being consistent with her profession. Whenever her health would permit she was regularly in attendance upon all the ordinances of the church with which she was connected, obtaining there inspiration and strength for the consecration of her life to the service of her Master through rendering assistance to the least of His children. Though these labors were not substituted for those of her own household, but were added to them, she never wearied in well-doing. Her sympathetic nature led her to constant charities, in which she was aided by her sound and discriminating judgment to extend her help where it was deserved. Suffering and sickness among the poor within the range of her observation were never left unnoticed or unrelieved by her when her assistance would avail. A true wife and noble woman, she bore with pious fortitude and patience the many trials, great sacrifices, and even dangers—of which the world could know but little—that she was obliged to encounter because of the nature and unpopularity of the work in which her husband had enlisted. Naturally retiring in disposition and averse to excitement in every form, she met without complaint that which now was forced upon her. Convinced that it was her duty, she obtained, and inspired other women to assist her in obtaining, the influence of a large number of the good women of Portland in favor of the cause to the service of which she cheerfully devoted herself and which she aided in many suitable ways."

Again Neal Dow speaks of Mrs. Dow as "a devoted mother, who with love and earnestness gave herself unreservedly for all that could make for the happiness of her home and for the welfare of her children. Surrendering those little ones who were taken hence, in humble resignation to God's will, she longed for the lives of those spared, in the unfaltering hope that they might learn to love and serve God."

During the earlier years of their married life the nature of Mr. Dow's business called him much away from home, and later the demands of the temperance work took him to various sections of our country and several times across the ocean, but he made it a rule not to permit a day to pass without writing a letter to Mrs. Dow, and he has said that unless prevented by sickness or circumstances which he could not control, he was never absent from home forty-eight hours without writing. It was Mrs. Dow's habit to carefully preserve all his letters, covering a period of fifty-two years, and these letters greatly helped Mr. Dow in preparing his autobiography, and in other ways.

Neal Dow loved mercy, and he dealt justly. It is well known that while he had always been a total abstainer, belonging to a strictly temperate family, yet the great arrest of thought came to him through the story of a poor woman whose family was defrauded and who was suffering because of the drinking habits of her husband. His mercy extended also to dumb animals.

I recall seeing a postal card which Miss Dow received from her father when she was away from home, written in his fine, beautiful handwriting, telling her that all was well at home and saying that a gray squirrel had just been up from Deering's Oaks to get his accustomed breakfast of nuts.

A horse which had been the pet of the family, when over twenty-eight years old was sent into the country to pass the remainder of his life with a farmer who promised the best of care. Some months later Neal Dow saw old Charlie in town in charge of two rough fellows who said they had bought him. He stopped them and told a boy standing near to unharness the horse and take him to his old stall in his father's stable. This was done and the horse remained there as long as he lived. There was a lawsuit and the affair cost young Neal $75, but he did not care so long as old Charlie was saved from abuse.

Although Neal Dow was not a lawyer, he sometimes acted as such. The first time he appeared before a jury, was before the days of the Maine law when he was "counsel" for a Portland woman who had broken the bottles and smashed the bar furniture and whipped the rumseller in a saloon where her husband procured strong drink, although she had often warned the keeper that she would horsewhip him if he continued to do so. Neal Dow's client was found guilty, but mercy was recommended and a small fine imposed, which Mr. Dow paid, afterward declaring that he was very glad to pay in this way for the opportunity he had of presenting to the assembled lawyers, as well as to the jury, some positive views upon the temperance question in general and the liquor traffic in particular.

In the early days of the work Neal Dow was assaulted on the street; he was waylaid on his return from temperance meetings; bottles were thrown through the windows of his house into the parlor; ineffectual attempts were made to fire his buildings; the insurance agents declined at one time to insure his property; and many other annoyances were heaped upon him. He felt obliged to protect himself by going armed. In those days there was no law in Portland, as there is at the present time, against carrying firearms. One night upon returning to his home, he threw off his overcoat forgetting that he had a brace of pistols in his pocket, when one of the pistols was discharged and the bullet smashed the hall lamp and just missed, in its course, the head of one of his daughters. She was cut by the falling glass, and the shock of her great danger had such an effect upon Neal Dow that he decided it was better to go unarmed, to take his chances with the enemy, rather than that any innocent one should suffer.

Neal Dow was in his home life, as in public life, noble, earnest and true. He loved his home with that truest type of affection that would guard not only his own, but make safe and happy the homes of his city, his state, his country, the whole world.

Portland, Me.

The Temperance Triumph.

(After Tennyson's Bugle Song.)

By Sanford G. Plumb.

A FAR note falls. The trumpet calls
To tell a listening world its story;
The long night breaks and Temperance wakes
Sad years with trumpet blasts of glory.
Blow, trumpet, blow! List, the echoes falling!
Blow, trumpet; answer, echoes, calling, calling, calling.

O hark, O hear! How grand and clear,
And grander, clearer, further going!
Ah, no uncertain note of fear,
The trumpet blasts of Temperance blowing!
Blow, with thy tones the foes of God appalling:
Blow, trumpet; answer, echoes, calling, calling, calling.

O God, they die who question why.
They faint, who hear and heed Thee never:
God's echoes roll from soul to soul,
Re-echo ever and forever.
Blow, trumpet, blow; retreat or death forstalling;
And answer, echoes, answer, calling, calling, calling.

Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter II.

HAVING waved his last farewell to his mother and the girls, Hugh settled himself into his corner, chose one of the three or four papers with which he had provided himself, and, ostensibly, divided his attention between it and the country through which he was passing. Truth to tell, his mind took little note of either. For the first twenty miles or so of his journey the thought of grandad maintained an unpleasant supremacy; but after all, Hugh was young and buoyant, and gradually the obtrusive figure of grandad faded before the mental picture of what the Rev. Hugh Brotherton was to be and to do. Brotherton the undergraduate had been a fairly decent sort of chap. He was glad to be able to think so; but mere decency would not be enough to satisfy him now. He sincerely hoped that the Rev. Hugh might prove equal to all that his conscience demanded of him. By the help of God he believed that he would. Although shocked and scandalized by the revelation of grandad's past, he, thank God, had no reason to fear a similar fate, for in accordance with the household rule, now for the first time fully understood, he and his sisters had been trained from infancy in the strictest abstinence. Moreover, he was an abstainer on principle, not by training alone. It was, in fact, on the total abstinence platform that his early oratorical laurels had been won. He was glad of it, more than ever glad of it now. Then he fell to wondering what the manner of his new life was to be, and as by turns he wondered, and scanned his fellow-passengers, and read a little, and wondered again, the smiling pastures of the southern counties were left behind, and the landscape hour by hour grew sterner and more grim. The brilliant sunshine of the summer afternoon had darkened strangely when at last, having sped through a weird district of flaming smoke and furnaces, they rushed into the darkness of a tunnel and presently emerged in Milborough railway station.

Hugh looked up and down the platform, returned the hail of a slight, delicate-looking clergyman who was hurrying up from the other end, and turned back into the carriage to collect his belongings.

"You are very punctual," said the newcomer, after greeting him cordially; "my train, which was due half an hour ago, is but just in. Where is your luggage?"

"Next to the engine," said Hugh, wishing, as at their first meeting, that his vicar could boast a few more inches.

"I've secured a cab," said Mr. Boyd, as they joined in the rush for the luggage van. "For ordinary use there are pretty frequent trains, but to-day, on account of our luggage, we must drive. The Vicarage is a couple of miles from the station, and at that end there are no cabs."

"Do you know the place well?" asked Hugh.

"Scarcely at all. I went over once to meet the patron. Apart from that one visit, I am as much a stranger as yourself."

They were soon in the four-wheeler and rattling through the narrower streets of the smoke-begrimed town towards the district where the pall of smoke hung thickest.

"Pitsmoor is chiefly a mining village, I think?" asked Hugh, breaking a pregnant silence.

"Entirely so. It is for the miners that the village exists. It has but a small population—some two thousand; but I have no doubt we shall find plenty to do."

"I hope so," said Hugh.

"Like yourself, I have everything to learn," remarked Mr. Boyd. "The former vicar was a bachelor, and as I think I told you, died suddenly some seven or eight weeks ago. Since then the Sunday services have been maintained by curates from Milborough, and the parish has been more or less looked after by neighboring clergy; so far, at any rate, as the sick are concerned. The patron, and principal proprietor, is non-resident. What families of position there are in the neighborhood belong to other parishes. There is, I believe, a doctor whom we may find companionable; but beyond the mining population, there is no one else. In our own line of work we shall have everything to find out for ourselves."

Hugh looked out through his window at the black and barren country, and found it a little difficult to rekindle the embers of yesterday's enthusiasm. Inside the cosy Vicarage, where for the present he was to live with Mr. Boyd, things looked a little brighter. They were welcomed by the late vicar's housekeeper, and a plentifully spread table awaited their attention. From the sturdy Yorkshire woman, as she presently waited upon them and took her part in the conversation with a freedom that amused Hugh, they gleaned various items of information, encouraging and otherwise.

"No, sir; there's no public house in Pitsmoor. The old master at the Hall always set his face against it, and the new one, though he don't take the same interest like in the place, haven't seen no cause to give way. Them as chooses can get what they want from the next village—and does."

To an inquiry concerning the friendliness of the inhabitants, she replied candidly:

"Well, sir, if they take to you, as the saying is, they'll treat you very kind and friendly; but if they don't take to you they'll soon let you know it; and they're none so easy to please, isn't Pitsmoor folk."

Mr. Boyd cast an apprehensive glance at Hugh.

"Did they take to the last vicar?" he asked, with anxiety.

"None so much," said Mrs. Naylor cautiously, as she removed the chicken, and put on the hot cakes. "There was them as thought there was oftens more than one meaning in what he said; and that's the kind of thing that Pitsmoor can't do with. They like plain, straightforward speaking, do Pitsmoor folk, and that way Mr. Smith didn't always please 'em. But there's bound to be a something that you'd rather have different, choose who you get. And that's as true of husbands as of anyone else," she added, with a good-natured sigh. "Ay! and they'll happen be finding before long that there's something that might be bettered in either one o' you," she added warningly, when the two young men had stopped laughing.

They laughed again at the prophecy, and between Mrs. Naylor and their unpacking, spent a cheerful evening.

In a desultory manner, as they chatted, they made tentative plans for the working of the parish, and Hugh learned that he was to consider himself responsible for the mission-room, situated about a mile from the church. By-and-by, while examining the contents of a cupboard in his study, Mr. Boyd came across a parish register, evidently compiled for the purposes of parochial visiting, and more or less complete. For the next few evenings Hugh devoted himself to the task of copying that register for his own benefit.

(To be continued.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

A Fight Against Odds.

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter X.

The most eminent counsel in the Dominion had been secured on behalf of the three offenders. No money had been spared, no stone had been left unturned which could result in their favor, and after the trial was over, every possible endeavor was made to commute the sentence or to have a new trial, especially in the case of Claude Kilgour; but every effort proved unavailing.

There are horrors too black to be revealed. There is anguish that may not be written. If only it might be told that the mother fell into a swoon from which she never rallied, when the awful truth was irrevocably borne home! But no, death's angel came not to her deliverance, and her tortured senses remained intelligent and alert. If only the broken young sister had fallen into a delirium of illness which would have borne her unconscious through that fearful time! But her strength remained, while the chestnut gold of her beautiful tresses changed to silver about her girlish brow. If only the heroic older brother could have done something for his loved ones which would have kept his longing hands and his great manly breaking heart employed!

Is there nothing, nothing left to tell which rifts the pall of despair? Surely "God's in his heaven."

Yes, two blessed things are to be remembered: A noble father was mercifully spared this fearful knowledge, as was also the sweet, sensitive, winsome-hearted brother, who of them all had been by nature most keenly endowed with the capacity for suffering. But, better than these, was the letter from Claude himself, written ten days before his young life on earth ended. It was not a boy's letter, even a precocious boy's letter, but rather the uttering of a soul who has pierced the veil and caught a glimpse of the hidden meaning of the Plan Eternal.

"My Dearest Mother; My Loved Sister and Brother:

Last night a wonderful thing came to me. You know how I have seemed these weeks to lose all power to think or feel or respond to anything. The chaplain had been reading and praying with me, as he and many others have never ceased to do, and I had wished in my dull way, as I so often have wished before, that it were in me to care enough to see how these things mattered and to take hold of a dying Savior's promises.

"Everything seemed dark, and I could not even rouse myself enough to feel miserable over my lost condition, but I knelt down, as I always do, to say the Lord's prayer and some of the collects I had learned in Sunday-school. I always say, too, in a mechanical way, the prayer: 'Lord, be merciful to me, a sinner,' but I can get up no feeling over it. I knelt a little while after I had said my prayers, trying to think of some petition to make for myself, but there came to me only the old prayer we used always to say after 'Now I lay me': 'God bless dear papa and mamma and dear brothers and sister, and make me a good boy and take care of me till morning.'

"A great peace and comfort suddenly fell upon me, and when I lifted my head a beautiful vision seemed to rise in the dark before my eyes—that of an angel, but having Christ's face, like the picture in the New Testament part of our family Bible.

"I had a wonderful, blissful, indescribable feeling of His coming close, close to me and surrounding my whole being with His presence. Then the verse flashed through my mind, 'He shall gather the lambs in His bosom.'

"For a time I was too happy to do more than just keep on kneeling and feeling that beautiful joy and rest in my soul. Then suddenly words came to me. They did not seem words prompted by my own thoughts, but almost as if dictated by the beautiful Presence. They appeared to become my own words and thoughts as I whispered them. They were: 'Dear Lord, I have not cared about knowing Thee, because it seemed that though I wanted to care, the power was denied me. But thou knowest how it is with me, and oh, stoop down and lift me up, in spite of myself to where I can honestly seek Thee, for I cannot find the way myself. Dear God, I am as sorry as it is in me to be, that I seem powerless to think and to act as thou wouldst have a penitent do, but oh, take me just as I am, and breathe into me the life and power to seek Thee as Thou should'st be sought.'

"Then, oh, my prayer was answered—fully, completely, at once! I have found Him at last; or is it not, rather, that Christ has found me and taken me?

"I did not sleep all night, but lay awake while God talked to my soul, which at last was even more awake than this ruined benumbed mind and body will ever be again.

"Now I am going to try to write a few of the many things which have been revealed to me through this wonderful new light during these past blessed hours.

(Continued on page 12.)

Children's Cozy Corner

What the Boys Found. By Frances Campbell Sparhawk.

"DON'T tell," said Sammy. "No," answered Bob, looking out into space as if he were to see before him the secret that was trembling on Sammy's lips.

"There's a man in there."

"Where?"

"Right beside that path. He's so close to the pool I should think he'd tumble in; only, he's—"

Sammy stopped.

"What?" cried Bob. "Do tell a feller."

Sammy put his arm about the neck of his little companion and drew him close. Then lifting his forefinger to caution him against an outcry, he said, 'Cause he—come and look, Bob."

Together the two children crept towards the place where the man was lying motionless.

Bob drew back and his little face turned pale. "He's dead," he cried. "Let's run away."

"No," said Sammy. "Guess he isn't dead. I guess he's fainted."

"What's that, Sammy?"

"It's when people tumble down as if they'd gone to sleep, and can't move. My sister fainted once; and they threw water in her face. S'pose we throw some on his face.'

They tried it from the pool close at hand, being none too careful as to drenching the man's clothes also. He gasped and sputtered, and opened his eyes and looked stupidly at the children.

"It is Frank Little's father," cried Sammy. "You're sick, aren't you, Mr. Little?"

"Yes," said the man thickly. He roused enough to perceive that these children had never seen a drunken man, and he was ashamed. He had never been drunken in the street before.

"How queer he is!" said Bob. "Let's run and call Frank; he's right round the corner."

Suddenly Mr. Little sat upright. He was wide awake now, for Bob's words had stung him into life and set his heart beating with shame.. He knew how he looked with his heavy eyes and his blotched face. His little innocent boy who loved his father and believed in him must not see him so. "No, no!" he cried. "Stay where you are." He spoke quite clearly, and the children looked at him in amazement.

"DON'T TELL," SAID SAMMY.

"Let's not call him," said Sammy. "'Twould make him late to school; he can't run as fast as we can; he's littler. But we'll tell him at recess how we found you. Bob thought you were dead, but I didn't," and he laughed.

Mr. Little felt guilty. He thought that the boys knew what the matter was and that they would tell his child they had found his father drunken by the roadside. "No, no," he said. "Wait a minute; I'll give you———" And he felt in his pockets. But they were empty; he had spent all his money at the tavern with his companions the night before. The children watched him and seeing that he had nothing for them, prepared to run away.

"No; wait, wait," he said again. And diving down once more, he succeeded in bringing up two dimes. He handed one to each child. "Say nothing to Frank, or to any one, about how you found me———sick," he said.

"No, we won't, mister," returned Bob.

"No, not this time," laughed Sammy as the boys ran off.

"No, not this time," mused Mr. Little, now quite sobered, "and, please God," he said, "there shall never be another time. My own dear boy shall never be called by other children to come and look at me lying drunken."

He never was. For when Mr. Little was tempted, he thought of his boy Frank and resisted. So he gave up drink and grew to be a sober and industrious man.

Wellesley Hills, Mass.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1.—Ladder.

```
*         *
* * * * * *
*         *
*         *
* * * * * *
*         *
*         *
* * * * * *
*         *
*         *
* * * * * *
*         *
*         *
* * * * * *
*         *
*         *
```

The left-hand upright gives the name of an illustrious American general, the right-hand upright the name of his wife.

Cross-words, beginning with the top round:

1. A prophet.
2. A word in the Bible signifying "hill."
3. A country in the "Land of the East."
4. The name of a man mentioned in I. Chron. vii.
5. A weight of the Hebrews.

B. C.

2.—Riddle.

If you look on scenes of horror
  Or on a woodland fair,
Or in the wild and rocky gorge,
  You always see me there.

You see me in the peaceful homes,
  You see me in the store;
You see me everywhere you go
  And always on the floor.

I'm used by every living man
  In wonder, woe and joy;
You'll find me in the purest gold
  And also in alloy.

You'd better don your thinking cap
  If you would guess me, friend;
But I will give you this one clue,
  I've neither start nor end.

3.—*Transpositions.

1. In a nut-bearing tree find a new and popular article of food.
2. In an early flowering tree find an animal from a modern "Noah's Ark."
3. In the fruit of a tree find the fruit of a vine.
4. In that which is sufficient find a tree.
5. In to gather find a fruit.
6. In a fruit find low price.
7. In a body of water find a salad.

P. F.

4.—Geographical Word Square.

1. A town in Turkey.
2. A town in Arabia.
3. An island in the Indian Ocean.
4. A town in Hungary.
5. A town on the Mediterranean Sea.

B. C.

5.—*Decapitations.

1. Behead the handle of a door, and leave the head.
2. Behead one's idea of perfection, and leave a trade.
3. Behead almost, and leave in season.
4. Behead to hold firmly, and leave a rough tool.
5. Behead to rub out, and leave to destroy.
6. Behead queer, and leave a kind of muffin.
7. Behead a movement of the eyelid, and leave a fluid.
8. Behead a gray pallor, and leave timid.
9. Behead headstrong, and leave a tree.
10. Behead an arrow, and leave skill.
11. Behead crime, and leave something cold and hard.
12. Behead angry, and leave proportion.
13. Behead nine, and leave ten.

The removed heads will name a powerful ruler.

Answers to Puzzles of February 26.

1.—Freshman.

2.—1, Pound, pond. 2, Band, bad. 3, Pain, pan. 4, Four, fur. 5, Snap, sap. 6, Haste, hate. 7, Cain, can. 8, Glance, lance. 9, Ring, rig. 10, Wain, win. 11, Holly, holy. Removed letters, UNION SIGNAL.

3.—Henry W. Longfellow.

4.—1, Elegant in, eglantine. 2, Melt an, mantel. 3, His span, Spanish. 4, Air grace, carriage.

Youthful Wisdom.

A Fatal Comparison.

Once a boy in school was asked to compare the adjective "sick." This is the way he compared it: "sick," "worse," "dead."

Critically Exact.

"James," said mama apprenhensively, "have you ever heard Hugh use any bad words?"

"No'm," answered the little fellow. Then, "Well, yes, I did too, mama. The other day he said git for got."

They Got Wet.

"What was the first thing the children of Israel did after they came through the Red Sea?" asked a Sunday school teacher.

"I 'spect they dried themselves," answered a small boy.

Continued in Our Next.

"Well, Clarence," asked papa, "how did you like school?"

"O, I like it all right," he replied, " but we didn't get through to-day, so we all have to go back to-morrow."

Fulfilled the Conditions.

One day my little cousin Johnny was asked what fowl had wings and could not fly. Johnny thought a minute, then said, "A dead chicken."

As He was Called.

Our neighbor, little Arthur, aged three, was a notorious little runaway.

On being asked his name, he always insisted that it was Baby. "But," said I one day, "what does mama call you?"

He replied with great earnestness, "Arfur-tum-here!"

An Honored Ancestry.

One day a teacher was impressing upon a class of small children why it was that the eagle was our national emblem, and after she had finished she asked one of the girls to tell her "why." The child looked around for a second and then said with a bright smile:

"We chose the eagle to be our national emblem because it is the father of our country."

—Little Chronicle.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL AND WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, March 12, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Neal Dow As A Reformer.

(Written by Miss Willard at the time of his translation.)

UNDOUBTEDLY the central figure of the temperance reform on this planet has for a generation been General Neal Dow. The world will appreciate its debt to him when his figure is seen the more clearly in the perspective of time. He was one of the few soldiers of God whose heroic battles will render the century illustrious.

The National W. C. T. U., by a rising vote in its last convention, agreed to celebrate his birthday (March 20) as "Prohibition Day" and to use its utmost influence to induce other religious, philanthropic and temperance societies to do the same. I have never seen a more earnest audience than that which in Exeter Hall celebrated his ninetieth birthday, Lady Henry Somerset presiding. His work is more appreciated by the temperance people of England than it has yet come to be by his own countrymen. The United Kingdom Alliance, which is the greatest temperance power on the other side, was founded as the result of his devoted labors. He visited England twice, possibly three times, and gave hundreds of lectures in all parts of the country, making no charge whatever for his services, and wearing himself out to such a degree that, in spite of his splendid physique and robust health, he was obliged to seek rest in the famous watercure at Malvern.

James H. Raper, the greatest of our English popular orators, was the loving friend of General Dow and never wearied of telling me about the magnificent work he did for our comrades yonder. Mr. Raper is gone, and Dr. Lees, and now their beloved brother has joined them.

If he had turned his intellectual acumen and rare sagacity into the channels of a merely political life he would undoubtedly have been governor of Maine and a member of the United States senate, but he did something better and infinitely greater: in the senate of humanity he has an undisputed seat.

When a great tree falls in the forest how the sound reverberates, what a wide and desolate space it makes, and how lonely is the place! It seems like that to have him go from us who was so stalwart and true to the core, like one of the splendid pine trees of that native state which has been incalculably blessed by his great life and unwearied services.

The Principle of Prohibition.

THE varying methods adopted by the opponents of the temperance reform are of exceeding interest to one who, from the standpoint of the reformer, makes them a study. Our friend, the enemy, is not always outspoken in his enmity. He sometimes poses as a veritable friend, with arguments so suave and manners so subtle and ingratiating, that it were small wonder if the elect themselves were deceived.

One of the distinct phases of the anti-temperance movement of to-day is that of criticism of, and opposition to, the principle and fact of prohibition. The old cry, "Prohibitory laws cannot be enforced," is changing to the new, "Prohibitory laws ought not to be enforced." We are gravely told that prohibition can never become a true solution of the drink problem because it is based upon an unrighteous as well as upon an impossible hypothesis. Morality, righteousness and religion itself are being ranged side by side with the more familiar cohorts of the liquor traffic as opponents of prohibitory laws.

The combination is an unusual one, but just this combination met us in Vermont and is meeting us in New Hampshire. This abnormal union is being heralded from Christian pulpits and through the religious press. We are being asked to believe—and many, apparently, are believing—that the laws which for a half century and more, the liquor traffic has most strenuously opposed, are the laws which tend to the upbuilding of that traffic.

"Prohibition is wrong in principle." This is the shibboleth of the new cult. As such, we should carefully examine the statement to see if it contains even a grain of truth.

Prohibitory laws are not of recent growth. They date back of the Ten Commandments and are based upon the supposition that wherever the community is interested, its claims outweigh the claims of the individual. Why should not a man murder, or steal, or commit arson if his trend of mind is such as to cause him to find pleasure in such deeds? "Because," is the prompt answer of society, "he has no right to indulge in individual tastes which conflict with the public wellfare. He ceases to have personal rights where those rights interfere with the rights of others."

This principle is also recognized in contagious diseases, in times of national or communal disaster or danger, and wherever the individual man touches the social life of the community.

No man may sell diseased meat, because the welfare of the community is thereby endangered . No man may even keep diseased cattle, as the New England states within the past few months have had occasion to learn. No man, in time of contagious disease, may disobey the quarantine laws however they may conflict with his personal interests. He may not even refuse vaccination though he be never so convinced that it is a "barbaric survival." The whole structure of modern society is hedged about by prohibitory laws without which modern society were impossible.

The prohibitionist claims that the prohibition of the liquor traffic is in perfect harmony, both in principle and in practice, with the examples of prohibition to be found all about us. We are told, with a grave and profound wisdom, that "men cannot be made good by statutory law," to which we as gravely reply that we have never supposed they could be. We are told that something more than "Thou shalt not" is necessary in human evolution; to which weighty and original statement we not only give unqualified assent, but we proceed straightway, by every means in our power, to bring about the "something more."

Prohibition is based upon the following principles:

1. Society rights have precedence of individual rights.

2. Whatever menaces the welfare of society as such, must be placed under the ban of the law.

3. The liquor traffic is in every nation, and has been in every age, the greatest menace to social welfare. It is the great producing cause of crime, poverty, pauperism, disease and death. Therefore, society, in the interests of all, has the inherent right to declare against the liquor traffic and to place it, with other public menaces, under the ban of law.

4. When prohibition is rightly understood, it will be seen to be more than a right and nothing less than a duty for the social order to thus protect itself and thus care for the rights of its individual units.

Prohibition is a law upon the highest instinct of self-preservation as well as upon the nobler attribute of true altruism. It is a law in harmony with Gladstone's dictum that the province of government is to make it hard for men to do wrong and easy for them to do right. It is in harmony with Ruskin's great statement: "That is the richest community that nourishes the greatest number of noble and happy souls." It is a state or a nation's emphatic negative to God's question "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?"

Rightly understood, prohibition will be seen to base itself upon no chimercial Utopian scheme, but upon the hard-headed logic which underlies all science of government. When good men shall try as hard to understand its principles as some of them try now to misunderstand them, then will come the vindication, the widespread enactment and the successful enforcement of laws for the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

"Horrible Example of Vermont."

AND who is it that is so shocked at the "horrible example of Vermont" during its fifty years of prohibition? Who, but the leading officer of the Illinois Liquor Dealers' Protective Association? And what is the occasion of his pathetic alarm? This: The fear that the legislature now in session at Springfield may pass a local option law.

In Vermont the liquor dealers have been fighting, tooth and nail, for local option. But that was local option in place of state prohibition. In Illinois the liquor interests are combining every means and method of influence to prevent the legislature from enacting a local option law. The two committees which have the bill in charge, the one in the house, the other in the senate, are being vigorously appealed to on both sides.

When an official of the Liquor Dealers' Protective Association rises to make a moral argument against prohibition, look out for something pathetic. Mr. Henry F. Maiwaaerm, secretary of the association, has issued a letter addressed to individual members of the legislature. In the first place, they are warned that their action in this matter is being watched, and that those who vote for local option will find themselves spotted next time they want the votes of their constituency. But that is not all. Think of the dreadful effects of any sort of non-protective legislation against the saloon. This spokesman of the Liquor Dealers' Protective Association goes on with dramatic appeal to say:

"The passage of the local option bill means the closing of many saloons in your district and consequently the loss of a large revenue derived therefrom, especially to the city of Chicago, without any corresponding benefit.

"The experience in all parts of the country is that the closing of the legitimate licensed saloon does not stop the use of liquor, but causes the opening of blind pigs, holes in the wall and other secret places where liquor is sold, and the turning of the drug stores into saloons, without any financial benefit to the city or town, as, for instance, Hyde Park.

"As a rule, the condition of the city or town without a saloon is infinitely worse than one that licenses and regulates the place where liquor is sold.

"Local option means prohibiting, and it is only in the last few days that after fifty years of prohibition the state of Vermont has voted to license saloons, and, as one of her leading statesmen said, 'Prohibition in Vermont meant fifty years of bribery, fifty years of corruption, fifty years of blackmail, fifty years of plunder, fifty years of extortion, fifty years of drunkenness and fifty years of debauchery."

"Surely you do not wish to inflict upon Illinois a curse. That is what prohibition has done in Vermont and what local option means for Illinois.

"We trust that, in the interest and welfare of our great state you will let well enough alone, for the citizens in the smaller cities and towns of the state now express their wish in regard to the liquor traffic by selection of their local aldermen."

Comment would the text confound. The honorable legislators at Springfield who are taken to be open to this sort of statement and appeal must consider their manhood to be highly flattered.

Hope for the Lone Star.

"THE star that never sets," that bright peculiar star that had so benignly illumined the Green Mountain state for fifty years—has—the pity of it!—gone into temporary eclipse. But for the Lone Star, the star which shines resplendent over that vastest state in the Union, Texas, there is reported to be good grounds of hope.

Already in Texas, under local option 104 of her 23C counties have complete prohibition; 74 other counties restrict the sale of alcoholic beverages to their county seats or municipal towns; and only 58 counties are under general license conditions. This growing dominance of prohibition sentiment, looking towards statewide prohibition, has alarmed the liquor dealers. And the fact that the prohibitionists have appealed to the Texas legislature for a state election to decide for or against statewide prohibition has so startled the liquor dealers that, according to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, to head off the movement, they have themselves drafted one of the most drastic liquor laws to be found in any state in the Union and are working this through the state legislature. This bill, drafted and introduced by representatives of the saloons, among other things, provides that no saloonkeeper can get a renewal of his license unless he can swear that he has violated no statute, has not sold liquors to minors or students, has not allowed gambling, and has not kept open after legal hours. If he perjures himself, he is punishable by a severe penalty of imprisonment. If he violates any law his license is to be revoked for two years.

In other states in the South, as Georgia, Mississippi and Kentucky, prohibition by local option now largely prevails. Doubtless one reason for the spread of prohibition sentiment in the South is the fact of the horrible effects of liquor drinking among the undisciplined colored people, who, so obviously, need to be protected against the drink temptation. But among poor whites, as also rich whites, and people in every grade of society, there is seen to be similar need of home-protection against the drink fiend and the organized saloon power.

Some time the education and aroused public conscience—alike in the Southern and the Northern, the Eastern and Western states—will get an eye-opening. The benign passion for social betterment, which is characterizing the new century, will begin to see the true point of attack. If the magnificent commonwealth of Texas, with all its imperial possibilities, is seen to be leading the way, all the world shall applaud.

Experience Corner.

COMRADES IN TROUBLE:—These questions have come from friends in need of advice:

I. "A president's husband owned property which he desired to lease, with the privilege of selling liquor. The wife signed the lease only after much persuasion from the husband, and gave, as her reason for signing, that the property was his before their marriage and she did not think she should refuse to sign the lease. Did she break her pledge?"

Only one state, to my knowledge, has a pledge that includes: "That I will not allow my premises nor any premises subject to my control, to be used for their manufacture, sale, or use, as a beverage." Signers, however, usually count the expressions, "do all in my power to promote the cause of temperance," or "that I will discourage the use of, and traffic in, the same," as covering all such grounds as that under consideration.

If the pledge simply implies the payment of dues and abstinence from drinking, she did not break it. The more educated we become as W. C. T. U. people, the more comprehensive is our pledge. A sensitive conscience would impel a young woman—for I feel sure this president is young—who is so unfortunately mated, to resign her office.

While family peace is an inestimable blessing, it may cost too dear bought at the price of principle. It is exceedingly difficult to advise in such an instance. She is a happy wife who never has such a problem to decide, and she is quite as happy whose unswerving standard of duty has always been such that it takes the whole family with her. There is more than one wife of a liquor man who carries an aching heart inside her silken vest.

For myself, if I lived upon the revenue from the traffic we were born to put down, I should fear to wake some morning and find, in blazing letters on the most irrepressible saloon in all the country, the names of the proprietors, "Joseph Heintzelmann and Mother Experience."

"Is it well to allow her to retain the position of president? If not, what would be the best means to remove her from the place?"

Let the most loving, but persistent soul among you who is her friend, go to her personally, not officially, and show her that the cause suffers through her doubtful influence. After a half hour of prayer, our young president will see her way clear to resign, and no after chatter need even imply that such resignation was enforced. Save the union, but save the worker, too.

II. "If a prosperous union had held entertainments to raise money to build a W. C. T. U. hall, and before spending the money had gone down in membership, and had come to hold no meetings for a long time, should it be called a union?"

If annual dues have gone to the state and no action has been taken to disband, the union is comatose, but not dead.

"What should be done by a county president in regard to the money that had been raised?"

Unless there is an uncommon set of constitutions, local, county and state (which should always fit each other), I am unable to see what jurisdiction any county president would have in the matter. In some states, money left in local treasuries, and not raised for a specific purpose, reverts to the state when the union disbands. I know no constitution which puts it into county treasuries. Yours may be an exception.

"Would the president of said union have a right to use money so raised for state or other dues?"

If an examination of the records of the union—which, of course, were at the time regularly read and approved—show indisputably that the funds on hand were raised for a specific purpose, no one has a right to use them, or any part of them, for any other purpose, not even to pay dues. If it had been simply a sort of indefinite, loose, "general understanding" that the money was going for some such object, it might be admissable for the dues to be paid from the fund. But in this enterprise of building the hall, or any other business matter, the subject should have come before the union by motion, should have been fully discussed, settled by vote, and the records should show it.

This case, like many another, shows the absolute necessity of knowledge of parliamentary law, for civil law is its complement. Courts could do no other than to insist upon carrying out the action of the union.

This gives me a coveted opportunity to say that one who regards parliamentary law as unnecessary red tape is but a limping soldier in our bloodless battle.

III. "If a union has lost its members because they believe the president untrue to her pledge, and it cannot be built up with her as president, what is best to be done?"

Belief must have a sound foundation—that of evidence. If a president or any other member is untrue to her pledge, she can retain membership only by retaking that pledge. If it be a matter of hearsay, or if it be not confirmed by trustworthy evidence, let the members who constitute the real bone and fiber of the union bear bravely and stand heroically to the close of the local year and then have an unquestionable woman ready for the place. Like Caesar's wife, a W. C. T. U. officer must be above suspicion. If there should be the wicked sting of a backbiter in it (for some people are still human), see to it that noble Christian women become no party to social intolerance.

"It must needs be that offences come" now as two thousand years ago. Patience, knowledge of right, and consecrated common sense on the part of the "stand-bys," usually bring justice to all.

Has everybody noticed how little friction there is in white ribbon ranks?—that women of every degree of intelligence, unlike in everything except intense convictions, all adapt themselves to our adjustable harness and pull together for a common end?

We have many a proof that divine love permeates the work of our temperance force. This is one of them.

MOTHER EXPERIENCE.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIMS PROGRESS

Low at His feet lay thy burden of carefulness,
High on His heart He will bear it for thee,
Comfort thy sorrows, and answer thy prayerfulness,
Guiding thy steps as may best for thee be.
—J. S. B. Monsell.

***

There is no rational principle by which a man can die contented but a trust in the mercy of God through the merits of Jesus Christ.—SAMUEL JOHNSON.

***

All the days of the week the winds of worldly care and trouble bend my spirit toward the earth; but with the Sabbath calm I see that though my present root is in the earth, my true desire is upward toward thy haven, O God of peace and truth.—E. M. GOULBURN.

***

There are times when the most patient of us feel rather glad that we do not live forever. Respect our moral tabernacle as we may and treat it tenderly, as we ought to do, we may one day be not so very sorry to lay it down, not only with all its sins, but with its often infirmities.—DINAH MULOCK CRAIK.

***

Show thy light: if conscience gleam,
Set not thy bushel down;
The smallest spark may send his beam
O'er hamlet, tower and town.
—DEAN ALFORD.

***

The beatitude of the saints is the matured result of the long course of patient strivings which may have passed wholly unobserved because of their minuteness. One step has followed another in the mysterious progress of daily, hourly acts, each seeming to pass away, as footprints on the sand are obliterated by the advancing tide; but the end is the Vision of God, and the recompense is the perfection of a nature made one with the Mind of God.—T. T. CARTER.

***

Through all my little daily cares there is
One thought that comfort brings whene'er it comes.
'Tis this: "God knows." He knows
Each struggle that my hard heart makes to bring
My will to His. Often, when night-time comes,
My heart is full of tears, because the good
That seemed at morn so easy to be done
Has proved so hard; but then, remembering
That a kind Father is my judge, I say,
"He knows." And so I lay me down with trust
That His good hand will give me needed strength
To better do His work in coming days.
—HARRIET MCEWEN KIMBALL.

***

What you need to do is to put your will over completely into the hands of your Lord, surrendering to Him the entire control of it. Say: "Yes, Lord, yes!" to everything, and trust Him so to work in you to will, as to bring your whole wishes and affections into conformity with His own sweet and lovable and most lovely will. It is wonderful what miracles God works in wills that utterly surrender to Him. He turns hard things into easy, and bitter things into sweet. It is not that he puts easy things in the place of the hard, but He actually changes the hard thing into an easy one.—HANNAH WHITALL SMITH.

***

Lord, teach us how to pray—
O, do Thou lead the way!
So rough the path sometimes, so dim and steep,
So steep and dim where fall the shadows deep,
With perils fraught when darkling fogs obscure,
Or will-o'-the-wisps to deadly march allure,
When pales the cloudless splendor of the noon,
Or blackness robs the sky or guiding moon,
Then teach us how to pray—
And lead us into day.

Teach us for what to pray
Lord, do not let us stray
Afar from Thee! Teach us to choose life's gold,
Not dross; to know that pain and grief enfold
A blessing and a peace, steadfast and sweet.
Make blind eyes see, give strength to stumbling feet.
Within the ashes of a dead self lies
A nobler self. To Thee our dead past cries.
Teach us for what to pray—
To rise above our clay.
New York Observer.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS:—Since my request for sample programs quite a number have been sent in, for which the donors will hereby accept my sincere thanks. I am so glad to have them to send to others who request such help. I hold in my hand the unique program of Miama county, Ohio. The county officers, superintendents, Red Letter Days, etc., are given first. Then follow the names of the several unions with officers and superintendents, time and place of meeting, for instance: Troy, 106 members. Meetings every Thursday at 2:30 o'clock in City building, second floor, opposite public library." Then follow the officers and superintendents of the unions. After the unions come the monthly topics, beginning with January, for one year. They are printed at the head of the page and the remainder of the page left vacant for notes. They are adapted, of course, to the special time of year, as, for instance: "March Topics—Sketch of Neal Dow, with quotations; Prohibition vs. Tax and License; What is Christian Citieznship?; Why we should vote for members of the School Board next month; Our National President and THE UNION SIGNAL; Close of the Messenger (state paper) Contest; the Press as an Educator." It occurs to me that there is much advantage in having all of the unions pursue the same topics and in their knowing just when and where every other union holds its meeting. Then, too, the expense must be less in printing programs enough for the county at one and the same time.

Some of the programs are simple, inexpensive folders, which, it seems to me, answer the purpose well. I am particularly interested, however, in the quality of the topics. A few seem to take up the departments only without variation. Others have most taking and original subjects and a variety for each meeting. I am more and more convinced that every union, to be a success, must have an annual program and should have a most capable program committee.

Just now there is much interest in the question of prohibition on account of the Vermont vote and the campaigns in several states for state prohibition. Mrs. Stevens has written a leaflet giving facts about prohibition which will be printed shortly by the W. T. P. A., and all states trying to gain prohibition, in whole or in part, ought to distribute these lavishly. She is also preparing a leaflet on the dispensary which will be very valuable. We have had many inquiries for information along this line, and believing, as we do, that the dispensary is not an improvement over the saloon, it is wise to disseminate knowledge on this subject.

I had the pleasure a few weeks ago of reading the manuscript of a book by Bishop Samuel Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal Church of Chicago, on the subject of Mormonism. It is the most interesting and comprehensive thing I have seen, beginning with the history of Joseph Smith's family and coming down to the present time. There are many quotations from Mormon books, especially in regard to polygamy and the authority of the church. It is intensely interesting and covers the ground completely and will cost but little. (See Publisher's Notes for announcement of price, which will be made as soon as the book is off the press.) It is hoped that tens of thousands of people will read this book in order that they may become informed not only in regard to past history, but present conditions

Yours cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

With The Treasurer.

THE unions are responding to the call for memorial contributions in a very encouraging way. We are much interested in the vivid accounts given of meetings held and we judge that the programs this year have been full of good seed for future harvests. The receipts since last report are as follows, $2 except as noted:

OHIO—Rock Creek, Woodfield, Peru, Lorain, Medina, Newark, Berea, Toledo $2.85, Bowling Green $1.57, Cleveland Central, National Military Home, Worthington, Marietta, New Vienna, New Baltimore, Mechanicsburg, Williamsport, Greenville $3, Quaker City, Jersey.

MICHIGAN.—Kalamazoo, Lake Odessa, Milford, Central of Bay City, Norwood, Copac, Joyfield, Manton $1, South Haven, Kingston, Hillsdale, South Butler, Plymouth, Greenville, West Bay City, White Pigeon.

IOWA.—Carrie B. Nugent, Central City.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Kate Cunningham, Lock Haven, Harrisburg L. T. L., Germantown, Corry, North Philadelphia, Reading, Montoursville, South Bethlehem, Factoryville, Mr. and Mrs. John Alford, Beaver Falls.

KENTUCKY.—Somerset, Paris, Wilmore, Spears, Paducah.

INDIANA.—Bedford, Richmond, Hartford City, Loogootee, Mt. Vernon, Peru $3.55, Bath, La Porte.

ILLINOIS.—Farmington, Illiopolis, Peoria, Chicago Central, Camp Hill, Rockford Central, Hillsboro, Casey, Vandalia, Cornelia T. Jewett.

COLORADO.—Pueblo, Olathe, Ft. Morgan, Longmont, Denver (Highlands), Eaton $5, Platteville.

RHODE ISLAND.—Middletown, Providence, Portsmouth.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Spencer, Williamstown, Neponset, Pittsfield, Mansfield, Edgartown.

VERMONT.—Chester.

WISCONSIN.—Whitehall, Racine, Sturgeon Bay, River Falls, Auburn, Janesville, Eureka, Lathrap of Milwaukee, Hammond, Reedsburg.

MINNESOTA.—St. Paul (Somerset), Spring Valley, Elk River.

MAINE.—Mrs. Merrill, Portland $3.07, Norway, Garland, Yarmouthville, Damiriscotta, Round Pond, Stroudwater, $10.00.

NEW YORK.—Goldenbridge, Phelps .40, Yonkers, Cortland, Farmer, Sherwood, Carthage, La Fargeville, Watertown, Watertown (Y), A Friend.

ARIZONA.—Phoenix, Mesa City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—East Rochester, Baseawen, Whitefield, Somersworth, Marlboro, Dover L. T. L. $1.

OKLAHOMA.—Granite.

NEW JERSEY.—Trenton No. 1 $2.50.

WASHINGTON.—Dayton, Kalispel (W), Kalispel (Y), Dryad, Rosalie $4.15.

NEBRASKA.—Fremont, Clay Center $1.90, North Platte, Blue Springs, Haigler.

VIRGINIA.—Chincoteague, Lexington.

LOUISIANA.—Pharr, Centerville, Estherwood, New Orleans Central $7.95.

CALIFORNIA.—Soquel $2.10, Upland.

TENNESSEE.—Maxwell.

MISSOURI.—Empire Prairie, Cameron, Kansas City Central, Burlington.

DELAWARE.—Seaford, Newark, Milford.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Lost Creek, Fairmont, Parkersburg, Mannington, Sistersville.

NORTH CAROLINA.—Winston-Salem.

CONNECTICUT.—Milldale, Terryville, New Britain, Putnam.

KANSAS.—Burr Oak, Winchester.

SOUTH DAKOTA.—Beresford.

ALABAMA.—Boaz, Mobile.

MONTANA.—Wibaux.

TEXAS.—Oakwoods.

NEVADA.—Reno.

Howick, Quebec.

HELEN M. BARKER.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

Mr. A. S. Hitchcock, East Hampton, Conn. (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

Sunday School Work.

DEAR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS:—The second Quarterly Temperance Lesson of 1903 comes on April 19. Topic, "The Law of Love." Lesson Text, Romans 13:7-14. Golden Text, "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."—Rom. 13-10. The general temperance topic suggested by the lesson is, "Temperance in its relation to the individual and to the nation."

This lesson is one of great importance. We should make every possible effort to emphasize its teachings with the one purpose of rousing the latent energy among Christian people and stirring into activity forces which shall make for righteousness, temperance and purity.

The quarterly supplies published by our department are essential to effective work. We have been assured many times that the improved form of our quarterly leaflet makes it still more helpful to the Sunday school teacher and most suitable for general distribution among senior and adult pupils in the Sunday school. The Responsive Reading for this quarter is on Bible Temperance. It can be used in classes to precede the study of the lesson or in the opening exercises of the Sunday school. The blackboard exercise presents a picture which, if placed before the school, will teach its own vital temperance lesson, while the outline of thought given for the temperance talk is one which can easily be adapted by the most inexperienced speakers. Nothing tells so much in the general exercises of the Sunday school on Temperance Sunday as a striking blackboard lesson.

Let us aim to have some scripture texts bearing upon temperance, memorized by the Sunday School pupils every Temperance Sunday. If this is done we are doubly assured that they will have the "Sword of the Spirit" well sheathed in the heart and, thus equipped, be able to "stand" victorious in the presence of the "evil" of strong drink. To aid in this most important effort Bible Temperance Texts will be provided each quarter by the department. These cards will be attractive and inexpensive. The texts selected will be significant and will emphasize some truth of the current temperance lesson. The cards can be distributed one week in advance of the lesson and recited by the entire school on Temperance Sunday. They can also be used most effectively by the teachers in their individual classes and will prove an attractive and helpful feature of class work.

We have just published a new leaflet for general distribution, "Temperance Arrows." This leaflet contains brief statements of facts calculated to strike conviction into the heart of the most ndifferent, overcoming apathy and lending significance to our oft-repeated plea for help in temperance warfare. This new leaflet is especially suitable for distribution in the Sunday school on the coming Temperance Sunday. It will also aid our workers in special program work.

(Continued on page 11.)

Asking Questions.

An Inquiry Changed a Man's Whole Life.

When you get a man to recognize that his bad feelings come from improper food and that he can get well by using scientific food, the battle is half won. One of New York's business men says:

"I was troubled for a long time with indigestion, headache, and stomach trouble, and had taken various medicines but with no good results. I concluded to see how a change of food would affect me. I never cared particularly for cereals of any kind, but ate meat and pastry continually and drank coffee.

I found on inquiring, that Grape-Nuts were highly spoken of and decided to give them a trial. To say I was surprised at the result would not begin to do justice to my feelings. My headaches left me; my brain became clearer and active; my attacks of indigestion grew fewer and fewer until they ceased entirely and where I once went home tired, fagged out and indisposed to any exertion whatever, I now found a different state of affairs.

My color was good, my muscles strong and firm and fully equal to anything I asked of them, instead of soft and flabby. I live two miles from my business and walk it daily back and forth, if the weather permits. I am 55 years old and feel as well and strong as when I was 30, and can ride 70 miles a day on a bicycle without feeling any bad results." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lonzenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

Portrait of

GEN. NEAL DOW

FOR FRAMING.

SIZE 11 x 14.

Price, Postpaid, 15 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N,

CHICAGO.

The department has a number of new circulars and temperance helps. Our beautiful Frances Willard Sunday School Pledge Card is something that every scholar should possess, and workers can make them serve a double purpose, namely, pledge work and to introduce our great leader either in a biographical sketch or quotations from her writings. To all who are interested to know what helps are provided by our department, let me say that a workers' package containing our department manual and samples of all literature will be sent for 25 cents. The contents will be worth much more than the price to those who order.

Now, beloved, to the work! While reading this letter glance at the calendar and note the time which you will have to order the quarterly supplies. Remember, my address is no longer St. Paul, Minn. I will give personal attention to all your needs, only asking that you do not delay, but order in season. Some of our workers are placing their orders for quarterly material for the entire year, so that it may be sent to them as soon as published, which you will note is one month in advance of the temperance lesson. This is a very wise plan and prevents disappointment in receiving literature.

The following is the list of helps for the coming Temperance Sunday. I give prices in order that no time may be lost in sending to me for catalogue or samples:

Quarterly leaflet on temperance lesson, 30 cents per 100. Responsive Reading, 25 cents per 100. Blackboard exercise, 2 cents each or 50 cents per 100. Frances Willard Pledge Cards, 50 cents per 100, 500 for $2. Red, White and Blue Pledge Cards, 30 cents per 100, $2 per 1,000. Bible Temperance Text Cards, 30 cents per 100. New leaflet, "Temperance Arrows," and all other leaflets published by the department, 30 cents per 100 postpaid.

Let us rally our forces and make April 19 a great day in the Sunday schools of the United States.

Yours in loyal service,

(Mrs.) Stella B. Irvine.

Riverside, Cal.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.

Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.

Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.

General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.

General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

British Woman's Temperance Association.

Successful Gatherings in Manchester.

In connection with the visit of the National Executive of the British Woman's Temperance Association to Manchester on February 15, 16 and 17, meetings were held in a number of halls and churches throughout the district on the Sunday, and addressed by members of the executive. On Monday a mothers' meeting was held in the Central Hall in the morning, addressed by Mrs. Pearsall Smith, Mrs. Judson and Mrs. Davidson, and in the afternoon the mayor of Salford gave a reception at the Salford Town Hall, which was followed by a meeting for the young people, addressed by Miss Tomkinson, Miss Swankie-Cameron and Miss Ferguson. The Vegetarian Society entertained the executive at tea and in the evening a great temperance demonstration was held in the Free Trade Hall. The Lady Mayoress (Mrs. Royle) presided, and addresses were delivered by Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Gamble (who presented the report of the Manchester Woman's Christian Temperance Union affiliated), Dean of Hereford, Rev. Dr. Aked, Rev. Canon Hicks, M. A., Mr. R. Cameron, M. P., Mrs. Pearsall Smith and Miss Agnes Slack. Musical selections by the Band of Hope Choral Union. The National Executive Committee met at the Religious Institute on Tuesday, Mrs. Pearsall Smith in the chair. A letter from the president, Lady Henry Somerset, was read, stating that she could not accept nomination as president of the National British Woman's Temperance Association at the next council meetings, owing to ill-health. The following resolution on the employment of women in drinking bars was unanimously adopted:

"In view of the great evils, both moral and physical, involved in the employment of women in drinking bars, and of the fact that their employment has now been prohibited by law in many countries, the B. W. T. A. urges its branches to do all in their power to help forward the movement now begun for the gradual prohibition of this employment in the United Kingdom. (1) By bringing the subject before ministers of religion, magistrates, members of parliament and others in their respective neighborhoods who may be outside temperance circles. (2) By appealing to the great temperance societies for their active aid, and (3) By rousing local public opinion through meetings, correspondence in the press, distribution of literature and any other means. Further, the B. W. T. A. expresses the opinion that the date at which the employment becomes illegal should be made sufficiently remote to allow ample time for the women now in the employment to leave it, and considers that five years would be a sufficiently long period of warning, provided that from the date of such time-notice no new barmaid shall be engaged. Should any persons be still left in the employment at the end of the five years, the B. W. T. A. undertakes to use its best endeavors and influence to find them other employment."

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the local committee for the admirable arrangements made, etc. On Tuesday evening the delegates were received by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Manchester at the Town Hall.

Agnes E. Slack,
Hon. Cor. Sec.

Ripley, Derbyshire.

Convention Calendar.

The annual convention of the Arkansas (Harper) W. C. T. U. will be held at Little Rock, March 13-15, inclusive. Mrs Lucy Thurman will be present.

Mrs. F. C. Potter,
President.

The annual convention of the Tennessee (No. 2) W. C. T. U. will be held at Memphis, Tenn., March 27-30, inclusive. Mrs. Lucy Thurman will be in attendance.

Mrs. Virginia W. Broughton,
President.

Crowned.

The cause of temperance lost an earnest worker in the death of Mrs. Caroline H. Hoffman, wife of Rev. E. H. Hoffman, at Bryn Mawr, Pa. She was faithful to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to the last, and will be missed from its councils.

Mrs. Harriet M. Morris, an old crusader of Springfield, Ohio., passed away February 13. She was closely identified for nearly half a century with philanthropic and reform movements. Her daughter, Mrs. Josephine Oldham, is president of Clark county, Ohio, and Springfield unions.

PILES

Piles Can Be Cured Quickly and Without Pain by Using Pyramid Pile Cure.

A Trial Package Mailed Free For the Asking

We want every pile sufferer to try Pyramid Pile Cure at our expense.

The treatment which we send will bring immediate relief from the awful torture of itching, bleeding, burning, tantalizing piles. If they are followed up as directed we guarantee an entire cure.

The Discoverer of the World's Greatest Remedy For Piles.

We send the free treatment in a plain sealed package with nothing to indicate the contents, and all our envelopes are plain.

Pyramid Pile Cure is put up in the form of suppositories which are applied directly to the affected part. Their action is immediate and certain. They are sold at 50 cents the box by druggists everywhere and one box will frequently effect a permanent cure.

By the use of Pyramid Pile Cure you will avoid an unnecessary, trying and expensive examination by a physician and will rid yourself of your trouble in the privacy of your own home at trifling expense.

After using the free treatment, which we mail in a perfectly plain wrapper, you can secure regular full-size packages from druggists at 50 cents each, or we will mail direct in plain package upon receipt of price. You can get every cent of your money back if after using one-half a full box you are not satised that it will cure you. Pyramid Drug Co., 114 Main Street, Marshall, Mich.

BIG WAGES TO MEN and WOMEN

Mr. Tassell made $1,500 the first five months. Mr. Wise, of S.D., $12. 1st day. Mr. Clay, of Vt., $9 first day. Mr. Doerge, of Me., $10 one afternoon. Mr. Elliott, of Pa., $17 first two days. Mrs. Howard, of Ia., $59.50 in one week. Hundreds of others making big money selling and appointing agents for Quaker Vapor Bath Cabinets. Prices reduced. Let us start you. We furnish everything. Anyone willing to work can make $20 to $40 a week easy. Greatest money-maker known. Just what everybody needs. Wonderful Seller. We're old firm. Capital $100,000.00. Write for New Plan, Terms, Etc., FREE. Address, WORLD M'F'G CO., 619 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for March Reading,

Christian Citizenship.

By Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford, National Superintendent of the Department of Christian Citizenship.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

"The boy problem" is being discussed by the Austin, Ill., Union.

Mrs. Anna M. Palmer is engaged in evangelistic work in Waterloo, Iowa.

Rochester, N. Y., Eleventh Ward will hold a Neal Dow memorial meeting March 17.

The Good Templars of Butte, Mont., joined with the local unions in a Frances Willard memorial service.

The white ribboners of Vermont presented their president, Mrs. Ida H. Read, with a beautiful fur coat.

Springfield, Mass., Willimantic, Conn., and Hammond, La., are among the unions that honored Mrs. Stevens' birthday.

Lexington, Ky., union held a Willard memorial service, at which Mrs. Beauchamp and Mrs. Sarah Yancy gave addresses.

Mrs. L. E. Bailey addressed a Boys' Military Club of two hundred members at Jacksonville, Fla., and all but six signed the triple pledge.

The W. C. T. U. women of Houston, Texas, have sounded the tocsin of war against whisky, and have issued an ultimatum to the traffickers.

The Eighth Ward, Minneapolis, and the Cleveland, Minn., unions held memorial services. Mrs. Helen G. Rice spoke at the latter meeting.

Members of the Appleton, Wis., Woman's Christian Temperance Union have instituted a crusade against the opening of theaters on Sunday.

Mrs. J. E. Wheeler was awarded the medal in the matrons' oratorical contest held in Upper Alton, Ill., under the auspices of the W. C. T. U

Trenton, N. J., Union is interested in the work among the newsboys and messenger boys. The members also visit the jail weekly and are active in many helpful ways.

Miss Annie Robbins is speaking in Minnesota. Mrs. Florence D. Richards will soon spend ten days in Wisconsin, and Miss Margaret Wintinger is engaged for work in Ohio.

By invitation of the Current Events Club of Alton, Ill., the W. C. T. U. met with the club and listened to a paper on temperance. This union will have a rummage sale to raise money.

A new union of twelve members has been organized at Powhattan, Va., one of ten at Dagey, N. D., and one of twenty-five at Dwight, N. D. Miss Stewart organized the two latter.

The Dominion (Canada) W. C. T. U. will hold its annual convention at Ottawa next November. An invitation to hold a three-day service at Grimsby Park in August has been accepted.

During the past year 587 girls have been cared for in the Eau Claire, Wis., W. C. T. U. Rescue Home, and ninety per cent of them have gone out to lead good lives. The average age of the girls admitted has been sixteen and one-half years.

A new union has been organized in Dyersberg, Tenn. Many of the larger cities of the state have had lectures from Rev. E. O. Taylor of Boston on scientific temperance. The Park Place union at Chattanooga is making an effort to keep the reading of the Bible in the public schools.

The W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League of Charlottsville, Va., are working unceasingly in the interest of the local option election which is to be held March 26. This city is an important point, as the state university is located there. The liquor league is said to have sent $1,500 and is willing to double it if necessary to carry the town for license.

Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard recently made an offer to the local unions in Texas to increase interest in scientific temperance instruction. To each union that will offer two medals for the best examination on physiology in the fifth and eighth grades she will donate one of them. If the union offers four she will donate two. Her offer has been accepted by a large number of unions.

Miss Anna Gordon spoke at the Chestnut Street Methodist Sunday school in Portland recently. The principal of the manual training school told her that the Portland School Board has within a few weeks made a rule that any public school pupil (in all grades below the high schools) who is found smoking cigarets either on his way to school or returning to his home will be suspended. This gentleman was most emphatic in stating that there was immense need of anti-cigaret work everywhere, among girls as well as boys.

Mrs. M. W. Newton, National organizer, has three unions to her credit in Gloucester County, Va., at Cappahosic, Belamy church and Gloucester Court House. She was entertained at the rectory, spoke in the Presbyterian church, a vestryman of the Episcopal church presiding. No representative of the W. C. T. U. has ever visited this county before. The county superintendent, Miss Lila Jones, has taken hold of the work very enthusiastically, and is arranging appointments in every unorganized part of the county for Mrs. Newton, who is now in Charlottsville, helping in their local option campaign.

DR. SHOOP'S

Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

A Fight Against Odds.

(Continued from page 6.)

"First I have not suffered from dread, nor, alas, from too keen remorse, even from the first. My dull, stoical mein has not been assumed, but can be, in part, accounted for by my faculties having been so completely benumbed by the poison which I have of late been using to such fearful excess. No one has denied me, since my imprisonment, all the cigarets and tobacco I wished for, as I suppose they thought it was not worth while to torture my last days. It is needless to tell you that I have smoked my last cigaret. God has taken away the very thought of such things, as well as the necessity. Is not that a real miracle?

"Another thing is, I seem told that I am to be spared, even now, the fearful pangs of unavailable remorse for my past vileness and for the unspeakable woe and desolation which my guilty, wretched self has brought upon those who have loved me so well, which, in all nature should deservedly make my last days on earth a very hell of torture. The gracious Savior seems to have lifted that burden, in a measure, from my being—how or why I cannot tell. I only know that I feel a great peace and an inability to be touched to any keen torture.

"You may wonder at my apparent insensibility in assuring you that the guilty one suffers less torture than the innocent. Since feeling and understanding my Savior's love and pity for me, the vilest of His children, the nature of my beloved mother's love has come to me, and God has bidden me write thus.

"I realize that, in spite of all, incredible and utterly undeserved as it may be, the greatest measure of your suffering is for me, not for yourselves; that in mother's heart I am still only her little Claude, her baby; that Ralph and Alice have now utterly forgotten everything except that their pet and baby brother may be enduring agonies which all their love cannot remove. So I know that the very greatest comfort I can give is the absolutely truthful fact that I am now lifted up beyond all power of suffering; that I am happy, blissfully happy, in my Savior's love and forgiveness. I see God's hand in this punishment. It has brought me to Himself.

"O Mother! if you will but think of the other mothers' boys to be redeemed, God will grant you a measure of reconciliation.

"Ralph; dear, noble Ralph will accomplish, with God's help, the saving of many, many poor boys, because of me. Oh, take comfort in that, all of you!

"Alice is going to take care of mamma till she comes to me—for God whispers to me that I will not have very long to wait. Then my darling sister will find happiness in helping Ralph about those other boys, for the sake of the brother she loved and who loved her.

"I have written this for you to keep, for perhaps I could not say it all well enough for you to understand and remember. Claude."

It was all beautifully real and true, this letter, as they could see who were daily with the boy. Somehow it was impossible to be in Claude's presence without forgetting all else save that they had at last found the winsome boy, the pet and darling of their hearts and household—never to be lost from them again through all the eternal years. This was the supreme reality that lifted their hearts above lesser things. Claude's mother's face became wonderfully calm; there was a sweet and spiritual light in the brown eyes, and it seemed almost as if the anguished lines had disappeared from the piteous, drawn features. Seeing this, Ralph and Alice were cheered and encouraged to lay hold of this greatest earthly comfort left to them. They were aroused a little to a sense of the beautiful and unmeasured sustenance of sympathy shown to the stricken family, not only by the loving and devoted old friends and neighbors who had journeyed to them, but from the interest evinced by the whole country, which seemed to share their sorrow. There were few dry-eyed mothers of boys throughout all the land those days.

(The End.)

1/2 At One Half the Cost

Lion Coffee

has better strength and flavor than many so-called "fancy" brands.

Bulk coffee at the same price is not to be compared with Lion in quality.

In 1 lb. air tight, sealed packages.

A little seven-year-old, while wrestling with the intricacies of the English grammar, was asked by his teacher: "Hawley, can you give the principal parts of the verb 'to die?'" "Oh, yes," said Hawley, his face lighted with sober intelligence, "present, die; past, dead; perfect participle, buried!"

Small Willie one day asked his mother who made the trees and was told that God made them. A few days later an old colored man came to trim the trees and the little fellow seeing him at work ran to his mother and exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, God's out in the yard repairing his trees!"

He Can.

Because He Has Been Over The Road.

A Grocer down in Texas said that when he first put in a stock of Postum Food Coffee he concluded to try it himself to know how well he could recommend it to his customers. He says: "I quit using coffee and had Postum prepared according to the directions on the package and found it a most heathful, toothsome beverage.

I had been troubled seriously with stomach trouble but after leaving off coffee and using Postum I gradually got better and better. That interested me so I persuaded my Mother-in-law, who is over sixty and a confirmed coffee drinker, to quit coffee and drink Postum.

She has suffered for years with stomach trouble and food coming up in her throat after eating. As soon as she quit coffee and began using Postum this distress stopped and she has been getting better and better ever since

A short time ago a lady who was starting West bought up my entire stock of Postum for fear she could not find it where she was going.

From my own experience one can readily see that I can recommend Postum very highly." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Suggestive Program for Prohibition Rally Day.

March 20, Birthday of Gen. Neal Dow.

By Anna A. Gordon.

1. Singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

2. Scripture reading: Ezek., 34 chap., vs. 6, 11 to 16, 23 to close of chap.; Eph., 6: 10 to 17.

3. Prayer.

4. Singing, "How Firm a Foundation."

5. Recitation (a boy or girl): "Where there's drink there's danger."

"Write it on the liquor store,
Write it on the prison door,
Write it on the gin-shop fine,
Write, aye, write this truthful line—
Where there's drink there's danger."

(For remainder of recitation, see p. 46, Marching Songs No. 2.)

(Miss Willard has said she wished every boy and girl in the land might commit these words to memory.)

6. Exercise by the Loyal Temperance Legion.

a. March to platform with flags and banners.

b. National rallying cry, "Prohibition."

c. National Senior or Junior Motto, or both.

d. National salute.

e. Chorus, "Prohibition Song."

"There's a song on our lips that makes happy all who sing;
Merrily its echoes chime, merrily they ring
From the ocean on the east to the ocean on the west,
While thousands join the chorus of the song we love the best.

(For remainder of song see p. 50, Marching Songs No. 2.)

(If there is no Loyal Legion to take this part, train a chorus of Sunday school or public school children to sing.)

7. Address, "The Life and Work of Neal Dow."

The following biographical data will aid in the preparation of this address:

Neal Dow was born in Portland, Me., March 20, 1804. His parents were Friends, as were his paternal and maternal ancestors for many generations back. He attended various "Dames'" schools in Portland as a little lad, and later the Portland Academy, at a time when Henry W. Longfellow was also a pupil. At thirteen years of age, in company with a sister, Neal Dow entered the Friends' Academy at New Bedford, Mass., making the journey by water in a whaling vessel. He tells us that during the voyage, which was a long one owing to unfavorable winds, he was permitted to go aloft with the crew to assist (?) in making or shifting sail.

Very early in life he became interested in the temperance cause, largely under the teaching of Rev. Justin Edwards, D. D. Mr. Dow's study and work led him to believe that no permanent improvement in the condition of the people could be expected while the temptations of the grog shops were permitted.

In those days Maine was cursed by the liquor traffic and had many breweries and distilleries. Neal Dow devoted himself to the work of enlightening public opinion on the evils of the traffic in strong drink, showing that it was inconsistent with the public welfare and ought therefore to be put in the category of forbidden occupations.

An incident which was back of the state prohibitory law has been told by Mr. Dow himself: He received a note one day from a lady he knew, expressing a wish to see him. Her husband was a graduate of Harvard and had an important office in the government service. He was a dipsomaniac. There was a large family, whose only dependence was the salary of the father. His chief had warned him that he could not retain his position unless he improved his habits. His wife told Mr. Dow that he went only to one shop for his drink, and if the keeper would not sell him any she could keep him in the house until fit to appear again at the office. Mr. Dow went directly to the rum shop and said, "Is Mr. Blank here?" "No," said the rumseller; but hearing voices in the back shop Mr. Dow opened the door and seeing Mr. Blank in the group of drinkers he pulled him out and stated the case to the proprietor, and begged him to sell no more to this man, otherwise he would lose his situation and his family would be at once without resources.

"It is my business to sell rum," the rumseller replied. "I have a license to sell rum; I sell it to any one who wants it and has the money to pay for it. I support my family by selling rum; I want none of your advice; when I want it I'll send for you; until then keep it to yourself."

"You have a license to sell rum, have you?" replied Mr. Dow. "You will sell it to any one who can pay for it, will you? You support your family by destroying the families of others, do you? Heaven helping me, I'll see if I cannot change all that."

Taking Mr. Blank by the arm, Mr. Dow led him home, and from that day began a war of extermination of the grogshops.

For ten years after the date of this incident Neal Dow made missionary tours through the Pine Tree State, traveling by carriage, as this was before the days of the railroad in Maine. One, two or three friends accompanied him on these tours. Meetings were arranged in advance, which were always crowded with farmers, their wives, sons and daughters. To these audiences Neal Dow would set forth the true character of the liquor traffic as the cause of a very large proportion of the poverty and crime of the country and the misery and wretchedness of the people. On these excursions Mr. Dow carried large quantities of temperance literature, throwing leaflets out at the doors of homes as they passed along and distributing them freely among the children at the school houses and giving them to those who attended his meetings.

In the spring of 1851 Mr. Dow was elected Mayor of Portland. The legislature was in session and with an anti-liquor bill carefully drawn he went to Augusta and was given a public hearing in representatives' hall, crowded to its utmost capacity. At the close of the hearing the special joint committee unanimously adopted the bill as presented by Mr. Dow. It was reported to the legislature the next morning, this being the last day of the session, and was enacted on that day without change by a vote of 18 to 10 in the senate and 86 to 40 in the house. The action took place on Saturday, May 31, 1851, and on the 2d of June the governor signed the bill and the famous Maine law immediately took effect.

Neal Dow made several trips to England on the invitation of the United Kingdom Alliance of Great Britain, addressing a large number of meetings.

He gave his pen, his voice, himself freely and unsparingly to advance the temperance cause. At the age of ninety-three years, beloved and honored the world over, Neal Dow passed onward October 2, 1897.

8. Address, 'The Maine Law."

9. Address, "Our National President's Work for the Prohibitory Laws of Maine."

(For helps in these numbers see The Union Signal of March 5.)

Notes.

Decorate the platform with flags and a photograph of Neal Dow, and use evergreen boughs as a symbol of the Pine Tree State.

Enlist the ministers and the young people of the various church societies to co-operate in the meeting.

Give literature to those who attend the meetings. Nothing could be better than Mrs. Stevens' "Reply to Messrs. Rowntree and Sherwell Concerning Portland." Send to W. T. P. A. for this leaflet. 5 cents each, $3 per hundred.

What Ails Your Hair?

Dr. Wehner. Physician-in-Chief Cranitonic Laboratories, Making Microscopical Examination of Hair.

In a microscopical examination of 1,000 different samples of human hair, made in the Cranitonic Hair and Scalp Institute [incorporated under the laws of the State of New York] 24 different diseases of the hair and scalp were discovered, many of them Highly Contagious and all Fatal to the Life of Hair.

Upon receipt of this FORM carefully filled out, and enclosing a few hairs, or a sample from the daily combings, we will send you a dainty bottle of Cranitonic Hair Food and a trial cake of Cranitonic Shampoo Scalp Soap by mail prepaid and a diagnosis and complete REPORT upon the condition of your hair after scientific microscopical examinations by our Physicians and Bacteriologists, absolutely FREE.

Applicant's Name in full.....

Address in full.....

Have you Dandruff?.....Is the Dandruff Oily or Dry?.....

Is your hair falling out?.....Losing Color?.....

Does your scalp itch?.....Any scaly eruptions.....

Any eczema on Scalp or body?.....Occupation.....Sex.....

Cranitonic Hair Food Co., 526 West Broadway New York.

FREE Comfort Cough Tablets cure a cough in one day. Sell 12 Boxes at 10 cents a box; send us the money and we will mail you these TWO PRESENTS, Solid Gold Laid Ring with Turquoise centre, surrounded by brilliants and Lady's Neck Chain 4 ft. long. No money wanted till tablets are sold. We take back all not sold. Address, Comfort Medicine Co., Providence, R. I.

The New Regulator on the Sure Hatch is really automatic and direct acting—greatest improvement of years. Don't pay double price for old style machines. Get our book and free trial offer. SURE HATCH INCUBATOR CO., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, Ohio.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. Regular price, $3. SPECIAL PRICE (for 30 days only), $1. By mail, sealed in plain wrapper.
The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

Important Notice to Investors.

The great prosperity of this company has become so well known that nearly the entire amount of our treasury stock has been subscribed for. The stockholders will vote the last of February on an increase of capital. In the meantime, orders will be filled in the sequence they are received, until the few remaining shares are sold. Our stock now pays ten per cent annually, and owners of live stock on our ranches have made over thirty per cent on their cattle and sheep. Present list of stockholders furnished upon application.

Montana Co-Operative Ranch Co., GREAT FALLS, MONT.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

PORTRAITS

OF

Frances E. Willard

AN ENLARGED PHOTOGRAPH.
New Process. A General Favorite.
SIZE 18 x 22, PRICE $5.00. Carriage not prepaid.
SIZE 8 x 10, PRICE, POSTPAID $1.50.

THE OFFICIAL ETCHING.
The Celebrated Evangeline Picture selected by the National W. C. T. U. as their official picture.
SIZE 20 x 24, PRICE, POSTPAID $1.50.

THE ENGLISH PICTURE.
With Autograph. Very Popular.
SIZE 18 x 22, PRICE, POSTPAID $ .50.
SIZE 11 x 14, PRICE, POSTPAID .40.

Aquarelle Tint. Life Size Portrait in Colors.
Used Extensively for Schools.
Price, Postpaid, 35 cts.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 La Salle Street,
CHICAGO.

March Magazines.

A lighter touch than usual characterizes this month's ATLANTIC, and one turns the pages of critical study with much the same interest demanded by sketch and story. John Burroughs is delightfully refreshing in his clever exposé of the present day extreme psychological methods adopted by some nature-writers in depicting the intimate life of the lower animals. Mr. Burroughs fearlessly and facetiously points out the real and the sham in current natural history and his article is a good guide to nature literature. Captain Mahan contributes a philosophical paper on "The Writing of History", President Arthur T. Hadley continues his discussion of "Academic Freedom in Theory and in Practice," and Mr. Raymond L. Bridgman makes an able plea for "A World-Legislation," citing the International Postal Union as the only existing absolute world-legislation. In fiction, Arthur Sherburne Hardy's serial offers some good characterization, and there are several excellent short stories and a real poem or two.

An editorial tribute to Dr. J. L. M. Curry, the veteran leader of the movement for popular education in the South, opens the REVIEW OF REVIEWS. In the same number is an appreciative review of the long public career of the late ex-Senator Henry L. Dawes, of Massachusetts, the stanch friend of the American Indian. How the Methodist Episcopal Church raised its famous "Twenty-Million-Dollar Fund" is described by Dr. J. M. Buckley in an article of unusual interest. The story of "The Lumber Industry of the Pacific Coast," by Alvin Hovey-King, will open the eyes of those who have heretofore been ignorant of the vast timber resources of the Pacific northwest. Mr. Walter Wellman describes the workings of the United States Steel Corporation's profit-sharing and stock-distributing plans among employes. Not of the least interest is the character sketch of the Hon. George Bruce Cortelyou, the new Secretary of Commerce, who solely on his own merits has in little more than seven years risen from stenographer to cabinet officer. A fine portrait of Secretary Cortelyou accompanies the sketch.

This month's CHAUTAUQUAN is truly a demonstration of its sub-title, "A Magazine of Things Worth While." Much of its value is found in its Russian articles, of which its scenic cover design and its frontispiece, "Sunday School in a Russian Village," are suggestive. Frederick Austin Ogg of the University of Indiana, in "The Danger Line in Western Asia," demonstrates the theory that Russia's destiny lies in the direction of the East rather than in the West. Few would care to miss Dr. Edward J. Steiner's entertaining narrative of "A Visit to Tolstoy's Home," with its many accompanying pictures of the Count and the Countess Tolstoy, their estate, and Russian rural life. Under the head of "Civic Progress" several pages are devoted to "A Democratic Art Movement," and there is a paper on "A Neglected Social Force," which is a plea for men's clubs instituted on a broader basis, with "no partisan politics, no long speeches, no bores, no sectarian religion, no personalities, no snobs, no bosses" and "no newspaper publicity," for what is said during discussion of popular subjects.

PEARSON'S presents one of the best articles on the Venezuela question that has yet appeared, a history of Venezuela since the discovery by Columbus being a notable feature. A fully illustrated paper on the home life of Susan B. Anthony is contributed by Ida Huston Harper. Short stories, two serials and eight clever articles make up a good number.

The CENTURY discusses the immigration problem under the head "The Gateway of Nations," "What Shall We Be?" and "Comments on the Foregoing," by such authorities as Jacob A. Riis, Gustave Michaud and Franklin H. Giddings, professor of sociology of "Columbia university." "Our native stock," says Mr. Michaud, "is becoming a small minority, and the nature, extent and probable influence of the human current flowing from the Old World to the New are matters of vital importance." Will Payne gives vivid glimpses of "The Chicago Board of Trade." "My Old Maids' Corner," by Miss French, which is happily characterized as "literature, sentiment and common sense," presents a fascinating chapter on "Some of My Sunday Visitors." The conclusion of "Lovey Mary," by the popular author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," will be read with regret on account of its tantalizing shortness. Science, art and poetry round out one of the Century's best numbers.

"MCCLURE'S best number is the present number," is a quite common axiom in the magazine world, and this month's issue is no exception. The marvelous development of the trolley car system in the light of "The War on the Locomotive" is strikingly portrayed in text and picture by Samuel E. Moffett. The key to Chapter V of Ida M. Tarbell's remarkable History of the Standard Oil Company is found in this prefaced inscription: "The American Beauty rose can be produced in its splendor and fragrance only by sacrificing the early buds that grow up around it.—J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., in an address on Trusts to the students of Brown University." Lincoln Steffens in "The Shamelessness of St. Louis" gives something new in American municipal democracy. The fiction of this number is noteworthy, including several strong stories by good writers.

Eben E. Rexford, the authority on landscape gardening, in LIPPINCOTT'S, gives much sound advice to cities as well as villages in his article called, "Rural and Village Improvement Societies." Among the nine short stories the one by Cy Warman, entitled "The Fidelity of the Dog," is strikingly good. There is an unusually fine showing of superior verse, with such contributors as Edgar Fawcett, Florence Earle Coates, Albert Biglow Paine and others.

Fun, entertainment, and a variety of good, solid, helpful reading are found in the pages of ST. NICHOLAS. Excellent hints are given on how to read with the best results. In the charming story, "Marjorie's School of Fiction," Albert Biglow Paine shows young writers how to get material for work. The dramatic tale of the number is "Mother's Wolf Story," an adventure of a little lass in the early days of Wisconsin. "The Story of King Arthur and His Knights" deals with the finding of Excalibur and winning of Guinevere. Nonsense verse and humorous pictures make the pages fairly sparkle.

THE WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION contains the opening chapters of a new serial by Eden Phillipotts, the scene of which is laid on the moors of Devon, and it promises much of the same interest found in "Lorna Doone." A valuable article of this month is "How Modern Science Proves the Bible True," being a summing up of the researches of scientists to confirm Old Testament history. "Early Wild Flowers" brings the breath of spring, while the departments celebrate the opening season in suggestions of practical value to the housewife in fashions and literature.

Magazines Received.

HOMILETIC REVIEW.
AMERICAN KITCHEN MAGAZINE.
NATIONAL WAIFS' MAGAZINE.
TRAVEL.
SILVER CROSS.
SCHOOL PHYSIOLOGY JOURNAL.
FLORENCE CRITTENTON MAGAZINE.
METHODIST MAGAZINE AND REVIEW
QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF INEBRIETY.
LITERARY DIGEST.

NEVER TOO LATE

To Try A Good Thing.

I am fifty-two years old and for forty years of that time I have been a chronic catarrh sufferer, says Mr. James Geishing, of Allegheny City; with every change of weather my head and throat would be stuffed up with catarrhal mucus.

I could not breathe naturally through the nostrils for months together and much of the time I suffered from catarrh of the stomach. Finally my hearing began to fail and I realized something must be done.

I tried inhalers and sprays and salves which gave me temporary relief, and my physician advised me to spray or douche with Peroxide of Hydrogen. But the catarrh would speedily return in a few days and I became thoroughly discouraged.

I had always been prejudiced against patent medicine, but as everything else had failed I felt justified in at least making a trial.

Our good old family physician, Dr. Ramsdell, laughed at me a little, but said if I was determined to try patent medicines he would advise me to begin with Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, because he knew what they contained and he had heard of several remarkable cures resulting from this use, and furthermore that they were perfectly safe, containing no cocaine or opiates.

The next day I bought a fifty-cent box at a drug store, carried it in my pocket, and four or five times a day I would take a tablet; in less than a week I felt a marked improvement, which continued, until at this time I am entirely free from any trace of catarrh.

My head is clear, my throat free from irritation, my hearing is as good as it ever was and I feel that I cannot say enough in praise of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets.

These tablets contain extract of Eucalyptus bark, blood root and other valuable antiseptics combined in pleasant tablet form, and it is safe to say that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are far superior in convenience, safety and effectiveness to the antiquated treatment by inhalers, sprays and douches.

They are sold by druggists everywhere in the United States and Canada.

Leaflets Just Issued

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89,
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.
.....CHICAGO.

About Women.

The club women of Milwaukee are beginning an organized crusade against promiscuous expectoration.

Miss Anna Ledwin saved the life of her friend, Kittie Keaton, by carrying her out of a burning factory building in Chicago.

The Women's clubs of St. Joseph, Mo., are assisting the State Federation in pushing the anti-cigaret bill introduced in the legislature.

The Brooklyn street cleaning department does nothing without the approval of the Woman's Health Protective Association of that city.

Miss Helen Reed-De La Porte, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., a graduate of Vassar College, is said to be the only woman president of a board of education.

Several women in Texas are making a success of ranching. Mrs. Pauline Whitman owns 200,000 acres in the Panhandle, and raises 15,000 cattle annually.

The Woman's Marine Cooks' and Stewards' Beneficial Association is a new and rapidly growing organization, including only women who are employed on lake steamers.

The labor organizations of New Jersey are working with the woman's clubs and societies for the appointment of a woman factory inspector. Mrs. J. P. McDonnell, wife of the editor of "The National Labor Standard" of Paterson, is being urged for the place.

London women, organized as the Vegetarian Association, are providing penny dinners for poor children. Their headquarters are in a little chapel in the rear of Bethnal Green museum, and here they serve out 500 meals a day, at a cost to each child of one penny, or two cents.

A Brooklyn manufacturer of violins, feeling the need of a more delicate touch in the making of that sensitive instrument, experimented by teaching the craft to women. The result was very satisfactory, and has aroused great interest among the women engaged in the work.

The Daughters of the Confederacy have presented to the city of Baltimore a fine bronze monument typifying Southern valor and endurance during the Civil War. The group is nine feet high and weighs 5,000 pounds. It is now being placed in position and will shortly be unveiled.

Mrs. Donnett, wife of an English army officer, a slender young American woman, has the distinction of shooting the largest tiger ever killed in India. It measured 10 feet 8 inches in length. She has killed two tigers, four panthers, four bears, eight boars and several other wild beasts.

Mrs. Marie Van Vorst and her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Van Vorst, in order to get local color and facts for their book, "The Woman Who Toils," spent several weeks as factory and mill girls. The former speaks of her experiences during that time as the most terrible and yet the most interesting of her life.

A Baltimore girl, Miss Katherine H. Montague, has taken up the profession of pathology. She is a painter of microbes, possessing a wonderful talent for reproducing with the brush the minute organisms which are visible only under powerful microscopes. Her work is of inestimable value to investigators.

Thirty-one girls of the senior class of the High School for Girls in Philadelphia are competing for a prize offered by the Colonial Dames for an essay on the "Contrast Between the Influence of the Scotch-Irish and the Quaker in the Development of the Early Colonies." The prizes are $25, $15 and $10 in gold.

Statistics recently gathered in Ohio show that the average wages paid to women is $4.83 a week, and the average cost of living $5.24 a week. The highest average pay is that of women making awnings, tents, etc.; the lowest that of girls in the big machine shops, who make bolts, nuts and washers. In Columbus women coffin makers average $6.83 per week. Low averages are supposedly due to lack of organization among women.

We sat at the table—the alderman, the doctor and I. The subject of dieting was brought up in conversation. "No man," said the alderman, "can tell me what I ought to eat without knowing my habits of life, my temperament and all — is that not so, doctor?" "Perfectly right," said he, "what suits your stomach may not fit mine, and yet nine men out of ten are presumptuous enough to tell you what you ought to eat." "Yes," said I, "they don't appreciate that there is just as great a difference between two men's stomachs as there is between their brains. Overwork some men's stomachs and they will easily respond to the task, just as some men's brains can take care of endless details, but the majority will break down with the overload." "Indigestion," said the doctor, "is not a disease but an admonition — it is the red light that signifies—danger. It is the language of the stomach to prepare for serious trouble if allowed to persist. Bitters and alcoholic medicines are poor means for stimulating the stomach to perform a larger share of work than it ought. The effect on the stomach is like the spur to the weary horse—it weakens him and shortens his life. A rational treatment," continued the doctor, "is moderate eating of wholesome foods, and only those which the person likes. Occasionally, say once a week, a dinner pill should be taken which should be entirely of vegetable ingredients — like Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets — that will not purge, but act gently on the liver, stomach and bowels. To my mind the main dependence for curing permanently the indigestion which has become chronic — the 'heart-burn,' the sour eructations, the worst cases of dyspepsia — is that alterative extract made from medicinal herbs that Doctor Pierce calls his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' for it contains no alcohol to overstimulate the stomach, but it simply goes to work in the right way—correcting the liver, purifying the blood and assimilating the food so that the stomach takes up its labors with activity and refreshed powers. It fills the arteries with the pure, rich, red blood of health. It tears down, and carries off old, inert and half-dead tissues and replaces them by new. It builds firm, healthy flesh. It makes the muscles strong and elastic and steadies and tones the nerves. It cures debility and weakness of every description."

W. Walter McGloshen, of Reinbeck, Iowa, writes: "I took only four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' and these remedies did me a world of good. I am thankful for your kind advice and praise the medicines highly. Will recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all my friends as the best medicines ever made for the troubles for which they are recommended. There is nothing equal to them for stomach troubles."

C. P. Spencer, of Plano, Okla., wrote: "I can hardly express my thanks for the benefit I have received from taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' They worked like a charm in my case. Am in better health now than for some time, and will not fail to recommend your medicines to my suffering friends. I hope you will receive my thanks for the good your medicine has done me."

READ all about yourself, your system, the physiology of life, anatomy, hygiene, simple home cures, etc., in that standard family doctor book, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book of 1000 pages. For cloth-bound copy send 31 cents in one-cent stamps, or for paper covers 21 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

Publishers' Notes.

Health Studies.

A constituency entirely apart from our own would find valuable and essential knowledge and instruction in the new leaflet "Studies in the Problem of Food," from the pen of Dr. Louise C. Purington, but to our own family of white-ribboners it is absolutely necessary. "Relation of Food to Character," "Food Value," "Its Adaptations and Requirements," "Breakfast Foods," and "What Shall We Drink," are a few of the many things about which we all should know, and Dr. Purington is able skillfully to tell us. Send 5 cents for this leaflet or, better still, for you and your friends 10 copies will be sent for 20 cents.

Dr. Purington's "Nerve Dissipation, Causes and Cure" should be in the hands of every man or woman who suffers from our national disease "Americanitis," which translated means "living at high pressure," and who in our ranks is not a sufferer from that disease? Surely those who make things "go" know the symptoms. A mere reading of the leaflets is restful, and its instructions carried out, sure cure. This leaflet is 2 cents for one copy, or 10 copies for 15 cents.

"The Spiritual Athlete," the third new leaflet, by Dr. Purington, is on a somewhat different order, but is helpful and contains new thoughts and up to date ideas that we want to be posted on as well as the writer. One copy 2 cents. Ten copies 10 cents.

A Red-Letter Number.

Great men and women speak through the pages of the March Young Crusader, Edward Everett Hale, John Burroughs, John V. Farwell, "Mother" Thompson, "Mother" Stewart, Susan B. Anthony and George T. Angell tell young people "How to Attain a Useful and Honorable Old Age." Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens sends a Greeting to all Legioners, and Miss Anna Adams Gordon contributes a delightful sketch, "Mrs. Stevens' Girlhood Days." The true story of "Madge," Mrs. Stevens' wonderful temperance horse, is charmingly told in text and picture by Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt. The world-renowned physician, Dr. Nathan Davis, furnishes the Required Readings, and from the special Neal Dow cover to its final page, this month's Crusader is a Red-Letter issue.

The subscription price is only 25 cents per year. Copies for distribution, $2.00 per hundred.

"The Mormon Menace."

The Mormon Menace, by Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., LL. D., and Helen M. Fallows, A. M., shortly to be issued by the W. T. P. A., is a timely, valuable, authentic showing of the leprous situation that confronts our nation. Beginning with the history of Mormonism, its rise and progress is traced with an accurate hand. The immoral characters of the Mormon leaders and the monstrous atrocities instigated by them and perpetrated in the name of religion, are depicted with an awful realism, and remind one of the horrors of the Dark Ages, while the puerile, inane declarations of the Mormon faith lead one to wonder if any but unbalanced, weakened intellects can embrace such doctrines.

There is much new and valuable material in this absorbing account of a religion which makes polygamy its essential element. It will form a most valuable addition to the extensive library already issued upon this subject.

Those who have read the advance sheets of this remarkable exposition of the greatest blot upon American history, pronounce it one of the most notable works of its kind which has appeared.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Assn.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago

Health for the Sick—Fat for the Thin.

Every Reader of The Union Signal Should Write for a Free Bottle of Ozomulsion, the New Predigested Vitalized, Fat-Forming Health-Food.—Medicine.—It Will Be Sent by Mail Absolutely Free.

You Can Test Its Possibilities Free At Home.

DEAR READER:—

Are you thin?
Can you see and feel the bones through your flesh?
Are you pale, weak and anemic?
Do you feel tired and weary after every little exertion?
If so, what you need is a good diet of fatty, flesh-forming food.
The most beneficial fatty food is Ozomulsion.
This is a scientifically prepared emulsion of the purest virgin drippings of selected fresh Lofoten Cod liver oil, impregnated and vitalized with Guaiacol, Glycerine and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda.
It is a perfect food—pleasant, palatable, predigested.
It is the only vitalized emulsion of Cod liver oil on the market, the only one that does more than make fat—the only one that unpoisons, vitalizes and regenerates your degenerated tissues.

DEAR READER:—

Ozomulsion is good food, easy food—food that feeds.
It has restored to health many thousands who had fancied they were marked for early death.
It has made millions strong.
It has made millions fat.
You are not to think, however, that Ozomulsion is merely food.
It is a medicinal food, and is therefore good for all sick people.
It may be taken by all invalids, and does not interfere with any medicine.

Everybody who is or has been sick should take Ozomulsion so as to build up the strength of the constitution that disease has pulled down.

As short stories are easier to remember, we ask you, Dear Reader, to remember these things:—

1. Ozomulsion will make you strong.
2. Ozomulsion will make you fat.
3. Ozomulsion will cure coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis, consumption and all other throat and lung troubles.
4. Ozomulsion will act as medicine, or will help any medicine, to make you well, if you are sick from any ordinary sickness or disease.
5. Ozomulsion strengthens Old People, Weak People, Pale People, Pale Thin Children, Weak Mothers.

It follows, that even if you don't need Ozomulsion now, the time will surely come when you will be glad to have its aid and comfort.

THEREFORE, try Ozomulsion at once and see what it will do for you.

Your physician knows all about it, and your druggist sells it.

FREE SAMPLE BY MAIL.

We will send to all readers of The Union Signal a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE of Ozomulsion, by mail prepaid, in order to prove its wonderful virtues.

If you wish to take advantage of this offer do not delay, but write at once, giving your name and full address, when the free sample bottle will be sent you by mail. Please mention The Union Signal and address,

The Ozomulsion Co., 16 De Peyster Street, New York City.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 12. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, MARCH 19, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2-3
CONTRIBUTED:
A Mothers' Meeting—Program. By Mrs. McVean-Adams.. 4
A Christmas in Japan. By Kara G. Smart 5
Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 6
The Senior L. T. L. Conducted by Mrs. Helen G. Rice.... 7
EDITORIAL:
Chief O'Neill's Appeal to the Ministers—The Kindergarten of the Liquor Traffic—"Mislaid Great Sons"—The Membership Campaign 8
Toward the Sun-Rising 9
THE PRIVILEGES OF CITIZENSHIP 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 10
W. C. T. U. NOTES 11
ABOUT WOMEN 12
THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB 13
THE LOCAL UNION 14
SIGNAL NOTES 15
PUBLISHERS' NOTES 16

Red-Letter Day.

March 20, Prohibition Rally Day.

BIRTHDAY OF GENERAL NEAL DOW.

News of the Week.

Americans have subscribed $85,000 to the relief fund for famine-stricken Sweden.

Cuban Senate ratifies reciprocity treaty with United States, two-thirds voting in affirmative.

President Castro, of Venezuela, has revoked the decree establishing a blockade of the Orinoco river.

It is announced in Vienna that Austria will not participate in the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis.

Many persons killed or seriously injured in a cyclone that swept Australia. Much valuable property destroyed.

A French naval officer announces the invention of a vessel that will guarantee passengers immunity from seasickness.

Prince Albert Kakailimoku Kumuiakha, last descendant of King Kamehameha, the great Hawaiian, died of consumption.

The Kansas Legislature is asked to pass a bill providing that the battleship Kansas shall be christened with water instead of wine.

Eurasians, Mohammedans, Hindus, Burmese and Chinese have banded together in a "Socialistic League" for an anti-dirt crusade in Calcutta, India.

The Spanish cabinet considers a plan to raise the wreck of the battleship Maine, in Havana harbor, to learn, if possible, the true cause of the explosion.

Five thousand dollar scholarship given to Harvard College by Mrs. John Marleve, Philadelphia, in memory of her son; $30,000 for needy infirmary students given by Miss Agatha and Miss Marianne Schurz.

Decree granting freedom of worship to unorthodox Russian subjects, and self-government to villages and communes, issued by czar; release of peasants from enforced labor and provincial reforms will follow soon.

New Hampshire votes on constitutional amendments as follows: In the affirmative, requiring militia officers to qualify before an examining board before appointment, taking from the legislature the power to choose the commissary general, giving the legislature power to tax franchises and inheritances, allowing police courts to try criminal cases in which the punishment is less than penitentiary imprisonment, reapportioning the representation in the lower branch of the legislature, placing an educational qualification on suffrage and giving the legislature power to enact anti-trust laws. In the negative, amending the bill of rights by striking out the word "Protestant" and inserting "Christian" in that clause permitting towns to appropriate money for religious societies, and the one giving the right of suffrage, with certain exceptions, to women.

How Do They Explain It?

Apropos of the race question, which is such a thorn in the side of the present administration, the Southern states sometimes present a strange anomaly. White men who will not tolerate the negro at the ballot box under any circumstances are found, when the drink question is the issue, exerting every effort to get him registered and are standing shoulder to shoulder with him at the polls in support of the liquor traffic and against the best men and women of the community.

General Officers at Evanston.

Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon reached headquarters at Evanston, March 11, and spent three days with Mrs. Fry and Mrs. Barker, in the consideration of necessary business, leaving on March 18 for Indiana. These tireless travelers will spend about two weeks in that state, attending institutes and conventions, in conformity with their plan of giving as much time each year as can be spared from National duties to the building up of the local work in different localities. They will be at Rest Cottage again during April.

Let the Good Work Go On.

In connection with the many gratifying reports received of the observance of UNION SIGNAL Subscription Day, we note this word from Michigan's enterprising president, in her state paper, "The Michigan Union": "One of the questions in the 'blanket report' of the present year will be, 'Did you observe UNION SIGNAL Subscription Day!' so, if you did not, do not let the month go by without such a meeting, in order to learn more about the capable, unselfish, energetic woman who is now our National leader." Mrs. Benjamin's plea, (already illustrated by nearly a half hundred subscriptions personally secured) can now be fortified by the announcement that the publishers have decided to establish a permanent rate of $1.25 for clubs of ten, thus making it possible for unions to hold a meeting for the consideration of the official organ at any time best suited to their convenience. Greencastle, Ind., announces a big UNION SIGNAL meeting for May 5, in addition to the meeting held the first week in March, which resulted in twenty-six new subscribers. We salute our friends!

Fine Points.

Whatever may be said of England's new liquor law, it cannot be denied that it is going to result in an increased agitation of the question. The law provides that liquor dealers may not sell to anyone "in the slightest degree under the influence," nor may they permit "any such drunken person" to remain on the premises. Anyone found on the street "under the influence," whether disorderly or not, is to be arrested, and anyone who lends a friend money on which the latter gets "the slightest under the influence" lays himself liable to arrest and imprisonment, with a month's hard labor. The question now to be decided is, When is a man under the influence? The oft-mooted question, "When is a man drunk?" is easy in comparison. According to the dictum of science (see Kraepelin as quoted in another paragraph) the moderate drinker—he, at least, who drinks once in twenty-four hours—is never entirely free from the influence of alcohol. The English jurists and medical experts have no enviable task before them. We shall watch with interest for their interpretation of the law.

An Old Friend Promoted.

A message by wire to Mrs. Stevens announces the death, March 11, of Mr. George Woodbridge, the husband of our lamented Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, former corresponding secretary of the National W. C. T. U. The General Officers sent a message of sympathy to the surviving members of the family.

A Prohibition Railway.

Louisiana is the proud possessor of a railway along the line of which liquor cannot be sold—the only prohibition railway in the world, so far as we know. In 1890 the St. Louis, Watkins and Gulf railway was built by Mr. J. B. Watkins, of Lake Charles, from that point to Alexandria, one hundred miles. Mr. Watkins bought and incorporated all the town sites along the line, and the deeds for all lots sold contain an anti-liquor clause, which clause has been upheld by the Appellate Court. The case which called forth this decision deals with the only violation of the law in the thirteen years, and, says Mr. Watkins, "there will not be another." Would that this country had more railroad builders like Mr. Watkins!

Literature at Fort Meyer.

A recent statement in THE UNION SIGNAL, based on supposedly reliable authority, to the effect that two monthly magazines and two daily papers represent the outlay from an appropriation of $40 a month for reading matter at Fort Meyer, Va., has led to some correspondence with the commandant at that fort, who submits the following facts: The amount of the appropriation is $40 a year, and the men are supplied with six well-selected monthlies, five weeklies and one daily paper, a list of same being inclosed. Commandant Higgins agrees that conditions at the post are very unsatisfactory, so far as recreation facilities are concerned, but he cites the recent appropriation of $125,000 for the erection and equipment of a suitable building for this purpose, as encouragement for the future. He closes his courteous letter with the following significant sentence: "I think it not improper to add that I am not in favor of re-introducing beer into the post exchange."

Moderate Drinking and Science.

It has been demonstrated beyond question that soldiers who are supplied with alcoholic drink are less capable of long marches and suffer more from fatigue than those to whom no alcohol is furnished. That it is not simply the physical powers that alcohol attacks, has been abundantly proved by experiment. Tests made by Kraepelin, the eminent chemist, show among drinking men a lessened capacity for mental work and a small ability to concentrate the attention. Even small doses of liquor he found impaired the faculties so that the average efficiency was not regained until from twelve to twenty-four hours had elapsed after the alcohol had been taken. "This being true," he says, "persons who have acquired a tolerance for alcohol are many of them never completely normal, their mental powers never recovering entirely from one dose before another is taken." Thus is proved the expediency of total abstinence from a business standpoint, and thus also is proved the importance of total abstinence in those who do our thinking, who represent us in high places, who decide for us momentous questions.

An Interview with the President.

No More Liquor In The Capitol Building.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 14.—As stated in my letter last week, the Immigration bill carried the following clause: "That no intoxicating liquors of any character shall be sold within the limits of the Capitol building of the United States." As this provision carried no penalty, and Congress had adjourned, the lessees of the House restaurant continued to sell, and for a time it looked as though the sale might continue until Congress convened next December; but the Clerk of the House, Alexander McDowell, who during the interim between sessions of Congress, has control of that end of the Capitol building, issued an order which was delivered by the Sergeant-at-Arms, calling for the removal of all intoxicating liquors from the building at once. This was carried into effect March 8. The Senate prohibited the sale of intoxicants in the Senate restaurant about two years ago. And now, when our great leader's statue is placed in Statuary Hall, it will be in a building cleansed from the sale of strong drink.

It has long been borne in on me, that in this city where thousands of women are employed in the various departments, some women should be clothed with power and authority to give counsel, or hear grievances of other women employed in these departments. Whereupon, I wrote the new Secretary of the President asking an interview, and Saturday last, the opportunity was accorded me to lay my scheme before the President. He listened attentively to the plan, saw its reasonableness and said, "That is a good suggestion. I wish you would put it in writing, and I will see that it is placed before the different heads of departments." This I had already done, and laid the written request in his hand. Today, less than a week since my interview with him, I received a letter from the White House saying, "By direction of the President your plan was brought to the attention of the heads of the various Departments and the Government Printing office. I enclose herewith a copy of the report, just received from the Public Printer.

"Secretary Shaw states that he has also started to act on your suggestion, and will watch the results in his Department."

Mr. F. W. Palmer, Public Printer, wrote that he heartily approved of the plan, which had already been in a measure anticipated, by the organization of two associations among women in his department, one with a membership of 1,050 the other with 320; he hoped these societies would fill the need, and meet with the President's approval.

As we were leaving the President's office that day I said, "Mr. President, may I say one thing more?" "Certainly you may," he replied. "It is in relation to Mrs. Hayes' picture," I ventured to assert. We had risen to go, when the President said, "Sit right down and let me explain. A criticism has been going the rounds of the press as to an indignity being placed upon the portraits of the wives of the Presidents, because of their being hung in the new corridor. That corridor is not a basement, it is the first floor, just as this office is the first floor. Mrs. Roosevelt's portrait is placed directly opposite that of Mrs. Hayes; do you suppose I would allow any indignity to come to those illustrious women?"

I assured him the W. C. T. U. had not criticised in any way the hanging of the picture, we did not know of its removal until we had seen it in the papers, neither had we regarding the picture "Love and Life;" that we had not known of its removal from Corcoran Art Gallery until we saw in the papers that the "Woman's Christian Temperance Union was making a great fuss over it." He has a way of looking at you very earnestly while you are addressing him, weighing every word you are saying, and seems to have his mind made up as soon as you cease speaking. He evidently was relieved, for he said with great emphasis, "Well, I am very glad to get at the truth of it, and I shouldn't wonder if it were just so about that sideboard." I hastened to assure him we knew nothing of that either beyond the reports of the daily press and the statements on the floor of the House.

Settling himself more easily in his chair, he said with a broad smile, "That sideboard story is all a myth. There was no sideboard presented to Mrs. Hayes while she was in the White House. There was one bought during the Hayes administration, as was one also bought during the Arthur administration, but they were both paid for with government money. It is a law, that all furniture of no further use in the White House shall be sent to a public auction room and sold to the highest bidder; these sideboards having no special historic significance were sold as I have stated."

"May I tell this officially?" I asked.

"I wish you would, that people may understand the situation," was the answer.

The Senate is wrestling with the Isthmian Canal Treaty. "Executive Session" is the order of the day, to listen to the views of Senator Morgan on the Columbian Government. Senator Frye is striving to bring about a compromise, as it seems only a question of physical endurance on the part of Senator Morgan, as to how long he can keep talking, but for a man in his eightieth year, he is a marvel; it is said he has ten speeches ready for the printer, and if Senator Frye can gain his consent to allow the measure to come to a vote next week, the Senate will allow these speeches to be printed in the Congressional Record, a thing which he is very desirous of having done. This rule of the Senate that has been in operation one hundred years, which allows one or two men, as the case has been this winter, to imperil all other legislation, blocking everything to carry their point, is causing no end of discussion, and may lead to the adoption of the cloture rule for the regulation of debate in that body. The cloture rule simplified is this: That the time devoted to debate upon any subject may be governed by a majority of the members of the body.

Since writing the above, the evening papers just at hand state that Commissioner Williams of New York harbor reports to the Commissioner General of Immigration, that "the services of women inspectors are not longer needed." I will see the Commissioner of Immigration in the morning, for it certainly seems that a longer time than a six weeks' trial should be given the experiment, but Commissioner Williams has been opposed to it from the beginning, and this is probably the reason the word has come to Washington. I am sure the women of the country are not willing that this should end the work of striving to rescue girls brought to these shores for improper purposes. I think letters of protest sent immediately to the President would have a good effect.

New Unions and Many Speakers in Louisiana.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, LA., March 16.—The state organizer, Mrs. N. E. Oliver, has revived the union at Leesville, in Vernon parish, and organized at De Ridder and at Orange. She will hold the Third district convention at Alexandria. Miss May C. Walker, state president, will be present and speak on scientific temperance education and prohibition.

Miss Walker recently gave an address at Morgan City and Berwick, at the Methodist Church South. The venerable Dr. Atkinson, of Centerville, was present and made the occasion commemorative.

The National organizer, Mrs. Callie Howe, is at Monroe in northern Louisiana.

Avoyelles parish has had prohibition for the past two years. At Marksville Judge Convillon sentenced two men to the parish jail for three months, or to pay a fine of three hundred dollars each, for selling liquor without a license, in Avoyelles parish.

National recording secretary, Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, is filling her engagements in the Second district, at Morgan City, Berwick, Patterson, Franklin, New Iberia, and at other points in southwestern Louisiana.

Victories in North Dakota.

Special Correspondence.

DRAYTON, N. D., March 14.—The North Dakota Legislature has adjourned, and notwithstanding the repeated and stubborn attacks of the enemy, the prohibition law stands unscathed. In fact it comes forth stronger than it ever was before.

The greatest difficulty in the enforcement of the law has been with the druggists. A bill has been passed making it more difficult for druggists to secure permits to sell intoxicating liquor for medicinal, scientific and mechanical purposes. They must first have a petition signed by eighty per cent of the freeholders and seventy per cent of the reputable women in the village or ward of a city in which the business is located. A number of additional safeguards have been thrown about the sale by druggists which it is believed will greatly strengthen the law.

A bill passed which provides fifty dollars reward to any one who will secure testimony that will produce conviction, against any one selling intoxicating liquor illegally.

The age of consent was raised from sixteen to eighteen years.

The anti-cigaret bill was defeated. An excellent pure food law was passed.

The temperance people of the state are rejoicing over their victories and the fact that temperance sentiment is stronger today in North Dakota than ever before.

The state president, Mrs. Preston-Anderson, and her husband, Rev. James Anderson, were at the capital during the latter part of the session.

Great credit is due to the temperance committees and especially to the chairman of the house committee, Hon. Geo. A. McCrea, for good management.

A Glorious Victory for Prohibition.

Special Correspondence.

JOHNSON CITY, TENN., March 5.—A wonderful victory for temperance has been achieved here, where the new Soldiers' Home is being erected, at a cost of two million dollars, and Johnson City, like many Tennessee towns, has taken advantage of the provisions of the Adams bill, which gives to all towns in the state of 5,000 and under the privilege of voting upon the question of the open saloon. At the election held Friday the vote stood "No saloons," 661; "Saloons," 11. The result was heralded by the ringing of church bells, blowing of whistles and general rejoicing.

The wholesale liquor dealers had been very positive in the assertion that Johnson City should not go "dry" because of their expected increase of trade at this point from the establishment of the new Soldiers' Home. It was a hard battle, but bravely fought and nobly won by the good men and women of this peerless little mountain city.

Delightful for situation, with unsurpassed climatic and other natural advantages, it will now offer no temptation to the old veterans of the Civil war who seek shelter within the magnificent home now in course of construction. The local Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been reorganizing with a corps of zealous officers and superintendents of departments. The little white ribbon bow, long a stranger here, is now much in evidence on our streets.

A Soldier's Union at Fort Dupont, Del.

Lila Wilson Aron, Correspondent.

WYOMING, DEL., March 16.—The New Castle county president recently held a School of Methods in Delaware City. Mrs. Ella Thacher was present and very helpful. The following day Mrs. Thacher, with a number of other W. C. T. U. women, visited Forts Dupont and Delaware. They were heartily welcomed by the boys, who recognized Mrs. Thacher and cheered for her as she entered. A number of the boys had signed the pledge last fall and twelve others signed this time. When asked if they would like a union organized, they said: "Yes, indeed." A union was organized, the boys filling all the offices except president, who is to be a woman from Delaware City, and the following day a meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Hemphill, who is also to have a Sunday school class of these boys; she was their own choice for a teacher.

Mrs. Thacher asked how many of the boys were Christians, and a large number held up their hands. She asked what places they entered when they went to Delaware City and a number said, "We have no place but the saloon, and its doors are always open." In reply to her question "if they would like a restroom," they said "Yes." and this will probably be the next financial effort our women will make. The boys at Fort Delaware had a baby organ and some of Mrs. Thacher's little song books, and for fully an hour they sang for the women, cordially inviting them to come as often as possible.

A scientific temperance meeting held at the home of the Sussex county president at Milton, was of profit to all. Milford union took advantage of the ten weeks' offer of THE UNION SIGNAL to put it in homes where it had not been. A memorial service for Miss Willard was held in Milford; the different denominations of the town united in the services and the state president addressed the meeting. Similar services were also held in Newark, and by the North End union of Wilmington.

The Latest From Massachusetts.

Louise C. Purington, M. D., Correspondent.

BOSTON, MASS., March 16.—The legislature is the recipient and custodian of the usual number of liquor bills, twenty-six at least. Committee hearings at the State House are the order of the day—the most important, last week, what are known as the "Hotel Bill," in effect to sell night and day; and the "Abuttor's Bill," limiting the right of the property owner twenty-five feet away, to protest if a saloon has been located for two years in a given place.

The Hotel Bill has the advocacy of a hotel woman. Alas for the old Bay State! Mrs. Floretta Vining is to appear in behalf of the liquor men—the argument (?) that if hotel bars are closed young men are driven to low dives, to immoral places, etc.

In the meantime "we wage our peaceful war" for Massachusetts homes, and God, and every land.

Four new unions have been organized since the state convention: a large number are celebrating their "twenty-fifth anniversary"—notably New Bedford, with its twenty-five new members, a total of 210; also Brockton, with nearly 300 members, at last accounts.

The state president, Mrs. Stevenson, and former state presidents, Miss Elizabeth B. Tobey and Mrs. Susan S. Fessenden, as also other prominent state workers, assist at these functions.

Very many unions are adopting the one dollar fee for membership, indicative of progress. Mrs. Stevenson visits Mount Holyoke College soon, making a special effort to reach the college girls, of which there are such a host in New England.

The Frances E. Willard Memorial Day is more than ever observed this year; also crusade membership week. Leominster union, averaging fifty for several years, canvassed the town, added thirty-five new members—a total of 185—and have set the goal at 200.

The Frances E. Willard settlement, formerly Willard Y Settlement, is enlarging its borders at the West End and is doing a commanding work. Three houses are in use and in one of them "Pearson's Hall" has been adapted, for working purposes and public occasions. Caroline M. Caswell, superintendent, is used of God in the promotion of this, one of the noblest of enterprises.

Personal: Miss E. U. Yates, a coveted worker in this state, state superintendent of "Economic Education," has been disabled, a leg broken and ankle dislocated. She is able to use crutches and is gaining.

A Successful Membership Contest.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oliver, Correspondent.

WINNIE, Va., March 16.—A successful membership contest was recently held by the Berkely union, the new members numbering 161. Members from Frances Bell Y and Norfolk union were present at the reception which closed the contest. The presence of county president Mrs. R. H. Jones added much to the enjoyment. Mrs. Jones presented the prizes. To Mrs. E. A. West, for securing seventy-one members, a handsome silver locket, with her initials on one side and the initials of the organization on the other, and inside a photograph of Miss Willard. To Mrs. G. L. Thompson for forty-one members, a silver pin with her initials on one side, and those of the union on the other. To Mrs. Isaac Bell, who secured twenty-one members, Mrs. W. B. Gordon, who secured sixteen, and to the efficient president, Mrs. A. L. Hough, were given beautiful white satin book marks with a likeness of Miss Willard on each. Berkely union now numbers as many, if not more, than any other union in Virginia.

Mrs. M. W. Newton, National organizer, has been in active service all the year. Since the first of January she has organized a Y of sixteen members at Cumberland C. H.; sixteen signatures to the pledge were secured at the close of an able address in Richmond; twenty-one members were secured at Hosken, and she organized at Newton with thirty-seven members. Following this she gave an address at the Randolph street Baptist church and organized with thirty-five members, adding eight more later. A union of thirty-two members was organized at Cappahosic, and twelve names given at a meeting in Belamy church, toward the organization of another.

MRS. A. L. HOUGH.

MRS. G. L. THOMPSON.

MRS. EVA A. WEST.

Medal Contests Make Prohibition Votes.

Medora D. Nickell, Correspondent.

BEATRICE, NEB., March 16.—Frequent letters speak of the excellent influence of medal contest work in various parts of the state. Mrs. Sue D. Chase, of Haiglee, says: "Our contests have done so much for our village and county. Temperance sentiment is steadily growing; not only in our little town, but throughout the county there is not a saloon. I firmly believe that the prohibition vote of this county will be trebled by 1903." This will apply to many other towns where contest work is being forwarded. Haiglee is doing temperance work on several lines, and it counts, because the people have a mind to work. Mrs. Chase is state press superintendent, but helps to push everywhere it is needed. Her admirable special press number of the "Union Worker," the state paper, issued in the early winter, had a large special demand.

We have caught our breath again on the "Bible in the Schools" question. No re-hearing was granted, but a new interpretation of the decision declares that the judgment was against sectarian teaching, but did not in any way rule the Bible from the public school. Surely these waves of opposition to the completing of Christ's kingdom but serve to reveal their own impotency.

Awakening In Indiana.

Mrs. Hattie Wright Brand, Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 16.—There is an awakened interest throughout Indiana and wholesale activity in many lines. Several victories were won in the state legislature, which has just adjourned. The Luhring bill, which was an attempt to do away with the blanket remonstrance feature of the Nicholson law, was defeated. The protest which came from all over the state against this bill was a surprise to the legislators and temperance workers as well. Senator Thrall's bill permitting Sunday base ball was defeated. The Wood's bill, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within a mile of a Soldiers' Home, and amended to include the proposed Indianapolis Army Post, passed. Much credit for this victory belongs to Mrs. Julia Overman, state superintendent of Work among Soldiers and Sailors.

The condition of our field work is most encouraging. Nearly every available state worker is afield in Institute work, temperance revivals, or on lecturing tours. Our vice-president, Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, is speaking almost constantly, and creates enthusiasm for the cause wherever she goes. Conditions were never more favorable, and we are bringing some of the best talent in the country to our assistance. Mrs. Maria Weed was with us three weeks in January and early in February, speaking on "Polygamy" and "The Menace of Modern Mormonism." She gave great satisfaction. Miss Lillian Phelps, of Canada, is making a tour in the northern part of the state, with most gratifying results. Our National president and vice-president come to us this month, and we are busy preparing for their arrival. Children's mass meetings are arranged for Miss Gordon, and we expect her coming to give great impetus to our L. T. L. work. Our state L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Ida Mix, has a plan by which every Loyal Legion in the state will be visited by a worker this year.

Progress in Nevada.

Gertrude Bonham, Correspondent.

RENO, NEV., March 16.—Clover Valley union observed UNION SIGNAL day and secured three new subscriptions. This union is gaining members steadily.

MISS GERTRUDE BONHAM.

Reno observed Willard memorial day with a platform meeting addressed by ministers and members of the union. UNION SIGNAL day was also observed at the regular business meeting. The Anti-Cigaret pledge-signing crusade was carried into three Sunday schools and many pledges taken.

The bill incorporating the W. C. T. U. of Nevada will likely pass the senate and become a law. The local option bill was practically killed by the way it was introduced, so it was no surprise to us when it did not pass the Assembly. It was stated that a petition containing the names of several thousand women asked for the passage of the excellent bill to amend the "act prohibiting the sale of liquor to minors;" as no mention was made of the several hundred men who also petitioned, the bill was promptly put "under the table." The bill making an appropriation to establish an industrial school for wayward and neglected children has been introduced but we have heard nothing from it since it was engrossed. We have sent all the letters to Washington that our leaders have called for. Many letters have been written to members of our own legislature to secure the passage of bills in which we are interested, in response to the call of the state officers. We are now planning for our midyear meeting.

Florida Jottings.

Mrs. Neva C. Childs, Correspondent.

ARCADIA, Fla., March 14.—While we have no great things to report for our state this month, we are accomplishing something. Mrs. Bailey, National organizer, is now on the west coast of the state and doing good work. One of her new unions reports a membership of eighty-nine, and as this was at a point where not much was expected, the result is all the more encouraging, especially as many of the husbands of the new W. C. T. U. women have joined them in the organization. We have recently had a visit and some splendid lectures by the Quaker temperance worker, Friend David Tatum, who has made a tour of the state. It is noteworthy that we are also having in some of the best dailies and many of our weekly papers, creditable W. C. T. U. departments. A number of new temperance workers have recently moved into the state and it is believed that our cause will be strengthened thereby. Our state convention will be held at Kissimmee on April 21-24.

Good Cheer From Maine.

Anna A. Gordon, Correspondent.

PORTLAND, Me., March 9.—The first week in March has been one of much interest in the old state of Maine. Birthday greetings and good cheer have been delightfully combined with bracing legislation on the question of Maine's prohibitory law. That the Maine legislature voted against resubmission by such a grand majority while many white ribboners were observing our National President's natal day, is a striking illustration of the "eternal fitness of things," for to Mrs. Stevens, her wise leadership and indefatigable work, more than to any other factor in the Pine Tree state, is due the sentiment that today supports "the Maine Law." It is a coincidence that Neal Dow also was born in March. Surely the temperance forces of Maine march to good purpose, keeping the state true to its courageous motto, "I Lead."

Legislative Work in Michigan.

R. M. Harwood, Correspondent.

PLAINWELL MICH., March 13th.—The state superintendent of Legislation reports four bills in which women are interested:

A bill to create equal suffrage by striking out the word "male" in the constitution.

A bill asking for the prohibition of the manufacture, sale or giving away of cigarets or cigaret material in the state of Michigan.

A bill asking that women be appointed on all state boards. And instead of the words "The governor may appoint women," say the governor "shall" appoint women.

A bill asking for a separate reformatory prison for women.

The state executive board has memorialized the legislature asking for separate prison and for passage of cigaret bill.

Special Meetings in Missouri.

Lena M. Sargent, Correspondent.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 14.—Active legislative work is being done, special efforts being made to secure the passage of an anti-cigaret law. Our state corresponding secretary, Miss Ellen Morris, has spent considerable time at Jefferson City in the interest of the measure.

Savannah W. C. T. U. held a Willard Memorial meeting February 22, three churches uniting in the service, which was held at the Presbyterian church. The ministers assisted, giving beautiful testimony to the life and character of Miss Willard.

March 1st was celebrated by Savannah W. C. T. U. in a public meeting at the M. E. church, south. A fine program was rendered. There was a good audience, and much interest was manifested. This union has a good L. T. L. under the supervision of Miss Sallie Woodcock, one of the public school teachers. The Legion meets in the school house.

Mrs. Lena Botkin, of Rolt county, is doing the best work in the state in Medal contests. She has recently held contests in nine school districts, with more to follow.

Mrs. Emma Fulkerson, of Puxico, is also doing good work in this line. The last of February they held a contest, which was a success in every way. The house was crowded, and the contest, which was participated in by six girls, was a very interesting one. This was followed a few nights later by a boys' contest.

The state executive committee will hold their midyear meeting at Craig, Mo., April 22-23.

Miss Christine I. Tinling, of England, will be in our state during the month of April.

Mrs. Botthoff, of Joplin, presented "W. C. T. U. Work for Children" at a missionary meeting of the First Christian church at Joplin, March 5th. Miss Ellen D. Morris gave a talk in February at a Christian Endeavor convention at Savannah.

A little over a year ago the Springfield union started the work of holding a temperance Sunday school mass meeting, or rally, on the afternoon of the Sunday on which we have our quarterly temperance lesson. After two or three meetings had been held, with a very fair atttendance, the city Sunday School Union undertook the work. The second meeting was held the first of March. The largest churches in the city have been filled to overflowing, and great interest is taken in the meetings. Printed programs are distributed to all the Sunday schools in the morning, besides being published in the papers. The best talent is secured from the various Sunday schools and churches, and the programs are excellent, consisting of temperance recitations and songs, with a short address by some pastor. At the last meeting the Boys' Bible class of the Y. M. C. A. attended in a body, and it was an inspiring sight to see over fifty boys, from ten to sixteen years old, march into the church in charge of their teacher, Mr. Maxwell, who is the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. After the opening song service Master Gerald Bates, president of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Bible class, read some appropriate selections from Scripture, and the recitations and songs by the children of various Sunday schools, and some special selections by older people, made an entertaining program. A stirring address by Rev. L. G. Adams was brief and to the point. Much credit for these excellent temperance meetings is due to Prof. E. E. Lacy, the president of the Springfield Sunday School union, who spares no pains to make the programs entertaining and instructive, with a freshness and variety which cannot fail to please young and old.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

A MOTHERS' MEETING==Program.

BY MRS. McVEAN-ADAMS.

TOPIC: Food.

1. Welcome by Hostess.
2. Care-takers for Children Introduced.
3. Singing, "Break Thou the Bread of Life, Dear Lord, to Me." Chautauqua Hymnals.
4. Scripture, Mark 6: 31-44.
5. Prayers.
6. Singing by Quartet, "The Eternal Goodness." Page 22, White Ribbon Hymnal.
7. Discussion, "Resolved, That Food Affects Character." (Three-minute speeches; three speakers on each side.)
8. Recitation, "At Grandpa's." (See this page.)
9. Reading, "A Common Danger." (See this page.)
10. Vocal Solo, "A Cup of Cold Water." Page 77 White Ribbon Hymnal.
11. Reading "The Teacher's Story." (See this Page.)
12. Reading, Extract from "The Lost Art of Leisure." (See this page; by courtesy of The American Mother.)
13. Appeal for Members.
14. Roll-Call, Responses of Scripture on Food.
15. Closing Prayer or Hymn.

At Grandpa's.

By Mrs. McVean-Adams.

OF all the beautiful paths I know,
None are so dear and so rich in charm
As the country road where I often go
To visit Grandpa's farm.

There I note, as I idly pass,
The harebell, hanging her azure cup,
Tho' the dews that water the thirsty grass
Would gladly fill it up.

Close by the roadside, bare and brown,
Stands so stately the golden-rod
Wearing proudly her yellow crown
Placed by the hand of God.

The aster shines like a fairy queen
In her royal purple robes of state;
Her mullein guards, in gold and green,
Upon her pleasure wait.

The wild grapes swing from the clambering vine;
Rich and purple their clusters shine,
And there an alchemy, all divine,
Turns the water into wine.

Grandma's garden is blooming fair,
Spiced carnations and stately phlox,
A bright encampment, tented there,
With sentinel hollyhocks.

The cheeks of the peaches are turning red,
And down in the spring-house, clean and cold,
All of the pans of milk are spread
With wonderful cloth of gold.

Grandma's bread is as white as foam,
And like sunshine stolen from morning hours
Or amber prisoned in crystal comb,
Is the honey from clover flowers.

Grandma's butter, of primrose hue,
Holds in its heart a faint perfume,
Like scents that rise with the morning dew.
From the meadow grass in bloom.

Everything lovely and ripe and pure
Loads her table and crowds her shelf,
But the best of it all, you may be sure,
Is Grandma's own dear self!

A Common Danger.

By Mrs. McVean-Adams.

The recent introduction of a bill at Washington, to change the twenty-eight hour law for the transportation of live stock on railways, to forty hours of travel without disembarking and rest, brings to the minds of all thinking people a common danger.

At nearly every station in the western states there are cattle pens, often too small for the large traffic, and before being loaded on the cars, the cattle, free from the field and the feeding troughs, sleek and full of life, are often injured by the horns of their fellows. In the cattle-cars they are packed as closely as it is possible to force them into place. Great cruelty is often used, the men being in haste and the task most difficult. If an animal gets down, severe prodding is resorted to in order to get it up before it is crushed in the struggling mass, and the putting out of an eye is of common occurrence.

The unaccustomed motion of the freight cars, with sudden stops and jerks and sickening swings round curves, over rough roadbeds, without such brakes as passenger cars have, adds greatly to the discomfort of the frightened animals. Packed too closely to lie down, they thrust each other with their horns, and sometimes, if attendants are too long away, gore each other to death. If the weather is warm, the deep sores made on their tender flanks by the goad of the drivers become fly blown, maggots hatch and crawl from the festering flesh, and mortification ensues.

To witness the disembarking of a train load of cattle on a hot day is enough to break any tender heart and set one resolutely against flesh foods. The unloading is a dangerous task, and more than one brave man has lost his life in trying to save for his employer a little expense for the use of car space.

The time limit of twenty-eight hours was reached while a delay kept the long train far from a station which afforded room for the cattle; thus they were kept several hours beyond the limit. Mad with thirst, with blood-shot eyes, with foam on their flanks from the struggles to keep their feet in a space where yet there was not room to fall, with black and swollen tongues protruding, with horns broken, with long gashes in their sides, they blindly charged down the inclined plane into the yards, but among them was more than one dead body, a total loss to the shipper—the loss of a sum that would pay for disembarking twice as often. Some of the drove must be killed at once and the beef sent to the local market at that station, because it will not keep. Tortures of thirst and fevered blood from agonies of nausea and pain of wounds, poisons the flesh and blood of these beasts. Some are left behind to recuperate and are added to the next shipment. When they arrive at the city stock-yards, some animals, plainly mad or in death agonies, are condemned by the careful inspectors, and thus additional losses ensue.

Since it costs the shipper so much when he has to disembark live stock every twenty-eight hours, let the wise legislators who plan for the welfare of the people, grant him permission to keep the cattle moving for forty hours without disembarking.

How many fatal but mysterious illnesses may have been caused by eating the flesh of tortured beasts!

It behooves us to become intelligent regarding our food supplies, and to promote legislation which shall condemn cruelty and shall protect us from this common danger.

The Teacher's Story.

By Mrs. McVean-Adams.

I was teaching a country school and "boarding round." One week I was in a lovely Christian home. Few children are loved as fondly as was the little boy who was the only child at that house. His father worked and sacrificed that he might be educated and have a start in life, and his mother provided good wholesome food, kept him clean and comfortable and taught him good manners.

Yet at my first meal in that home I was made heartsick by the untruths which were told to the child by both parents, without a suspicion, seemingly, that they were doing wrong. When the fond mother tied on the little boy's bib I heard her say, "Now you must be good or God won't love you." Lie number one. Under this awful threat the boy became nervous. He spilled a little milk.

Then it was the father's turn. "Now the lady will go away and tell all the people that our little boy spills his milk." Lie number two.

Presently the father said to me, "Don't you want a boy? I will trade you this one for a hen." Number three.

The boy sought his mother's eye anxiously, to see whether this were really meant, but she did not meet his gaze. As I could not say to him, "Your father is not speaking the truth," I smiled reassuringly at him. Papa went on: "Or, I'll trade him for a pig,—he eats like a little pig. You could put him in the pen with your pigs at home." Lie four.

The boy was slow about eating and had not finished when we left the table. Papa said, "If you eat so much you will turn into a little pig." Lie number five. "You are almost fat enough to sell now. When you get fat enough to kill you could be killed, like the other litle pigs." Lie number six.

The father went out, laughing. By the shades of livid color that passed over the face of the tortured child, I knew that he had, unfortunately, seen pigs slaughtered. In his dilated, horror-stricken eyes I saw that his imagination pictured the frightful scene, and placed himself in the place of the victim. He ate no more. All the digestive fluids were turned to poison. I helped him down from his high-chair, took him in my arms, and gave him my watch to hold, while I told him about my brother's pet squirrel. But in the midst of the most engaging part of the story he looked up earnestly into my eyes and said, "I hope when my papa does sell me I can go to you." I told him that his father was only in fun, that papas never sold their little boys; that it was against the law.

Just then his mother came to put him to bed early so that she and I could chat without interruption.

We visited late, and just as I entered the guest chamber the house rang with agonized screams, and I found both the parents bending over the child's bed, while he, sound asleep, with wide-open, unseeing eyes, was hoarsely screaming, "I ain't a pig! I ain't a pig! Don't kill me!"

At last, after having water dashed in his face, he seemed to recognize his mother's voice, and clutched her with a death-like grip, which could not easily be unclasped.

Nightmare, amounting to delirium tremens, caused by untruths, indigestion, and an excited imagination! It might easily have proved fatal.

I learned, then and there, that it is not enough to earn and cook food for a child—he must be permitted to eat undisturbed. I also learned that the processes of digestion and assimilation cannot be carried on at all while the mind is controlled by fear, anger, jealousy or grief.

Reading, Extract From "The Lost Art of Leisure."

"I was entertained by the minister's wife. As at most parsonages, the house-mother was her own "chef" and, as she seemed absolutely at leisure, (except for a brief absence, when I heard her directing the setting of the table by two merry little daughters) I had some curiosity about the menu.

At the dinner table flowers abounded. The linen was a delight, snowy white, thick and glossy, a gift, as chance revealed, from a grateful and wealthy parishioner. No silver appeared save knives, forks and spoons of plain patterns. The china and glass, while not fragile, were graceful in shape and easy to care for. The dinner, which seemed to have cooked itself, was as follows: A clear soup, an old-fashioned chicken-pie (the baking dish wrapped in a napkin), baked potatoes, their mealy white bursting through the cracks made for the escape of steam; peeled sweet potatoes, baked to a rich, translucent gold; fragrant brown bread, and primrose butter in delicate cubes.

The dessert was of fresh, ripe fruit, also sweet apples, which I could see had been steamed and then baked until each glowed transparent in the amber sweetness of its surrounding jelly. Whipped cream was served with these, and with them a fragrant coffee was offered to the guest, the family drinking only milk, the parsonage being blest with a cow.

When we were alone, and a brother and sister were merrily waving snowy dishtowels over the white oilcloth that covered the kitchen table, I ventured to say to the house-mother: "You are not hurried; I do not seem to be keeping you from any work, and yet you do everything for this large family. Your dinner was simply ideal. Please tell me your secret."

She laughed—she had one of those laughs that so seldom last beyond girlhood—an infectious laugh that did one good.

"If I have any secret, it must be in choosing what to do without. I try to hold fast the best gifts. We live simply, as you see, and the children love to help about the work. I plan to make my own work go as far as possible, and I usually work hard a part of every day. But I am not hurried or worried. While we are all well I am too grateful to think of worrying. And we have very little illness. You observe that we have no pickles or condiments, and meat on our table is rare. Whenever possible, I plan to cook for several days at a time. The large ice-chest (which the boys purify daily) and the ever-ready gas-stove explain the dinner. The soup was left from day before yesterday, and yesterday the chicken was prepared for the pie and the gravy was made. The boys lighted the oven and baked the potatoes, and while the girls were laying the table I stirred up the pice-crust, patting it into place with a spoon (for I like to save handling the bread-board and rolling-pin), put the pie in the oven, heated the soup in a porcelain kettle, warmed the gravy, dished the potatoes, and there we were, our cooking all done for today, and no pots and kettles to wash—just a porcelain pan.

"For supper we will have the rest of the baked potatoes, some bread and milk and a plate of honey."

And that was all we had—a most delicious supper!

A CHRISTMAS IN JAPAN.

BY KARA G. SMART.

AT nine o'clock on the morning of December twenty-third, we started out for our first Christmas entertainment. It was ten o'clock on December twenty-six before we had completed the round of the Christmas festivities to which we had been invited.

Christmas entertainments in Japan are not confined to the evenings, as in America, and they are held at the rate of three and four a day in order to reach all localities, often beginning a week before December 25 and continuing for several days after Christmas day.

As Christmas is a Christian institution in this country, its celebration is chiefly confined to the mission Sunday schools, day schools, churches, and other religious and benevolent organizations. We learned that it was this year observed by a few other schools.

REV. T. UKAI AND FAMILY.

A program which lasts for 3 or 4 hours, aside from the distribution of the gifts, is quite a common occurrence. One program to which we listened—one of the best—comprised forty-two numbers, some of them very long ones. The chairs of the foreign guests became very restless; what distress it must have been for the poor mortals who were sitting on the floor in front of us on their bent knees and shoeless feet!

The first Christmas entertainment visited by us was a Presbyterian Mission Sunday school for the primary and intermediate grades. Here we found a large room with low ceilings, low with seated benches and comfortably heated with stoves. One corner of the room, furnished with chairs, had been reserved for the dozen or more foreign guests who honored the occasion with their presence. The decorations were both gay and artistic.

We had scarcely finished taking note of our interesting surroundings when the organist began playing a simple march. Almost immediately, at the rear of the hall, there appeared at the open door, a series of little bobbing black heads, highly decorated with various kinds of brightly colored flowers and feathers, glistening ornaments and gay ribbons.

As these one hundred and twenty children marched into the room and stood in their places, marking time to the music, we saw that they wore their holiday attire—their brightest and gayest kimonos—and that their little faces had been scrubbed until they fairly shone. Their small black eyes quickly took in everything to be seen, and it was well worth a trip across the broad Pacific to have the opportunity of watching for the next hour and a half, the varied and ever-changing expression of their faces.

A boy of twelve presided, and there was no fear or trembling in his manner of doing it, either. The first song was a hymn, "The Only True God," sung to the tune, "Tenting on the Old Camp-ground." As all the little voices joined in the singing, the listener by turns became amused, pleased, interested, and delighted, for, by this time, the chorus had been reached, and never was "Har-e-ru-yah!" "Har-e-ru-yah!" (hallelujah) sung with more vim and enthusiasm than by these children of the Sunrise Kingdom.

When the prayer was announced, each bright face was quickly covered by a sleeve of the child's kimono and each little head was silently bowed until the close of the prayer. After a bright welcome speech by a tiny tot, we listened to the following program, mostly in Japanese:

A hymn by the Sunday school; a concert recitation of the Second Chapter of Luke (in a sing-song chant), by the school; concert recitation of the Ten Commandments, by the primary department, numbering fifty little ones; a song, the verses of which were sung by the older grades and the chorus by the whole school; the Golden Texts for the entire year, given in unison by the primary department, the leader simply mentioning the topic of each lesson. After a song by older pupils, an essay on the life of Christ was read by Tamura Matsu san, (Miss. Pine-Village-Field.) A Psalm was recited by six boys and six girls, in unison, after which the small folks through the medium of a pretty little song invited everybody to "Come to the Sunday school."

An address on "Christmas, the Best Day of the Year," was given by a boy of twelve.

The organist began playing, and immediately five boys marched forward, took their places, marked time, turned, bowed very low and stood erect, timing all their movements to the rhythm of the music. (This exercise was enacted at the beginning and the end of every selection in which more than one participated.) After these preliminaries were over the boys favored us with a remarkable dialogue.

Next came a "Farmer's Motion Song," by five boys and five girls from the infant class.

A long address by the Japanese pastor was followed by the doxology and benediction. Then came the presents for which they had so patiently waited. Each child of the primary department not a possessor of a Japanese New Testament, was presented with one on this occasion. To the others were given a nice tablet of writing paper and a pencil—a real luxury to many of them and an absolute necessity for their school work. A Japanese Bible was given to each member of the higher grades. As they marched out at the close of the exercises each child was given a good-sized sack full of "matsukatsuokoshi" (Japanese cakes that looked like large brown, sweetened wafers, and rice cakes resembling small popcorn balls), and an orange.

Later I learned that eighteen of the larger children who had been regular attendants for a long time, had become Christians within the last two months. The good missionary lady having this work in charge presented to each child a pretty white metal Christian Endeavor pin.

The next morning we started out bright and early to visit another Mission School, the Kion Sho Gakko of Fukagawa, in charge of the M. E. Mission.

Here we found 175 children, ranging in age from six to fourteen years, and learned that the parents of many of them are employed as servants in brothels and temples. This school is both a day and Sunday school, and all instruction is given by the four capable Japanese teachers in charge.

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS, GINZA M. E. CHURCH, TOKYO.

The decorations were similar to those of the school previously mentioned. We enjoyed the motto better because it was "Merry Christmas" in our own language, and consisted of eighteen-inch letters in white batten on a bright red background.

As before, we found little maidens of seven or eight years of age with hair tightly drawn up to the top of the head, heavily oiled, and arranged there in the oddest possible fashion, the whole being set off with tinsel and bright ornaments, while red and white paint had a large part in the decoration of the face. A Japanese girl or young woman is not so presumptuous as to suppose that she can look well unless her face is painted, and the thicker the paint and the more it shows the less assuming she is.

A most interesting program, consisting of songs, recitations, essays, dialogues and addresses was given by the children. A mission box from America had helped out the list of presents, and here we found foreign dollies, little hand-bags, sewing-bags, needle-books, tiny pin-cushions, books, and picture-cards, as well as the usual treat of cakes and fruit.

After this entertainment we reached home in time to partake of a hasty luncheon and rush off again to another celebration at two o'clock that afternoon. This last was the closing exercises of one of the best high-grade schools for young women in the Empire. We have been told that there is only one other school of the same rank in the country.

Here we found over 200 young women from the best Japanese families, with special teachers for mathematics, literature, art, music, and language—in all twelve capable instructors. Several of the Japanese teachers, as well as the foreign teachers, were graduated from American colleges. Mrs. Yajima, National President of the Japanese W. C. T. U., is the principal of this school, which is under the Presbyterian mission. Miss Mitani, the National Corresponding Secretary also Y Branch Secretary of this society, is at the head of the department of mathematics.

As we entered the large audience room and noted the furnishings and the simple, yet artistic decorations, we almost imagined we were in some college chapel at home. We listened to a delightful program consisting of choruses, vocal solos and duets, piano solos, organ solos, essays, orations, recitations and addresses, in English and Japanese, all on Christmas subjects and given by the pupils of the school. Noticeable features with the pupils of this school were the lack of all paint and oil on the face and hair and the American style of dressing the hair by a large majority of the young women. An interesting paper on Christmas was read by a sweet-faced, white-haired old lady who was the first young woman to be sent out to China under a missionary board—Mrs. McCarty, who went to that field in 1852 for the Presbyterian Board.

Suitable gifts were presented to each pupil and teacher and a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all after the exercises were over.

Another interesting and important Christmas festival was the entertainment, on Christmas night, given by the Sunday school of the Ginza M. E. Church, of which our staunch helper, Rev. T. Ukai, is pastor. This church has between three and four hundred members, many of whom are most active and ardent workers in all lines of Christian effort.

An interesting program was given by the children in a truly western style. That it was highly enjoyed by all present was evidenced by frequent loud and prolonged applause. We learned afterward that the most of the drilling of the children for their parts had been done by the pastor's capable little wife, a daughter of our Mrs. Yajima.

In all of these entertainments we saw the girls and young women participating in everything with the boys and young men and doing their parts equally well. When one remembers that it is only a little more than thirty years since girls were prevented by law and by custom from attending school, to say nothing of appearing in public on such occasions as these, we can see something of the rapid advance that has been made by this nation for its women alone, and a consequent betterment of the conditions surrounding the family life.

May the good work go on until Christ shall reign in all hearts and His beautiful spirit permeate every condition of society in this land.

30 Tsukiji, Tokyo, Japan.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter III.

MISS MILNER again! Hang Miss Milner!" said Hugh to himself softly as he walked down one more grimy garden path and unlatched one more gate.

Having relieved his feelings, he smiled, for apart from the irritating repetition of her name, he shrewdly divined that from his predecessor, at any rate, he had little to fear. Still, it was the tenth house he had visited that hot afternoon. Also it was the tenth in which he had been hard put to it to prevent Miss Milner from dominating the conversation. Taking off his hat, the young man mopped his perspiring brow and drew a long breath. Then he made a furtive note of the widow's name in the blank space opposite her address in his register, added the number of her children, their Christian names, and the last item of information received from her favorite son at sea, returned the little black book to his pocket and wished himself at Jericho, or, on second thoughts, in abbreviated flannels and on the Cam.

Before unlatching the next gate he took a comprehensive look round. What a contrast to Barminster! On every side the shafts of numerous coal mines dotted the blackened landscape; below the higher ground on which he stood, the twin furnaces of the ironworks belched forth black smoke; the dust of the pathway on which he stood was black beneath his feet. Turning abruptly, Hugh Brotherton strode up the narrow pathway with the air of a hero. Perhaps he felt heroic. Had he not buried his youth, and his ambition for a more distinguished sphere, in this unlovely and undistinguished mining village, because so to bury himself had seemed to be his duty?

On the doorstep, but out of sight from the window, he paused to consult his copy of the register, which in this instance was complete:

"Thomas Windle. Aged seventy-eight; unmarried. Chronic rheumatism. Welcomes a visitor. Also occasional relief. Give ticket for meat or grocery. No cash."

Forgetting himself, Hugh Brotherton smiled broadly, slipped the book once more into his pocket, and knocked at the door. A few minutes later he was seated in a wooden armchair by the fireside, beating off the flies and listening despairingly to the introduction to the eleventh edition of the history of the manners and customs of his sometime predecessor, the lady visitor.

"Miss Milner again! Go where I will, I hear of nothing but Miss Milner. I shall know her as well as any of you soon," he said, in good-humored protest.

Tummas raised a slow forefinger and pointed over his visitor's shoulder.

"There she be," he said, laconically.

Rising hastily to his feet, the young man faced about, half expecting to see Miss Milner in the flesh. But Tummas was pointing to a photograph.

"Oh, I see! So that is Miss Milner!"

With considerable interest he scanned the face that looked out upon him from its plush frame. It was but a few days since his arrival, and his curiosity had been greatly stirred by the constant repetition of the lady's name.

"Ay; that's Miss Milner," repeated Tummas. "Miss Milner every inch of her, as you might say."

Hugh looked critically at the pictured face, with its resolute features and steady eyes. He judged Miss Milner to be eight-and-twenty years of age, and to have a will of her own. Although not actually pretty, the face was full of character and by no means unattractive.

The young man, however, kept these thoughts to himself, for it was already clear to him that in Pitsmoor the lady visitor had not been accounted a success.

"A firm face," was all he said, and said that only because of an instinctive feeling that if he failed to offer an opinion the old man might take it ill.

Tummas raised his stick and struck it sharply on the stone floor in the fullness of his appreciation. T' parson lad was a sharp 'un!

"Ay; you may say so! She looks as hard as she was, and she was as hard as she looks," he said oracularly. "That's just exac'ly it. She looks as hard as she was, and she was as hard as she looks. That's it exac'ly."

He peered humorously at the "parson lad" over the knotty hands folded on the top of his stick, with a just appreciation of the acumen that enabled him, "auld Tummas Windle," to put the case into a nutshell for the information of his betters. He liked the turn of his criticism so well that more than once he repeated it softly, for his own private delectation, while Hugh was eying the photograph with a dissatisfied air.

"Hard, was she? Now, from what I have heard today, she must have been in the habit of doing a great deal more for you all than any one could have had a right to expect. For instance—"

"Ay, ay," interrupted Tummas; "'tis like enough. I don't say nowt to the contrary. She was fond of it likely, for she were always tewin' and doin' I never see such a woman. She reckoned to look arter the bairns, and she reckoned to keep the fathers of 'em out of the public" (this with more than half a grudge); "and as for the poorly folk, Mann, the doctor yonder, reckoned that she was as good as a qualified 'sistant to him. And he might well say so," added Tummas, as an afterthought, "for she were hard enough for aught.

"Now I tell tha, I seen her my own self a-tyin' up William Chard's John Henry's hand, after he'd come nigh to choppin' off his first finger. Her never so much as turned a hair! Her just claps on a bandage and stuff, and says she: 'Next time you want to chop off a finger, just see to it as your knife is a little less jaggeder, will you, John?' she says, and made him laugh with his face as white as that there sheet of paper. She did that! Eh, but she were a hard 'un, were Miss Milner!"

Hugh's face wore a curious expression; but he made no attempt to interrupt the garrulous old man.

"Now, I tell tha," repeated Tummas, warming to his theme, "I seen her my own self when she were fetched to Billy Sellers. There he were, a-lyin' by the roadside on the snow wi' his leg broke, and Mann over to Thistleton. Jenny Sellers and the rest o' the womenfolk were a-cryin' and a-wringin' of their hands, and lookin' to her to feel for 'em. No such a thing! She sends off two o' the lads for a shutter, and she has Billy carried home and laid on bed, and she looks at his leg, and feels of it up and down, and kind o' works it gingerly like, without ever seemin' to hear him holler. Last of all she looks at him quite comfortable, and says she: 'Yes, Billy, your leg's broke,' she says, 'and I don't know but I'm glad of it, for it'll be a goodish while before you're able to go on it to the public, and get as tipsy as you are now,' she says."

Hugh's lips twitched.

"Eh, mon!" ejaculated Tummas, with solemnity, "you might go far and wide before you'd come across the like o' that for hardness."

Throwing back his head, Hugh laughed aloud, forgetting that his reputation as a clergyman was at stake. For yet another reason, that did not occur to him, it would have been wiser not to laugh, for the powerful mind of Tummas Windle fastened at once on the problem thus presented, and proceeded to turn it over in his mind, this way and that, in order to get the bearings of it. Momentarily he was turned from the congenial occupation of pursuing the subject under discussion.

"Ye might look far and wide before ye'd come across the like o' that for hardness," he repeated, reflectively, looking, so to speak, round the corner of each word for a possible explanation of his visitor's untimely mirth. Finally, however, he reluctantly put the problem aside for prolonged cogitation on his more lonely days. "But I tell tha, it was when her come to Mary Barton's lass that her capped all, her did, for hardness," he remarked, shaking his head, absently still, at the stone floor, as he rested his chin on his hands, and his hands on the top of his stick. It had dawned upon him that his visitor was actually interested in this hard subject, and that being the case, there was a possibility that the young man might be willing to hear him out. Not often is granted to one the privilege of being heard out when one is over seventy. Life seemed good just then to Tummas Windle.

"D'ye see, 'twas this way. Mary Barton looked after her own lass in her trouble, along o' the nuss as should ha' been there bein' fast next door wi' a poor soul whose bairn was but a week old, and she off her head wi' the fever. And Mann, he says to Mary Barton: 'Now, don't you go into that house on no account whatsoever,' he says. 'If you do, it's as much as your lass's life is worth, and so I tell ye,' says he. And Mary Barton minded not to go that night, nor the next, but her lass was as right as aught; and all at once the second mornin', early on, she hears a cryin' and a wailin', and she knows as Lucy was gone. So she just nips in to get a sight of the corpse, and stays a bit, as was but decent, to hear how she made her end, and to her dyin' day she'll say it mun ha' been fair to spite her, for it wasn't more than twenty-four hours after that Grace was took wi' a shiverin' fit, and in another day or two was just as bad as Lucy Parkin had been. Mann, he let on somethin' shameful to Mary Barton when he came to know, for he was ready enough to lay the blame on she. But Mary and John Barton never thought but that the fault was his own, some way, and they says to Mann: 'We aren't satisfied wi' treatment,' they says, 'and for more satisfaction we'll have Doctor's Advice,' And so they did. And Doctor's Advice he says: 'Well, you might pull her through, and then again you mightn't'—he's real knowledgable is yon—'but, anyway, it'll want prompt measures,' he says. 'This here is a most uncommon bad case,' he says. 'Have you anyone who can be trusted to carry out orders?' he says. He did, as owdacious as you please, and as many as three married women standin' there to hear him. 'Have you any intelligent woman as can be trusted to do as she's told?' says he.

"'Yes,' say Miss Milner; 'I think I can.'

"Mann, he starts round quite fierce, for he hadn't noticed her comin' in, and Doctor's Advice looks doubtful, for seeing Miss Milner first time, not knowin' as she worked every day of her life for wages, you'd have took her for a lady born.

"'You are very kind,' he says, 'but perhaps you don't know what it means?'

"'I was trained at Milborough,' she says, kind o' smiling at him. He turned quite eager-like. 'Not in my time?' he says. 'No, it will be long since then.'

"Just for the moment them two forgot all about Gracie Smith, but Mary Barton gives a sniff, just for to remind Doctor's Advice what for he was to be paid two guineas, and recollectin' hisself, he says: 'Are you engaged here professionally?'

"Then Mann struck in. 'No, no,' he says, 'Miss Milner is not engaged to do any such thing. She is very kind, but we must not think of allowing—'

"But Miss Milner looked determined to have her own way. 'I am entirely at your service,' she says to Doctor's Advice. Mann, he turned as savage as a bear—jealous, happen," chuckled the discerning Tummas. 'Why can't you nurse your own daughter?' he says quite sharp to Mary Barton. But Mis' Barton only burst out cryin'. 'I've got my other children to think on,' she says. 'Gracie's took for death, choose what you do, and I mun think of the little 'uns. Miss Milner havn't no fear, and she havn't no one to think for.' 'That is quite true,' says Miss Milner, steady-like. For, with all her hardness, she could look at a thing fair and square. Doctor's Advice looked at her standin' up before him, and for all she wasn't so much liked on account of her hardness, she was a comely lass. 'I don't like it,' he says, 'but it's the only chance for the girl's life, if it's as much as that.' So there they left her, and I will say for Miss Milner that she tended the lass night and day. But her hardness spoilt everything. When Mary Barton stood by cryin' and wringin' her hands, and not able to stop herself for no one, Miss Milner up and asked her would she hold her noise, or would she be turned out of the room. She did that. And Mis' Barton, she do say to this day she never would have taken such hardness from no one if it hadn't been for Doctor's Advice givin' orders that Miss Milner had a right to carry out. And there was more and all. The lass had some uncles and aunts over to Thistleton, and on the Sunday when she was at the worst they came over to see her. Nine of 'em there was, with their husbands and wives, and five miles they walked to see Grace. For all Doctor's Advice had said as no one was to be let in, Mary Barton would ha' been fair shamed to act so shabby to her own relations. But there, in the doorway, stood Miss Milner. There was plenty said, I tell ye; but Miss Milner never budged an inch, and the end of it all was that every one of them nine, when they'd had their teas to Mary Barton's, had to turn round and go home without as much as seein' Grace on what was like to have been her death-bed. Eh, she was a hard 'un was Miss Milner."

Once more his hearer laughed aloud.

"Then, after all, the girl lived?" he asked, in pleased surprise. It was good to hear that the plucky lady visitor had some return for her self-sacrificing pains.

"Ay, she lived, and as things are now, she'd happen better have died," said the old man, darkly. "Miss Milner was buried t'other side o' t' church."

Hugh started.

"Buried?" he uttered aghast. Not one of all Miss Milner's previous critics had thought it worth while to mention the fact of her untimely death.

"In course she was buried," said Tummas, irritably. "She took blood-poisoning, Mann said. He were in a bonny way about it, and all; and he used language about the way Miss Milner had been put upon that Mary Barton havn't never seen fit to overlook. He isn't no better than he should be, isn't Mann."

Hugh rose suddenly to his feet, with a curious look upon his face.

"Ye aren't never goin' a'ready?" asked Tummas, indignantly. "Now, it's allus the way with the likes o' you gentry. Ye're no sooner inside the door than ye're outside of it again. But, look ye, I don't set no store on your comin' here unless ye reckon to stay a bit and so I tell ye straight."

Pitsmoor's new curate did no more visiting that day. Telling himself that eleven calls in the course of one afternoon were enough to satisfy any man's conscience, he threw up the sponge and went home to tea. Temporarily, some of the glamour had faded from the work on which he had thought to enter with so much zest. In turning away from her doorstep, he mortally offended the spinster who was Tummas Windle's next-door neighbor. It looked so personal, she said.

(To be continued.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

THE SENIOR L. T. L.

Conducted by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, General Secretary.

Notes.

1. A recent number of South Dakota's W. C. T. U. paper, "The White Ribbon Journal," contains on its first page a large picture of Miss Nellie Reed, State L. T. L secretary.

2. Senior Legions are advised to make one of their regular sessions a World's L. T. L. meeting for the consideration of our work in countries outside our own. Material for such a meeting can be gleaned from the biennial report of the World's L. T. L. secretary, Miss Anna A. Gordon. It will add to the interest if the various countries can be represented by individual Legioners in appropriate costumes, each of whom may speak for the country which she represents. A large map of the world will be a helpful addition.

3. Miss Louise E. Hollister writes of a delightful month's work in Arizona, where she has strengthened existing Legions, organized new companies, held meetings for the boys and girls, and spoken to the public schools. Because of an address given in the high school of Phoenix, the Legion of that city was nearly doubled in membership. At Tempe the school authorities consented that the last half hour of Friday each month be devoted to L. T. L. work in all the rooms, and a Mexican member of the W. C. T. U. will take charge of those pupils who are unable to understand English. At Mesa the Legion will be conducted in connection with the Junior Epworth League. Miss Hollister adds: "This territory has taken to the L. T. L. idea this winter in earnest."

4. One of the recommendations of the last National conference was that study for Junior L. T. L. certificates should be pushed this year. We are not surprised to learn that Pennsylvania, whose L. T. L. secretary can always be counted upon to stand by every National recommendation, is acting vigorously in this matter. We trust this is true of many other states also.

5. The new secretary of Washington (West) is putting much consecrated effort into the work, and should reap large results. She is endeavoring to work up the payment of state dues, and is "urging every Legion to make a contribution to the Willard Memorial fund."

6. Miss Emma E. Page, of Washington (West), an author and a specialist in humane work, reports that her Mercy work in schools gives her a great hold upon the pupils. She is using her influence to further L. T. L. work, as well as that of her own department. She has recently sent to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association orders for forty-two "Young Crusader" subscriptions and 170 Lesson Manuals. On a recent tour she organized three Legions, secured the study of the diploma course in a Band of Mercy and in a Y that did not know what to do to interest its membership, grounded them in the great principles for which they are enlisted; and secured home study for the diploma in several families, having enlisted a total of nearly two hundred young people and women and a few fathers."

7. The last L. T. L. convention of the Ninth district of Michigan had a surprise in the marriage ceremony of Miss Bertha Fritch, who had previously served both as L. T. L. district secretary and as state Y secretary. The bride and groom were escorted by ten Senior Legioners. The wedding cards were decorated with the Y motto.

White Ribbon Cradle Roll.

We believe that no organization has more devoted adherents than the Loyal Temperance Legion. Especially is this true of the Seniors, many of whom have had years of L. T. L. training, and have reached the age when they know how to appreciate the value of this training. Loyalty to an organization implies not only a desire for its continuance, but honest effort to secure its future existence. As one means to this end, each Legion should have an Auxiliary Cradle Roll, whose members shall, at six years of age, pass into the Junior L. T. L. Mrs. C. E. Hunt, Harvard, Ill., the National head of this work, has prepared not only the outfit for maintaining a Cradle Roll, but also a diploma and graduating formula for the little people. This is most attractive, as well as most helpful work, and we earnestly ask each Legion to undertake it without delay.

The Evolution of Temperance.

By Howard C, Smith, of New York Senior L. T. L.

In the early history of our country many colonies passed stringent laws against intoxicants.

However, it was the rule for each one to manufacture his own liquor. Drinking was universal as a social custom, and the women shared the social glass.

The ministers rode the circuit and were wined and dined everywhere. No licenses were then granted; every "tavern" and local store sold liquor.

Abraham Lincoln was the first storekeeper on record who exploded the old theory that it was impossible to keep a profitable store and not sell whisky.

At the beginning of the last century an awakening took place. Ministers reformed, deacons followed, women were aroused, and all sober-minded people drank less liquor and thought and studied their Bibles more. Local temperance societies were formed throughout the land.

Twenty-nine years ago the great Crusade took place; praying bands were formed, women visited saloons and prayed them shut. But eventually prayer alone did not avail.

So the first national Prohibition ticket came into the field in 1872, with a total of five thousand votes. Mushroom parties by the score have sprung up and perished, but the Prohibition party has increased forty fold in this time. Today the Prohibition party stands as the ideal party, trying politically to answer the question, "What would Jesus do?"

One objection made to Prohibition is that it does not prohibit. Neither do the laws against stealing and murder prohibit. There were 10,000 murders in the United States in 1901; robberies ran into the millions, and there is no general cry that these laws do not prohibit or that they should be repealed.

Reasons for failure:

a. Too local; easy to bring liquor from outside.
b. Brewers raise vast sums to further it.
c. Great corruption in politics.
d. Lies told by interested people.
e. Diversity of opinion among temperance people, weakening our power.
f. Failure of officials of opposite parties to enforce Prohibition laws.

Prohibition does prohibit when it is backed by Prohibition officials and Prohibition sentiment.

Institutions are known by their finished products. The product of the Church is seen all over our land. Miss Willard and Neal Dow are shining examples. The product of the saloon is largely represented by the inmates of the brothel, jail, asylum.

We cannot preach, pray, exhort or resolve the saloon out. If we could, it would have died long ago.

We decide all our great national questions by the ballot; with the right voters we can decide this question of Prohibition.

Heroic John Brown did not have enough followers; he had to rear them. We must persevere, educate, keep the question before the people, and raise a nation of Prohibition voters. With the enfranchisement of women our greatest ally will have been secured.

Ithaca, N. Y.

Organizing Work In Michigan.

Floyd Starr, secretary of Michigan State Legion, has been engaged in organizing work, with marked success. In one place he secured as leader a young woman of leisure, who immediately set herself to a study of L. T. L. helps. Finding from these that she would be expected to connect herself with the W. C. T. U., she sought out the union of her town and became a member. In another place a Legion of fifty Juniors has been organized. At one point a goodly number of the most influential young people of the town were enlisted. At one place, where he failed to secure a Legion, Mr. Starr addressed the public school, with the result that the teacher and all the pupils agreed to study for diplomas; in another town the school teachers and pupils became so much interested that they promised to use the L. T. L. Lesson Manual in their opening exercises. One enthusiastic company, composed of eighteen older girls, under the charge of a minister's wife and daughter, said they should use their own money for carrying on the work, and should use enough to make it a success. Mr. Starr sends to the state L. T. L. secretary the name of each new leader secured, and the leader receives earnest words of greeting and all needed instructions for making the work a success. The president of Mr. Starr's county arranged a financial plan for this field work by which his expenses might be covered. One of Michigan's W. C. T. U. field workers characterizes Mr. Starr as an excellent Christian young man, unassuming in manner, and one who makes friends of young and old wherever he goes.

Important.

Mrs. R. T. A. Straw, 306 Salisbury street, Lafayette, Ind., director of the L. T. L. extension fund, has been prevented by illness from preparing the article which she had expected to send for this page. Mrs. Straw writes of her great interest in this branch of our work and her desire to develop such plans as will give to it the greatest possible efficiency. She will be greatly cheered by any letters state L. T. L. secretaries send to her unsolicited, stating what their respective states would like to do in this mission work, and their preferences as to special fields.

Introduction of L. T. L. County Presidents.

(From Pennsylvania's State Report.)

Response of Mark J. Eckert, Adams County.

"Be thou faithful unto death."

Faithfulness in Legioners means faithful Legions; faithful Legions, faithful counties; faithful counties faithful states. Adams county sincerely wishes to be a faithful county in a faithful state.

Response of Cynthia M. Manon, Allegheny County.

In looking over our past year's work, we see so many things left undone that should have been done, that during the coming year we utilize all our spare moments in our work. To illustrate: We have, I think, in our county one woman who truly wastes no time. When she goes to market she makes that an opportunity for visiting the sick, going out with a full basket, as well as coming in so, spending a half hour reading to one, having a cheery talk with another, a prayer, a song, following a crippled child home and making arrangements to take to hospital for treatment, sending milk for sick baby, etc.

It is only this—a matter of forethought, of using your spare moments for your own selfish purposes or planning and using to the best advantage every moment for the Master. Should we not be like Christ while He was here upon earth, making His work the business of life? There are so many things you and I could do if we'd only think of them.

I wonder when the final settlement comes, when the book accounts are settled, when we see on the one side what He has done for us, on the other side so many blank pages, will there be some little corner that God will fill up and give us credit for the things left undone just because we didn't think to do them?

Life means too much, time is too precious to be wasted when so many things are to be done, so many faces to brighten, so many hearts to lighten, so many lives to whiten and make clean and pure for the Master.

No, this cannot be. The blank pages must be blank still; you and I must answer to God for the time we have lost, and the things we have neglected to do as much as for the things we have done. It isn't the things we'd like to have done, the things we believe in doing, but the real work we do; not the things we dream of doing sometime that count, but that which we really accomplish for God.

(To be continued.)

Appreciative Words.

I consider the L. T. L. Branch the most important work of the W. C. T. U. to-day.

Elizabeth P. Hutchinson,
President of Kansas W. C. T. U.

I have long considered the Juvenile department the most permanent work of our organization, because the impressions of children can never be obliterated.

Dorcas J. Spencer,
Cor. Secy. of California W. C. T. U.

One Kentucky mother, whose two sons have attained high honors in college and professional life, says they learned self-control (one of the chief factors in their success) in the Loyal Temperance Legion.

What untold blessings and storage of fruitage for the coming years are missed by those states that fail to plant Loyal Temperance Legions and have them blossom into annual conventions.

Belle Kearney,
National W. C. T. U. Lecturer.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, March 19, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Chief O'Neill's Appeal to the Ministers.

CHIEF O'NEILL of the Chicago police force is a man with a burden. The task imposed upon him is to "haud the wretch in order" among all the criminals of the city. He professes to be overwhelmed at the appalling flood of vice and crime. The laws prohibit it all right, but all the same the prohibition is set at naught. To dam such a tide of evil is nobody's easy task.

In this predicament the chief of police lately appealed to the ministers. It is true the appeal was rather more vehement than respectful; nevertheless the appeal to the teachers of morality, the especial educators of the popular conscience, was pertinent and proper. The police official wants the ministers to preach the law with more plainness and more effectiveness. Such an appeal is worthy of their most earnest attention.

In this instance the position of the chief of police is doubly difficult. It is the mayor, who, in Chicago, is the real head of the police . The mayor's authority is absolute. The nominal chief of police can do only what the mayor bids him to do and backs him up in doing.

The point, then, which we would emphasize is this: That the officials whose duty it is to enforce the laws on the one hand, and the public preachers and teachers on the other, ought to respect and be on the best of terms with each other. They ought to work together in most hearty accord. Neither can afford to disregard the other.

Chief O'Neill's appeal to the preachers was right. A corresponding appeal on the part of the ministers to the responsible head of the police would be equally pertinent. The wonder is that this has not been sooner and more frankly done. In the present conditions of society the one official is as necessary as the other. The two do not belong to hostile camps. The public weal is the common aim of both.

The fact is, it is a new attitude between the two which ought to be cultivated. It is too late in the day for the various moral and philanthropic forces to ignore each other. The prevention of vice and crime and the general betterment of society is too active a proposition to be allowed to suffer from scatteration of forces or from blundering and capricious tactics. There is too much at stake for that.

In Chicago, for instance, the public schools cost the city each year some $8,000,000. In the aggregate, the various churches and other religious organizations expend about as much more. But the lawlessness and crime, in one form or another, cost the city, through its police, through the courts and in other ways, more than all the schools do. Doubtless all the ministers do not preach so well as they might or as Chief O'Neill would like to have them.

Let the appeal of the chief of police to the preachers be accepted in good part. Then let their appeal to him be unmistakable in its courtesy, its frankness and its earnestness.

The Kindergarten of the Liquor Traffic.

WHATEVER may be his motive, Senator Powers of the notorious Nineteenth ward of Chicago, has made himself responsible for a very wholesome bit of legislation, in urging the amendment of the law prohibiting the sale or gift of liquor to minors, by the insertion of the word, "delivering," making it illegal to deliver liquor to a minor.

There is, perhaps, no one evil that so strikes dread to the hearts of social workers in the poorer portions of our cities, as the sight of the infant brigade of "can-rushers," mustered into the traffic of evil. The conviction forces itself upon the thoughtful observer that this light-hearted procession of today will become the reeling, debauched, wretched army of drunkards of the future.

Occasionally we hear of inhuman parents who slowly starve their offspring to death by failing to provide them with proper nourishment, and an indignant and horrified public demand that they shall be punished with the utmost severity; and yet, these parents allow their children to die pure, innocent and virtuous. The enormity of the crime sinks into insignificance when compared with the wrong done by parents who permit their children to be tainted by the slow poison of alcohol, which unfits them for the responsibilities or joys of life.

Here and there, in the districts where saloons and their customers are found in large numbers, friendly hands have established free kindergartens, which endeavor, by developing the threefold nature of these children of misfortune, to train their bodies to health, their minds to habits of right thinking, and their souls to reverence, faith and obedience. The most superficial thinker cannot fail to see how the pernicious custom which sacrifices the child to a vile appetite, defeats every effort of the kindergarten. Healthy bodies! when it is the commonest of sights to see a little one slip into an alley for a sly sip at the beer or rum he is carrying. Habits of right thinking! when the habit of going twice a day from home to dram-shop is becoming every day more deeply seated. Reverence, faith and obedience! when these children are obliged by their parents to frequent places where all things sacred are profaned.

For the individual or community that shall offend one of His little ones, or shall tolerate such offense, Christ has reserved a bitter denunciation: "It were better that a millstone were hanged about his neck." There shall surely come a day, twenty, thirty, or forty years hence, when Society, sorely in need of strong, wise, faithful citizens, shall recognize in the wrecks of humanity crowded in the asylums, prisons and almshouses, a mighty millstone suspended about her neck, impeding her progress and dragging her down to their own depths of depravity.

"Mislaid Great Sons."

THE above is the title of a paragraph that recently appeared in a New York journal, the point being that as the greatness of all great men comes from great mothers, and as there are thousands of great mothers, where are the resultant thousands of Washingtons and Napoleons? They appear to have been mislaid. Mother-love, mother-genius work on forever, but not always fruitfully. This arrangement involves a fearful over-expenditure of virtue; some way ought to be found to save the world the great sons of all the great mothers.

The writer was evidently wholly serious in what he wrote, hence we answer: Is it a fair conclusion that we must make a stir in the world in order to be truly great? Is this mother-care, mother-genius really lost? May not a man who suffers nobly, who endures bravely, be as great as one who moves men and events, thus drawing the eyes of the world upon him? Not detracting from the glory of him who has won a well-earned renown, is fame, we ask, necessary to greatness? May not a man be eminent while having no opportunity to prove his power? May he not, in turn, transmit his powers to a son whom he trains as he was trained, to a son who will find the opportunity that was not ripe in his father's time.

The chief of a city fire department may for twenty years hold faithfully to his perilous duties and die at last in their performance. How much of a stir did he make in the world, even at his death? What about the hundreds of firemen, linemen, locomotive engineers, sailors and all men who cheerfully and bravely risk their lives in careers of danger and of daring, knowing full well what the end will be, and whose names are not known beyond their own circumscribed limits.

Men struggle day by day, through a lifetime, against inherited tendencies or temptations that come from physical causes, and against the adverse circumstances and conditions of the places in which their lot was cast. Will the sons of such be weaklings? Are they themselves weaklings? Are they less great than the financiers who by some fortunate turn are set in the way to wealth and influence, or who stumble across discoveries worth millions?

Is the brilliant author greater than the quiet, unassuming, earnest Sunday-school teacher whose crown of rejoicing will be starred with the souls of those whom he has won to immortality? Is the loud-voiced orator more distinguished than the obscure man who spends his life and money in the endeavor to protect dumb animals from the cruelty of man? Is even the conspicuous temperance worker greater than anyone of the band of men and women who, obscure and unknown, endeavor faithfully to better the world and to uplift the unfortunate?

The Membership Campaign.

"DOES not the Woman's Christian Temperance Union lower its dignity, just a little, when it so persistently urges women to join? Do other societies work as hard for new members?" The questions were asked by an earnest white-ribboner, therefore may express a half doubt, lurking in many minds, as to the wisdom of special effort for increase of membership.

It is in no sense lowering to our dignity as an organization to work for increase of membership. If we were simply seeking to become a great organization, if we were seeking members for the sake of numbers and influence for selfish aggrandizement, then we might well stand convicted by the question.

When we ask a woman to join the W. C. T. U., we ask her to declare herself on the side of a great principle, to consecrate herself to a work for righteousness, to join an army waging war against the greatest of evils, and to pledge allegiance to a cause which knows no defeat.

Is it lowering to a minister's dignity to urge a soul to decide for Christ? We are urging women to decide for Christ, we are affirming that in a personal allegiance to the Crucified One lies the hope of the world's regeneration. It is an allegiance which must itself know crucifixion, if it is to be a complete regeneration.

The legalized liquor traffic, more than all other causes, in hindering the advance of Christ's kingdom upon earth. It is hindering the work of the missionary at home and abroad. It should not be lowering to the dignity of an organization, based on a belief in humanity's ultimate salvation, to set itself, by every means within its power, to a supreme effort to enlarge its borders and to bring other women to a belief in the need of its work and the righteousness of its principles.

When enough women in every community, state and nation are banded together in the principles of the W. C. T. U. and in the fellowship and faith of the white ribbon, the doom of the liquor traffic will be assured. Let her that heareth say, "Come."

No Prohibition Cranks Need Apply. The rum power is in politics, but it is not in any particular party. The liquor men care nothing for a man's party affiliation; all they require of a candidate for office is that he stand for the legalizing and protection of their business. The note of warning sounded by the Ohio State Liquor League proves this. We quote from its platform: "During the coming year both of the great political parties will make their nominations for members of the next general assembly. It is of the most vital importance that fair-minded and reasonable men be sent to the legislature by both of these two political parties. In order to bring about a result of this character it is highly important that the cast and character of each and every candidate be most critically scrutinized at the primary or convention of the party proposing to send him to the legislature."

The Power of The Press. What can the press not do, what is it not doing, in the interests of peace and arbitration? Take, for example, the Venezuelan affair. Baron von Sternberg, the German ambassador, in a letter of greeting to the New York Press Club, assembled for its thirtieth annual dinner, congratulated that body upon the part the newspapers had taken in bringing the controversy to an amicable settlement. Concisely and significantly does the baron thus set forth the procedure which resulted in the signing of the protocols and which express his assurances for the future:

"Four men met, negotiated in perfect harmony and good faith, and separated with the best feelings of friendship. If four men can agree, there seems to be no reason why four nations should not be able to agree. I feel confident they will as soon as they trust and understand each other in the same way, and we ought to facilitate and to foster closer understanding."

William Jennings Bryan, who was the chief guest of the occasion, pointing out the widening influence of the weekly papers, the country editor—"the man without the Hoe-press"—voiced the same thought. "The better people know each other," he said, "the less cause there is for friction. I knew that the call with the representatives of nations would not be a call to war, but a call to peace. The pen is mightier than the sword. Reason can settle all questions where reason is involved. I believe that the newspapers will be a potent, if not the most potent, factor in the solution of all difficulties."

We commend these sentiments to the notice of W. C. T. U. press workers the country over.

The Privileges of Citizenship.

Reprinted by request from The Union Signal of February 5, 1903.

ANNUAL reports are not always interesting reading, but the report just issued by the Hyde Park Protective Association telling of the work done during the past year, ending January 20, 1903, is not only a valuable addition to the temperance reform literature of the day, but it chronicles some events of municipal history which should be read by every intelligent citizen of our large cities. During the twelve and a half years of its existence this association has shown itself to be possessed of splendid enterprise, indefatigable energy and an utter incapacity for defeat. A partial resume of the work accomplished during that period is the most eloquent commentary possible upon its character.

Hyde Park, a suburb of Chicago, covering twelve square miles, since its annexation to Chicago, has, by special provision of the legislature, been a prohibition district. It has been the effort of this association to make it a prohibition territory not only in name but in fact. The work of the organization also has to do with adjacent territory covering thirty-four square miles, where local option law is in force. During the life of the association five cases of violation of the law have been carried to the Illinois Supreme Court, and have been won. About 350 persons have been prosecuted for the illegal sale of liquor in the prohibition districts. Seventeen saloon keepers in the local option district have been proceeded against because of the illegal character of their petitions upon which licenses were granted or because of the bad character of the places; and in addition, evidence has been furnished by the association against four commanding officers of the Hyde Park police force for use in their prosecution in the criminal court or before the civil service commissioners.

During the past year the association has conducted a vigorous investigation among the numerous beer gardens, saloons and road houses in the strip of local option territory north of Washington Park. This was undertaken with a view to discovering whether the proprietors of these resorts had complied with the requirements of the ordinance in submitting a petition signed by a majority of the frontage on both sides of the four streets surrounding the proposed site of the dram shop. In many instances it was found that to secure these petitions fraud of various kinds had been resorted to, such as purchase of frontage, or the use of signatures of individuals who never had owned a square inch of ground in the neighborhood. By vigorously and persistently presenting these facts to the proper municipal authorities, as well as by securing a strict construction of the ordinance mentioned by the Supreme Court, they finally obtained from the mayor a revocation of the licenses fraudulently obtained. The methods used by the liquor dealers in securing these licenses are shown by the testimony of their attorneys to be thoroughly unprincipled.

For more than a year the association has been endeavoring to have passed an ordinance making a certain strip of territory north of Washington Park practically a prohibition district. Its proximity to the park, which is frequented by women and children, makes such prohibition desirable. There is every prospect that this end will be accomplished, as the district, through the efforts of the association, has been entirely cleared of licensed saloons.

No less zealous has been the attack on "blind pigs" and gambling places. Not only is the association a self-constituted bureau of information at the disposal of the mayor and police department, but upon certain occasions, finding that the information which it has furnished has been indefinitely pigeon-holed, it has taken matters into its own hands, and organized raids, secured evidence and vigorously prosecuted to a successful finish a large number of offenders.

In the course of these prosecutions there have been brought to light certain facts which ought to be of vital interest not only to the city officials of Chicago but to every citizen who values the safety of himself and family, namely, that the men who are paid to guard and protect citizens are in league with the law-breakers, are frequenters of the "blind pigs" and have been seen taken from these resorts intoxicated. In one well-proved instance a guardian of the peace was known to have perjured himself that he might assist in obtaining a license. The association draws from these facts the somewhat startling but logical inference, that "an officer who will for money go into partnership with a 'blind pig' keeper or gambler, will, if there is enough money in it, go into partnership with any sort of criminal," and they cite as an example the recent conviction of Policeman Mahoney, a Chicago patrolman, on the charge of burglary.

The work done by the association is notable not only for the thoroughness with which it has cleared the district of "blind pigs" and kindred establishments, but it is equally remarkable as an illustration of the ability of a citizens' movement to inject energy into a somewhat languid municipal executive force and to stimulate it to activity. While the majority of Chicago's citizens have been content to sit in their comfortable homes and criticise the city officials, the members of the association deemed it wiser to try to supplement whatever qualities might be lacking in the executive department of their city.

In short, having a name, the citizens of Hyde Park, acting through this organization, proposed to live that name; and what is more, proposed and insisted that every individual conducting business within their suburb should live it as a law-abiding citizen of a prohibition district, even though it were at the expense of wearying the mayor and corporation counsel and chief of police to the verge of nervous prostration.

It is quite possible that the men who compose this association have done no more than their plain duty as citizens in using their individual time and effort in seeing that existing laws and ordinances were enforced, but doing one's plain, ofttimes unpleasant, duty in municipal matters is so rare a virtue that it gives occasion for comment.

The work of the association merits cordial and substantial support. It deserves the emulation of every thoughtful man and woman to the extent that he shall go and do likewise in his own district and that he shall lose no time in the doing of it.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

Damaris and Mary.

"I am tired to death; may I come in?"

A vision of loveliness appeared in the open doorway of a sunny room where the older woman sat by an overflowing workbasket. Her duty for the morning was darning stockings, and just then she was remembering George Macdonald's old shoemaker, a mystic saint:

My business is to luik to the bodies o' men, an' specially to their puir feet 'at has to bide the weicht an' get sair pressed therein. Life's as hard upo' the feet o' a man as upo' ony pairt o' 'm! I am sair honourt, I say to mysel' whiles, to be set ower the feet o' men. It's a fine ministration.

Her face was full of content, and she gave each pair of stockings a tender pat as she folded them away, ready for the feet, large and small, so dear to her.

"Why, yes, dearie, of course you may. Take this low rocker and tell me all about it."

"About what?"

The gray eyes were full of wistful longing.

"I may as well begin, for you know, dear mother confessor, I came just for that.

"I am ashamed to look you in the face, but I am tired of life, at least as I have lived it, and I am only twenty-five."

"Yes, dear, I know, but you have had unusual opportunity. Could a girl have more?"

"No! I feel it in my inmost soul, and with the keenest humiliation. My home is luxurious, and father and mother have lavished love and wealth on me all my life. Indeed, I am not ungrateful. I love them with increasing devotion, and my younger brother and sister are very dear to me. As well as I know how, I try to add to the comfort of the home."

"And you succeed, Mary; don't condemn yourself unjustly."

"You must let me accuse myself justly. I have been graduated from one of the best colleges in the country; have had a year of travel and study abroad; have all the advantages of high social position; a charming circle of friends, and opportunity for continued study in literature, art and music. What more can I ask? But I am dying of heartsick longing. It is contemptible, and I don't deserve an atom of sympathy, and yet—I long for it so—"

The bright head drooped suddenly, and the dark eyes overflowed.

"Let me tell you a story, dear child," said the older woman in a low voice that trembled with tears:

"Many years ago a child grew to young womanhood amid all the refinement of ancient Athens. Everything that art could give was hers. With mind and heart responsive to her opportunity, she grew in grace and culture, till it seemed that nothing more could be desired in Damaris, the fair Athenian.

"But culture, art, beauty, even friendship, failed to satisfy her. Stronger and stronger grew her longing and deeper her pain. How patiently she climbed the Acropolis day after day and worshipped Minerva in the peerless Parthenon, hoping to find peace! How she implored the gods to give her rest! But there came no answer to her cry.

"At last she bent in passionate prayer before the altar of the unknown God:

"'If thou art, and if thou art greater than all, reveal thyself to me, O thou great Unknown,' she pleaded in despair."

The older woman laid her hand gently on Mary's bowed head. The young girl sobbed, "I understand. Poor Damaris!"

"Her prayer was heard," the other continued. "A travel-worn pilgrim came to Athens. With strange earnestness he talked in the market place of a new doctrine; of a Jew who had been crucified at Jerusalem, and had risen from the dead, the Saviour of the world.

"Damaris heard and wondered. A faint hope arose in her weary heart. Clinging to the arm of her father, she stood on Mars Hill and listened with painful eagerness to Paul's tactful, earnest pleading. You may read it for yourself.

"In the brief record of the result of that meeting, we find the name of Damaris—immortalized because she believed.

"Mary, believe with her. It is your only hope. Jesus alone can satisfy you. Will you believe?"

"When?"

"Now!"

Mary fell upon her knees, and the older woman slipped quietly away to a sacred corner where she was wont to pray.

In the sunny room, early the next morning, she read, with great joy, a brief message:

"Nothing in the universe could satisfy Damaris or me. No one but Jesus, whom I have found, could rest a heart tired to death. Life is glorious and I am ready to live a thousand years.

Mary".

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Superintendents.

School Savings Banks.

THE School Savings Banks system has just been taken up in the public schools of Pierre, South Dakota, Ellsworth, Michigan, and Frayce, Minnesota. I visited the Atlantic City, New Jersey, public schools this week and found the most lively interest manifested in the work. The principal of the high school told me the savings of the scholars during the past year were over nine thousand dollars. This system of practical thrift-teaching has been in use in the Atlantic City school since 1895 and 1,200 of the scholars have good bank accounts.

No community can well afford to neglect the introduction of this excellent and popular method of cultivating economy, good habits and self-responsible citizenship.

S. L. OBERHOLTZER.

Philadelphia, Pa.

World's Convention Trip.

THE bookings already in, give evidence of a party of our usual size and of unusual excellence for the sailing for London and Geneva, May 16. Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon, also Miss Elizabeth Gordon, Miss Christine Tinling and Mrs. Fry cross with the official party.

Unusual interest in the Geneva convention seems to be taken, and to form the basis for the attempted organization of several parties, at least two of which are by people entirely outside our ranks. It will not be necessary to tell THE UNION SIGNAL readers that the party with which the National officers sail is the official party. It is an inspiration and pleasure to take an ocean trip with congenial companions, and those joining this company will be happily favored.

The arrangements for the care and comfort of the members of this party are as near perfect as such arrangements can well be. Every attention will be paid to each one. There is no second-class passage; all are on an equal footing and entitled to all the privileges of the steamer, no matter what they pay. The only necessity now is that of making up your minds you will go and sending your names and bookings in. The time grows short, and the accommodations must be secured very soon now, or they will be taken by outsiders.

The question is asked, so many times, if any besides delegates can go with the National party. Delegates, visitors, their families and their friends will all receive equal attention at the hands of the transportation committee—"First come, first served" must hold. What I can do now I may not be able to do two weeks from now, so please write me early if you are planning to go. I can give you every detail in a personal letter, and will be glad to do so.

I am asked about baggage. Steamer trunks and smaller baggage go into the staterooms. Large trunks must go into the hold, and will not be accessible during the trip. On the continent the less baggage one has to look after the better. I will send plan of the steamer, and sailing schedule to any one applying. Some of the most desirable staterooms on the steamer are now at my disposal, but if they are not soon engaged I must release them. A delightful trip is in prospect for those who can take it.

MINNIE B. HORNING,
Chairman Transportation Committee.
Evanston, Ill.

Convention Calendar.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Florida Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Kissimmee, April 21-24, 1903.

Welcomes will be extended to visiting delegates on the evening of the 21st, and on the morning of the 22nd the convention will be called to order.

ALICE C. BROWN, President,
SARAH J. GLENN, Rec. Sec.

Promoted.

March 3, 1903, Mrs. Jane E. Quinby, of Stroudwater, Maine, passed to the heavenly home. Mrs. Quinby was one of the founders of the Maine W. C. T. U. As an officer, as a member she was beloved and honored. The L. T. L. of the place is named for her, its devoted friend. She was also the friend and protector of those who can not speak for themselves, having special interest in the department of Mercy. Hail and farewell, tender-hearted, true-hearted comrade, now heaven crowned.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A

Bermuda.

NOW and again a letter comes to Bermuda asking what the members of the W. C. T. U. are doing, that no report is sent to THE UNION SIGNAL. Our sisters abroad must remember we are a small union; the membership of our four unions is not so large as one of your city unions; so our reports must also be small. Then it must also be remembered our Flower Mission and other departments do not have the active work yours have. We have no slums where flowers are always welcome and where so much work can be done.

The Annual Conference was held November 21 in Southampton Hall, under the auspices of the Southampton union, presided over by Mrs. Christie, vice president. Southampton is to be congratulated on its success. The attendance was good, particularly in the evening, when the hall was taxed to its utmost capacity. The business routine of the afternoon session was enlivened by short papers, songs from the Southampton Loyal Temperance Legion, a demonstration lesson by Miss H. Williams, superintendent of L. L. T. work, and two excellent addresses by Mrs. Horne, of the Lucy Hayes union, and by Mrs. Bell, author of "Beautiful Bermuda." At the evening meeting a varied program was given, songs, solos, quartettes, addresses by several local clergymen and others. The address on "Local Option" by Mr. Matson Frith, president of the Band of Hope in connection with Christ Church, Warwick, was interesting and instructive. A suggestion by Mr. Frith that the union make local option their special work was discussed at a Colonial Executive meeting held recently in Hamilton, and it was decided to bring it before the convention, to be held during Easter week, when Mr. Frith will be invited to again address the unions.

An interesting feature of the conference was the testimony of a gentleman concerning the good he and his family had derived from the W. C. T. U. In conclusion he requested the president to convey his thanks to Mrs. Fields, the organizer.

Since the conference several evening meetings have been held. In December a soldiers' meeting was held under the auspices of the St. George's W. C. T. U. At the close twenty responded to an invitation from Mrs. Ainley to sign the pledge. During February meetings were held in Thorburn Hall, Warwick, and in Hamilton, when Mr. Housman, of Bradley Beach, New Jersey, was the principal speaker. Mrs. Housman while on holiday in Bermuda kindly offered her services to the president, Mrs. Burrows, free of charge, which were gladly accepted. At the request of the clergyman of the A. M. E. church, Hamilton, Mrs. Housman is organizing a union among the colored people. We sincerely hope she may be successful, and that in the coming struggle with local option we, with their help, may prove victorious.

C. B. ROBERTSON,
Colonial Reporter.

Victoria, Australia.

OUR state has been visited in the northern districts with a devastating drought which has entailed much misery on the settlers. In response to the Lord Mayor's appeal our union has come forward to help and our members with promptitude have collected goods and made garments as well as sending supplies of groceries, etc., which were very acceptable to the sufferers. Since then we are grateful to report that copious rains have fallen which have brought great gladness to the hearts of the suffering ones.

Our unions have been mutually helped and blessed during the visit of Manoramabai and Miss Abrams from India. An all day of intercession for missions abroad has been held, proving a time of spiritual refreshment.

We have had a time of rejoicing in connection with the great prohibition victory in New Zealand. Having lent some of our best workers for the campaign we have felt doubly interested. We are grateful to report that some of the earnestness and enthusiasm has reached Victoria and that there is a movement on foot to establish Prohibition Leagues in all centers. White ribboners hail this with great delight and pray that with the advent of woman suffrage for the commonwealth greater strides will be made in temperance reform.

Death has claimed Dr. Constance Stone, the first woman doctor in Australia. This gifted lady was born in Tasmania, studied at the Woman's Medical College in Philadelphia and later in Toronto and London. The doctor was loved and revered for her high Christian character, was a total obstainer and a true friend to the W. C. T. U.

The call has gone out for the fifth triennial Australasian convention which meets in Melbourne, Victoria, April 28 to May 1. Tuesday, February 17, the anniversary of Miss Willard's death was observed as a special day of prayer for Divine blessing on the convention as well as a time of ingathering of new and consecrated workers. We hope to have Miss Florence Balgarnie with us during convention.

A friendly rivalry seems to exist amongst the various states to obtain Miss Willard's membership banner, which goes to the state which has gained the largest accession of new members since the 1900 convention.

C. A. HOPKINS,
State Reporter.

College Professors.

Talk of Foods.

The New York papers recently contained a long account of the so-called discovery of a celebrated professor in one of the leading universities. The "discovery" related to a new and successful way of treating wheat and barley to prepare the starchy part by dry baking, so it would be made more digestible and nutritious. Thereupon Prof. Livingstone commenting on the discovery of the other Professor says, "A discoverer who was a business man first and a scientist afterward found that such foods could be made more digestible when cooked with dry heat instead of by boiling in water, and has already placed on the market the food which he discovered prior to Dr. ——." This refers to Grape-Nuts, the most scientifically made food known. Grape-Nuts can be easily digested by babies or anyone with a weak stomach and the food contains the most powerful rebuilding element known, particularly as relates to the rebuilding of the brain and nerve centres. It is a delicious food requiring no cooking but ready for instant service just as it comes from the package. A recipe book free in each package describes many delicious dishes made from Grape-Nuts.

CHOICE BOOKS.

LOVEY MARY AND MRS. WIGGS

"Lovey Mary."

Alice Heegan-Rice.

All who have read "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will want "Lovey Mary," and further enjoy the quaint humor of Mrs. Wiggs.

Price, postpaid, $1.00.

"A Great Mother."

The life of Madam Willard. A beautiful gift book.

Price, - - - - - - $1.50

Postpaid.

"Winsome Womanhood."

Margaret E. Sangster.

Familiar talks on life and conduct.

Price, - $1.25

Postpaid.

"Those Black Diamond Men."

William F. Gibbons.

A tale of the Anthrax Valley.

Price, - $1.50

Postpaid.

"Six of Them."

Mrs. S. M. Perkins.

A cleverly told temperance tale.

Price, - - - - - 75 cents

Postpaid.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Alice Caldwell Hegan.

A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."

Price, - $1.00

Postpaid.

"Aunt Abby's Neighbors"

Annie Trumbull Slosson.

A book of New England folk. Fully illustrated.

Price, - $1.00

Postpaid.

Favor us with your orders for any and all books.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Oil City, Pa., union will give a fine program March 19 for Neal Dow day.

Missouri senate passed a bill providing for an eight-hour day for workingmen in smelters and lead producing plants.

Elk River, Minn., union is aroused and at work. At a recent meeting many outsiders were present and much interest was manifested.

The W. C. T. U. and Woman's Club of Shelbyville, Ill., have been instrumental in securing the promise of a Carnegie library for their city.

The W. C. T. U. of Batavia, N. Y., is raising funds for a public drinking fountain to be erected on their main business street at a cost of $600.

Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, legislative superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League, has been bereaved by the loss of his father, who died very suddenly in Washington.

Until further notice the address of the World's and National W. C. T. U. superintendent of the department of Mercy, Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, will be Wyncote, Pa.

Paragould, Ark., union recently enjoyed a visit from the state president, Mrs. Lula A. Markwell. She was enthusiastically received and her plans heartily accepted.

Members of the W. C. T. U. are given the credit of being behind a measure to prohibit liquor selling within two miles of forts and army posts in Douglas county, Neb. The liquor people are wary and fear there is more behind H. R. 127 than shows on the outside. They fear it might cover the quartermaster's headquarters in Omaha. Temperance people are not talking.

Investigation of the selling of brandy filled chocolates to school children is engaging the efforts of the Philadelphia W. C. T. U. At their last meeting eight thousand pledges against cigarets were received from boys in the city.

Evansville, Wis., union gave an entertainment in the Seminary chapel and presented a picture of Miss Willard to the school. Mrs. Vie H. Campbell was present and spoke on the cigaret question.

A recent meeting of the Lexington, Ky., union considered "Women in Business." The subdivisions were "Women in Journalism," "Young Women Entering Business," "Women in the Professions." Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp spoke on the last subject.

The W. C. T. U. of San Angelo, Texas, unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the use of the "punch bowl" at all entertainments, both at public and private gatherings. The newspapers assisted by giving it publicity.

"What Chicago needs remedied in her city government" is the general subject of a series of ten articles by Miss Marie G. Brehm, Illinois' state president, in a Chicago daily paper. These articles were solicited and have met with much commendation.

An international agreement for the protection of birds has been entered into by France, Belgium, Switzerland, Sweden, Portugal, Austria-Hungary and Greece. Ravens, magpies and jays are not included in the agreement of protection.

According to the new restrictive laws of South Africa no natives are to be supplied with liquor, under heavy penalties, and no licenses granted to such as have been convicted of doing so; barmaids are abolished; children under sixteen cannot be supplied, and the saloons will be closed on Sunday.

Sir Thomas Lipton has been highly commended by the workingmen's association of England because he keeps all his establishments tightly closed on the Lord's day. As he is one of the largest employers of labor in the world, his example is of great value. Neither does he allow his yacht to be raced on Sunday.

The fourth world's Sunday school convention will be held in the city of Jerusalem in April, 1904. Arrangements have been made to care for 850 delegates and to give them a delightful trip. The steamer will stop at many points for side excursions. Full particulars can be obtained from E. K. Warren, Three Oaks, Mich.

The temperance committee of the First M. E. church of Oakland, California, held a successful Frances E. Willard memorial service. This was the second held in the town, and the audiences, both large, were not duplicated. Mrs. Sarah A. McClees spoke at this meeting and her personal reminiscences were many and interesting.

Miss H. Anna Quinby, state organizer and lecturer for Ohio, organized a W. C. T. U. at Fremont, with a membership of fifty-four, one of the largest ever organized in that state. She was employed to work in the county by county president Mrs. E. L. Bowman, of Vickery. Miss Quinby is a hard worker and good results are sure to follow wherever she is employed.

The L. T. L. of Lempster, N. H., gave a social of their own recently. Many of the parents and friends of the children were present. The recitations and music were of credit to the Legioners. Memorial services for Miss Willard were held by the Lempster union at the home of the president. It was well attended and much interest manifested. The L. T. L. gave added interest by their songs and recitations.

The W. C. T. U. of Binghamton, N. Y. endorsed the position of the state superintendent of Public Instruction in regard to Bible reading in the public schools. This union held a mother's meeting on the subject, "The Bible in the Home." Mrs. M. A. Russell and Mrs. Lavendar, the colored evangelist, spoke. Mrs. Lavendar, who was formerly a slave, said the last time she saw her mother, the mother was on the auction block.

Mrs. Mary D. Trowbridge of Spokane, Wash., knows how to boom medal contest work. She has a class organized in the Blair business college, one in the North West business college, and one she calls her "middle of the road" class. Four new L. T. L.'s in Spokane are in contemplation. Miss Emma Page has been helping there. A correspondent writes: "We have organized a 'law enforcement league.' We are in for a clean city, and mean to work for it. Already the saloon men are squealing."

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 14.

The Strength of the coffee you buy adds to its value in the cup.

Lion Coffee

comes to you fresh and of full strength, always in sealed, air-tight packages. Bulk coffees lose their strength, deteriorate in flavor, and also gather dirt.

Uniformity, freshness and full strength are insured to users of Lion Coffee.

Two Rings Free!

We will give these Two SOLID GOLD laid Rings, one set with large Garnet and three Pearls, one with Ruby and two Brilliants, FREE to any one that will sell 12 of our Gold Plate Enameled Brooches, set with different colored stones at 10 cents each, and sends us the $1.20. No money required until brooches are sold. We take back all not sold. Address HOWARD MFG. CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I.

EGG KEYSTONE SEPARATORS

Separates the white from the yolk easily, instantly, perfectly. Send 10c. (coin or stamps) to Hamilton Co., Cambridgeport, Mass.

The Willard memorial service of the Marietta, Ohio, union, was held in the Episcopal church; the choir of the church had charge of the music. The pastors of several of the churches spoke, and an excellent paper was presented by Mrs. M. J. Dunn. This same union also observed March 1 with a meeting in honor of Mrs. Stevens, and the official organ of which she is editor-in-chief. A good club to THE UNION SIGNAL was sent in. Neal Dow day will also have especial notice by Marietta white-ribboners.

Mrs. J. K. Barney, World's superintendent of Prison Work, has recently held twenty-one services in New Jersay at the following named places: Paterson, Verona, Montclair, Bayonne, Newark, Passaic, Succa Sunna, Bergen Point, Bloomfield, Irvington, Tuckerton and Milburn. Seven of these unions were on the roll of honor, having a net gain last year of twenty members, and this speaker was sent to them by the state. They all write in appreciation of the plan, and of Mrs. Barney as their speaker. The twenty-one counties in New Jersey will each hold a School of Methods, or Institute in April or May.

Bright's Disease and Diabetes Cured.

University Chemist Acting as Judge.

Irvine K. Mott, M. D., of Cincinnati, O., demonstrated before the editorial board of the Evening Post, one of the leading daily papers of Cincinnati, the power of his remedy to cure the worst forms of kidney diseases. Later a public test was instituted under the auspices of the Post, and five cases of Bright's Disease and Diabetes were selected by them and placed under Dr. Mott's care. In three months' time all were pronouced cured, one of the most prominent Universities in the United States having been chosen by the Post to make examination of the cases before and after treatment.

Anyone desiring to read the details of this public test can obtain copies of the papers by writing to Dr. Mott for them.

This public demonstration gave Dr. Mott an international reputation that has brought him into correspondence with people all over the world, and several noted Europeans are numbered among those who have taken his treatment and been cured

The doctor will correspond with those who are suffering with Bright's Disease, Diabetes or any kidney trouble, either in the first, intermediate or last stages, and will be pleased to give his expert opinion free to those who will send him a description of their symptoms. An essay which the Doctor has prepared about kidney troubles and describing his new method of treatment will also be mailed by him. Correspondence for this purpose should be addressed to IRVINE K. MOTT, M. D., 158 Mitchell Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

About Women.

Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, wife of the senator from West Virginia, will erect a $50,000 building for the use of the Young Men's Christian Association at Elkins, her home.

A delegation representing the Illinois' Federation of Women's Clubs are investigating glass and other factories in the state, relative to child labor conditions. Dr. Cornelia S. DeBey and Miss Anna Nichols comprise the delegation.

Mrs. Annie Rosenberg of Laramie, Wyo., is the only woman undertaker in the Rocky mountain region. She holds a certificate of competency from the Colorado board of health, having first engaged in this business in that state.

A curfew law which provides that all girls under fourteen shall be off the streets by 9 p. m. unless accompanied by adult relatives, has passed the city council of Wilkesbarre, Pa., on a first reading.

Miss Abbie Mathewson Clinton has just been appointed deputy county treasurer of Otsego county, New York,. Her office will be at Cooperstown. Miss Clinton is a niece of Mrs. S. M. Perkins, of Ohio.

The ruled slate was invented by Mrs. Louise Dyer, of Yazoo City, Mo.; and a New York banker's wife, one day while engaged in twisting worsted yarn received the germinal idea of an invention of how to twist wire rope, which netted her $50,000.

The first woman lawyer to appear in a Swiss law court is Mlle. Mackenroth, who recently acted for the defendant in a case at the Assize Court at Zurich. Her eloquent defense on behalf of her client surprised even the judge, and the jury, without retiring, found for the defendant.

Adelina Patti's motto has been "I will be young as long as I can." The announcement that she is engaged for a series of sixty concerts in this country next season shows that she has been true to her aim, for she is sixty years old. She will receive a half million dollars for the tour.

Miss Emma Kellogg of Colorado will probably be appointed game warden for Routt and Rio Blanco counties. She lassoed a young bear once and took it home alive. She has hunted mountain lion, deer and elk. She is well versed in woodcraft and could fill the position with ability.

Miss Isabella E. W. M. Leutwein, of Kalamazoo, Mich., is to preside over the home of the German governor in Southwest Africa. The governor, General Theodore Von Leutwein, is her uncle and a widower. Miss Leutwein will be first lady over the German colonies in that region.

Mrs. Russell Sage was recently quoted as saying that the only way for the women of Washington, New York and other social centers to avoid breaking down was to follow the example of Mrs. Roosevelt, who withdrew from the social campaign and cultivated the home life and the old-fashioned Sabbath.

An ingenious invention has been devised by Mrs. Kate Eubank, of Oakland, Cal. It is known as a combined trunk and bureau, and when closed resembles an ordinary Saratoga trunk. When, however, the lid is raised, a handsome dressing case and bureau is seen, fully equipped, with mirror, toilet case and drawers.

Vassar girls are planning a $15,000 club house for the benefit of the maids employed around the college. They are working for an endowment of $20,000 to provide for its maintenance and to pay the salary of a matron, $4,000 having been secured. The object of the club will be educational, and plans for the building include class-rooms and reading-rooms, as well as parlors.

Miss Dorothea Warren, of Kansas, is an authority on ceramic art. She was recently entertained by the Kansas City Ceramic Club, and made a scholarly address upon the benefits to be derived by the ceramic worker from a trip to Europe. Miss Warren is noted as a china and miniature painter. In June she will go to France to take charge of the art department in the Frances Walker School, Paris.

A Woman's Athletic Club for New York City women is a new enterprise. Primarily the club is to be devoted to sports and athletics. Its nearest prototype among the men's clubs is the Racquet and Tennis Club. There are to be tennis, racquet and squash courts, a gymnasium, Turkish baths, a dining room and sleeping apartments. The initiation fee has been fixed at $100 and the annual dues will be $100.

Meals served automatically via a subway from a kitchen far removed from the residence, the family cook abolished and the servant girl problem partly solved, is the promise made to Americans who adopt the scheme proposed by John Ablett of London, chairman and managing director of the London Distributing Kitchens, Limited, who is in this country to promote an enlargement of the London plan.

The right to wear male attire in France is conferred on women by the government as a great privilege, for which, in addition, each must pay $10 a year as a tax. The only women to whom the right to wear male attire has been given are George Sand, Rosa Bonheur, Mme. Dieulafoy, the Persian archaeologist; Mme. Faucalt, the bearded woman, and Mme. Fourreau and Mme. de Jeannette, both sculptors.

Fifty-four years of active service in the school room is the record of Miss Priscilla Redfield of Gloucester, N. J. During that time she has seen wonderful developments in educational methods, has kept abreast of her work, and has seen her pupils take positions in every walk of life. She is still hale and hearty, but retires to take advantage of an annuity recently granted her by the state board.

Of the women graduates from Michigan University in the seventies, more than 65 per cent were from the professional schools. Now less than 14 per cent graduate from those schools. During the thirty-one years that women have received degrees from the university, one out of eight of the graduates has been a woman. While the number of women graduates increased from 4 in 1871 to 156 in 1901, the number of men graduates increased from 304 in 1871 to 610 in 1901.

Miss Elizabeth J. Letson is director of the museum of the Buffalo Society of Natural Sciences, and is the only woman in the United States occupying such a position. She studied at the Philadelphia Academy, and also at the Smithsonian Institution, in Washington, and is such an authority on conchology that she was selected to superintend the compiling of a list of the shells of New York state for the state museum at Albany, a work requiring great range of knowledge.

The New Century Club of London, is a woman's organization, run on the principles of a man's club. It now occupies rooms at Hay Hill Lodge, Berkeley street, Piccadilly, a fashionable part of London. The annual dues are $5, with a $10 entrance fee. Meals are served at an inexpensive rate, and the club house contains sitting rooms, a large dining room, and many bed rooms for the use of members, when desired. It is under the management of Miss Mary Cowen.

The women of Columbus, Kan., have started a crusade against giving Turkey any space at the St. Louis World's Fair. They claim that Turkey is a knave among nations, an enemy to Christianity and civilization and is entitled to no consideration at the hands of the World's Fair commissioners. They have adopted resolutions urging the commissioners not even to extend an invitation to Turkey to participate in the fair and have called upon the Christian women of the land to join in the crusade.

Mrs. Mary G. Coulter has introduced two anti-treating bills in the Utah legislature. One of these provides a penalty of $10 to $100 or imprisonment not over thirty days for offering or accepting any intoxicating liquor without pay. The other applies to candidates for any public office. It is made unlawful for any candidate or his agent to give away any cigars, liquor or refreshment of any kind, including ice cream, mineral water and food, or to furnish lodging or entertainment of any kind or to haul any voters to the polls. It is made a crime, punishable by fine and imprisonment not exceeding six months, to ask a candidate or his agent for any of these things.

Diamond cutting is a good occupation for the girl who is willing to give time and patience to its learning. The firms that receive girl apprentices usually require a three years' agreement signed by the parents and a two hundred dollar bond guarantee. For the first six months no wages are paid. After that the girls are paid $2 a week for one year, which sum is doubled for the succeeding year. During the concluding six months of the apprenticeship term $6 a week is paid. A bonus of $50 is also paid to compensate the girls for the time they worked and received no wages. This bonus as well as the two-hundred-dollar bond are forfeited in case the girl leaves before the full three years' term has expired. The pay is good after the trade is mastered.

"I have decided," said the girl in blue, "that when I marry I shall marry a widower."

"Coward!" returned the girl in gray, scornfully. Truly, it would seem that a woman should be willing to tame her own husband.

An old woman entered a savings bank the other day and walked up to the desk.

"Do you want to withdraw or deposit?" asked the clerk.

"Naw, Oi doant. Oi wants to put some in," was the reply.

The clerk pushed up the book for her signature and said:

"Sign on this line, please."

"Above it or below it?"

"Just above it."

"Me whole name?"

"Yes."

"Before Oi was married?"

"No, just as it is now."

"Oi can't wroite."

Ask for Help

A Postal Will Bring You a Way to Get Well.

Think how often you have read this offer. Why do you wait, while thousands write me and get well?

If you sick ones could only know what I know, you all would write.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

Whatever your prejudice or doubt, you must know this:—If the remedy did not succeed, the offer would ruin me. It must be apparent that I have learned how to cure.

When I have the faith to take all the risk, won't you merely write a postal to get well?

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to strengthen weak inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that power which alone operates the vital organs I treat a weak organ as I would a weak engine by giving it the power to act My way always succeeds, save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. And most of these chronic diseases cannot be cured without it.

You'll know this when you read my book.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Look at the Suds

If they're thin, weak, watery, then there's very little soap in your Washing Powder. That means little cleansing power or some raw chemical. PEARLINE suds are thick, rich, strong. Compare for yourself and prove how needless it is to put soap with PEARLINE. It does more work than any soap or other safe washing powder. 691

Pearline is known by its Suds

Was Refused Life Insurance.

Rejected on Account of "Coffee Heart."

Life insurance companies have fully established the fact that the use of coffee causes an organic derangement of the heart, shortening the long beat and imperiling life. For this reason habitual coffee drinkers are refused life insurance in many cases. A well-known merchant of White's Creek, Tenn., proprietor of a large store there, says:—"Three years ago I was examined for life insurance and to my surprise was rejected because my heart action was at times out of place 15 beats in 60.

"I consulted several good doctors and was invariably asked by them, 'Do you drink ardent spirits? use tobacco? or drink coffee?' to the first I answered 'Very little', to the second 'No', to the last 'Yes', and they would all say, 'Quit coffee.'

"I determined to do this. I had read about Postum Cereal Coffee and bought and used it and I liked it as well as the best of real coffee and as a result of its use in place of coffee I find myself without a skip in my heart action and I can get insurance on my life cheaper by 25 per cent (notwithstanding the advance in age), than I could when I first commenced using Postum." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Free to Everyone.

A Priceless Book Sent Free For the Asking.

Piles Cured Without Cutting, Danger, or Detention From Work, by a Simple Home Remedy.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives instant relief and never fails to cure every form of this most troublesome disease. For sale by all druggists at 50c. a package. Thousands have been quickly cured. Ask your druggist for a package of Pyramid Pile Cure, or write for our little book which tells all about the cause and cure of piles. Write your name and address plainly on a postal card, mail to the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and you will receive the book by return mail.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

HANDSOME WATCH FREE Watches or 50 other premiums given away for selling 20 packages of bluing at 10c each. Send your address and get bluing and premium list postpaid. When bluing is sold send the money and select your premium. Address Excelsior Bluing Co., Dept. 210, Chicago

Easter-Tide

BOOKLETS and CARDS

Beautiful in design, artistic and attractive

BOOKLETS

Christ Our Resurrection
The Gate of Life
An Easter Prayer
20 Cents Each

A Crown of Life
Death's Conqueror
Easter Te Deum
15 Cents Each

Easter Joy
Jesus Lives
Christ Crucified
10 Cents Each

CARDS

Folders with appropriate sentiment, very beautiful
10, 8 and 5 Cents Each

Dainty cross designs
5 and 3 Cents Each

Great care and especial attention given to making up packages of assorted cards for Sunday School Classes.

Package of 6 or 8 cards . . 25 cents
Package of 8 or 10 cards . . 50 cents

We reserve the right to substitute goods of equal value if those ordered are out of stock.
Order early thus insuring your order as selected.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB.

By JOHN F. COWAN, D. D.

SINCE THE UNION SIGNAL began to report the meetings of the Optimists' Club the club room has become too small for the membership, and a big-hearted drayman who reads the reports to brighten up his shut-in daughter, and who has named his horse "Golden Locks" just because it makes the creature pull better than under the name of "Old Sorrel," offered as his membership fee to haul the whole outfit to the new quarters.

President Sunnyface dropped the music box on the pavement, and it flatted its notes after that, and as that would never do to open Optimists' meetings with, it was voted to make a special collection and advertise for bids from Europe for retuning it.

Mrs. Confidence Smyle carried the records and roll-call in her muff, and the Irrepressible Joker insisted that made a muffin, and that they have lunch on the way. The water-pail was hung on a stanchion, and Mr. O. B. Cheerful and Professor Gladsmile sat on the president's table, while Miss Thankful crawled under it, and Harry Heartsease climbed up with the driver and whistled to Golden Locks, "There's Sunshine in My Soul."

Deacon Hilarious Giver suggested that they might as well take the collection en route and save time, but he forgot, and took another as soon as they were in the new quarters, in which he would allow no one to put anything but new quarters.

As the walls of the new room were bare, Captain Brightwit hatched out an idea so brilliant that everyone felt the need of eye-lashes to protect them from its glare. He coaxed the reporter to go out and get some large sheets of paper and colored crayons, and each member was asked to print his report artistically in billboard size letters, and these posters were framed with gorgeous rainbow borders and hung on the wall as decorations for the room. This was the collection of optimistic posters:

President Roosevelt has sent $5,000 to the Kansas City Y. M. C. A. for a new building.

The World of To-Day is authority for the statement that twenty-one railroads of this country have given an advance in the wages of their employes, aggregating over $25,000,000.

The kind of man that warms the cockles of an optimist's heart is Rev. Dr. McFarland, of Topeka, who, when he saw a travesty on justice, in the trial of Carrie Nation before Judge Magaw, said, "You may fine me," administered the rebuke deserved, and paid $100 for the privilege.

Mr. Quintin Hogg, of London, recently deceased, gave his entire time and not less than a million of dollars to building up the Polytechnic Institute, to which hundreds of street boys owe their development into useful men.

By the will of Miss Emily Sears, Boston charities receive $45,000. The sum of $5,000 each goes to such institutions as the Children's Hospital, the Home of the Good Samaritan, etc.

A notorious New York saloon called the "Yellow Dog" has been forced to put up its shutters by the opening of the Seventy-second street railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A. So be it to all the other "yellow dogs!"

Over $85,000 has gone from this country to Sweden to relieve the famine there.

A gentleman and his wife in Grafton, W. Va., have given a fine old mansion on a corner, worth $20,000, for a Y. M. C. A. building.

Three public-spirited ladies in Sheffield, Mass., Miss Mary E. Dewey, Miss Laura Russell, and Mrs. John Barnard, heard that the owner of Pine Knoll, a beautiful wooded tract, was about to cut the trees. They formed an association, bought the property, and deeded it to the state for a park.

Boston, Mass.

Cancer, Tumor, Piles, Catarrh, Ulcer and Skin Diseases.

Successfully cured by a combination of Medicated Oils. Thousands of persons come or send to Dr. Bye, of Kansas City, Mo., for this wonderful Oil. Many cases are treated at home without the aid of a physician. Persons afflicted should write for illustrated book showing the various diseases before and after treatment. Physicians endorse this mild method of treatment. Call or address DR. W. O. BYE, Cor. Ninth and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Copyright, 1901 by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
Manufactured by THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS, 84-90 Beekman Street, New York.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

STALL'S BOOKS

DR. STALL

A Man with a Message

Millions of people always await the man with a real message. Dr. Stall has found it so. His books are already circulated in every land.

275th thousand in English.

They are being translated into several languages in Europe and two in Asia.

THE SELF AND SEX SERIES
has the unqualified endorsement of

Dr. Joseph Cook	Bishop Vincent
Rev. C. M. Sheldon	Anthony Comstock
Rev. F. B. Meyer	"Pansy"
Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler	Frances E. Willard
Dr. Francis E. Clark	Lady H. Somerset

Eminent physicians and hundreds of others.

4 BOOKS TO MEN. By Sylvanus Stall, D.D.
What a Young Boy Ought to Know.
What a Young Man Ought to Know.
What a Young Husband Ought to Know.
What a Man of 45 Ought to Know.

4 BOOKS TO WOMEN. By Mrs. Mary Wood-Allen, M.D., and Mrs. Emma F. A. Drake, M.D.
What a Young Girl Ought to Know.
What a Young Woman Ought to Know.
What a Young Wife Ought to Know.
What a Woman of 45 Ought to Know.

$1 per copy, post free. Send for table of contents.

Vir Publishing Co. 78 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia

HANDSOME WATCH FREE

We give a guaranteed stem wind, stem set watch, also chain and charm. Watch warranted to keep good time. FREE for selling 20 useful articles at 10 cents each. Handsome jewelry and home supplies. Agents often sell all in one home. Send your address and we will send goods and large premium list postpaid. When sold send the $2.00 and we will send watch, also chain and charm.
Royal Supply Co., Dept. 13, Chicago.

A Fight Against Odds

BY KATE ANDERSON

The thrilling anti-cigarette story which has been running through our columns as a serial, will shortly be issued in Book form, illustrated

Price, $1.00

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
Chicago

Portrait of

GEN. NEAL DOW

FOR FRAMING.
SIZE 11 X 14.

Price, Postpaid, 15 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N,
CHICAGO.

The Local Union.

One hour for business, and one hour for a program seems to be the rule of procedure in the majority of unions, therefore a suggestive working program will be given to cover each hour.

Every union should have a program committee to select topics and leaders, for the entire year if possible. A sum of money should be appropriated for the use of this committee, that they may be able to supply necessary helps for an intelligent, comprehensive preparation of papers and discussions. Each leader should know that she can obtain these helps from the committee. This would obviate much of the difficulty in securing members who would be able and willing to prepare the different papers. The White Ribbon Hymnals, for the music, are necessary. A W. T. P. A. catalogue gives the leaflets and prices and is indispensable to a program committee. So, also, is the National Report for the current year and the National Annual Leaflet. Send to the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, for the Hymnal and Catalogue, and to Helen M. Barker, Rest Cottage, Evanston, Ill., for the Report and Annual Leaflet. The White Ribbon Hymnal will be sent, one copy for 35 cents, one dozen copies for $3.50. A two-cent stamp with request will bring the catalogue. The National Report can be obtained for 15 cents, and the Annual Leaflet for one cent each, or seventy-five cents per hundred.

Note.—The recitations in this department are indorsed by the National Superintendent of Medal Contest Work.

Program.

Singing "There's a Better Time a-Coming." Page 34, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Bible Reading. Topic: "Despise Not One of These Little Ones." Matthew xviii: 1-5.

Prayer.

Roll Call. Responded to by quotations from devotional column in The Union Signal.

Report of proceedings of last meeting. Recording Secretary.

Reading of communications and letters. Corresponding Secretary.

Reports of special committees.

Unfinished business.

New business.

Five minutes' recess.

Singing. "Jesus Savior Pilot Me," page 46, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Paper. "What the Fifty-Seventh National Congress Has Given Us in Reform Legislation." (The material for this paper to be taken from the letters of Mrs. Ellis in The Union Signal during the sessions of Congress.

Reading. "The Cup."

Singing. "There is a Land of Pure Delight." Page 150, White Ribbon Rymnal.

Announcements.

Adjournment.

The Cup.*

By the Author of "Joe's Place."

In the church of the Master, on Bethany Road,
There were signs of a time of refreshing at hand;
There was ripening grain where the pastor had sowed
In unpromising soil—where he'd labored and planned
Till the heart in him failed. Now, his heart and his brain
Were resilient, resourceful, and active again!

In the prayer meeting hour, 'twas as if he could see
Him whose name he invoked, and whose leading and grace
And approval he craved (aye, no matter how he May have blundered or doubted)—the light of whose face
He had often enjoyed in large measure before—
Whose commission he lovingly, faithfully bore.

Here his people had come from the toil of the day,
With its trying besetments, well knowing their need
Of communion with Him who had taught them to pray
For the grace that had proven sufficient, indeed,
Since the hour when they found in the bread and the wine
His deep meaning: "Henceforth, I am yours—ye are mine!"

*Copyright, 1903, by Dr. J. W. Ross,

One of these, who for years now had faithfully trod
In the steps of the Master, stood up in his place,
With a modest demeanor, to witness how God
Had been true to His promise, supplying the grace
That sufficed for each need as it came. "But," said he,
"The old thirst!—Oh, I pray Him to quench it in me.

"For it threatens, it tortures me still. If I pass
My old haunts—as to-day by McGueegan's—I quail
At the odor, the sight or the clink of a glass,
Or the touch of a tempter. If once I should fail
To remember His promise to me, and look up
To my Lord, I would taste of the death in the cup!

"But He keeps me!—Oh, why should I fear that His grace
Will not always avail to deliver His own?
I look back to the hour when I bowed in this place
A poor penitent, lost, broken-hearted, undone—
When He pardoned me, healed me, and made me anew.
All I have, all I am, cannot pay Him His due.

"When I bring Him my best, I receive at His hand
The rich treasure I give—nay, am dowered with more,
For the child whom I lead at His altar to stand—
To be His—is my own more than ever before!
This dear lad at my side prays like me to be led
By the hand that uplifted his father," he said.

"He has never known shame, and the treacherous cup
Never stained his young lips. But the tempter may come—
Aye, may lurk in the blood! He will need to look up
To the Lord who delivered his father from rum.
He will look to you, friends, for example and word,
As the proven disciples and friends of his Lord.

"We have taught him—his mother and I—to revere
The Lord's word, and His day, and to share the delight
We have found in the courts of His house; to seek here
The instruction and guidance of heaven. To-night
He avows his desire to comply with the word
Of the Master—to own Him and claim Him as Lord."

There were tears in the voice of the man; there was pride
Which the angels might share, in his radiant face,
When he paused for a time, while the youth at his side,
At a sign from him, modestly rose in his place.
Then the people felt solemnly challenged to prove
Not the lad's, but their own, consecration and love!

(Continued on next page.)

One Year for 10 Cents.

A Beautifully Illustrated Magazine for 10 Cents a Year.

A new magazine is being started out in Colorado and for the first year will be sent for 10c. a year. The idea is to publish stories of adventure, engravings of grand mountain scenery, sketches of lucky "finds" in gold mines, etc. Typical of the West. The first edition will soon be ready to mail. It is really an honor to become a subscriber to the first issue of any paper, and here's a chance for our readers Back of the Magazine is an old and solid publishing company, that will insure success. Send 10c. for a whole year. Clubs of six, 50c. 12 for $1. Or, six years to one person, 50c. Tell all your friends. Postage stamps taken. Send all subscriptions to the Rocky Mountain Magazine, Denver, Colo.

Superior Merit.

Remarkable Curative Properties of a Remedy for Indigestion and Stomach Weakness.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a preparation for the cure of dyspepsia and the various forms of indigestion and stomach trouble, owes its great success as a cure for these troubles to the fact that it is prepared for disease and weakness of the stomach and digestive organs only, and is not recommended or advised for any other disease.

It is not a cure-all, but for any stomach trouble it is undoubtedly the safest, most sensible remedy that can be advised with the prospect of a permanent cure. It is prepared in tablet form, pleasant to taste, composed of vegetable and fruit essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal, every one of which act effectively in digesting the food eaten, thereby resting and invigorating the weak stomach; rest is nature's cure for any disease, but you cannot rest the stomach unless you put into it something that will do its work or assist in the digestion of foods.

That is exactly what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do; one grain of the digestive principle contained in them will digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or similar wholesome foods. They will digest the food whether the stomach is in working order or not, thereby nourishing the body and resting the stomach at the same time, and rest and nourishment is nature's cure for any weakness.

In persons run down in flesh and appetite these tablets build up the strength and increase flesh, because they digest flesh-forming food which the weak stomach cannot do, they increase the flow of gastric juice and prevent fermentation, acidity and sour watery risings.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores at 50 cents per package.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.
J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS,
39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

PRICES REDUCED FOR 60 DAYS.

$4.00 Vapor Bath Cabinet $2.25 each
$5.00 Quaker " " 3.50 each
$10.00 " " " 6.10 each
$1.00 Face & Head Steam. Attch. 65c
Quality best. Guaranteed. $2. Book Free with all "Quakers." Write for our New Catalogue, special 60-Day offer. Don't miss it. Your last chance. New plan, new prices to agents, salesmen, managers. Wonderful sellers. Hustlers getting rich. Plenty territory.
World M'f'g Co., 620 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Ferry's

Seeds

are planted by farmer and gardener who has stopped experimenting. It pays to pay a little more for Ferry's and reap a great deal more at the harvest. All dealers. 1903 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.
D. M. FERRY & CO.,
Detroit, Mich.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Dessert Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Biscuit, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

So revival began!—in the Pentecost way—
By no human device—for the Spirit had come
To His own, in the place where they gathered to pray.
And some broke into song, while in penitence some Found new utterance in prayer, and in suppliant tears.
No such meeting as this had been witnessed for years.

At its close, when the pastor and elders withdrew
To their room, they were moved to continue in prayer,
That the Spirit would rest upon them, and anew
Consecrate them for service awaiting them there—
That when penitents, seeking church-fellowship, came,
They might worthily counsel and act in His name.

And in truth the good Spirit did rest upon each
Through that marvelous time of in-gathering—His grace
Manifest in their bearing, His word in their speech,
While the light of His presence illumined each face.
It was good to be there! But, alas, they must go
To their work-a-day cares in the valley below.

They must plan for the needs of the church, and record
Not alone the array of new members enrolled,
But expenditures—dollars and cents, in a word.
Clerk, treasurer, pastor, had each to unfold
Some "concern" to be weighed—a few bills to be paid—
This appeal to discuss—that report to be made.

So it fell, that the treasurer's reckoning showed (Among other accounting) five dollars or so
That they—that is, the Church of the Master—now owed
For communion wine, "To McGueegan & Co."
—For the wine they should bear to the lips of the lad
Whose home-coming had made a poor father so glad!

Could it be? Did the firm of McGueegan & Co.
So revere Him who founded the feast, as to make
Just the wine He would have? Did they ripen it so
As to honor precisely the text? Did they take
With clean hands of the innocent fruit of the vine,
And make fitter His symbol by making it "wine"?

'Twas a fancy, perhaps, but the sound of that name
Of the "upper-class" firm of McGueegans, seemed then
To make vocal the air of the room, and cry, Shame!
And the silence of death came on each of the men.
Then the pastor, with tears on his face, led the way—
The one way of safe-guidance; "Dear friends, let us pray."

And they knelt, while he begged of the Master that he
And his friends might discern in this matter His will—
That they might, as one man, be enabled to see
In what way—by what means—they should truly fulfill
The intent of His feast of communion; —if wine,
With its sting, should be used for "the fruit of the vine."

Once again, was it fancy—the peace and the light
That pervaded the room when they rose from their knees?
Did they dream that the Master was with them, that night,
—He Himself, whom they labored to honor and please?
Be it fancy or dream, at least one thing they knew:
He had answered them clearly; they knew what to do.

Oh, how sweet was the Sabbath that followed! The feast
Of communion was fraught with new blessing and grace;
For the cup that in nowise offended the least
Of Christ's little ones, witnessed to all in the place
Who had called on his name, not alone of His death,
But of life hid in His—life triumphant o'er death!

Germantown, Pa.

A famous physician, in speaking of health, beauty, and a good figure, said:

"In my experience many American women have not the strength to take up outdoor sports, many lack the inclination for active physical exertion, household cares or office work—they feel languid, tired and worn-out by the weaknesses so common to their sex. Some women have household duties which keep them shut up at home. For all such persons I should advise a few simple daily exercises, with light dumb-bells, devoting only ten minutes of the day to it at first, and gradually increasing it until they find that their whole being is stimulated and strengthened by it. If the young girl—or the matron—is troubled at certain periods with irregularity, weakening drains, and backache—perhaps faint and dizzy spells—then she should take something medicinally to correct these faults. Nothing could be better than a prescription which Dr. R. V. Pierce used in his large practice for many years, in the diseases of women. This "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce has had an immense sale for the past thirty-six years, because of its uniform success in the cure of women's diseases, and because of the many thousand women who have attested to its merit. Being made entirely of extracts of roots and herbs, without alcohol, it is perfectly harmless to the most delicate system, and the best ready-to-hand remedy in the market."

"To insure perfect health, every tissue, bone, nerve, tendon, or muscle should take from the blood certain materials for its nourishment and growth. Every organ must have its period of activity and of rest, so as to circulate the vital fluid in a proper manner to nourish every part. This is why I believe in advising every woman to take gentle exercise out of doors or indoors. If the functions are not regular or the pains are severe then she should at once use a reliable remedy."

Mrs. A. BELYEA, of Rockland, New Brunswick, said:

"I suffered more than a year from nervousness and functional derangement. Had pains in the left side of abdomen all the time. Some days could hardly get around. Kept my bed about half the time. I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and got his advice for which I have ever been thankful. I began taking 'Favorite Prescription' right away as he advised. It makes me sleep well at night which I never did before, and I feel rested. Can truthfully say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has cured me."

Mrs. O. O. SCRIPTURE, of Prescott, Arizona, said:

"Words cannot express how grateful I am for what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for me. For nearly ten years I was a great sufferer with ulceration and sickness peculiar to women. I doctored for several years; got no better until I began taking the 'Prescription.' Now I can stand on my feet and work hard all day. I feel that life is worth living, and shall always recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines."

ADVICE TO MARRIED WOMEN. You should have a good medical book that tells you about the womanly system; treats fully of Physiology and Anatomy; wifehood and motherhood. Read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It contains over 1000 pages. A copy, paper-covered, may be obtained absolutely FREE, by sending 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing ONLY. If French cloth binding is desired, send ten stamps extra (31 cents in all), to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Signal Notes.

New Carlisle, O., voted for local option, and the saloon lost.

Three hundred pledge cards were signed at a meeting of the Catholic Total Abstinence union in Pittsburg, Pa.

The United Christian party calls a National assembly for Rock Island, Ill., on Friday, May 1, "for the purpose of economic discussion in the name and spirit of Jesus of Nazareth and the recommendation or nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States who shall stand for the practical application of the Golden Rule in government and the righteous enforcement of the principles of the initiative and referendum."

Ten and a half hours is the limit allowed by law for a day's work in factories, by women and children as well as men, in France. Twelve hours is the maximum day in factories employing men exclusively.

The cigar bill of the American people last year was $346,000,000. Nearly 19,000,000 are consumed every day in the year. Two billion cigarets and 315,000,000 pounds of snuff and tobacco are also used in this country annually. The government collects $70,000,000 revenue on this consumption.

The "blind tiger" has roamed at large in Lancaster, Ky. Frequent raids have been made, whisky was seized and stored until every joint was empty. The Law and Order League assembled the town on the court house square and burned the whisky in a large iron kettle, while a minister prayed.

A temperance lumber yard is not often heard of. The Messrs. Nicholson of Lansing, Mich., conduct such a one. On one occasion, after selling a large bill of lumber, and on being told that it was to be delivered to a saloon, the clerk said at once, "The sale is off; we never sell goods to any one connected with that business." The contractor who ordered the lumber was a total abstainer, but all his talking changed the situation not at all. He had to go elsewhere for his lumber.

A New Club Rate for The Union Signal

Yearly Subscriptions, in

Clubs of Ten

or more,

Either new names or renewal, at the special price of $1.25

each.

Regular Subscription Price, $1.50 per year. Special Rate to Clergymen, Reading Rooms and Public Libraries, $1.00.

A club from every union is most earnestly solicited.

The Union Signal
CHICAGO, ILL.

Publishers' Notes.

Health Studies.

A constituency entirely apart from our own would find valuable and essential knowledge and instruction in the new leaflet "Studies in the Problem of Food," from the pen of Dr. Louise C. Purington, but to our own family of white-ribboners it is absolutely necessary. "Relation of Food to Character," "Food Value," "Its Adaptations and Requirements," "Breakfast Foods," and "What Shall We Drink," are a few of the many things about which we all should know, and Dr. Purington is able skillfully to tell us. Send 5 cents for this leaflet or, better still, for you and your friends 10 copies will be sent for 20 cents.

Dr. Purington's "Nerve Dissipation, Causes and Cure" should be in the hands of every man or woman who suffers from our national disease "Americanitis," which translated means "living at high pressure," and who in our ranks is not a sufferer from that disease? Surely those who make things "go" know the symptoms. A mere reading of the leaflets is restful, and its instructions carried out, sure cure. This leaflet is 2 cents for one copy, or 10 copies for 15 cents.

"The Spiritual Athlete," the third new leaflet, by Dr. Purington, is on a somewhat different order, but is helpful and contains new thoughts and up to date ideas that we want to be posted on as well as the writer. One copy 2 cents. Ten copies 10 cents.

"The Mormon Menace."

The Mormon Menace, by Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., LL. D., and Helen M. Fallows, A. M., shortly to be issued by the W. T. P. A., is a timely, valuable, authentic showing of the leprous situation that confronts our nation. Beginning with the history of Mormonism, its rise and progress is traced with an accurate hand. The immoral characters of the Mormon leaders and the monstrous atrocities instigated by them and perpetrated in the name of religion, are depicted with an awful realism, and remind one of the horrors of the Dark Ages, while the puerile, inane declarations of the Mormon faith lead one to wonder if any but unbalanced, weakened intellects can embrace such doctrines.

There is much new and valuable material in this absorbing account of a religion which makes polygamy its essential element. It will form a most valuable addition to the extensive library already issued upon this subject.

Those who have read the advance sheets of this remarkable exposition of the greatest blot upon American history, pronounce it one of the most notable works of its kind which has appeared.

"The Doom of King Alcohol."

"The Doom of King Alcohol," by Mrs. Clara B. Drake, is a poetical drama in three acts, suitable to be given in a parlor or hall. While it is gracefully written and effectively planned, it is also a strong lesson for temperance, and is especially adapted for the use of a local union. Perhaps nothing is more difficult to secure than material for a good evening's program, but in "The Doom of King Alcohol" this need is fully supplied. The curtain rises with Tellus (the earth) mourning over the desecration of her children, the spirits of the field—Wheat, Barley, Rye, Corn, Hops, Grapes, Apples and Peaches—by King Alcohol.

In the second act King Alcohol and his minions—License, Avarice, Appetite and others—are in the throne room, and listen to the appeals of the Spirits of the fields. License speaks for the King, refusing their requests. The Angel of Prohibition enters and hurls King Alcohol from his throne. The last act shows Tellus again. Around her are the spirits of the fruits and grains rejoicing. Over the ruins of King Alcohol's palace stands the Angel of Prohibition ready for flight.

Those desiring material for an evening's entertainment will be delighted with this little drama. Send for a copy. The price is 10 cents.

A Red-Letter Number.

Great men and women speak through the pages of the March Young Crusader, Edward Everett Hale, John Burroughs, John V. Farwell, "Mother" Thompson, "Mother" Stewart, Susan B. Anthony and George T. Angell tell young people "How to Attain a Useful and Honorable Old Age." Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens sends a Greeting to all Legioners, and Miss Anna Adams Gordon contributes a delightful sketch, "Mrs. Stevens' Girlhood Days." The true story of "Madge," Mrs. Stevens' wonderful temperance horse, is charmingly told in text and picture by Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt. The world-renowned physician, Dr. Nathan Davis, furnishes the Required Readings, and from the special Neal Dow cover to its final page, this month's Crusader is a Red-Letter issue.

The subscription price is only 25 cents per year. Copies for distribution, $2.00 per hundred.

Standing Club Offer.

"Wanted, a Hustle" is the significant title of a circular sent out by the wide-awake editor of the New Hampshire state paper, in which she urged prompt action on the part of every member during the special Union Signal subscription season. Her advice and instructions were most practical, and although the special subscription season has closed, a club offer of $1.25 each in clubs of ten goes into effect. The word of this editor is still forceful and the activity among our friends should continue. Note her advice:

"Tell your neighbors about it (the club offer) and secure their subscriptions. Do not wait for meeting of your union but start somebody out on this business right away today. We all need this excellent paper for our inspiration."

A New Club Rate.

We take pleasure in announcing that hereafter a club rate of $1.25 each in clubs of ten will be granted our patrons. Either new names or renewals will be received in these clubs but to secure the reduction the club must consist of ten names. Every union that has not at least a club of ten subscribers to the Union Signal should commence at once to secure one.

The special rate of One Dollar is made only to clergymen, reading rooms and public libraries.

March Responsive Reading.

The March responsive reading on "Christian Citizenship" is written by Mrs. Mary Jewett Telford, National superintendent of the department of Christian Citizenship. This reading portrays beautifully the dovetailing of each department and plainly demonstrates that the thought of Christian Citizenship can be woven into each department of work. Make this the subject of an early meeting. Price, 50 cents per hundred.

Easter Remembrances

The Easter tide is almost here and with it comes the thought of Easter remembrances. A beautiful line of cards and booklets are to be had from us and we shall take especial pleasure in making up packages of assorted cards for Sunday School classes.

Kindly let us urge that all orders be forwarded early; this will insure perfect satisfaction.

Tri-colored Badges.

Owing to the great advance in the price of ribbon we are obliged to slightly advance the price of the tri-colored badges. The badges from this time will be 5 cents each, or 50 cents per dozen, instead of 3 cents as formerly. Kindly make a note of this in your catalogue so that it will not be overlooked in placing your next order.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Assn.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8887—Fancy Shirt Waist.
12 to 16 years.

8925—Skirt.
22 to 30 in. waist.

8931—Fancy Collars.
One Size.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, Chicago, Ill.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Leaflets Just Issued

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law.
Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Central System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89,
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.

.....CHICAGO.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for March Reading,

Christian Citizenship.

By Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford,
National Superintendent of the Department of Christian Citizenship.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department

Union Signal

184 La Salle Street
CHICAGO

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 13. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, MARCH 26, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2-3
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH 4
CONTRIBUTED:
Colorado Industrial Home and School.—The Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association. By Jane A. Stewart. 5
Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
A Small Politician By Harriet H. Needham.—Puzzler's Packet.—Just Suppose.—Composition on a Horse.—A Word to Boys 7
EDITORIAL:
Beside Bethesda's Pool.—The Czar and Religious Freedom.—Civic Housecleaning.—The Dependency of Laws.—A Fine for the Black Type Habit 8
Moral Suasion and Prohibition.—Personal Mention.—Toward the Sun-rising 9
EXPERIENCE CORNER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 11
W. C. T. U. NOTES 12
THE LOCAL UNION 13
MAINE MEN ON RESUBMISSION. By Anna A. Gordon 14
ABOUT WOMEN 15
SIGNAL NOTES.—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 16

News of the Week.

Senate ratifies Panama treaty by a vote of seventy-three to five.

Very Rev. F. W. Farrar, dean of Canterbury, died in London, March 22, aged seventy-two years.

Governor Brodie of Arizona vetoed the equal suffrage bill, passed by both houses of the legislature.

The New Hampshire house of representatives votes in favor of a license law.

Miss Susan B. Anthony addressed the National American Woman's Suffrage Association, in session at New Orleans.

President Castro, of Venezuela, resigns, turning over executive powers to president of Venezuelan senate.

Simon N. D. North, of Boston, named by President Roosevelt to succeed Director Merriam as head of the census bureau.

St. Louis exposition appropriation of $375,000 voted by German reichstag; $375,000 additional promised at next session.

Indiana supreme court decides that the State Board of Health has power to exclude unvaccinated children from the public schools.

Independent Labor League of America, incorporated at Albany (N. Y.) to solve labor disputes without strikes, and further co-operation with employers.

Missouri Supreme Court finds that five Chicago packing concerns violated the anti-trust law of Missouri and fines of $5,000 each, with costs, are imposed. Appeal from the decision will be taken.

Miss Clara Barton to retire as active head of the Red Cross Society. Will be succeeded by Rear Admiral W. K. Van Reypen, retired, former surgeon general of the navy. Miss Barton will be honorary president for life.

Report of the anthracite strike commission appointed by President Roosevelt, made public March 21. The main points are: General wage increase of about 10 per cent. Some decrease in miners' time. Provision for arbitration of disputes. Sliding scale of wages with rates under this award as a minimum. Finding against discrimination by either party in matter of unionism. Failure to decide question of recognition of union. Recommendation against employment of coal and iron police. Decision against miners' demand for payment by weight. Findings to be in force until March 31, 1906. Estimate that strike cost both sides $99,100,000. Recommendation against compulsory arbitration but in favor of government boards of inquiry to prevent strikes.

Honorable Mention. Big Prairie union, in the Ninth district of Michigan, takes forty copies of THE UNION SIGNAL! Let us hear from other locals in this respect.

Encouragement from the Enemy. The New Voice finds "cheer irresistible" in the comments of the liquor press, to which, in a recent issue, it devotes two and a half pages. So do we. And we say again that if any of our readers feel in danger of becoming pessimistic, let them borrow a few liquor papers and read what they have to say about prohibition and prohibitionists.

Our Annual L. T. L. Number. The July Magazine Number of THE UNION SIGNAL will be a special L. T. L. issue, in observance of July 21, our L. T. L. Red Letter Day, the birthday anniversary of our World's L. T. L. Secretary, Miss Anna Gordon. This announcement is made early in order that state L. T. L. secretaries may have ample time to learn where the largest Legions are located. We desire to know, by June 1, which state has the largest single L. T. L. State presidents will also be asked to contribute to a symposium on the subject: "In what way and by what method has your state union lent aid and co-operation, this year, to the L. T. L. Branch?"

Washington as a Peace Promoter. On February twenty-second, at a meeting held in Paris by the friends and promoters of international peace and good will, it was decided to celebrate the day annually by a banquet of the Society of Pacifiques at which all Europe should be represented and current international questions considered with reference to their peaceful settlement. The selection of Washington's birthday as a time for a general European peace meeting may seem rather incongruous in view of the fact that this general's renown is due largely to his successful conduct of a long and arduous war against the mother country. Yet when it is remembered that he fought for that liberty which is the forerunner of peace, and under which the peace idea best grows and ripens, it is seen how it becomes, as Baron Passy declared, "a day of holy memory for all advocates of peace the world over." The choice of this date is a felicitous tribute to Washington and to this nation.

Safety Only in Total Abstinence. Bartenders' unions are actively promoting total abstinence among their members. The movement is, it is said, becoming quite popular. It is hardly correct to state, however, that these total abstinence societies are organized "on the principles of the W. C. T. U. "The white-ribboners, besides promising to abstain from intoxicants, are pledged also to "employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same." The object of the bartenders is self-protection only. They protest against "making their stomachs common sewers" by drinking with every "good fellow" that invites them to do so. Their employers will doubtless encourage this new departure. While they cannot, for obvious reasons, demand total abstinence of their employes, as can other business men, they are not slow to recognize the fact that saloon interests, no less than railroad interests, are better served by employes who are teetotalers than by those who even occasionally indulge in a social glass.

The Reception of New Members. We have several requests for a program for the use of local unions in receiving new members. Secretaries of unions that have used such a program acceptably are invited to send us a copy for the Local Union department of THE UNION SIGNAL.

Large Families. An opponent—rather an unexpected one—of the large-family idea, has been found in Emperor William. The Kaiser evidently does not share President Roosevelt's views concerning "race suicide." He refused to see a man whom the mayor of one of the German cities desired to bring to his favorable notice as the father of twenty-five children, declaring that he did not want to encourage such business. "Children," he said, "are costly luxuries to a poor man (for, of course, it was a poor man who had achieved such notoriety), "and Schmidt, I am sure, costs your public school budget more than he ought to. If there were many Schmidts taxes would be much higher, and then there would be a row." Perhaps the Emperor wisely thinks that quality in his subjects is more to be desired than quantity. Schmidt should move to Pennsylvania whose legislature has before it a bill subsidizing large families and providing gold medals for the mothers.

The People Said "Go," and it Went. For the first time in more than thirty years, no intoxicating drink can be bought at the National Capitol. On March 9 notice was served on the Capitol saloon-keeper that his business was no longer legal, and he departed—"folded his tent like the Arab and silently went stealing (men's brains) somewhere else"—while a placard bearing upon it the word, "Closed," fastened to a certain swinging door in the basement, bore cheering evidence to the effective labors of temperance fanatics. So manifold and so subtle, however, are the tricks and wiles of the enemy—and, shall we add, of the thirsty congressmen?—that those same fanatics must keep a sharp lookout that the next Congress does not find some way to circumvent the law. A Washington despatch says that "there is a general impression that the dry season in the Capitol will not last longer than the summer," and that "the temperance reform wave is expected to recede in the fall."

Why Not More Prohibition? The summer home of Mr. Thomas Lawson, multi-millionaire of Boston, is Dreamwold, in the town of Scituate, Mass. Writing to the citizens of that place, assembled in town meeting and about to vote license or no license, he thus expresses himself: "I firmly believe it is not best for Scituate to license the sale of liquor. I know it is not best for Dreamwold and Dreamwold's people, and, as a property owner and a resident, and one to whom your town is very dear, I earnestly trust the sale of liquor will not be legalized." So greatly does he desire prohibition for Scituate that he offers, in case the question of the enforcement of a no-license law is a paramount one, to contribute over and above his share as the largest property owner and tax-payer, $1,000 toward that expense for the coming year. If no-license is best for Dreamwold and for Scituate generally, by what argument does Mr. Lawson persuade himself that it is not best for the city of Boston or for the state of Massachusetts? With his and others millions back of state or city, prohibition enforcement of the law would be assured.

Prohibition to the Front in Texas.

Mattie R. Turner, Correspondent.

Terrell, Tex., March 20.—The steady onward march of local option prohibition in the Lone Star state was notably accelerated by the victories of the week from February 28 to March 7 inclusive. On the former date, Gregg county came into the ranks with a good majority. Mrs. Latham, corresponding secretary of the Longview union, writes thus of the part played by the women in bringing about this victory: "Prohibition is ours, praise God! Our dear women, not only the women of the union, but of the entire town worked faithfully to the end. We had talked, prayed, planned and the Lord was with us. It seems that woman was endowed to bring the men from 'anti-ism' to the 'paths of righteousness,' for 'twas she who approached the repulsive man, whispered a word for home and children, pinned on the white badge and led him to the polls. Yesterday woman talked! Not of dress or fashion, but came right up to the emergency and preached sermons greater than are delivered from the platform or pulpit. Today she goes to her room and thanks God for the courage He gave her yesterday, the victory today." Mrs. S. J. Sweeney, state evangelist, did faithful work in Longview.

On the third of March Waller county swung gracefully into line with a majority of more than 250. One year ago prohibition for Waller county was thought to be an impossibility, chiefly on account of the large negro population, but about that time Mrs. Zehner, state lecturer and evangelist, gave a series of lectures in Hempstead, the county seat, where district court was in session, and the influence of these lectures was felt throughout the entire county. The little lump of leaven began its appointed work; unions were subsequently organized at Brookshire and Waller, and a county union was formed with Mrs. R. E. Thompkins, of Hempstead, as president. The women "ceased not from their labors" till the polls closed, when a mighty shout rent the air, the doxology was sung and prayer offered for the glorious victory. Mrs. Zehner spoke many times throughout the county and remained till the victory came. It is said that through the efforts of J. B. Rayner, a negro preacher of Calvert, ninety-five per cent of the colored vote was cast for prohibition. In Brookshire this touching incident occurred: An old colored woman, a W. C. T. U. worker, saw a white man whom she knew to be an "anti" escorting her son to the polling booth. Seized with a righteous indignation, she advanced and said: "White man, we ain't botherin' you, but you can't vote my boy! If he owes you for his poll tax I'll pay you. I've tried to raise him right, an' if he don't vote right today he won't vote at all!" Cheers of "Hurrah for Hannah!" drowned the admonitions she delivered to the man, but it is said the boy "voted right."

The greatest victory of one single day was achieved on March 7 when the three populous counties of Grayson, Wood and Camp fell into line. Even the prohibitionists were surprised at the majority of 625 in Grayson which is the largest county, in point of population, in the state. Sherman and Denison both gave anti majorities, but the pro vote in the small towns and rural sections overbalanced the city vote. The women of the two cities worked valiantly. Mesdames Curtis and Zehner helped, as did the state president of the Thurman W. C. T. U. The women of Wood county were important factors in the campaign, and were aided by the women of Tyler, in an adjoining county, who held a week of prayer for the success of our cause in Wood, and went to Mineola on election day to help at the polls. Camp county won by a small majority. We have no union in this county. In Llano county the anti's won by a few votes. On the ninth of March Morris county went "dry" by more than 600. As this county is largely populated with negroes, and as there is not a W. C. T. U. in the county the signal victory is evidently due in a great measure to the "poll tax qualifications" which became the law a short time ago. Several other counties are engaged in campaigns at present, and our workers are in demand.

The Unions.

San Angelo union has placed a germ-proof filter at the High School at a cost of $37, and has the money on hand to erect a drinking fountain on the public square. This union a year ago numbered thirteen inactive members. Mrs. Curtis visited them last September and gave a series of lectures, sandwiched with a daily mothers' meeting, with the following results: They have 115 active and fifty-five honorary members, with an L. T. L. of fifty-three members; are carrying on three ward Sunday schools composed of ninety-two children who had hitherto been neglected. They take ninety-nine copies of "The Texas White Ribbon" and fourteen Union Signals. The jail committee visits the prisoners once a week, and on Thanksgiving Day and Christmas the union served these unfortunates with dinner.

Alvin union recently gave a spectular entertainment called "The Advertising Girls" which netted $18.

Granbury union gave a reception to Miss Mosher, at the home of Mrs. Hannaford. All were delighted with Miss Mosher's talk. As a result of her visit to Granbury eight members were added to the already large union. Miss Mosher's work in Stephenville was seriously hampered by inclement weather, but she left a Y composed of the brightest and best girls of the place.

Terrell union will undertake to furnish a "Willard Alcove" in the city public library which is in contemplation.

Kaufman county will hold a convention at Forney, April 9, 10 and 11. The county union is composed of Terrell, Forney, Mabank and Lawrence unions.

Pennsylvania.

H. Frances Jones, Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 23.—The pressing needs of the times demand an all-round activity, and we find the workers everywhere alert. Another "fire on Sumter" was the bill for liquors in parks, and our vigilant committee came off victorious.

MRS. KATHERINE DEY HAUCK.
Publisher "W. C. T. U. Bulletin."

We are kept up-to-date by our zealous publisher of "The Bulletin" and county press superintendent, Mrs. Katherine Dey Hauck. "With the White-Ribboners" in "Every Saturday's Philadelphia Press," and other items reported constantly, we know what's doing here, there and everywhere.

The Pennsylvania Woman's Press Association headquarters are in Philadelphia. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, our World's and National superintendent of School Savings Banks, is president, and Mrs. Katherine Dey Hauck is recording secretary. Such a splendid pair will note good news continually. We send the following from Mrs. Hauck:

"When Representative Yates, of Philadelphia, introduced into the legislature a bill to allow the sale of liquor in parks of cities of the first class, he little thought what a hornet's nest he was stirring up. Every union, church, Sunday-school and young people's meeting sent protests. Every newspaper in Philadelphia spoke against it, and trainloads of people went up to Harrisburg to speak against it. Mr. Yates was glad to recommend to the committee that it be adversely reported.

"The brewers said that the Germans wanted liquor in the park. A Lutheran clergyman said he represented the Germans, and he was happy to say that his parishioners did not desire the beautiful Fairmount Park to be turned into a beer garden.

"There is much rejoicing in Philadelphia because the park will remain safe and clean.

"Men who are very fond of their glass spoke strongly against Yates and his bill, saying: 'If a man is very thirsty, there are plenty of places where he may get a drink without going to the park'."

A Growing Membership in Illinois.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

Chicago, March 23.—The series of county institutes arranged for the state are now in progress. Besides our own workers, Miss Ensign and Miss Quinby, of Ohio, and Miss Mahan, of Missouri, are engaged, the two latter being already in the field. As a result of one week's work we have reported five new unions. Of these Miss Brehm organized one at Moline, with forty-nine active and nine honorary members, and Miss Quinby at Sumner, with forty members.

There is a manifest interest in the principles and work of the W. C. T. U. and many are gladly taking it up. This, with the continual evidence that is coming from all directions, indicates a large gain in membership for the year.

There is also unusual activity in many of the departments. Medal Contest, Mother's Work, Enforcement of Law, Franchise and Institute Work are developing unusual interest. We have learned in Illinois not only how to take banners but how to keep them.

Interest is centering at present on bills before the state legislature, in which we are interested. Particularly the local option, anti-cigaret, and franchise bills. The bill for raising the age of consent was lost. This is not to the credit of the lawmakers of Illinois and when women become "constituents" some questions will be asked, that may be difficult to answer.

Successful Mission Home in Savannah.

Isabella W. Parks, Correspondent.

Atlanta, Ga., March 5.—The Savannah W. C. T. U. is doing fine work with its Mission Home, which has already been described. Mr. J. R. McCornica, who had been engaged in work of this kind for eighteen years, was called by the Savannah union to take charge of their mission and is making a success of the work. Evangelistic meetings are held every night in chapel with an average attendance of thirty to forty. Next to the chapel is a library and reading room, to which all are welcome. Across the hall is a dining-room where good meals are served for fifteen cents and every Saturday night free supper is served after the evangelistic meeting. On the second floor are the rooms of the superintendent and his family and dormitory for women where good beds are furnished at fifteen cents a night or seventy-five cents a week. On this floor also are a parlor and reading room. On the third floor is the dormitory for men.

In the rear of the main building is a house containing thirty beds, which are furnished free to men who have no money, if the applicants are sober when they apply. Free meals are also given those who have no money and those in charge of the work say that no deserving man or woman is turned away when asking for food or lodging.

Under the leadership of its earnest and devoted president, Mrs. R. V. Hardeman, the Macon union gave an "At Home" on the evening of March 3. The reception was given in the handsome new Y. M. C. A. building.

Hon. Dupont Guerry, late prohibition candidate for governor, was master of ceremonies and made what is reported to be "one of the finest expositions of W. C. T. U. principles, objects and successes ever listened to in the city."

The two unions of Macon and East Macon are very much alive and are doing a work which cannot be measured now. They expect to have Mrs. Unruh for four days in April.

Miss Tinling's brief visit in our state accomplished much good. As a speaker and worker, Miss Tinling is very popular. She had good audiences except where heavy rains interfered and she added many members to the local unions.

Legislation in the Old North State.

S. S. White, Correspondent.

Guilford College, N. C., March 23.—Now that the state legislature of North Carolina has adjourned, we are ready to state definitely its action in regard to the temperance question. Two bills were presented before that body endeavoring to secure temperance legislation. The Loudon bill, while not strictly a prohibition measure, was so framed and made such strictures upon the liquor traffic that it received the support of all the better element of our state, except the radical prohibitionists.

MISS CHRISTINE TINLING.

Of course, the whisky men were opposed to the same and kept their lawyer on the field all the time. This bill failed to become law, and in its stead there is now upon our statute books, the Watts bill, which limits the manufacture and sale of liquor to incorporated towns, just as the Loudon bill did, but fails to specify how large a town must be before it can be incorporated, which the Loudon bill very explicitly stated.

As a result of the Watts bill, we shall be very much helped in the removal of the country distillery, which has been, and is, one of the greatest pest-breeders in our state. Even before the close of the legislature a few of these country distilleries succeeded in being incorporated, but the majority of them are doomed. In fact, only those secured incorporation whose requests came first to the lower house. All those presented to the senate were turned down.

While the Watts bill is better than what we had before, the temperance element is by no means satisfied, and the present agitation has but revealed to us the strength of the temperance sentiment in our state. The fight is on, and we believe that this is but a harbinger of better things for the Old North State.

Miss Christine Tinling spent two weeks in our state in February, with most excellent results. She seems to be just the woman for our section of the country, as no doubt she is for every other.

Number of active and honorary members enrolled by her, 137; number of pledges besides, 42; total number of addresses, 16; number of schools visited, 6.

This does not include two important points from which returns have not been received.

Miss Tinling very much endeared herself to our women at the state convention in October, hence her return was hailed with delight.

W. C. T. U. Chrysanthemum Show.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 23.—Preston W. C. T. U. gave an artistic setting to the principles and work of the organization, through the medium of its fourth annual chrysanthemum show. A corner of the Masonic hall was banked with home-grown chrysanthemums in variety almost equaling those from the greenhouse. On the opposite side were cut flowers and plants for sale, palms, ferns and chrysanthemums. A banana, a palm, a philodendron and an orchid, were among the plants loaned for ornamentation.

The six lower grades of the schools were invited to inspect the flowers and they responded, giving some songs. The beauty of the flowers was much appreciated, and the opportunity to emphasize W. C. T. U. standards may be imagined. The white ribbon could have no more fitting allies. A supper followed the afternoon's exercises, at which time twenty-five dollars were realized for the work. The credit of applying this plan to Preston's needs is due Mrs. A. A. Morgan, former president of the Preston union, now removed to Oklahoma, and to Miss Kate Little, the present treasurer. Besides being treasurer of Preston union Miss Little is flower mission superintendent, matron of the Rest room, superintendent of the L. T. L. and has faithfully worked for School Savings Banks, though as yet the school board has not adopted the system. She is district secretary of the Y and L. T. L., writes many articles on various phases of W. C. T. U. work, attends conventions, and, very naturally, reads, The Union Signal. A Chrysanthemum Show to such a woman was entirely possible.

MISS KATE LITTLE.

MRS. A. D. EDDY.

Mrs. Alta D. Eddy, president of Preston union, and also of Fillmore-Houston district, is a comparatively new worker, her district being just one year old; but, as district press superintendent, she has done a valuable work securing five new superintendents, and in general pushing the claims of the W. C. T. U. with an intelligent enthusiasm that has resulted in a firm foundation for the district. School Savings Banks, and other departments, sixteen in all, have received a due share of attention from this district in the extreme southeastern corner of the state.

Activity in Montana.

Mrs. Wm. E. Currah, Correspondent.

Butte, Mont., March 23.—W. C. T. U. and other philanthropic effort is being pushed in our part of the west as never before, and with corresponding results.

Mrs. Kuhl, National superintendent of Work Among Miners, has done successful work in Montana. In Helena her Sabbath service resulted in seven new members.

Helena and Butte have observed many of our Red Letter days.

Butte and Anaconda unions, in company with the I. O. G. T., exchanged courtesies, and held a grand temperance rally at each place. Ten new members were secured at Butte. Captain Dutton, the leader, pledged between 250 and 300 to total abstinence, and stated that of that number more were from among the drinking men than he had pledged at any other point in Montana. An effort to establish a permanent work among the newsboys of our city is an outgrowth of these meetings.

Anaconda, Stevensville and Great Falls hope to engage Colonel Holt, whose work in the west has been gloriously successful. Other unions will have Miss Emma Page, of Olympia, Wash., who passes through out state to Wyoming this month.

Missoula has been doubly active, circulating petitions and pressing the foe since Mrs. Mott, one of their beloved and respected members, and first president of the L. T. L., was brutally murdered by her husband while crazed with drink. Four shots lodged in her body and one missed its mark. As the mother lay in the casket, with her white bow on her breast, one of her two orphaned children, taking a farewell look, said, "Why, she has it on yet."

Rev. Alice Barnes lately visited the unions at Helena, East Helena, Bozeman and Livingston, greatly encouraging and strengthening the members.

Rev. Bovard, of St. Paul's M. E. Church, of Helena, spoke at the memorial meeting at East Helena, and Mrs. I. N. Smith added a beautiful tribute to the beloved memory of our dear "Mother" Currah.

The Helena union is pushing medal contest work. They have had one contest and will hold another this week. Bozeman union is about to purchase a drinking fountain, at a cost of $200, which they will present to the city, the city agreeing to set it and furnish it with water.

Livingston union is small, but it is bravely planning for our next convention.

An ideal memorial service was held by Kalispell union in the opera house, which was filled to its utmost capacity. Six ministers of different denominations took part in the exercises. The presentation of Y work by Miss Fingado, assisted by eight young ladies, was commented on favorably by the local press. Four dollars was contributed to the memorial fund by the Y's and W's of Kalispell. Some unions have not yet reported. It is sincerely hoped that Montana's record of the past two years will be kept up, with a contribution to this fund from each union in the state.

Dominion Convention in Ottawa.

Special Correspondence.

Toronto, Canada, March 21.—The Dominion W. C. T. U. had hoped to hold its next convention in Vancouver, British Columbia, but in view of the difficulty experienced in procuring reasonable railroad rates, has been obliged very regretfully to postpone the visit to that province. A very cordial invitation extended by the Ottawa union to meet there in the fall has been gratefully accepted.

Temperance Awakening in Tennessee.

Mrs. M. E. Gould, Correspondent.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 23.—With profound thanksgiving to God we call upon all temperance people everywhere to rejoice with us over the wonderful tidal wave of temperance which is just now sweeping over our beloved state.

The passage of the "Adams Bill," making it possible to vote saloons out of all towns of 5,000 population and under, leaves only eight cities which have no such local option privileges. The rapidity with which cities are voting "dry" under this law, and the enormous majorities they are giving against the saloon is astonishing. Only one city has lost in this contest—Winchester—which went "wet" through its purchaseable colored vote. In many instances the liquor men give up the fight before election day and do not go near the polls. Never before in the history of the state has such an interest been taken in prohibition, not excepting the amendment campaign some years ago.

REV. E. O. TAYLOR, D. D.

Encouraged by this success, petitions are now deluging the legislature from every part of the state asking that the eight large cities which do not come within the scope of the Adams law, be also given the privilege of voting on the saloon question. It is currently believed that the petitions will be granted, and if so, that some, if not all, of these cities will go dry.

It is impossible to describe the changed conditions, how apathy and prejudice have fled, how weak ones have taken on strength, how despair has changed to hope, how weary workers have been revived.

Many agencies have contributed to this glorious result. Much of it is due to the patient, persistent work of our white-ribboners through years of seed-sowing, to the work of the L. T. L., to temperance teaching in the Sunday schools, and to the maintaining of the Scientific Temperance Instruction law.

Our state W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. S. M. Holman, has been in the thick of this fight and her influence is felt at the Capitol. The Anti-Saloon League, through its efficient superintendent, Rev. John Royal Harris, has furnished a powerful political organization through which an assembly favorable to temperance legislation was elected.

Rev. E. O. Taylor, D. D., of Boston, Mass., came into the state more than five months ago to voice the public weal. Since that time he has been speaking continuously, discussing "American Citizenship" and involving the basic principles in science, on which temperance legislation should be built. All the large cities except Memphis, and many of the smaller ones, have had his course of lectures. He is the one man who has been able to arrest the attention of the thinking people, lifting the subject out of the commonplace and resting it upon scientific fact. He is simple, clear and careful in his statements of scientific facts, and when he has thus cleared the way he precipitates a torrent of logic that carries the judgment upon its floodtide. Individual members of the Assembly acknowledge the influence of his discussions in securing the present legislation. The men in both branches who introduced and championed the temperance bills had heard his lecture on "God's Message in Science to Men Who Make Laws." His audiences are unparalleled in size, steadily increasing through a course of five to eight lectures.

The W. C. T. U. work has thus been greatly strengthened by giving it favor with thoughtful minds. The people have an increased knowledge of the meaning of Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools, and they realize the importance of a sound text-book on that subject. The departments of Anti-Narcotics and Social Purity have received great impetus through Dr. Taylor's labors. He goes from our state to work in Florida.

Oregon Workers Busy.

Achsa M. Morris, Correspondent.

Newberg, Ore., March 16.—The state executive committee met in Salem with Mrs. Helen D. Harford, president, in the chair. Sherman county's president sent a representative, and Douglas county's president was in attendance, a noteworthy occurrence, owing to the magnificent distances in Oregon.

A gold medal contest was a feature of the meeting. A gold medal contest between Newberg and Dayton was held at the latter place March 2.

Mrs. Steele, president of Marion county, made an official visit to the town of Marion, on World's Temperance Sunday, and gleaned after the morning sermon with the following results: Pledge signers—children, thirty-four; adults, eighty-four, and re-organized the W. C. T. U. with twenty-one active and seven honorary members. Turner, the home of Mrs. Steele, observed World's Temperance Sunday, with a fine program in the Bible School and a fine sermon by the Methodist Episcopal clergyman.

Salem secured the services of Maj. Hilton for one week recently, resulting in ninety-one additions to the active membership of the union, and several honoraries. Woodburn and Woodburn Rural each have added new members to their roll, and both have flourishing L. T. L.'s and their presidents say: "We are as busy as a hive of bees."

Newberg held a perlor meeting recently, which was addressed by Miss Alice Mendenhall, pastor of Friends' church, on the subject of home training. A paper, subject, "Danger of Alcohol in Medicine," was read by Dr. Clough.

Frances E. Willard L. T. L. holds a public meeting every month. They held a Frances E. Willard memorial service, giving illustrations of their class work, recitations, mottoes, etc. The attendance was good and several new members added to the list. Mrs. Hattie Wolfe is their leader.

Douglas county held an institute at Myrtle Creek in February, with good results. County President Miss Ida Marsters gave a carefully prepared address which was encouraging to the workers. One feature of the institute was an address on Physical Culture, followed by free discussions concerning proper exercise, foods and drinks. The young people assisted in the meetings with songs and recitations. A gold medal contest was held, Miss Miller, of Roseburg, winning the medal.

Brownsville has a country union, covering a territory four miles wide. The meetings are held at the homes of the members. They have a membership of twenty-three active and several honoraries, have a Y and an L. T. L. branch. They have invited the county convention to meet with them in September.

In Riddle the temperance ticket was elected, the state president having been there and helped on with the good work. They report four active members and one honorary member added to the union at the close of Miss Louise Hollister's address.

Yamhill county institute was held March 3 and 4 in McMinnville. Our state president was in charge. The union was much strengthened and will take up some of the plans suggested by our president.

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

The Matter of Dues.

My Dear Young Women:—It may seem to you early to begin talking about collecting dues, but when we remember that notwithstanding the fact that I have given this subject a great deal of attention since I became your General Secretary—writing to state presidents and state treasurers concerning it—twenty states failed to report Y dues separately even last year. In one sense there is, of course, no reason why we should know our membership apart from the parent organization, for the Y is but a rudimentary W. C. T. U., but when each division of our army reports in convention its numbers, growth, etc., and beautiful banners are offered to the country making the largest gains, we feel as though we should like to have a definite standing and be able to compete for the prize. Is it not so?

I do not like to write here the names of those states which failed to report, but will not each state secretary immediately ascertain in which list her state stands and take steps to find out where the trouble lies? It may be that the dereliction is with local treasurers; that the Y's do not report as Y's; or that county treasurers are at fault instead of the state. I am inclined to think this is true in some instances, at least, for the lists sent to me by state secretaries are frequently higher than those forwarded to Mrs. Barker, the National treasurer. Before making out my own report I always ask Mrs. Barker to give me these lists. Now, it means a good deal of work for you to secure all this information and set things to rights, but I am sure that each state secretary will take considerable pride in finding out the exact status in her domain, and increase her figures in this way, as well as in every other way she can. I am confident that 20,000 young women could be shown as identified with the Branch if we could only succeed in collecting and properly reporting all dues.

I am highly gratified over the letters that have been received regarding the observance of April 14. We shall surely have a very general observance of the day, and I believe the largest missionary fund we have ever raised will be sent to Mrs. Mary Campbell-Wells.

To realize all these hopes and possibilities, I am, as ever, yours,

Clara Parrish Wright.

An Appeal

To the Y's of America to Observe the Birthday of the Honorary Secretary, Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, as World's Missionary Day.

My Dear Young Women:—You are aware that the missionary sent to Japan by the World's W. C. T. U., last September, Miss Kara Smart, is one of our very own—our former Y secretary of South Dakota.

You know of her splendid work in her own state, and from her recent Union Signal letters you have learned of some of the marvelous things she has already accomplished in Japan. Her opportunities for usefulness are simply boundless, as is evidenced by the recognition already accorded her by the peeresses of the empire, but while the possibilities of our work are limitless, her need of money is limitless also, and this letter, which goes to every Y in the United States, is to ask your society to help forward her—or our—plans. The World's treasurer sends her a sum generously adequate to cover all personal expenses ($60 per month), but in order to make her work abundantly effective she must have the very best interpreter than can be procured, which will cost not less than $360 a year, and for the translation of literature, for which also hundreds of dollars could and should be used. Now I have promised her that if you will co-operate with me we of the United States will raise the money to pay for her interpreter, while the young women of Great Britain have been asked to raise the funds for the translation of literature.

The plan that I have suggested is that on April 14th you will give the program outlined in the Y Year Book, or else "At the White Queen's Court" (to be had of the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, 184 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill., for 10 cents), and send the proceeds to Mrs. Mary Campbell-Wells, 316 East Detroit avenue, Monmouth, Ill.

I believe, dear young women, that this appeal to you to help Miss Smart and the thousands of Japanese girls already enlisted will not be in vain. In this faith I am yours in our beautiful bonds,

Clara Parrish-Wright.

P. S.—Please write me when your plans are laid; also report the results of your meeting after April 14.

Representation of the Masterpieces of Art.

By Minnie Barker Horning.

Perhaps some local union would like to follow the plan for the "good of the order" worked out by the Evanston Y in a recent meeting.

The program committee prepared in advance ten slips of paper, on each of which was written the name of a well known painting. There were also many blank slips. The committee also collected and got ready all the costumes necessary for tableaux to represent these ten pictures. The costumes and slips were on hand and all ready at the place of the meeting of the union. This particular Y at each meeting spends one hour in business and one hour in social enjoyment, and always adjourns at the close of the first hour in order that the second may be free from the restraint incident to an organized body. Upon adjournment these slips were passed round, and those drawing the printed ones were expected to arrange the imitative picture, they to choose their own helpers. The committee had also provided copies of the pictures to be presented, and, so far as possible, colored copies. To each person present was given a typewritten paper with numbers from one to ten and a place for the name of the picture, also the name of the artist. These were for the guessing of the presentation. Twenty points could be made, as one point was given for each picture properly guessed and one point for the artist's name. Those taking part could also join in the guessing if they desired to do so, as they were given only the name of their own picture. In that space they wrote "mine," and their nineteen points counted the same as the twenty of the lookers-on.

Much amusement was given by the representation. "Baby Stuart" was drawn by a chubby-faced girl who puffed her cheeks out in exaggeration of the pretty baby. "Hosea" fell to the lot of a tall, lanky girl who easily took the part in her drapery of sheets. The most attractive pictures were "The Gleaners" and "The Song of the Lark," as they were the most artistic in coloring and prose.

This is the list as given:

"The Gleaners," Millet; "The Song of the Lark, Breton; "The First Step," Millet; "Baby Stuart," Van Dyck; "Beatrice Cenci," Guido Reni; "Hosea," Sargent; "The Man with the Hoe," Millet; "The Angelus," Millet; "The Sistine Madonna," Raphael; "The Haymaker," Aden.

The list need not be limited to these ten subjects, as there are many others that lend themselves to an easy reproduction by living subjects.

The prize, "a sketch of the life of Frances E. Willard," by Amy Swankie-Cameron, was given, and as two winners tied on eighteen points, two copies of the booklet were presented.

Evanston, Ill.

Gleanings.

Massachusetts Y's will hold their state conference in May.

After being afield two or three days only, Miss Rose A. Davison, of Colorado, reports a new Y and a new Y branch!

Mrs. Schuyler C. Long, of Las Vegas, New Mexico, is planning for a Y in that city, which will be the first in the territory.

Morgan College, Md. (colored), has one of the finest Y's in the state, the honoraries taking active interest in the work.

Mrs. Newcomb-Comings, Michigan's state secretary, is with her husband in Tampa, Florida, where they will probably locate.

Miss Chase intends to present a banner this year to the county W. C. T. U. president who organizes the largest number of Y's.

Many of the local W. C. T. U.'s of West Virginia are asking the state secretary for literature that will enable them to organize Y's themselves.

Mrs. Cora Larimore-Trippet, one of our World's and National Associates, is living at Los Angeles, Cal., instead of in Michigan, as has been previously reported.

One of Missouri's young women organizers, Miss Permelia C. Mahan, taught parliamentary law at her alma mater, the Columbia School of Oratory, Chicago, during March.

Mrs. Almena Parker McDonald organized a new Y at Bosworth, Mo., March 9. As it is the only young people's organization in the town, we hope for good things.

The Y's of North Dakota are to have the June issue of the Bulletin, which Mrs. Grover, state secretary, hopes to make very helpful to the young people of the state.

Missouri has a new Y at Lamar, and they have gone to work in earnest. Their first effort was to assist the W. C. T. U. in observing Miss Willard's heavenly birthday.

Mrs. Ella M. Thacher, National superintendent of Work Among Soldiers and Sailors, is working in Delaware. She writes the General Secretary that she does not expect to forget the Y's while there.

The Richmond, Va., Y, Mrs. G. M. Jobson, president, celebrated its sixteenth birthday on the 16th inst., issuing most artistic cards of invitation and rendering a fine program. This society is one of the most aggressive in the state.

The spirit of co-operation continues to grow in Maryland, where it always has taken first rank. Formerly the Endeavorers were the ones principally interested, but now Miss Hammond has also many calls to speak before Epworth Leagues.

All Y's are rejoicing over the miraculous escape from death of Miss Laura Smith, our Virginia state secretary, who was so terribly burned last month. Mrs. Hoge, state president, is doing her work, having sent two letters to each Y in the state during the intervening time.

Miss Alice H. Moore, Maine's devoted young organizer, will be afield, with scarcely a vacation day, until June 15th. Recently she has organized two new Y's, one at Winter Harbor and another at Harrington, besides adding many new members to unions already formed.

Although promoted to the position of state organizer, Mrs. Sena Hartzell Wallace, Kansas' former Y secretary, has lost none of her interest in the young people. She recently organized three Y's in the sixth district of her state, one at Luray, one at Zurich and one at Russell.

Miss Lubelle Patrick, of Maine, is trying a new plan in the Y column of the state paper. The department is to be called "The Y Worker's Exchange." Questions from the Y concerning the difficulties they meet are requested and printed one month, and then other societies are to answer out of their own experiences. This will certainly be a real help.

Belona, Va., a country place where there is a boarding school for girls, has a Y, organized in December by Mrs. Newton. A short time ago Mr. and Mrs. Hoge visited them and every boarding pupil "belongs," as well as some outside the school. The principal is president, too. Another new Y that is doing most excellent work is at Virginia Beach.

"Our New Y" and "The Y Outlook" were topics discussed at the last quarterly meeting of the Baltimore City W. C. T. U. Miss Hammond, state secretary, writes: "My own union (that is, the first Y that "graduated" into a W last year) and "our daughters" served the lunch. The daughters have beaten the mothers in membership; last year we paid for seventy-six only, and the new Y now has ninety!" Miss Hammond spoke at four Willard memorial meetings.

The Y of Tempe, Ariz., on the last temperance Sunday gave a Sunday school rally. A choir of twelve young girls sang four selections from the "White Ribbon Hymnal," which were interspersed with recitations. Every pastor was on the platform, the house was full and the enthusiasm ran high. The next temperance Sunday they intend to have a representative in each Sunday school to secure signatures to the pledge. Tempe is the home of Mrs. Etta B. Johnson, state Y secretary.

The "Narcissa White Kinney" Y of New Castle, Pa., Mrs. Mary P. Crawford, president, has again given to the city this year a free lecture course, engaging such talent as Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, Miss Belle Kearney, O. W. Stewart, John G. Wooley, William F. P. Ferguson and Dr. C. H. Mead. This society is very enthusiastic over Miss Anna Quinby, of Ohio, who recently spent a week with them. It is not surprising that such a society is able to maintain free reading and rest rooms that are always open.

Instead of holding a rummage sale again this year for the purpose of raising the $800 necessary to keep open their rooms for working girls, the Lynn, Mass., Y will solicit the money—a big step in advance, in which they must succeed, because business men never fail to contribute to an institution that does the wonderful uplifting work this is doing. Until a society has proved what it can do along these lines it must resort to all sorts of schemes to raise money, but it is not so when it has thoroughly demonstrated its work.

Colored Industrial Home and School.

MRS. FRANCES A. JOSEPH, president of the Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana, and founder of the Colored Industrial School at New Orleans, has long been a recognized force in the growing movement for the uplifting of the colored race. Unlike most colored women of culture she has remained in the south among her own people, contributing her rare gifts of heart and mind to an unostentatious, practical service that is already reaping large reward.

The Colored Industrial School, which was formally opened on June 15, 1902, is working along the same broad lines that characterize the Tuskegee institute. Through its Home department it is endeavoring to check the tendency towards crime in the younger negroes by reclaiming non-criminal waifs to a self-supporting intelligent citizenship.

MRS. FRANCES A. JOSEPH.

Of her efforts to combat the crime-breeding idleness prevalent among the colored youth, Mrs. Joseph says:

"The work is not experimental with me. I have for years been a regular and constant visitor at the jails and houses of detention, and have noticed how easy it is for a boy who is thrust into these places to become a hardened criminal almost before he knows it. It has seemed to me for a long time that it is the wisest and the best policy to build schools where these young ones can acquire something in the way of practical education. . . .

"My plan is to give them something to do; to fit them for some place in the world; to solve the servant problem by teaching them the useful and necessary duties of the household. It is better that they should be taught the duties which are patent to all of us than that they be arrested again and again for violations of ordinances and be herded with hardened criminals. It is better that they should be taught some useful occupation than that they should be permitted to lie around the streets and wharves, where temptation to mischief is almost irresistible. . . . What would be the result if all the idle colored boys and girls were given employment? What would be the result if, instead of an idle, floating population of this kind, it would be a matter of remark were a colored boy or girl seen loitering around? I leave it to those men and women who have made a study of the servant problem, and to those in charge of the jails and penitentiaries to say."

The school is beautifully situated within five miles of the city of New Orleans, on the celebrated driveway, Gentilly Road. Its main building, with its spacious rooms and verandas and its numerous attendant cottages, is a veritable country manor. One hundred and five acres furnish sufficient farm lands for carrying out the industrial features of the school, floriculture being a favorite branch of study. The English course of study and the domestic sciences are open to all pupils. The principles of the W. C. T. U. are carried out, and every child is being earnestly trained for a temperate life of usefulness and high service.

Mrs. Joseph's field of work has been most extensive, and she is widely known as a prison evangelist. Through her efforts fully 2,000 men have found the joy of right living. Added to her general supervision of many departments of reform, Mrs. Joseph has found time to give her personal attention to the individual needs of her people. Like the Master whom she follows so faithfully, she gives her services "without money and without price."

The Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association.

By Jane A. Stewart.

JUST within the entrance of a large, well-appointed book store, on a prominent corner of Philadelphia's central business section, my attention was arrested by a sign on the side of a wooden case;

"TEMPERANCE LITERAURTE. TAKE ONE."

Upon examination, I found that the box was well stocked with copies of temperance sermons, stories for old and young, catechisms and exercises, addresses, digests of anti-liquor laws, etc., and pleas for temperance work—an interesting, varied, and effective collection of temperance truth for quick digestion.

Upon inquiry I learned that the literature distribution thus conducted was in the hands of the Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association.

"And, by the way," added my informant, "the association is holding its regular monthly meeting in one of the halls upstairs today."

A few minutes later I was listening attentively to the grave discussion of the small but loyal and devoted group of temperance women—the central nucleus of the larger body within the great Presbyterian denomination—which is endeavoring so faithfully and consistently to uphold the standard of prohibition and total abstinence as a part of the religion of Christ, urging that the temperance reform should have a place in the thoughts and labors of the church equal with that of missions and other benevolences.

It was not surprising to note that most of the women wore white ribbons, and I immediately recognized in the chairman and leader, the president of the Philadelphia W. C. T. U., the wife of a Presbyterian clergyman of Philadelphia, Mrs. Anna C. Peacock. The recording secretary of the committee, Mrs. Henry, was another white ribbon local president, a minister's wife. With scarcely an exception, the entire official board of the Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association are consecrated W. C. T. U. workers.

The plans of this organization contain much suggestion and stimulus for those who are wondering how they may introduce the temperance leaven into the work of the church as a permanent and integral factor of the church organization.

The society was started a little more than a decade ago, as a result of the strong temperance sentiment which has characterized the Presbyterian denomination for nearly a century, and which has found its mouthpiece in the "Permanent Temperance Committee" of the Presbyterian General Assembly. The great representative body of Presbyterian ministers all over the country, instructs its committee to aim at "total abstinence from intoxicating liquors by the individual and the utter suppression of the traffic by the strong arm of the law."

In 1891 a group of earnest women, desirous of having a hand in the good work, headed by Mrs. Thomas McCauley, the late Mrs. Cornelia Scovell and Mrs. A. E. Law, called a meeting in the assembly room of the Publication House in Philadelphia and formed the Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association as an auxiliary to the General Assembly's permanent temperance committee. Doctor McCook gave the address, and a large group of women were enrolled in the organization. They adopted as their pledge the following form:

"I solemnly promise to abstain from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and to do all that the Lord shall indicate for the extinction of the liquor traffic."

A year later the work of the association was heartily indorsed by the General Assembly, which further recommended the general organization of the Presbyterian women.

Miss Willard was among the first speakers secured for public meetings. Her watchword, "Organization," has been the first aim of the association. It is planned that first, every synod shall have its committee, consisting of at least a president and secretary, to be annually appointed by the synod to which such committee shall report, and also to the woman's general executive committee once in three months; second, that each presbytery shall have its committee, consisting of at least a president and secretary, which shall report to the presbytery and to the woman's synodical committee once in three months; third, that each church shall have its committee, consisting of at least a president and secretary, which shall report to the session and to the Woman's Presbyterial Association once in three months. The plan of organization thus follows, link within link, that of the church as a whole.

While the Woman's Presbyterian Temperance Association is a tributary of the larger permanent temperance committee, it has its own channel and special stream. Its inclusive aim is to co-operate with the assembly's committee, which regards intemperance 'an evil so extraordinary in character as to demand specific and organized resistance," the expressed endeavor being from the pulpit, in the family and Sabbath school, and by every available agency to give sound temperance instruction, aiming at the formation of proper personal habits, at the correction of social drinking customs, and to secure by the ballot and by petition, needed temperance legislation. For this work women's committees in eight synods and forty presbyteries have been organized. The work, however, has been exceedingly slow, owing to the dead weight of indifference and apathy which must be lifted.

One of the chief and most successful efforts is the distribution of the temperance literature which is provided by the permanent committee in generous quantity. One can easily apprehend what a splendid influence the church temperance committee of women bring to bear in securing the use of unfermented wine at sacrament; in urging the observance of the temperance Sabbath by pastor, Sunday school and young people's societies; in soliciting the preaching of temperance sermons, in collecting subscriptions for temperance and legislative work; and in urging Christian men to vote for the prohibition of the liquor traffic. In the promotion of temperance instruction in the Sabbath school and in the public schools as well, their efforts have been wisely exerted.

Programs have been prepared for temperance meetings, and pledges supplied to the Sabbath schools. The association is not content with the temperance covenant, for total abstinence alone, but urges the anti-tobacco pledge upon all young men.

Probably its most significant effort is that which has been so ably presented by Mrs. H. C. Hildebrand, vice-president of the Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association, in an appeal to the women of the missionary societies on "The Relation of Temperance to Missions."

"It cannot be said that missionary work is one thing and temperance work another," says Mrs. Hildebrand. "They are only two aspects of the same cause, and the attempt to divide them is to weaken, if not fatally to cripple, the strength of both. As the missionary workers assist and pray for the success of the cause of temperance, they help forward in a direct and substantial manner their own special work. . . . It is upon the busy, the earnest missionary worker, with a sense of the imperishable value of souls, her opportunities for this work and her world-wide vision, that the temperance work falls with special obligation."

What the missionaries in the foreign field and the missionary workers at home can do by personal total abstinence, by study of the liquor problem, and by disseminating information as to the evils of the traffic which so greatly endangers and nullifies the direct evangelistic effort, is clearly put forth.

It is urged that the united voice of all the missionary societies in the country should be secured for "a united petition to the government, which has it in its power to limit and finally to destroy the wicked exportation of intoxicants to heathen countries, so that they have no further complicity in the colossal crime of debauching the nations of the earth. It is proposed thus to begin a movement towards the consolidation of the sentiment of American Christendom in such a protest as will constrain the government to give attention to a subject demanded alike by the interests of Christian civilization and by humanity.

If the Presbyterian Woman's Temperance Association existed for this sole aim, it could not live in vain.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter IV.

MR. BOYD was in every way a contrast to Hugh Brotherton, beside whom he looked small and shy. Looking at him with his delicate student's hand in the grip of some brawny collier, and noticing how that same grip was wont to make him wince, Hugh sometimes wondered what strange mischance had sent so sensitive a man to such a fate.

"I—I rather like it, do you know," said the vicar on one occasion, in reply to his curate's laughing condolences. "I mean, of course, the heartiness of the welcome, not the pain."

Hugh, looking quizzically at him, wondered whether the reply expressed a sly sense of humor, or genuine simplicity. However that might be, he soon learned that his vicar's hesitating habit of repeating the first word of a sentence was less a stammer than an unconscious device for gaining time for the expression of his thought in fitting terms. For the rest he showed himself to be considerate, self-denying, and almost as full of zeal as his curate. On the whole, after a few days spent in his society, Hugh decided that he liked and looked down upon "poor old Boyd," whom he secretly congratulated upon his choice of a colleague.

In truth, of the two men there seemed little room to doubt which was likely to prove the greater success. Hugh's voice and smile won him a welcome everywhere, and he left behind him no puzzled faces such as were wont to linger in the doorways while the women-folk watched the new vicar down their garden paths, at the close of his pastoral visits. Moreover, from his pulpit in the little mission-room, at the extreme end of the straggling parish, the curate hurled spiritual bomb-shells into the midst of a thrilled and delighted throng; but when Mr. Boyd had preached in Pitsmoor Church, morning and evening, for the second time, his bewildered flock, standing about in perplexed groups, discussed the parochial situation.

Leaning gloomily over his garden gate, with his gaze fixed on the blackened road outside, Enoch Light put it "fair and square" to his neighbor John.

"John," he said, "he've a-preached fower different times, fower different sermons, and what do you think to him?"

Leaning over the same gate, but from the opposite side, John Broadbent tilted his felt hat on one side, and slowly scratched his head. "Ask me what I think to the young one, and I'll own to the opinion that he've got a fairish grip of the real thing; but when ye come to Boyd hisself, I tell ye straight that I cannot mak' head nor tail of him."

Enoch laboriously nodded his approbation.

"Neither head nor tail," repeated John, his confidence in himself agreeably increased by that nod of Enoch's long head. "Look ye here, Enoch; my old woman and me have been goin' over what he've preached from that there pulpit so far. Tak' first Sunday mornin' arter he come. 'My friends,' say he, 'you've a right to know what a man who comes here to try to teach you hisself believes.' Very fair and honest it seemed in him to say so, and a right good confession o' faith he made. Ay, and a grand picture he drew o' the devil doin' all he knew to drag a man to his own place, and, over against that, the power o' the Almighty God to hold fast them that trust in Him. That's preachin' as sends a man home to his dinner comfortable in his mind that he'll be shaken over the mouth of hell, by one as has taken a good look in, if ever he starts to go wrong. My old woman and me liked it well. So, when we'd gotten our teas, we come up again, lookin' to get another proper warnin' on the same lines. 'Stead o' which, this here Mr. Boyd, he starts to lay it down that, after all, it aren't so much a terror to come as the Lord wants to threaten us with as to ma' us unnerstan' the livin' truth that every man of us carries his own heaven or his own hell about with him, and is for ever building of it up, and addin' to its joys or to its sorrows, as the case may be, as he goes along. 'Depend upon it,' he says, 'the place you are goin' to is the place you are fittin' yourself for by every act of your life,' he says."

"Ay," commented Enoch affirmatively. Critically as he had listened to John's able epitome of that sermon, he remembered every word of it no less accurately than his friend.

"Ay!" echoed John, "and there was more of the same sort. My old woman gives a twist to her shawl as much as to say that she was gettin' fair doited wi' him. Still, when we come to reckon it all oop at home, we made out to see that he might ha' knowed hisself what he meant; though he hadn't no ways made it plain to us. But when yesterday comes, he scatters us all abroad again. For see, he starts to preach a temperance sermon, which was all the amends he could make, considerin'!"

He spoke with meaning, for on the previous Monday the usual temperance meeting had been omitted for the first time.

Enoch nodded lugubriously.

"Sixty-five years have I lived in Pitsmoor, man and boy, and for a matter of forty, never have I missed a temperance meetin' of a Monday night till the Monday in last week. I doubt it'll take him all his time to make amends for that," he said gloomily.

John shook his head in moody sympathy.

"It will that; but in a manner o' speakin', his lukewarmness over the meetin' gave the more power to his sermon. There was many a one as felt right lifted up to hear him come out wi' such a clear testimony. After all the onsanctified rejicin's over the breakdown o' the temperance meetin' by some as needn't be mentioned, it did a man good to listen. There was more than Tummas Windle as sat and looked right sickly to hear him. Many a one noticed it; but I declare to you, that from where me and my old woman sat, we could see Tummas smile all over his face, when towards the latter end this here Mr. Boyd looks down so earnest like out of pulpit, and says he: 'But believe me, friends, when all's said and done, there's worse sins than gettin' drunk,' he says. 'Drunkenness is bad,' he says, 'very bad! God forbid that I should seem to make light of it; but many a drunkard is ashamed of his drunkenness when he comes to look back upon it in the mornin'. And how long is it since some o' you sober, righteous, and godly men and women felt ashamed of your envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness?' he says."

It was Enoch's turn to push up his hat, and scratch the side of his head uneasily.

"I seemed to see some sort of a meanin' underneath it all; but when all's said and done, it's downright dangerous teachin' is that. He wants experience, that's what he wants. He's short of experience, and it's what this parish can't do with. We want that sort of a man as can draw a line, and says he: 'Now, there's your line. This here side's right, and that there side's wrong.' Tak' which side he will, a man knows where he's goin' under preachin' like that. But when your parson tells you straight that it taks' him all his time to draw the line for hisself, let alone drawin' it for you, where are ye? That's what I want to know. Where are ye?"

"Ay!" assented John, with unwonted energy; "and when, after gettin' ye fair doity wi' his 'other side of the question,' he finishes all oop wi': 'Friends, I don't lay down no hard-and-fast rule for men as is, many of 'em, older than I am; but after lookin' at it all round, I give you my opinion, I may be wrong, but I don't think so.'"

"That's him," cried Enoch fretfully; "and when it comes to such like talk, I gi' him oop! What right have he to be a parson and not sure yet whether his opinions is right or wrong? And if so he aren't sure about a thing hisself, where's the use of givin' his idees upon it to the likes of us? It aren't what we're used to, isn't that. It's foolish wark, and what we can't do with."

He turned, without another word, and made his way stiffly up the garden path, leaving his friend to lift himself from the gate and prepare to plod homeward with a troubled face. Yet, notwithstanding their lugubrious mood, neither was absolutely comfortless, for the temperance meeting was not to be omitted for the second time. It was the curate who, in conversation with Enoch, had discovered the wrong done to the parish by that omission.

"Well, the fact is, I don't believe the vicar ever dreamed of having a temperance meeting every week. For a little place like this, it's rather often, don't you think?"

"No, it aren't," said Enoch, with laconic decision.

Enthusiastic advocate of total abstinence though he was, Hugh looked up in some surprise.

"It aren't that!" repeated Enoch, with an expressive nod. "Look 'ee here, sir, it's what we want. Tell that to Mr. Boyd from Enoch Light. Temperance meetin's is what most on us wants."

There was concentrated meaning in the old man's tone, and not many hours had passed before the eager curate repeated the hint to the vicar. Chiefly through Hugh's spirited advocacy, the temperance meeting for the following Monday was arranged forthwith.

"Perhaps you had better do some special visiting with a view to working it up," suggested Mr. Boyd. "I understand that, in Pittsmoor, it isn't enough simply to give notice of a meeting; they like to be asked, individually, to come."

"Oh, I'll ask 'em," said Hugh, vigorously. "Never fear; I'll ask 'em to come. Windle must be got there somehow, and John Stone. Then there's Billy Sellers" ticking Billy off on his second finger, "the two Widgery's, and Smith. Oh, and a lot more that I can go for, as soon as I get a look at my book."

"Very well; I know that you are longing to have your fling on that question. Suppose you come on first with a twenty or thirty minutes' address. I'll follow for another ten or, at the most, fifteen. Quite long enough; we won't keep it up late."

True to his word, Hugh visited unflaggingly during two long, hot afternoons. Then, the preliminary work being done, he went home to prepare a slashing address. Both Windle and Sellers had promised readily, and shamelessly, to come; those suspicious characters, Smith and Stone, opined that "happen they might drop in," and Sam Widgery the younger had undertaken to see about it. Hugh, in his experience, congratulated himself on having caught them when the pit was "playing." Still, notwithstanding the defection of all these worthies, Monday night proved to be Hugh's opportunity. Long before the hour announced for opening the meeting, the little parish room was packed to the door. When, at the chairman's request, Hugh stood up to give his address, there was a look of concentrated attention upon each upturned face that sent a thrill of exhilaration through his veins. With the authority of youth, and of unquestioning conviction, he made his opening proposition, and paused for the expected round of applause. Not a sound broke the stillness of the listening room, not by the quiver of an eyelid did Pitsmoor relax the immovability of its attentive expression. The moment might have tried the self-possession of most men, but the quick-witted curate at once grasped its significance. Slowly and with deliberate emphasis he repeated, word for word, his trusty proposition, and again he paused. This time it brought down the house. Given a proposition of a sufficiently obvious character, Pitsmoor seldom failed to respond to a judicious repetition, but the speaker who was willing to content himself with the single enunciation of a truth was suspected of a feebleness of conviction that went far to deprive his utterances of any claim to serious consideration. Besides, the primary statement of a proposition counted for nothing, or, at most, for an indication to the native mind of the direction in which it was invited to turn its attention. Having accomplished this end, the popular orator was wont to pause and grasp his chin. Then, with pointed deliberation, he allowed a humorously appreciative eye to wander over the impenetrable density of the listening faces. It was at that moment that the audience was wont to rouse itself. An observant speaker might even here and there detect a glimmer of expectancy in the dim eyes that peered out from under furrowed brows. The keener intellects had grasped the fact that a point was at hand. If the point involved a joke, before overtaking the pleasantry, it behooved the speaker to allow a slow, broad smile to overspread his face. When, for the second time, the point was reached, Pitsmoor, not unfrequently, would have the speaker's meaning in a twinkling, and would respond thereto with the cautious smile that once incited a flippant stranger to declare that he heard on every side the crack of unaccustomed jaws. That was mere ribaldry. If Pitsmoor smiled with difficulty, it was not unwilling to smile on sufficient provocation.

That night Hugh Brotherton made himself a reputation. With all the fervor of youth, of sincerity, and of an overmastering desire to excel, he pleaded the cause of total abstinence, "if not for your own, then for your son's, your father's, your brother's, your neighbor's, your children's sakes." Old eyes glistened with emotion, and faded cheeks flushed as, with necks craned forward, amid breathless silence, as one man they listened. Even Dr. Mann seemed interested, albeit he watched the young speaker with a curious smile. Strolling in late, he had taken up a position just inside the door, with his hands in his pockets and his back against the wall. If not unconscious of the sensation caused by his presence, he was quite indifferent to it. The curate spoke for forty minutes, and the vicar contented himself with adding a few words. Even within these narrow limits he did not escape the misfortune of recalling the fretful furrows of perplexity to rows upon rows of aged faces. Even Hugh said within himself that poor old Boyd was spoiling the tone of the meeting. As the vicar resumed his seat, his younger colleague sprang from the platform, pledge-book in hand. At the same moment his audience rose en masse and made, with complacent satisfaction, for the door. Within the space of three minutes the vicar, the curate, Enoch, the doctor, and the door-keeper were in possession of an empty room, and not a single pledge had been taken.

"Pledged abstainers to a man!" uttered Hugh, returning from the door, "and, with the exception of what Enoch estimates as 'an odd dozen,' the entire adult population was here!"

"A dozen or thereabout," nodded the door-keeper affirmatively; "that's the dozen 'at drinks."

Hugh sat down and laughed away the poignancy of his disappointment, but Enoch went home quite huffed.

"Sound! Ay, he's sound! I've gotten nought to say to the contrary. Sounder than Boyd hisself, I doubt, but I cannot fashion to understand either the one or the other of 'em. Here's a parish of pledged abstainers, barrin' an odd dozen as never were brought in, and 'Man!' he says, 'what possessed you to tell me that what you wanted was a temperance meeting?' He arst me that, he did. Pledged abstainers, every church member of us, and if we don't want our temperance meetin' reg'lar, what sort of a meetin', will ye tell me, should we be like to want?"

(To be continued.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

Children's Cozy Corner

A Small Politician, By Harriet H. Needham.

"IF Judge Morton would lend his influence we might do it," said Mrs. Boyd.

"Shall I run over and ask to borrow it, mamma?" asked six-year-old Dorothy, who liked nothing better than to visit the big house opposite.

"No, dear," smiled her mother, "I don't like to ask him and—perhaps it would do no good." And then she bit her lip and pressing her hands to her face, the color mounted slowly under the brown curls on her forehead. Dorothy knew that mamma was crying!

"I'll ask Ted," she said to herself. "Ted gives me anything I want and his grandpa gives him anything he wants." So, when her boy neighbor brought his bicycle out to clean, Dorothy flew across to him.

"I can't give you a ride till afternoon, Dodo," he said. "You see I'm taking it all to pieces."

"I don't want a ride, Ted," Dorothy replied with dignity. "I don't always come for a ride. I wanted to ask you to please borrow your grandpa's influence for mamma."

"What?" laughed Ted, looking up from his work. "It isn't funny, Teddie; mamma said she hated to ask for it, and then she put her face behind her hands and cried!" And Dorothy's own blue eyes filled with tears at the remembrance.

"Wonder what it can be," said Ted thoughtfully. "Perhaps grandpa knows. I'll ask him."

"I haven't the slightest idea," declared the Judge at the lunch table. "Dorothy said she cried, did she? Humph! Well, well!" and the old gentleman knit his brows together fiercely, for Dorothy's pretty mamma and Dorothy's pretty self were favorites of his.

"I'll just send her a line, Ted, my boy," he said, as they rose from the table, "and she can come over and tell me, herself."

So the stiff, stub pen that had written more than one famous speech, scrawled:

"Mrs. John Boyd.

My Dear Madam:—I understand from the children that you think me in a position to do you a service. Pray call on me this evening, and I will gladly give you any assistance within my power.

Very respectfully yours,
Robert Morton."

"What can Dorothy have said?" murmured her mother on reading the note. "What must the Judge think of me for not speaking to him directly! But I'll go,—of course I'll go."

"It is simply this, Judge Morton," she explained briefly, that evening. "In the block adjoining the school building there is a lunch counter where coffee, soda water and—liquor, are sold to the high school boys, and for the little fellows there are whisky-flavored candies and intoxicating drinks under attractive names. We mothers have prosecuted the proprietors, but they simply pay their fines and continue the business. It is the only place obtainable for such a purpose within several blocks, and their lease expires next week. If one could have them evicted, we would establish a trustworthy person at the counter and sell the boys hot coffee and a cheap, attractive lunch. Even if it did not pay as a business venture, we would gladly maintain the counter from our private purses. You knew my father, Judge Morton."

"Yes," the Judge nodded. They had been college friends, and he had known Richard Sandis as a brilliant, popular, lovable man, handicapped in youth, ruined in middle age by excesses which had left little trace on less sensitive natures.

"My boy has his temperament," Mrs. Boyd added simply.

"And where do I come in?" asked Judge Morton after a brief silence. "How can I aid you?"

"The building belongs to Colonel Seaton."

"Oh, I see!" The Judge looked at her with a quizzical smile, adding as she rose to leave, "You and Miss Dorothy may command my influence at any time, though I fear it has less weight than you are pleased to imagine."

"What did Mrs. Boyd mean, grandpa?" asked Ted, when the door closed. "Who is Colonel Seaton?"

The Judge smiled grimly. "He is a man who happens to owe everything he is, financially and politically, to your old granddad Influence, young man," he added, taking Ted by the shoulders and walking him out the door, as a gentle hint that he wished to be alone, "influence is a very good thing to have, as you seem to have discovered. Only see that you come by it honestly and always use it in as good a cause as this."

A week later the usual whistle and slam of the front door announced Ralph Boyd's arrival home from school.

"Had a dry lunch to-day, mamma," he called. "The lunch-counter people are moving out. Isn't it too bad?"

And why mamma should thereupon hug her and rumple her curls and call her "a funny little politician," Dorothy never knew.

Chicago.

Just Suppose.

If every boy and every girl,
Arising with the sun,
Should plan this day to do alone
The good deeds to be done—

Should scatter smiles and kindly words,
Strong, helpful hands should lend,
And to each other's wants and cries
Attentive ears should lend—

How many homes would sunny be
Which now are filled with care!
And joyous, smiling faces, too,
Would greet us everywhere.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

Prize Offer.

A very desirable book is offered for the best list of California towns answering puzzle No. 3, to reach the office of THE UNION SIGNAL within ten days of the date of this paper. Each town is hidden by taking consecutive letters just as they stand in the puzzle, as illustrated by the name "San Francisco" in the first line. A U. S. postoffice will be considered a town within the meaning of the puzzle.

1.—Illustrated Acrostic.

The name of an animal may be found by properly arranging the heads of seven other animals, as shown above.

2.—Charade

In many homes my first stands.
In many mills my second sits.
In every city my whole walks.

3.—Hidden California Towns.

(See Prize Offer.)

As an artiSAN, FRANCIS COuld not take high rank, but as a prime good fellow, Reynold himself could not surpass him. Adeline, whom we all knew as Carlo's angel, especially praised him, a fact on which he relied for comfort.

Unable to act in affairs of state by natural limitations, he accepted the charge of planning a dinner to Lucas Paradis, Abella's new Mayor.

In days of careful planning, his main dependence was on the chase. It was May. Fields and forests were alive with game. Deep pools harbored wild fowl, erratic elands fed in a corner of the wheat, land and water alike supplying meat. A cross ram on a rocky hillside was hard to entrap as a den and a half of bears. A Moabar buck led him a long chase down by the river, side by side with a lame Danish stag, newly escaped from a passing menagerie, where he also found a Balsac ram entombed in a cave.

But Francis wisely decided that one fat ox for dinner would supply all deficiencies in meat, even for those who liked liver more than steak.

"Entirely enough for a feast, and is healthy and good," said Francis. "Cal. is to gather nuts, as he likes to range where some would neither ride nor walk."

Many a fair damsel made rather officious offers to help. Mary Rekard (sister of Dave U. Rekard) was among the first. Also Nora, whom we all called "Siss," one of the most modest of them all. "She rid an American wheel at White Oak Landing," said Enoch in old style English.

And so the dinner was served in honor of the new manager of the new castle, where the corn in golden splendor grew beside the fragrant clover; dale and hill vieing with pompom and aesthetic beds of asters in lending beauty to the scene. And so it thus has taken this conglomeration of senseless sentences to hide the names of a few of the towns in the golden state of California.

EYE EM ES.

Answers To Puzzles March 5.

1.—Money.
2.—(1) Evil, Levi. (2) Lie, Eli.
3.—1. Music, (CI), sum. 2. Liver, (LIV), re. 3. Civilly, (CIV), illy. 4. Listing, (LI), sting. 5. Bard, (D), bar. 6. Braced, (CD), bear.

Composition on a Horse.

A FATHER going into his stable one day last week found his little son astride one of the horses, with a slate and pencil in his hand.

"Why, Harry," he exclaimed, "what are you doing?"

"Writing a composition," was the reply.

"Well, why don't you write it in the house?" asked the father.

"Because," answered the little fellow, "the teacher told me to write a composition on a horse."—Our Dumb Animals.

A Word To Boys.

You are made to be kind, boys, generous, magnanimous.

If there is a boy in school who has a clubfoot, don't let him know you ever saw it.

If there is a poor boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags in his hearing.

If there is a lame boy, assign him some part in the game that doesn't require running.

If there is a hungry one, give him part of your dinner.

If there is a dull one, help him learn his lesson.

If there is a bright one, be not envious of him; for if one boy is proud of his talents, and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs, and no more talent than before.

If a larger or stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school will show by their countenances how much better it is than to have a great fuss.—Horace Mann.

"OUR eyes," remarked a wise little woman of six, "are given us to see; but our eyelids are given us to keep them from seeing." Let us have eyes to see the good in others, and use our eyelids sometimes to be charitable to their faults.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, March 26, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Beside Bethesda's Pool.

ONCE upon a time there sat by the Pool of Bethesda a man waiting for an expected angel, hoping still, after years of disappointment, that he might by some happy dispensation be permitted to enter the sacred waters, when, lo! immunity from suffering would be his for all time. By this hope he had been buoyed up for many years, but as each season returned and the water was "troubled" some one less feeble stepped in before him, and in sadness of spirit he turned away, to wait and hope that the next time there might be some kind soul ready to help him forward and put him in the pool.

Inserted in the "want ad" columns of a recent daily paper there appeared a request for a half-day position as stenographer by one "financially independent." Hundreds of people read this advertisement and the probability is that each marvelled as to why one in such circumstances should seek work of any kind. In all great cities, for every advertisement calling for help there is a vast multitude ready to answer the call, each individual being equally eager to secure what is offered.

In the crowd around the pool at Jerusalem all were supposed to need the cure, and it is presumable that those who advertise for work, or who answer those who offer it, are equally needful. In the struggle to live, when men and women are in many cases willing to accept remuneration which is inadequate to the work required and miserably insufficient for their needs, has any one "financially independent" the right to enter the competition for daily bread? Positions for those who need work are all too few, and any one to whom salary is a "secondary consideration" is out of place in this waiting multitude.

It is true that financial independence does not follow one through life, and it may be well to provide against a possible rainy day by arming one's self with a practical knowledge which can be utilized in case the much dreaded cloud shall break. Meanwhile, however, "They that be well need not a physician," and it would show a blessed consideration toward the already too numerous unemployed if those to whom salary is a secondary consideration would leave the pool to those who need the cure.

The pessimistic, who fear dark days of poverty, for which they desire to prepare themselves, may find various ways of acquiring needed knowledge. One who desires to learn stenography, for instance, might attend church regularly and strive to write out a sermon or two every Sunday, carefully transcribing the notes at home and fully typewriting every sermon taken. The financially independent are, no doubt, able to purchase or to rent typewriters and they may easily become experts and ready to take their places among the multitude around the pool when the evil day forces them there.

While listening to and transcribing the truths uttered from the pulpit, a saving light might be shed upon the Golden Rule and a lesson of thankfulness be gained for that financial independence which enables them to place at the disposal of their less fortunate sisters the niches they are now seeking to fill.

The Czar and Religious Freedom.

THE world does move. The Czar of Russia is more than an autocrat. By some influence, whatever its source, he has been moved to take another original stand among the world reformers. His decree, issued March 12, proclaiming freedom of worship for all his people, of whatever creed, is only a part of his great program of reform. But it is especially notable as indicating the growing enlightenment and far-sightedness of this still youthful ruler.

Christendom gladly does homage to Czar Nicholas as the prime mover in that great act of internationalism in the interest of the peace of the world—the International Court of Arbitration—which more than any other single event has made forever memorable the transition from the nineteenth to the twentieth century.

Unmistakably the Emperor of Russia has a profoundly impassioned love for his own people. He sees their defects, he knows what they need. Enormous and potential as the empire is, immense masses of the people are but slowly emerging from barbarism. No one realizes this fact more than does the Czar. His drastic efforts to limit the national curse of drunkenness by taking over into the hands of the government the sale of liquors, along with the prohibitive measures, shows the earnestness of his spirit of reform.

To the same intent, though in a different way, are these latest decrees in the interest of popular freedom, civic and religious. The Greek church remains now, as ever, the distinctly national form of religious faith and worship, but this decree of religious toleration legalizes all other forms of creed and practice not inconsistent with good citizenship. The example of the American and all the other leading nations of the world has had its effect in the councils of St. Petersburg.

No doubt religious toleration, as understood even now by the Russian Emperor, is not quite the same thing as religious freedom in our own and in some other countries, yet it is a long way towards it. No one who at all realizes what an overshadowing power among the nations Russia is fast becoming can fail to see in these decrees of the Czar an inspiring token of the world's advancement.

It is specially significant that the good genius of the Russian Emperor is believed to be his good wife, the gentle Princess Alix of Hesse, a favorite grand-daughter of Queen Victoria.

Civic Housecleaning.

THE mayor and the chief of police of Chicago have at last admitted their inability to rid the city of gamblers, and they call to their aid the reform element of the city to supplement their efforts.

This somewhat startling and novel situation has had a tendency to arouse the public to investigate the gambling evil and to learn its extent, and the disclosures are not comforting. One reputable paper states: "The school children's pennies, the washerwomen's nickels and the workingman's dimes are gathered by policy shops, and the dollars of men of larger income are devoured by the racing handbooks." Another paper goes so far as to state that business enterprises are being imperiled by the hold this evil has upon trusted employes, book-keepers managers, agents, and confidential clerks, and that the logical outgrowth of the practice is debt, embezzlement and final ruin.

People who have always associated gambling with the slums and the levee,—the sculleries of our great cities,—will be amazed to learn that this moral rubbish and filth are to be found in every department of the civic structure. Its cobwebs festoon the business departments, the offices of professional men, the city hall, the banks, and even the homes. The taint of its moral dust is in the air, stifling the reason, judgment and conscience. It has become a menace to the moral health of the community. For every man who has the will to attempt to clean out his own particular corner, a dozen men are regularly employed, it is authoritatively stated, to defeat his efforts.

The mayor of Chicago is accredited with saying that nothing less than a moral crusade will do the work. Will the sane and courageous citizens of the western metropolis accept the challenge and lend a hand in this civic housecleaning?

If every city official and every man in authority would firmly grasp the besom of his authority and take a vigorous hand in the work, if every minister from his pulpit and every educator and leader of thought from his desk would wield the brush of his influence in the interests of the cleansing process, if every citizen who cherishes a particle of civic pride would arm himself with the broom of honest, emphatic conviction, it would unquestionably restore to the City by the Lake some measure of cleanliness and afford an inspiring spectacle for every vice-infested city in our land.

The Dependency of Laws.

THE history of the prohibition movement shows that whenever a prohibitory liquor law is not enforced it is for exactly the same reason that other prohibitory laws are not enforced. We take note of the fact that certain newspapers are pointing to the excellency of the Sherman anti-trust law and asserting that its chief inadequacy in dealing with the trust question consisted in its non-enforcement. It never has been fully nor fairly tested, and for reasons that are obvious.

An official whose duty it is to carry out the provisions of the law was well known as a friend of the trusts, and while he was as attorney general supposed to guard the interests of the people, his own state of New Jersey was busy granting charters which formed and fostered the very organizations which the law was intended to check or to suppress. "It cannot be proved," says one of these papers editorially, "that Mr. Griggs or his successor has failed of his duty, but it is a fact that in the last five years nearly all of the associations of industrial combinations that are known as trusts have come into existence, and, further, that when put to the test the Sherman anti-trust law, instead of proving defective, has proved remarkably effective."

We have referred here and thus to the Sherman law not to press its merits or demerits—for that is not our province just now—but merely to show that there are other laws besides those pertaining to the prohibition of the liquor traffic whose efficiency depends upon the loyalty of the enforcers to their official oath. It is well for "dry" states and towns to remember that their sentiment regarding prohibition is expressed in their choice of the men elected to enforce it no less than in the enactment of the law itself.

A Fine for the Black Type Habit.

MR. McGOWAN, of Minneapolis, introduces a bill into the senate providing that any printed report of a crime, except according to the rules provided, shall be considered a misdemeanor and that the publisher or manager of the offending paper shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, or, in default of fine, shall serve not to exceed ninety days in jail. These rules provide that the objectionable articles shall be printed without headlines, only a mere statement of facts being given, and that this statement shall be in modest, unassuming type. No sketches or pictures of any kind shall accompany these "stories."

Mr. McGowan deserves commendation. Our newspapers are surcharged with the most virulent kind of matter, and the continual reading of such matter, especially by the young and the impressible, is most pernicious in its effects.

Parents who threaten their sons with severe punishment when they discover a "Diamond Dick," a "Nick Carter" or a "Jesse James" in their hands, will often calmly sit by and watch these same children wading knee-deep into the crimes of the day—not ones of fiction, but awful realities, presented in a sensational, unhealthful, suggestive manner.

The gratuitous, widespread advertisement of crimes, such as is given in our daily papers, is sufficient to suggest the fever of notoriety to the dissolute and the unscrupulous, inspiring them to sinful deeds, and the papers are responsible for more of this evil than one imagines. If the world's wickedness could be kept out of glaring headlines and crimes could be suppressed into two-inch paragraphs, instead of leaded columns, there would be less need of enlarging the police force, and there would be more empty cells in the penitentiary.

⚜

Moral Suasion and Prohibition "After prohibition what?" Such is the title of a column editorial in one of our metropolitan dailies. It assumes that the prohibition policy has, in the past twenty-five years, superseded moral suasion methods greatly to the detriment of the temperance cause. We have pointed out many times, and it is evidently necessary to continue to point out, that prohibitory law is not enacted primarily for the reformation of the drinker, but for the protection of society. The policy of the temperance reformer of today is still moral suasion as regards the drunkard, but, added to that, is legal suasion for the drunkard-maker, experience having taught him that without the latter the former fails of widespread and enduring results. Christian temperance means a do-everything policy, and this fact should be iterated and reiterated by word and by deed until the public grasps its significance. But it is quite in order to ask, After prohibition—in Vermont or in any other state which repeals a prohibitory law—what? The article above mentioned answers by saying, "back" to moral suasion methods. Judging, however, from the trend of things, the correct answer would be—Prohibition—local prohibition through the referendum vote—more and more of it as the years go by, until once again state prohibition arrives, and after that national prohibition. Of course, no referendum is a fair one until all adult citizens may vote, but local option laws are bringing this truth home to the people as nothing else would. As an inevitable outcome of the doctrines and practical workings of republican democracy, it will come in time. Meanwhile women, especially W. C. T. U. women, can use the influence they possess to intensify that antagonism to the liquor traffic which is growing stronger every year and of which the repeal of a state prohibition law in no wise indicates an abatement.

⚜

Personal Mention.

Mrs. J. H. Rhodes, president of the union at Berkeley, Cal., spent a pleasant half-hour with the editors while in Chicago recently.

Mrs. A. C. McCurdy, former corresponding secretary of the state W. C. T. U. of Minnesota, passed through Chicago last week en route to her home in Minneapolis. She was a welcome visitor at Rest Cottage and The Union Signal office.

Mrs. Cornelia Moots, well known to readers of The Union Signal as our former missionary in the Philippine Islands, has returned to her home at Niles, Mich., after spending the winter in Tucson, Arizona. Mrs. Moots was a welcome caller at the editorial rooms.

The Union Signal office has been brightened by many friendly callers of late, among them our National L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Helen G. Rice, of Boston, who has been speaking in Wisconsin, and Mrs. Amanda T. Whitson, of Indianapolis, Ind., state superintendent of Non-Alcoholic Medication. Also Mrs. Starbuck, treasurer of the W. C. T. U., of Warren county, New York.

Experience Corner.

Anxious Comrades:—Only one letter like the one quoted reaches me lately, but a hundred unions are wondering as this union wonders, and my answer is for all.

We come to you as referee in a matter which arose at our last meeting. In the hope of securing the earnest support and co-operation of the pastors of the city, with their wives, the desirability of admitting them as associate or affiliated members, without the requirement of dues, but with restricted voting privileges, was discussed. We are desirous of enlisting all the agencies possible to enlarge our influence, still we are not unmindful of the fact that we belong to an organization to which we would be most loyal. Hence we appeal the matter to you for decision.

The reference to loyalty shows that this individual and her union are made of sound timber, and so can bear the strain of solid, unadorned advice.

Just two kinds of members may belong to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, regular and honorary. Each one takes the total abstinence pledge and pays dues. The "regulars" are all women, and the books of the state and National treasurer will tell how many there are.

The "honoraries," bless their hearts! are the brothers who stand at our side and share every duty we will allow them to. Without this "arm of the service" our organization in some places would simply "mark time" instead of marching on.

No affiliated or associate or contributing members are known to the W. C. T. U. Its friends may affiliate and associate and contribute, but they are not members; they have no right to the tiny white knot where the right hand may cover and protect it. From every possible point of view this subject has been discussed by those who stand on our watch towers, and this decision is the result.

It may seem to work hardship, but in reality, dear women, it does not. Paying their due for these excellent people, or receiving them without due, would not "secure their earnest support and co-operation." It may take a little longer, but your better way is to show them the kind of folks we are and the kind of principles we live and die for, and after a while they will want to be real, not "affiliated," members. It sometimes pays to make haste slowly. Do not expect your pastor, or any other, to come to your meetings, even special ones, unless you show the deference of an invitation. The pastor is a busy man, but he will come, no doubt, if invited with sweet persistence.

Somebody, when you read this at your next meeting, will say in doleful tone, "Oh, she never was placed in our situation; she doesn't know how imperfect our influence is without the pastors and their wives." Friends, that is the way this "mother" obtained her "experience." The thrill of joy that went through the union of twenty souls and bodies when the first minister's wife in a city of 40,000 people joined the W. C. T. U. is something to carry through life.

It may be partly our fault that these people are slow to come. The boy who wondered why everybody didn't know his father because he knew him "just as easy" is an illustration. See that these already occupied people have The Union Signal and state paper, with occasional marked articles and occasional remarked allusions to the same; have the state minutes with the compliments of their best church workers; have an occasional synopsis of our work or some marked feature of it in their denominational organ and our raison d'etre in the best secular newspapers. Some day they will learn that we are not fashioned after the old-time Washingtonians, whose sole object was to rescue fargone drunkards.

Not for a moment must we denounce one who understands so little that he doesn't see the need of us. We must not wound feelings; we must be models of courtesy, even though it hurts us sore to be misunderstood.

Bide your time, good friends! With that marvelous gift, consecrated tact, which we must use for saint and sinner, all we need will one day come our way. You will fall into line with the spirit of our constitution and will not regret it.

In closing, not for you only, but for every one of us, let me quote the words of that most uncommon man and Christian, Stephen Merritt, on "Tact." He says:

It brings us into temper and touch with Him and others, so as to make all things to all men that we may win some. It is never denunciatory, nor domineering, nor despairing; always jubilant and generous and gladsome. It is never austere, never puts on airs. We all need it—it wins souls and scatters bright blessings. The Giver of every good and perfect gift is the only Giver of tact.

Mother Experience.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

Take care of your life; the Lord will take care of your death.—Whitefield.

***

Help us to reach out past the things we cannot understand to the God we trust. We thank Thee for the passing of what changes and the changelessness of that which passes not.—Maltbie B. Babcock.

***

Yet souls that win immortal heights unclogged, with self must move!
The only thing that we can take from earth to heaven is love!
To make us great like Thee, Oh God! Thy spirit with us strive!
Enlarge our lives to take Thee in! Oh give us nobler lives!

—Lucy Larcom.

***

Friend, go up higher. Patience and strength we need; an earnest use of what we have now; and all the time an earnest discontent until we come to be what we ought to be.—Phillips Brooks.

***

Thou God of all, infuse light into the souls of men, whereby they may be enabled to know what is the root from whence all their evils spring, and by what means they may avoid them.—Euripides.

***

Be good to the depths of you, and you will discover that those who surround you will be good even to the same depths. Nothing responds more infallibly to the secret cry of goodness than the secret cry of goodness that is near.—Maurice Maeterlink.

***

Treasure the shadow. Somewhere, firmly based,
Arise those turrets that in cloudland shine;
Somewhere, to thirsty toilers of the waste,
Yon phantom well-spring is a living sign.

Treasure the shadow. Somewhere, past thy sight,
Past all men's sight, waits the true heaven at last;
Tell them whose fear would put thy hope to flight,
There are no shadows save from substance cast.

—Edith M. Thomas.

***

Thou givest within and without precisely what the soul needs for its advancement in a life of faith and self-renunciation. I have then only to receive this bread, and to accept, in the spirit of self-sacrifice, whatever Thou shalt ordain, of bitterness in my external circumstances, or within my heart. For whatever happens to me each day is my daily bread, provided I do not refuse to take it from Thy hand, and to feed upon it.—Fenelon.

***

Something each day—a word.
We cannot know its power:
It grows in fruitfulness
As grows the gentle shower.
What comfort it may bring,
Where all is dark and drear!
For a kind word every day
Makes pleasant all the year.

Something each day—a deed
Of kindness and of good,
To link in closer bonds
All human brotherhood.
Oh, thus the heavenly will
We all may do while here
For a good deed every day
Makes blessed all the year.

—Southern Churchman.

***

Let us remember that it is not God who makes many of the crosses that we find in our way, such as we commonly call "crosses." Our Heavenly Father makes "straight paths for our feet," and, if we would go in His way, if we would straighten our will to His will, and lay them side by side, there would be no crosses. But when the path that God points out goes north and south, and our stubborn wills lead us east and west, the consequence is "a cross"—a cross of our own making, not that which our Master bids us "take up and carry after Him," and of which it has been well said, "He always carries the heaviest end Himself."—Annie Webb-Peploe.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR COMRADES:—Excuse me for saying once more that no one should send literature orders to our National Headquarters at Evanston, with the exception of orders for the Annual Report, Annual Leaflet and Anti-Polygamy literature. Everything else is published and handled by the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle Street, Chicago. The fact that I mention some of their publications in this column sometimes leads the women to send their orders here, and this necessitates a delay of at least twenty-four hours, for the orders must be remailed to Chicago.

State presidents will please send me the names of delegates to the World's Convention, to be held at Geneva, Switzerland, June 9-11, inclusive. Some of the states have not been heard from at all on this subject and the lists of others are incomplete. I must, necessarily, have full names and addresses of all who are going, that I may send them their credentials. It is high time, also, that all possible delegates should receive a circular in regard to the trip.

Mrs. Isabel Wing Lake, our National superintendent of Rescue Work, sent some little pamphlets to our Convention at Portland which give a register of all the Rescue Homes in the United States and in a number of foreign countries as well. These booklets arrived too late to be announced at the Convention or to be put on sale. It has cost Mrs. Lake an immense amount of work and expense to complete this register, and she would like to get it into the hands of all who are interested, or ought to be, in this work. It is now on sale at the W. T. P. A. at 10 cents a copy.

Bishop Samuel Fallows' book, "The Mormon Menace," of which I spoke some weeks ago, is now ready, price 25 cents. Unions securing this book would need no other information on this subject and could have no better authority. The work is intensely interesting, and I hope it will be read by every member of the W. C. T. U.

I hold in my hand a Calendar of the W. C. T. U. of Franklin, N. H., but it is more than its name indicates, being the yearly program of the union. I give you two or three of the most striking topics: "Reform Measures Now Before the State and Nation (Discussion by the honorary members);" "The Family Medicine Chest (Each active member is privileged to invite a gentleman to the tea and the social evening following);" "W. C. T. U. Work in Other Lands, (Demonstration in care of special committee. Each member is allowed to invite her husband and one other person to the tea and evening program)." "Shall We Use Home-Made Beer?"

I think some other unions must also be taking the topic, "W. C. T. U. Work in Other Lands," for I have had a number of letters asking for information on this subject. Unfortunately, there is very little to which I could refer the inquirers. I hope next year that the World's Reports may be on sale in this country. Why may we not have a leaflet giving an outline of work done by the round-the-world missionaries, with some points concerning the present status of work in other countries?

You will remember that Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, not long ago, secured the appointment of women inspectors to meet the ships coming into the port of New York, to aid unprotected women and girls, and thereby prevent their falling into the hands of designing men and women who are always on the lookout for victims for the "white slave traffic." We have since written to our Ambassadors Extraordinary at the courts of the most important foreign countries asking them to lay the matter before the proper authorities and ask if similar arrangements cannot be made at the port of embarkation, to the end that these women and girls may have some warning and instruction before leaving their own country. I have just received "The Minneapolis Journal" of March 16th in which we are told of a band of men and women organized to lure young girls from France to America for immoral purposes. The association is said to have headquarters on the Pacific Coast and a flourishing branch in Butte, Montana. The revelations made are horrible, and an attache of the Bureau of Immigration of the Treasury Department at Washington is in Butte making investigations with a view to stopping this traffic. None of our unions should be indifferent to this department of work so long as the conditions in our cities are so appalling.

Yours cordially,

SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

Dedication Ceremonies, World's Fair.

On account of the dedication ceremonies Louisiana Purchase Exposition. St. Louis, Mo, the Wabash Railroad will sell round trip tickets to this point for one fare. Tickets sold April 29 to May 1, 1903, good to return not later than May 4, 1903. For further information write, F. A. Palmer, Assistant General Passenger Agent, 97 Adams St., Chicago.

With the Treasurer.

WILLARD Memorial fund as follows, $2.00 excepted as noted:

CONNECTICUT: Stamford, Meriden, Cheshire, Stafford Springs, Mystic, Niantic $1.00, Pawcatuck.

CALIFORNIA: Hemet, Ventura, Santa Clara, Monrovia, Colton, Corning, Oakland, Chino, Rialto, Santa Ana, Del Rey. Santa Barbara.

KANSAS: Waverly, Marion, Norton.

SOUTH DAKOTA: Spearfish, Groton, Yankton $1.00, Sioux Falls.

OHIO: Chardon, Kent, Rushsylvania, Bays, Chester, Delaware, Granville, Norwalk, Cedarville, South New Lyme, Salem, Cadiz, Olena .50, Cumberland, Marlboro, Salineville, Barnesville $1,00, Portsmouth, Nelsonville.

WISCONSIN: Virginia, La Farge, Stoughton, Antigo (Friendship Union), La Crosse, Clintonville, Viroqua, West Superior, White Water, Poynette, Sharon, Beaver Dam, Appleton, Plainfield.

MICHIGAN: Adrian, Laingsburg, Atwood, Ionia, Okemos, Fenton, Chelsea, Belding, St. Johns, Gregory, Lansing, Galesburg, Cereseo, Webberville, Bendon.

PENNSYLVANIA: Uniontown, Flemington, Tunkhannock, Equimunk.

MAINE: Monroe, Montague, North Yarmouth, Rumford Falls, Upper Gloucester, St. Albans, Winter Harbor, Augusta, Milo, Machias, Millbridge, Gray, Burlington, Haynesville, South Deer Isle, Lewiston, Calais, Ft. Fairfield, Bangor Y, Petit Manan.

DELAWARE: Dover, Smyrna.

NEW YORK: Mantour Falls, Seneca Falls, Savona, Skaneateles, Canastota, Oswego, Knowlesville, Little Genesee, Allentown, Delevan, Auburn (F. E. Willard union), Cato, Fair Haven, Fredonia, Hanover Centre, Brakel, Norwich, Lyon Mountain $4.00, Plattsburg, Rouse Point, Oneida Y, East Penfield, Clinton, Rome, Syracuse (South Side), Port Jervis, Kendall, Medina, Arwell, Lansingburg, Troy (Central), Wynandskill, Schuylerville, Junius, Romulus, Trumansburg, Easton, Greenwich, Shushan, Castile, Castile Y.

IOWA: Kingsley, Creston.

INDIANA: Fairmont, Marion (Central), South Marion, Richmond, Milroy, Brazil, Nappanee, Hammond, Deer Creek, Winchester, Huntington, Greensburg, Bluffton.

WASHINGTON: Oak Harbor, Fairfield $3.75, Goldendale Y $10.00, Wenatchee $2.80, Almira $3.85, Rosalia .70, Colfax $3.50, Cheney $3.15.

NEW JERSEY: Flemington.

OKLAHOMA: Anardarka, Cushing, Oklahoma City.

MASSACHUSETTS: Lunenberg, Fitchburg, Wenham Depot, North Uxbridge, Great Barrington, Gay Head, Chatham, Northampton, Allston, Lynn, Athol, Marshfield Hills, A Friend .25, West Boyleston, Falmouth, Roslindale, Ware, North Adams, Worcester (Scandinavian), Springfield (Central), Sheffield, Southbridge, Dorchester, Webster, Amesbury, Berkley, West Medford, Gardner, North Attleboro, Boston, Conway, Natick, West Brookfield, North Egremont, Salem, Worcester, Hadley, Uxbridge, Revere, Attleboro $2.50, New Bedford, Enfield, Lowell, Leicester, Everett, Fall River, Belchertown, Haverhill, North Westport $2.50, Somerset, Clinton, Gloucester, Westminster, Fairhaven, Bay State, Brackton $3.00, Jamaica Plain, Needham, Chelsea.

MISSOURI: Kingston, Kirkwood, Morehouse, Bosworth.

NEVADA: Clover.

RHODE ISLAND: Washington, Ashton, Warren, Pawtucket, two unions, Providence Y $3.92.

ARKANSAS: Siloam Springs, Little Rock, Fort Smith.

ALABAMA: Hartzell, Fairhope.

COLORADO: Colorado Springs, Salida, Pueblo.

TEXAS: Lawrence, Odessa.

ILLINOIS: Macomb, Ipava.

VIRGINIA: Petersburg Y.

MINNESOTA: Welcome.

GEORGIA: Macon.

LOUISIANA: Baldwin.

INDIAN TERRITORY: Wagoner.

VERMONT: Hardwick.

WYOMING: Wheatland.

ARIZONA: Arizola.

The receipts so far on the memorial fund are very encouraging. Think of the Goldendale Y out in Washington sending $10 and many other unions not satisfied to send merely $2. The letters that accompany these gifts are often very cheering. Two ladies from Kentucky spending the winter at a Florida resort worked up a memorial meeting, inviting other visitors, and had an enthusiastic response. Appleton, Wis., makes a good suggestion. At their memorial meeting they served a ten-cent tea and placed a quotation from Miss Willard's writing at each plate. These were taken home as souvenirs by each guest.

Generous remittances of dues have been received from New York, Ohio, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Maryland and Rhode Island.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Where Our Speakers Are.

Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh has so far recovered her strength as to be at work again. She is in Georgia for two months. Crowded houses and many new members attest the appreciation of her ability and faithfulness.

Mrs. Lucia H. F. Additon, of Lents, Oregon (Box 34) expects to go to Massachusetts early in April. She would like to take work en route. She will go east by the Northern route and return by the Southern Pacific, through California, and can be reached at the address given above. All who would like to make dates for her would do well to write to her at once.

Fooled the Hospital.

Was Pronounced Incurable But Got Well on Pure Food.

Sometimes in a case of disease resulting from the use of improper food the symptoms are so complex that medical science cannot find the seat of trouble, and even the most careful hospital treatment fails to benefit. A gentleman of Lee, Mass., says: "On April 1st, 1900, I was sent home by one of our Massachusetts hospitals, saying nothing more could be done for me. I have been a great sufferer from nervous diseases and rheumatism and nervous prostration and had previously been treated at Sharon Springs and by a number of doctors without getting much assistance.

"One day I was feeling worse than usual when I read an article about your Grape-Nuts that impressed me so that I sent for a package. I commenced using it at breakfast the next day.

"For fifteen months I never missed one day. If you ever saw anyone grow strong and improve it was I. I gained from 125 pounds to my old weight 165. I will always be a cripple from rheumatism but otherwise I am so much improved that I now feel as well as any man in this country." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There is a recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts that will interest the housekeeper.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work. J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS, 39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

Leaflets Just Issued

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law. Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Central System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89,
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 143,
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.
.....CHICAGO.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A

British Woman's Temperance Association.

A collection was taken for the Willard Memorial Missionary Fund at the great meeting in Manchester on February 17th, when the large Free Trade Hall was crowded..

The National Executive Committee received with the deepest regret Lady Henry Somerset's letter announcing that owing to ill health she cannot be elected president of the association this year. We are thankful to know that Lady Henry Somerset has consented to be again nominated as president of the World's W. C. T. U.

Germany.

The International Congress meets in Bremen April 14th to 19th. It is an important event in the history of temperance reform in Germany, and promises to be most interesting, attended, as it will be, by most eminent scientists and other distinguished men and women. Since 1883 these International Congresses have met every two or three years and now for the first time in Germany. The first impulse to the formation of the German Women's Association was given by Miss Willard, after Lady Carlisle had won Fraulein Otilie Hoffman for the temperance cause. After our convention in Edinburgh in 1900 she organized the Deutsche Abstinente Frauenbund, affiliated with our W. W. C. T. U. She is hoping that many white ribboners will go to Bremen in April. It is a new feature that at this congress a special meeting is being given to reports on women's temperance work of different countries, and Hon. Mrs. Eliot Yorke, Lady Cecilia Roberts, Miss Agnes Slack, Mrs. Boardman and Mrs. Hunt (U. S. A.) are announced to speak. Bremen, a fine old city, is easy of access from London.

Through a white ribboner six coffee taverns have been started. A cocoa and tea room just opened in Bremen is conducted by a white ribboner. W. C. T. U.'s are doing good work in Bremen, Kiel, Hamburg, Heidelberg, and we are hoping very soon several other important cities will be organized.

Iceland.

We have lost a valuable worker in Iceland. Miss Johannsdottir's aunt was called home last month. She was president of the W. C. T. U. Her great aim was prohibition for her country.

Norway.

Miss Johannsdottir (Iceland) will probably return to Scandinavia and finish the organization work she commenced with such great success last year.

Froken Johannessen has recently visited several important W. C. T. U.'s.

Burma.

Mrs. Beedham writes: "My women's meeting is progressing well and the interest the women take in it is very encouraging. It is becoming a good training ground for future workers. We have lost our vice president, Mrs. Hill. Her husband has been transferred again.

The W. C. T. U. is organizing a petition against a liquor bar at the horse show.

Madagascar.

Mrs. Sibree (La Tour Rouge, Tananarive) is now president of the W. C. T. U. M. Ducommun and his family have returned to Switzerland. They are greatly missed. At the annual meeting this year (in May) a larger hall will have to be taken. Temperance songs are greatly enjoyed by the Malagasy. The boys and girls are specially attracted to the meetings. In several day schools quarterly temperance addresses are given and twice a year the children in the Sunday schools are asked to sign the pledge. Every year the W. C. T. U. publishes a new tract for the children. During the winter the Malagasy women hold meetings in the village and frequently secure pledges. The Ambohimanga W. C. T. U. is ably led by Mrs. Griffiths. Mrs. Sibree writes: "We have been much concerned about the Bolo boys who wait upon the French soldiers. We have had several meetings to try and influence them. They are every day sent to the canteen for wines, spirits and rations, and very early these little fellows learn to drink and are often sent to prison. We hope Madame Ducommun will represent Madagascar at Geneva."

Japan.

Miss Smart has secured for the Japan W. C. T. U. permission from the authors and publishers of the latest and best scientific temperance physiologies to translate and publish their books in Japanese. Several temperance leaflets are being translated and needed helps are under consideration. Numerous articles relative to conditions and work in Japan have been sent to American and English papers, and many communications to the national societies in several foreign countries, enlisting their interest and support for the work in Japan.

Messages have gone from Miss Smart to every missionary on the field, more than six hundred of them in all, and personal letters outlining plans of work, to each of the fifty-six local societies of the empire.

New Zealand.

The W. C. T. U. helped to win the recent victories, when six electorates decided for prohibition and a majority of 13,000 in the colony voted for the extinction of the liquor traffic. Among white ribboners Mrs. Balgarnie (B. W. T. A.), Mrs. Harrison Lee and Miss Powell were very prominent.

Brazil.

Mrs. Watts (president) has changed her address. It is now Juiz de Fora, Minas Geracs, Brazil. "I write again to ask for a white ribbon missionary to reside here in one of our centers and travel around to the places occupied by the missionaries, where she can find interpreters and friends. All the Methodist missionaries and native workers will help her, and perhaps the other missionaries also. The question of temperance is being agitated in the country. Unless you send us a missionary I see nothing in the future for the W. C. T. U. in Brazil. I read THE UNION SIGNAL from beginning to end and feel my heart throb in unison with every soul engaged in the blessed work."

Coming Conventions.

World's—Geneva, June 9-11; Australasia—Melbourne, April 24; B. W. T. A.—May 25-28, London; Canada—June, at Vancouver; Japan—April 3, at Kobe.

World's superintendents are urged to send me their reports, not exceeding 2,000 words, to reach me not later than May 6; also 20 copies of a condensed summary of 200 words for the press.

AGNES E. SLACK,
Hon. Sec. W. W. C. T. U.
Ripley, Derbyshire, England.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lonzenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

NewLine Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

A GRAND INVENTION!

Famous Puritan Water Still. Over 72,000 already sold. Placed over the kitchen stove, it purifies the foulest water. Removes every impurity. Furnishes delicious distilled Pure Water. Beats filters. Saves lives and Dr. bills. Prevents Typhoid Malaria, other fevers, sickness. Only safe water for children. Cures disease. Write for Booklet and testimonials free. Agents Wanted—Men and Women—Big Wages. Harrison Mfg. Co., 14 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail. HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The Green Ridge, Pa., union is agitating for a curfew law.

A White-Ribbon Cradle Roll is being organized in Janesville, Wis.

Fergus Falls and Breckenridge, Minn., and Wahpeton, N. D., have had courses in physical education conducted by Miss Stewart. Between forty and fifty society and club women were members of the classes.

Mrs. Hungerford, vice-president of Colorado, who is taking Mrs. Hawley's place while the latter is abroad, gave an interesting talk on Colorado laws, pertaining to the liquor question, at an Institute held in Loveland.

Racine, Wis., entertains the intercounty convention of Racine and Kenosha counties in April. The first evening will be given to a silver medal contest, the second to an address by Miss Marie C. Brehm, state president of Illinois.

The fourth anual supper of the West Philadelphia Union was a great success. About 250 guests were there. Perhaps $100 will be added to the headquarters fund. Dr. Harriet S. French was called for and gave an instructive and witty talk on the work of the W. C. T. U.

The Greencastle, Ind., W. C. T. U. Year Book shows among other distinguished members the names of Prof. John B. DeMott, President H. A. Gobin, D.D., Chancellor W. H. Hickman and their wives, and Miss Minetta Theodora Taylor, the well known linguist. Eleven clergymen are among the union's 141 members.

A patriotic meeting and reception was given by the W. C. T. U. of Lake City, Fla., to the students of the Florida Agricultural College. The parlors were decorated with bunting, and flowers surrounded the pictures of George Washington and Frances Willard. A program was rendered, and a supper such as school boys and girls appreciate was served.

The Colman and Central Unions of LaCrosse, Wis., gave a white-ribbon tea and invited all who came to bring something to fill the fifty comfort bags that were ready for their contents. Black and white thread, buttons, pins, needles, darning yarn and needles, court plaster, small rolls of muslins, and reading matter were enumerated as acceptable. Here is a hint for other unions.

New Holland, Pa., has an energetic union and a superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction who knows what is being done in the schools in Earl township and New Holland borough. She interviewed all the teachers and reported at the union meeting. At one of their meetings instead of taking up a regular topic, interesting articles from The Union Signal were read.

Many of the state W. C. T. U. papers have generously co-operated with The Union Signal in efforts to increase the subscription list. Notably among these are the Maryland, Massachusetts and Michigan papers. The former in its February issue gave the Question Box in full, an extended advertisement of The Union Signal and "the Young Crusader," and favorable editorial comment.

A unique offer of a candidate for mayor is amusing the temperance people of Wichita, Kan. This candidate promises to close half the saloons, abolish the slot machines and do away with the greater part of the gambling houses if the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will support him. The women claim that if he can do this he has the power, if so disposed, to abolish all the saloons, and every species of gambling, and that they cannot stultify themselves by accepting his offer. It now remains to be seen whether he will come to their terms, withdraw from the mayoralty race, or run against another candidate whom the women can endorse.

Syracuse, N. Y., Union No. 2 is finding a field for its efforts, and the reward of accomplishment, in work among the Onondaga Indians. The members have been assisted in this work by the Methodist pastor and the superintendent of the day school on the reservation. The Hiawatha union has just celebrated its first anniversary and the meeting was attended by visitors from all the other Syracuse unions. A concert was given by the Indian children, and at its close a Junior L. T. L. was organized. Little Sunday school work has been done among them and few of them speak any language but their native tongue. There is a field for great helpfulness among the children.

A correspondent from Portland, Me., writes: "Our local union is doing good work. The occasional presence of Mrs. Stevens at our meetings has been a wonderful inspiration. She gave us a delightful talk on Willard Memorial Day, not only sketching our dear departed leader's past record for our helping, but also giving us a splendid talk on the work of to-day, especially in our state. One of the members read an original poem dedicated to Miss Willard. Union Signal Day, Mrs. Stevens' birthday was a success. A sketch of her life and another original poem, by the same white-ribboner, were given. Miss Dow spoke eloquently and feelingly of Mrs. Stevens as a friend and sympathizer. A club of ten or twelve subscribers was secured. The service was led and planned by Mrs. E. C. Coburn, a Massachusetts lady of great energy and ability who is fortunately at present a resident of our city."

Memorial day at San Luis Obispo, California, was an occasion of great profit to the members. A white-ribboner says: "Mrs. Dorcas J. Spencer state corresponding secretary, was on her way home from the National convention at Portland, almost at the end of her ten thousand miles of traveling since leaving her home, and she stopped by the wayside and gladdened the hearts of all. She spoke for almost an hour, giving convention notes, stories of her visit in Washington, D. C., and last, but far from least, we went with her to Rest Cottage and entered the room sacred to us all because in it lived and wrote and thought beautiful, wonderful Frances E. Willard, the dainty woman, the profound scholar and thinker, the very Great Heart of all womankind. The tears were in our eyes, but a sweet sense of her presence was with us as we listened to Mrs. Spencer's description of our leader's own room that looked as if she had 'just stepped out for a minute.'"

The members of the Milton, Ore., W. C. T. U. are at work and have a number of well organized departments. They observed memorial day and had a large and appreciative audience. The program as given in The Union Signal was carried out, and the collection amounted to $7.45. A letter from Milton says: "Col. Holt was here ten days in December giving temperace lectures and reorganizing our union. On election day we held an all-day prayer meeting, ringing the church bell every half hour to remind the voters to vote right. The entire temperance ticket was elected. The hardest thing we have to fight out here is the gallon-house which runs under a government license and defies the people who will not have a licensed saloon in their towns. The W. C. T. U. had an hour on the program of the Umatilla County Sunday school Convention and this subject was pretty thoroughly discussed. At present our union is the only one at work in this county, but we can have one or two more as soon as we can get an organizer."

Signal Notes.

A bill to repeal the anti-pool selling law so as to legalize gambling on horse races at the Alabama state fair has been introduced into the legislature. Much indignation has been aroused by this action.

Santa Monica, Cal., closed her saloons last year. Her bank deposits have increased $46,000 during a period of three months, as against the same three months under license, while the arrests for drunkenness have fallen off 80 per cent.

M. Witte, the Russian minister of finance, is an ardent temperance worker. He is a teetotaler and induced the czar to decorate the men and women who are the most active in temperance work. He makes no secret of his preference for teetotalers in the various offices of the department he controls.

In a desire to check absinthe and alcohol drinking, the prefect of the Seine and the director of public assistance have placarded Paris with posters describing the terrible results of alcoholism. The cafe proprietors are furious and have filed suits against the prefect and the director for damaging their business interests.

Besides Marconi, Italy has lately given to the world another inventor who is likely to be equally famous. Signor Pino has devised a submarine boat for the recovery of treasure from the bed of the sea. It has been thoroughly tested and can be operated with great ease. A still more wonderful invention is his hydroscope, by which, at practically any depth, objects can be distinctly seen and photographed. Their recovery, if valuable, follows easily and at little expense.

A dispatch from Kokomo, Ind., says: "Every saloon, tippling shop, gambling room and resort is being closed by order of the metropolitan police board. All gamblers and slot machine men were given the order to leave town, and it was a doleful exodus of sports and gamblers. All gaming devices have been boxed ready for shipment elsewhere."

DR. SHOOP'S Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Better Show

For Her Children Than She Had.

They will do it because they don't think carefully, but parents who give coffee to children reap their own punishment in the puny, sickly looking little ones.

Many and many a child has been started on the road to disease that ended in death, by being improperly fed and given coffee, which is a rank poison to many a highly organized human being.

A lady of Atlanta, Ga., says, "My mother was a slave to the whims of her children and let us eat and drink anything we called for, particularly she gave us coffee and lots of it.

I grew up delicate, nervous, half sick and miserable. When I was about grown I began having serious spells with my heart and my condition became so bad my friends decided I could not live long. At a consultation of physicians one of the doctors proposed that I discontinue coffee. This was years ago before Postum was discovered. I quit the coffee and in a year or two my heart was perfectly well.

Several years later when I had a home of my own I imagined that the stimulant of coffee might benefit me, so I started in on it and in a few days the old symptoms of heart trouble returned. I quit it and took up Postum Food Coffee for my morning beverage and the heart trouble disappeared. I find Postum aids my digestion and has helped to build up my whole system.

I now use it three times a day and give it to my children with the knowledge that it is a powerful, delicious liquid food instead of a pernicious poison." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Local Union.

One hour for business, and one hour for a program seems to be the rule of procedure in the majority of unions, therefore a suggestive working program will be given to cover each hour.

Every union should have a program committee to select topics and leaders, for the entire year if possible. A sum of money should be appropriated for the use of this committee, that they may be able to supply necessary helps for an intelligent, comprehensive preparation of papers and discussions. Each leader should know that she can obtain these helps from the committee. This would obviate much of the difficulty in securing members who would be able and willing to prepare the different papers. The White Ribbon Hymnals, for the music, are necessary. A W. T. P. A. catalogue gives the leaflets and prices and is indispensable to a program committee. So, also, is the National Report for the current year and the National Annual Leaflet. Send to the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, for the Hymnal and Catalogue, and to Helen M. Barker, Rest Cottage, Evanston, Ill., for the Report and Annual Leaflet. The White Ribbon Hymnal will be sent, one copy for 35 cents, one dozen copies for $3.50. A two-cent stamo with request will bring the catalogue. The National Report can be obtained for 15 cents, and the Annual Leaflet for one cent each, or seventy-five cents per hundred.

Note.—The recitations in this department are indorsed by the National Superintendent of Medal Contest Work.

Program.

Singing, While the Days Are Going By.

Scripture, Psalm 127, page 133 White Ribbon Hymnal.

Prayer.

Solo, "Nearer, Lord to Thee," page 146 White Ribbon Hymnal.

Roll call, responded to with temperance news items from pages two and three of The Union Signal.

Report of last meeting.

Consideration of communications and letters.

Reports of special committees.

Unfinished business.

New business.

Singing and short interim.

Topic for program, "Home Influence."

Reading, "How to Employ the Child," by Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, in "Under the White Ribbon." Union Signal, March 5, 1903.

Solo and chorus, "There's a Shadow on the Home."

Reading, "What Mothers Can Do?"

Notices.

Adjournment.

What Mothers Can Do.

By Nettie Barker Fernald.

A small boys' club recently formed in the city has an officer who is higher in authority than its president. According to a writer in Harper's, here is the story:

"We've got up a new club, pa," said an ingenious little fellow of seven years to his father recently, "and I've got everything to say about it."

"Indeed! Are you president?" asked the interested parent.

"No, indeed, I'm not! Jimmie Brown is president and Sallie is vice-president and Willis is secretary, and Tommy is treasurer."

"But what are you, then?"

"Well, I know the name, and I know he's boss, but I don't know what he has to do, but I'm the Majority."

Mothers, you are the "Majority" and you are asking "What can we do to help rid the world of the drink and tobacco habit?" If you are not asking the question, you ought to be. We are working for "Majorities." If you cannot be president or vice-president or secretary or treasurer, because of home duties, you can swell the number to make that splendid majority which is going to claim victory some glad day.

The other day Vermont lost for lack of a thousand fathers on the right side That meant that a thousand more mothers ought to have been terribly in earnest in this matter.

Here are a few of the many ways in which mothers can help effectually:

First, by home influence. The influence which a mother exerts in her own home is the strongest influence known in keeping boys and girls from intemperate habits. So long as a boy feels that his mother is right and nearer right than any outsider, so long she will keep him, if any one can, from the temptation of the saloon and from the use of tobacco. It is enough to him that his mother is opposed to both. He respects her opinions, and her influence is still the strongest he yet knows. This is the power that mothers have been wielding for many, many years and we can not improve on it. Mothers should know their full power and use it with gentleness and firmness. Little children clinging about their knees will drink in temperance truths until they are a part of the very fiber of their being. As they grow in manly strength there will be the same respect for mother's wishes though the whole world may seem to point another way. The home atmosphere may be a sort of halo that surrounds and protects from the evil of the world.

A mother can wear the white ribbon and let it speak constantly for her, a reminder to her family as often as they see it on Sunday or weekday dress, that she is pledged "to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of, and traffic in, the same."

She can encourage her children to belong to the Loyal Temperance Legion and be ready to lend a hand to keep up a live, active band for the sake not only of her own but for all the boys and girls of her neighborhood whom she would save.

She can exert a strong, helpful influence for temperance and purity with the "helper" in her home, thereby reaching a most important and often neglected class. By kindness, by love unfeigned she may hold them. Many a young woman goes astray for want of a faithful true Christian friend—one who does not easily let go, who helps the seventy times seven if need be. It is often the one trial more that turns the balance for righteousness.

Mothers may help the temperance cause by making it popular. These are days of clubs and afternoon teas and dinner parties. W. C. T. U., We Can Try Unifying. Open wide the doors of your homes for the sake of the cause that needs assistance. Invite neighbors and friends and strangers and let some other mother in another part of the town do the same until your little universe has felt the power socially of the white ribbon "unifyers." Have refreshments. People don't go to eat, but they surely do eat with a relish what is simply served, and they come again. That is the best part of it. It is better to serve strong temperance truths and weak tea. Do not reverse the adjectives. Send out your invitations as for some reception.

It is your white ribbon tea for those of your neighborhood whom you want interested and who receive hospitality at your hands. Be your home ever so rich, you may feel honored by such a company as gathers at the call of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Be it ever so humble, you may feel blest as your guests assemble, and there is One present who has promised "Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst."

Let our letters, W. C. T. U., take a new meaning as in a wholesome, happy, social way we try to make this world of ours catch the story of love and good will which Christ brought nineteen hundred years ago.

An International Anti-Alcohol Congress.

A CALL has been issued for the "Internationaler Kongress gegen den Alkoholismus," to meet in Bremen, Germany, April 14 to 19. The call is signed by Dr. A. Delbruck, president, and Dr. Graf v Posadowsky-Wehner, and Dr. Pauli, honorary presidents.

The program deals with all phases of the liquor question. Papers and discussions are on the following subjects:

"Modern Culture and the Warfare Against Alcohol."

"Physical Culture and Alcoholism."

"Alcoholism in Its Relation to Tuberculosis, to the Vital Functions, and to the Use of Wealth."

"The Place of Alcohol in Government, in business."

"Discouragement of Drunkenness."

"The Gothenburg System in Scandinavia," and many other current and pertinent topics are to be ably handled. The names of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Boston, Miss Agnes Slack, honorary secretary World's W. C. T. U. and Frau Alli Trygg Helenius, president of the National W. C. T. U. of Germany, appear among the noted speakers on the program.

Promoted.

"Forever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead."

Mrs. E. L. Parmenter of Menominee, Mich., died in that city March 14th after an illness of several months. She was one of the most prominent members of the W. C. T. U. in the state of Michigan, and had been president of the Twelfth congressional district of the state, which comprises the upper peninsula, for the past four years. Mrs. Parmenter was one of the first members of the local union, which was organized in 1887, and of which she had been president ever since its formation. Her place will be hard to fill.

Easter-Tide

BOOKLETS and CARDS

Beautiful in design, artistic and attractive

BOOKLETS

Christ Our Resurrection
The Gate of Life
An Easter Prayer
20 Cents Each

A Crown of Life
Death's Conqueror
Easter Te Deum
15 Cents Each

Easter Joy
Jesus Lives
Christ Crucified
10 Cents Each

CARDS

Folders with appropriate sentiment, very beautiful
10, 8 and 5 Cents Each

Dainty cross designs
5 and 3 Cents Each

Great care and especial attention given to making up packages of assorted cards for Sunday School Classes.

Package of 6 or 8 cards . . 25 cents
Package of 8 or 10 cards . . 50 cents

We reserve the right to substitute goods of equal value if those ordered are out of stock.

Order early thus insuring your order as selected.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

AN EASTER GIFT If you send 15 cents to Mrs. Cora Howe Beebe, Lacona, N. Y., for her beautiful Easter temperance story, "The Mission of a Little Easter Bud," you will receive a picture of Miss Willard; 5 copies 10 cents each.

Easter Cards. Beautiful Easter Cards, 20 cents a dozen. Address Mrs. Cora Howe Beebe, Lacona, N. Y.

TO INVESTORS.

Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in a few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have Cattle and Sheep on our Ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Mont.

LADIES! Most profitable home work making sofa pillows, $9 to $15 weekly. Materials free, experience unnecessary, no canvassing, steady work. Send stamped addressed env. New Textile Mfg. Co., Erie St. Chicago

W. L. DOUGLAS 7 Per Cent STOCK

Safest Investment in America.

Less than $200,000 of the issue of $1,000,000 Preferred 7 per cent. Stock of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., of Brockton, Mass., Remains for Sale in Lots of One Share or More. If you want Some of this Gilt-edge Stock You Must Act Quickly. Stock Pays 7 per cent. Annual Dividends, Payable Semi-Annually.

Shares are Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

Sold at Par ($100.00) One Hundred Dollars Each.

Send for Prospectus and Make all Remittances Payable to the order of

J. LEWIS RICE, 45 Milk St., BOSTON.

FREE Comfort Cough Tablets cure a cough in one day. Sell 12 Boxes at 10 cents a box; send us the money and we will mail you these TWO PRESENTS, Solid Gold Laid Ring with Turquoise centre, surrounded by brilliants and Lady's Neck Chain 4 ft. long. No money wanted till tablets are sold. We take back all not sold. Address, Comfort Medicine Co., Providence, R. I.

CHOICE BOOKS.

LOVEY MARY AND MRS. WIGGS

"Lovey Mary."

Alice Heegan-Rice.

All who have read "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will want "Lovey Mary," and further enjoy the quaint humor of Mrs. Wiggs.

Price, postpaid, $1.00.

"A Great Mother."

The life of Madam Willard.
A beautiful gift book.

Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Postpaid.

"Winsome Woman-hood."

Margaret E. Sangster.

Familiar talks on life and conduct.

Price, - $1.25
Postpaid.

"How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle."

By Frances E. Willard

A charming book for young people. (Illustrated.)

Price, postpaid, 40c.

"Six of Them."

Mrs. S. M. Perkins.

A cleverly told temperance tale.

Price, - - - - - 75 cents
Postpaid.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Alice Caldwell Hegan.

A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."

Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

"The Opportunity Circle."

Faye Huntington.

A story of good deeds accomplished by young earnest hearts.

Price, 50 cents
Postpaid.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

MAINE MEN ON RESUBMISSION.

By Anna A. Gordon.

THE debate on the question of resubmission in the House of Representatives, Augusta, Maine, March 5 and 6, was a long and lively one. The democratic member who introduced the resolution frankly announced that the movement for resubmission as he advocated it, looked to a local regulation of the liquor traffic, and yet several members of the House who are ardent supporters of the prohibitory law and desire resubmission only because they believe the law would be reaffirmed and strengthened, voted with the minority. The speeches against resubmission were logical and eloquent. Two of the youngest members of the House, one only twenty-five years of age, spoke grandly on the right side of the question.

Representative Cole in the course of an earnest speech, said:

"I do not believe but what if it should be resubmitted to the people it would be re-affirmed by a large majority, and for that reason I shall vote against it. I thank God that we have got beyond the good old days of rum and molasses that we hear so much about. And I want my boy, who has been to this legislature and looked upon you, gentlemen, I want him to still think that the liquor law is an injury to the state. I have no fear that that boy will go to low dens and commence his liquor drinking in such places, but if he should see people go to gilded saloons, I fear for him. I want my boy, and I believe you want yours, brought up to look upon this as a curse, that it is something that should be suppressed, and that we should look upon those who deal in it as law breakers and people that are working against the interests of the state of Maine."

Mr. Thompson, lecturer for the Maine Grange, held the close attention of the great assembly, and in speaking of the temperance sentiment of the state he said:

"It is said that this sentiment comes from the backtowns. You will find that all these great moral reforms start back in the centers and move toward the cities, and if the cities have any doubt in the state of Maine that this is beginning to move that way, they will soon find their mistake. I have been out in a few small towns of the state for the past two years, and it has been my privilege probably to know personally and see as many people in the state of Maine as any other person within the sound of my voice, not only people in the country, but in the cities. I have heard the sentiment along this line expressed by individuals in their homes, on the street and in gatherings from a few hundred to a few thousand people. If you could hear the applause whenever in the state of Maine, in any town during the past two years, the speaker has referred to the enforcement of this law and the retention of this law, you would not doubt that there was a feeling for it. The gentleman says that the petitions which have come in here have been 10 to 1 in favor of retaining this law. Yes, and it might have been 100 to 1. The great organization of the Grange has taken no active step in this matter, and why? Because we know it was a dead issue, and that this was going to be turned down. When they have referred to me, I have said, "It is not necessary to waste your labor and energy in sending in petitions to this legislature against resubmission." Why resubmission—it was resubmission last fall. Could anything be more strong than the plank put into the platform of the Republican party, and is there anything any stronger than the voice of the people embodying that? It has been resubmitted; and when we speak of the referendum, certainly we should refer all questions to the people when there is a reasonable demand for it, but one per cent or five per cent or ten per cent on a question like this is not a reasonable demand to refer such a great question as this to the people."

The principal speech against resubmission was made by Hon. Jesse Libby a prominent lawyer of Androscoggin county, who will probably be the next attorney general of the state. A few paragraphs from Mr. Libby's speech are appended:

"I never did, and I never expect to appear against a referendum to the people. I always stood by that; and I appreciate all that has been said and all the harrangues that have been made by the gentlemen upon the other side of this question in regard to the referendum to the people—that, when the people call for a reference of a question to them it should be referred. My difference with them upon that matter is that the people have not called—there has been no call from the people for a referendum in regard to this question. It has been manufactured, to a large degree—but it is not very large, at that. If we are to consider even the petitions and remonstrances which have come into this case, in the hearing before the committee, and before this legislature since the hearing by the committee, they stand at least ten to one against this position; and if that argues anything, it does not certainly argue that the people as a body are here demanding or asking for this reference to them.

"The proposition to change the organic law of the state, which is supposed to be as unchangeable as anything in our system of law, is to be adopted by us as the representatives of the people here today, I will tell you frankly what I would like to see behind it: I would like to see, in the first place, the churches of the state of Maine; I would like to see the clergy, Protestant and Catholic; I would like to see the professors and presidents of our higher institutions of learning; I would like to see our educational institutions from one end of the state to the other, take an interest in the question. I would like to see the grangers of our state, who represent at this time a very powerful influence, especially in our rural communities, for the upbuilding of morality and sobriety in society. I would like to see all the charitable institutions of the state behind it. I should then have no doubt that it represented something; my way would be clear; my action could be taken in the light and I should have no doubt which way my steps were tending. But I confess that I have scanned the petitions in vain. I do not find upon the petitions in favor of resubmission these elements that I say I would most gladly discover and which I certainly want to see fairly represented before I take that step.

* * *

"There are many good people in this state of Maine who do not believe for an instant that you can put out fire by throwing fuel upon it of an inflammable character. They do not believe that if the great curse of liquor is that it is being drunk and creating a thirst and a habit in the people to their ruin, it can be stopped simply by opening wide the doors of the saloons upon the principal streets of our cities and inviting the public. That proposition is not believed by the common people in this state, and you cannot make them believe it. If the object of the law is to curtail, to put down, to stop the occasion of the habit, to stop the use of liquor, if that is the object of it, well and good. The prohibitory law has a tendency to do that. But no man believes, and I do not care whether he is on one side or the other of this question, that making this thing more respectable, putting a high license if you please so it shall be for the express object of the liquor seller to sell all the liquor he can in order to get back his license fee and remunerate himself besides—you cannot make men believe that such a thing as that can tend to the suppression of the drinking habit in this state or in any other. It is contrary to common sense."

Excursions to Boston.

For the N. E. A. meeting at Boston, July 6-10, 1903, the Wabash road will sell tickets at one fare plus $2.00 for the round trip. Choice of routes. Write for handsome illustrated folder giving full particulars. F. A. Palmer, Assistant General Passenger Agent, 97 Adams St., Chicago.

NEVER TOO LATE

To Try A Good Thing.

I am fifty-two years old and for forty years of that time I have been a chronic catarrh sufferer, says Mr. James Geishing, of Allegheny City; with every change of weather my head and throat would be stuffed up with catarrhal mucus.

I could not breathe naturally through the nostrils for months together and much of the time I suffered from catarrh of the stomach. Finally my hearing began to fail and I realized something must be done.

I tried inhalers and sprays and salves which gave me temporary relief, and my physician advised me to spray or douche with Peroxide of Hydrogen. But the catarrh would speedily return in a few days and I became thoroughly discouraged.

I had always been prejudiced against patent medicine, but as everything else had failed I felt justified in at least making a trial.

Our good old family physician, Dr. Ramsdell, laughed at me a little, but said if I was determined to try patent medicines he would advise me to begin with Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, because he knew what they contained and he had heard of several remarkable cures resulting from this use, and furthermore that they were perfectly safe, containing no cocaine or opiates.

The next day I bought a fifty-cent box at a drug store, carried it in my pocket, and four or five times a day I would take a tablet; in less than a week I felt a marked improvement, which continued, until at this time I am entirely free from any trace of catarrh.

My head is clear, my throat free from irritation, my hearing is as good as it ever was and I feel that I cannot say enough in praise of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets.

These tablets contain extract of Eucalyptus bark, blood root and other valuable antiseptics combined in pleasant tablet form, and it is safe to say that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are far superior in convenience, safety and effectiveness to the antiquated treatment by inhalers, sprays and douches.

They are sold by druggists everywhere in the United States and Canada.

MADE $105 THE FIRST MONTH

writes FRED. BLODGETT, of N. Y. J. L. BARRICK, of La., writes: "Am making $3.00 to $8.00 every day I work." MRS. L. M. ANDERSON, of Iowa, writes: "I made $3.80 to $6.50 a day." Hundreds doing likewise. So can you. $5.00 to $10.00 daily made plating jewelry, tableware, bicycles, metal goods with gold, silver, nickel, etc. Enormous demand. We teach you FREE. Write—offer free.

G. GRAY & CO., Plating Works, A Miami Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department

Union Signal

184 La Salle Street
CHICAGO

About Women.

A bacteriologist recently made microscopial examinations of the washings from a woman's train worn in the streets of London, and found it to contain 10,672,000 microbes of disease.

By a recent decree of the French Ministry of Education, women and girls will be allowed hereafter to compete for the Prix de Rome, which enables the winner to spend several years in Italy.

The Illinois legislature will be asked to make an appropriation of $20,000 for the erection of a monument at Galesburg to the memory of Mother Bickerdyke, the famous nurse of the civil war.

Mrs Beulah Morsman has been nominated by the republicans of Schoolcraft county, Mich., to succeed herself as county commissioner of schools. She has served one term and has given excellent satisfaction.

Helen Keller enjoys bicycle riding on the tandem wheel that was presented to her; she also rows well, is an adept at swimming; and horseback riding, with another person as guide, is a favorite pastime with her.

An equal suffrage bill has passed the lower house of the Arizona legislature, by a good majority. Mrs. W. F. Robinson, president of the state Equal Suffrage Association, has been unremitting in labor for the measure.

A negro girl evangelist, Isabella H. Horton, is attracting much attention in Chicago. She is but sixteen years old, unlettered and childish, but has a large following among her own people. She believes that she has a mission to redeem her race from sin, and works with much earnestness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Milbank Anderson is said to be the donor of $1,000,000 to Barnard College for the purchase of three city blocks at Morning Side Heights, New York City, south of the present college buildings. This makes nearly $2,000,000 that Mrs. Anderson and her brother have given to Barnard.

Mrs. Washington A. Roebling, who has recently died, achieved fame as a civil engineer in connection with the Brooklyn bridge. Her husband was chief engineer, and his health giving way, she was obliged to direct the efforts of the workmen. She was the first woman to cross the bridge when it was opened to the public.

Mrs. Mary Wright, of Colorado, has been appointed state dairy commissioner. While she has a flourishing dairy of her own, she owes her appointment to her political record. She has been an active worker in her party, and she was given the office as a mark of appreciation of the influence exerted by women in the campaign.

Mrs. Charlotte E. Wilbour, the oldest club woman in New York, has just been elected president of Sorosis, the "mother of clubs." Mrs. Wilbour was one of its founders, dividing the honor with the late Mrs. Jennie June Croly. She was its first secretary and treasurer, and, in spite of somewhat advanced age, retains much of her early enthusiasm in club work.

The society woman with the hoe surprised the pedestrian of San Francisco recently. She was a member of the California Outdoor Art League, and their work was to plant the seeds of the golden poppy, made by legislative enactment the state's official flower, in all parts of the city where the flowers will be effective. Their work will show, in a golden glow when the poppies bloom.

"Personally conducted" excursions for children will be a feature of the coming World's Fair in St. Louis. A company has been formed to take half a million school children from the Iowa schools to the exhibition, taking care of them while on the road and giving them the advantage of an intelligently prepared program. It is estimated that $20 will cover all expenses for each child from the time of departure until the return.

The first large public meeting of the Vienna Association of Abstaining Women was held February 9, when Frau Dr. L. Morawitz delivered an address on the woman movement, and the alcohol question. Her appeal to the social conscience and the sense of duty in women to unite against one of the greatest evils of modern society made a profound impression. At the close of the meeting fourteen ladies joined the organization.

Miss Rebecca Taylor is the first woman, not a lawyer, to plead her own case before the supreme court of the District of Columbia. She was dismissed from her position in the war department because of her published criticisms of the government's Philippine policy. She contends that her rights as an American citizen to free speech have been infringed, and the rules of the civil service violated.

The annual conference of the National Congress of Mothers will be held this year at Detroit, May 5 to 8. The congress has intrusted the conduct of its business for three years to the board of managers, thus giving more time in the convention for conferences, lectures and discussions. An important feature of the work is the securing of the co-operation between home and school, which has been effected in hundreds of schools on plans outlined by the congress.

In the United States the majority of librarians are women. In Berlin a school for women librarians was opened in 1900, which provides two courses of instruction, one scientific, covering a period of three years. Many private libraries in the old country, notably those of the Royal Historical Society, Manchester College, Oxford, and the Bradford Literary Society, are in charge of women. There are in the United Kingdom over thirty public libraries in their charge.

Quite like a romance reads the story of Miss Mona Clair Erskane, an Illinois girl, whose father died leaving her no funds, and a claim to certain lands in Mexico. On his death bed he advised her to study law and Spanish and to fight for the claim in the courts. She followed his advice, then went to Mexico. She was alone, a stranger, against a rich mining and importing company. She made her own brief, and argued the case before the court. The legal battle lasted two years and now the highest court in Mexico has decided that the Rancho Llane de Oro, 192,000 acres worth millions of dollars belongs to the brave American girl.

A New Club Rate for The Union Signal

Yearly Subscriptions, in

Clubs of Ten or more,

Either new names or renewal, at the special price of

$1.25 each.

Regular Subscription Price, $1.50 per year. Special Rate to Clergymen, Reading Rooms and Public Libraries, $1.00.

A club from every union is most earnestly solicited.

The Union Signal
CHICAGO, ILL.

IN HEALTH. BLOOD CELLS. IN DISEASE.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

Man is a millionaire many times over in the possession of blood cells. Woman is not quite so rich, for scientists have proven that the normal number of red blood cells in adult men is five million; in women four and a half million, to the cubic millimetre. The many million blood cells there are in the average human body is beyond the ordinary person's comprehension. A decrease in the number of red cells is of frequent occurrence; the person "looks pale" in conseqence and is said to be anaemic, and this condition may be due to a great many causes. Lack of good fresh air, healthy breathing, confinement in-doors, poor digestion, sleeplessness and lack of exercise are contributing causes.

SHAPE OF THE CELLS.

The normal red cell is not absolutely round in health, but, in disease, becomes extremely irregular, in shape. Every one can be in perfect health and possess the millions of rich red blood corpuscles if they only know how to go about it. No use bothering about what the future has in store for us—rather should we prepare for life. Dr. R. V. Pierce, consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., advises every man and woman to prepare for a long life by observing Nature's laws. In the first place, if your digestion is run down, and the food you eat is not taken up by the blood and assimilated properly, you need a tonic and digestive corrector, something that will increase the red blood corpuscles; he believes in going about this in nature's own way. Years ago, in his active practice, he found that an alterative extract of certain herbs and roots, put up without the use of alcohol, would put the liver, lungs and heart into fuller and more complete action. This medicine he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery; by assimilating the food eaten, it nourishes the blood, and, instead of the ill-shaped corpuscles, the person's blood takes on a rich red color and the corpuscles are more nearly round. Nervousness is only

THE CRY OF THE STARVED NERVES

For food, and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood the person loses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and feels refreshed in the morning. Dr. Pierce also advises simple diet, work, play, and right exercise, frequent baths to keep the skin and pores clean, and a gentle laxative occasionally for the bowels. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are gently laxative, do not gripe, and are made entirely of vegetable ingredients. Do not allow the waste materials to clog the system and poison it, nor eat too heartily, but when you do, take one of these "Pellets" as an after dinner pill.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol. Some blood medicines do, and when alcohol touches the little red blood corpuscles they begin to shrink and are reduced to broken fragments and shapeless masses. They are fairly cut into pieces and eaten up by the alcohol. Therefore, an alcoholic medicine is not particularly good for the blood.

A $3,000 FORFEIT

Will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., the proprietors and manufacturers of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, if they cannot show the original signatures of the individuals who volunteer their testimonials below, and of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness and reliability of all the multitude of testimonials volunteered by grateful people, in their behalf.

"It is with pleasure that I give my hearty endorsement to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Hon. E. E. Willard, Judge of 11th District, Duval Co., Florida. "It is the most successful remedy that I know of for the weakened condition of the digestive organs which excessive heat or overwork sometimes brings, causing indigestion, sick headache, a disagreeable or bitter taste in the mouth, sleepless nights and a complication of unnatural conditions, making one feel sick all over. Your remedy is scientifically prepared and well calculated to renovate the entire system, cleansing and vitalizing the blood and assisting the stomach to perfect assimilation of food, which will soon restore health and harmony."

"I was taken sick nine years ago with fever," writes Mr. M. M. Wardwell, of Linwood, Leavenworth Co., Kans. "Had the doctor and he broke up the fever all right, but I took diarrhea right away; he couldn't cure it and it became chronic, and then he gave up the case. I got so weak with it and had piles so badly I couldn't lie down, or hardly sit up. Was that way two or three months; thought I would 'never be well again,' but picked up one of Dr. Pierce's Memorandum Books one day, and saw your description of catarrh of the stomach. I thought it hit my case. We had a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the house that was got for mother. You recommend it for catarrh of the stomach, so I began taking it. The one bottle nearly cured me. I got two bottles next time and took one and one-half and was well. I haven't been bothered with diarrhea since."

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER.

If you want to know about your body, read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which can be had for the cost of postage, 31 cents in one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound book, or 21 stamps for the paper-covered volume of 1008 pages. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Signal Notes.

A Fathers' Club, for the purpose of advancing the interests of the children, has been started in Verona, N. J.

Morris and Camp counties, and many towns in Texas as well as Mt. Vernon and La Grange, Ohio, and Johnson City, Tenn., have spoken right on the question of local option.

The Anti-Saloon League's option bill is creating a great stir at Springfield, Ill. One member is said to have received in two days more than 800 letters on the subject.

To Dr. Furbay, of Columbus, O., is given much of the credit for the majority given local option in the election at Frankfort. His addresses made many converts. All saloons will be closed by April 1st.

J. Washinton Logue succeeds Father A. P. Doyle as Secretary of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union. During the latter's term of ten years the organization grew from fifty-five to eighty-five thousand.

A plan is on foot to put an end to Sunday theatrical performances throughout the entire country. The Actor's Church alliance is responsible for the plan, and bills will be presented in every legislature in the United States.

William Shroston Caine, the leader of the temperance element in the House of Commons, died in London, recently. He was a progressive Liberal and represented Cornwall, Camberne Division in the House. He was sixty-one years of age.

A mob of 300 men, women and children armed with axes, indignant at the establishment of a saloon in Williamstown, Ohio, where one had never been, wrecked the building, destroyed the fixtures and poured the liquor into the streets.

An arbitration board consisting of three clergymen, was recently called upon to settle difficulties between the packers and the engineers at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago. Dr. Frank Gunsaulus, Dr. W. M. Lawrence and Father E. A. Kelly were the arbiters.

"Vote Dry for Us," was the inscription on a huge banner carried at the head of a procession of nearly 250 school boys at Girard, Ohio, just before election. Every night after school the boys paraded the town, agitating the interests in the local option fight.

The Oak Grove (Ark.) Temperance Band was started by a few boys who wanted to free the town from saloons. In one year they had increased their membership from twelve to two hundred. They carried Boone County for temperance, and for the first time in several years the county is without saloons.

Local pastors and the Y. M. C. A. officers have inaugurated a fight for stricter enforcement of the Sunday laws in Pine Bluff, Ark. They will endeavor to create a public sentiment in favor of closing meat markets, barber shops, confectionery stores, fruit, cigar and news stands, and to prevent Sunday sports of all kinds.

Mr. Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston millionaire, has established an institution for savings on the farm grounds of his estate. An inducement will be made to the employes to save some of their wages. Four per cent interest will be paid on cash remaining on deposit one year, on deposits of two years standing, five per cent, and on three years or longer, six per cent per annum.

C. E. Stevens, superintendent of the schools of Stoneham, Mass., is quoted as saying that out of 530 boys in the schools of that town, seventy are known to smoke cigarets openly, while fifty more undoubtedly smoke, but not openly. He says the boy smokers are rapidly increasing, and a boy is physically, mentally and morally doomed to destruction so long as the cigaret habit is upon him.

A great university where workers may be scientifically trained in rescue work, is the latest plan of the Salvation Army. The scheme is to have main establishments in London, New York and Chicago, and branches in Melbourne, Toronto, Berlin and Paris from which thousands of workers shall be sent each year to the submerged masses, skilled in every method of rescuing human beings from the underworld of depsair.

Publishers' Notes.

Easter Remembrances

The Easter tide is almost here and with it comes the thought of Easter remembrances. A beautiful line of cards and booklets are to be had from us and we shall take especial pleasure in making up packages of assorted cards for Sunday School classes.

Kindly let us urge that all orders be forwarded EARLY; this will insure perfect satisfaction.

March Responsive Reading.

The March responsive reading on "Christian Citizenship" is written by Mrs. Mary Jewett Telford, National superintendent of the department of Christian Citizenship. This reading portrays beautifully the dovetailing of each department and plainly demonstrates that the thought of Christian Citizenship can be woven into each department of work. Make this the subject of an early meeting. Price, 50 cents per hundred.

A New Club Rate.

We take pleasure in announcing that hereafter a club rate of $1.25 each in CLUBS OF TEN will be granted our patrons. Either new names or renewals will be received in these clubs but to secure the reduction the club must consist of TEN NAMES. Every union that has not at least a club of ten subscribers to the UNION SIGNAL should commence at once to secure one.

The special rate of ONE DOLLAR is made ONLY to clergymen, reading rooms and public libraries.

Tri-colored Badges.

Owing to the great advance in the price of ribbon we are obliged to slightly advance the price of the tri-colored badges. The badges from this time will be 5 cents each, or 50 cents per dozen, instead of 3 cents as formerly. Kindly make a note of this in your catalogue so that it will not be overlooked in placing your next order.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

An Hour in Babyland.

"An Hour in Babyland," by Ada Wallace Unruh, is a plain talk with mothers, and as needful to fathers as well. The language of the book is chaste and tender, and the message is strong and true. Mothers cannot read and follow its teachings without being better mothers to the coming children, to the babies already here, and better advisers concerning the growing lads and lassies who are beginning to think about entering upon the new duties of married life. We would like to introduce this booklet into every W. C. T. U. home in our land. Nature studies, examples that have come to her notice, and confidences from mother hearts, all enrich the pages of Mrs. Unruh's book. The price is 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8914—Kimono.
2 to 10 years.

8924—Lounging Robe with Bell or Bishop Sleeves.
32, 36 and 40 in. bust.

8921—Tucked Blouse.
32 to 42 in. bust.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....,

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

The Mormon Menace

By SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D., LL.D.
AND
HELEN FALLOWS, A.M.

Containing most conclusive and convincing evidence on the Mormon question.

Price, postpaid, 25 cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

A Fight Against Odds

BY KATE ANDERSON

The thrilling anti-cigarette story which has been running through our columns as a serial, will shortly be issued in Book form, illustrated

Price, $1.00

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
Chicago

THE Y. W. C. T. U. MANUAL

By Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Containing page of errata,
By MRS. CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT
which brings it up to date, at the
SPECIAL PRICE OF

15 Cents Postpaid.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

PROGRAMS for an Evening's Entertainment

At the White Queen's Court.
Mrs. Edna Moore Gunnison-Hawley.
Price, 10 Cents.

The Doom of King Alcohol.
Mrs. Clara B. Drake.
Price, 10 Cents.

The Milkmaid's Convention.
Mrs. Laura J. Rittenhouse.
Price, 5 Cents.

An Anti-Cigarette Program.
Mrs. Ida Cole.
Price, 5 Cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for March Reading,

Christian Citizenship.

By Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford,
National Superintendent of the Department of Christian Citizenship.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

The UNION SIGNAL

VOL. XXIX. | NO. 14.

CHICAGO, APRIL 2, 1903.

MONTHLY
MAGAZINE NUMBER

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

BOOKS.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."

Anna A. Gordon.

The biography of Miss Willard, written by one most closely identified with her.

Price, - - - - - - $2 00
Postpaid.

"To the Third Generation."

Hope Daring.

A story of intemperance, showing the effects on the children and grandchildren of a man whom wine was not supposed to injure.

Price, - - - - - - $1.00
Postpaid

"The Man from Glengarry."

A tale of the Ottawa.

Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Postpaid.

"How to Win."

By Frances E. Willard.

Written especially for young women.

Price, postpaid, $1.00.

"By Order of the Prophet."

A tale of the occupation of the Great Salt Lake basin. By Alfred H. Henry, illustrated. "True to history founded upon actual incident, forcible in the telling and strong in the depiction of character, this book is a worthy contribution to the literature and the making of the west."

Price, Postpaid, $1.50.

"Letters from a Self-Made Merchant to His Son"

By George Horace Lorimer. A masterpiece of American humor and sound sense.

Price, postpaid, $1.50.

"Talks to Girls."

Eleanor A. Hunter.

"Talks to Boys."

Eleanor A. Hunter.

These books contain most convincing and earnest advice. Artistically bound in decorated covers

Price, each, - - - 50 cents
Postpaid.

"Two Wilderness Voyagers."

A true story of Indian life, by Franklin Welles Calkins.

Price, postpaid, $1.50.

"Jean Mitchell's School"

By Angelina W. Ray. One of the most entertaining and inspiring books ever issued, and should be read by every teacher in the public schools and every superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Price, postpaid, $1.25.

"The Sky Pilot."

A tale of the foothills.

Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Postpaid.

"White Ribbon Birthday Book."

Anna A. Gordon.

A book composed of quotations from noted women.

Price, - - - - - - $1.00

"Glengarry School Days."

Connor's Latest Work.

This new volume fittingly supplements "The Man from Glengarry" in that it deals with some of the same characters, but in a different period.
Cloth bound.
Illustrated.

Price, - $1.25

"Black Rock."

A tale of the Selkirks.

Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Postpaid.

"Janet Ward."

Margaret E. Sangster.

A meritorious book for girls.

Price, - $1.50
Postpaid

"David Douglas and His Wife."

Mrs. O. W. Scott.

A practical prohibition story.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

"Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers."

By L. Mabel Freese.

A book helpful alike to the public school or Sunday school teacher and interesting to anyone.

Price, postpaid, 50 Cents.

"Those Black Diamond Men."

William F. Gibbons.

A tale of the Anthrax Valley.

Price, - $1.50
Postpaid

"Nineteen Beautiful Years."

Frances E. Willard.

The story of the life of "Sister Mary."

Price, - 60 cents
Postpaid.

"Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine."

Mrs. M. M. Allen.

A book that should be in every household.

Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Postpaid.

"Aunt Abby's Neighbors"

Annie Trumbull Slosson.

A book of New England folk. Fully illustrated.

Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

"The Little Green God."

Caroline Atwater Mason.

A story and study of to-day.

Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

"Studies in Hearts."

Julia MacNair Wright.

A series of charming sketches. Illustrated.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents
Postpaid.

"A Chinese Quaker."

By Nellie Blessing Eyster.

A most interesting story, telling of a young Quaker woman, who, although antagonistic to the Chinese, is led to take a heathen boy in charge, who, under her training, becomes a consistent Friend.

Price, Postpaid, $1.50.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Alice Caldwell Hegan.

A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."

Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

Sunday School Teachers' Bible.

Showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. This Combination of the Old and New Versions is the distinguishing feature of this remarkable book.

Imperial Seal. Divinity Circuit.
Round Corners. Carmine Under Gold Edges.
Price, Postpaid, $2.00.

LOVEY MARY AND MRS. WIGGS

"Lovey Mary."

Alice Hegan-Rice.

All who have read "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will want "Lovey Mary," and further enjoy the quaint humor of Mrs. Wiggs.

Price, postpaid, $1.00.

"A Great Mother."

The life of Madam Willard.
A beautiful gift book.

Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Postpaid.

"How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle."

By Frances E. Willard

A charming book for young people. (Illustrated.)

Price, postpaid, 40c.

"Six of Them."

Mrs. S. M. Perkins.

A cleverly told temperance tale.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents
Postpaid.

"The Opportunity Circle."

Faye Huntington.

A story of good deeds accomplished by young earnest hearts.

Price, 50 cents
Postpaid.

When in need of ANY BOOK, whether listed in our Catalogue or not, favor us with the order. We WANT your book trade and assure you all orders will be promptly filled.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 14. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, APRIL 2, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 4, 5
CONTRIBUTED:
Samuel D. Hastings, Promoted—Heredity. By T. D. Crothers, M. D. 6
Easter Lilies. By Lulu Whedon Mitchell — Promoted: Another of God's High Priestesses. By Ruth Shaffner-Etnier—A Couplet in Snow and Rain. By Fannie B. Damon 7
Paul Lawrence Dunbar-The Poet. By Ida B. Cole—The Anti-Profanity Crusade. By Rev. Roland D. Sawyer 8
Round-the World Temperance Studies. By Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts 9
Under the White Ribbon. By Mary Henry-Rossiter 10
English Literature at Oxford University. By Charlotte E. Joslin, A. M. 11
Conquered. By Kate Lunden-Sunderlin. Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 12
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
The Easter Lily.—The Voice Behind the Lilies. By Julia F. Deane.—Puzzler's Packet 13
EDITORIAL:
The Awards and Recommendations of the Anthracite Coal Commission—The Element of Life—The Eternal Possession 14
What's In a Name—Monthly Bible Reading. By Mrs. R. B. Hall 15
PRESIDENT'S LETTER 15
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 16
W. C. T. U. NOTES 17
AMONG THE NEW BOOKS 18
THE OPTIMIST'S CLUB 19
PARLIAMENTARY DIFFICULTIES 20
PRACTICAL TALKS WITH HOUSEKEEPERS 21
THE LOCAL UNION 22
PUBLISHERS' NOTES 23

News of the Week.

Seventeen thousand Chicago workmen go on strike April 1.

President Roosevelt started on an extensive western trip April 1.

The Dudgeon Anti-Cigaret bill has passed the lower house of the Wisconsin legislature.

The National Council of Women met in annual convention at New Orleans, La., March 26.

It is officially announced that King Edward and Queen Alexandra will visit Ireland in July or August.

The reciprocity treaty between Cuba and the United States, was ratified by the Cuban senate, March 28.

The Illinois house committee on elections has reported the local option bill, with a favorable recommendation.

The Supreme Court of Ohio has declared the Beal local option law constitutional, the decision being uranimous.

The Governor of Tennessee has vetoed the special dispensary bill for the city of Columbia; his arguments making a good campaign document.

The Sultan of Turkey has asked Miss Alice Roosevelt to christen the Ottoman cruiser Medjidia when that vessel is launched from the Cramp yard in May.

Gen. William Booth, Salvation Army commander, welcomed home to London from America by 10.000 people at Albert hall; 400 members of his organization acted as chorus.

It is officially stated that Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman who has been confined in an English prison for thirteen years on a charge of murder, will be released in July, 1904.

Mr. Von Ogden Vogt, of Beloit, Wis., succeeds John Willis Baer as general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. Mr. Vogt was selected by a committee of sixteen, representing thirteen different denominations and all sections of the country.

An Irish land bill introduced in the British parliament last week provides for advances by government to enable tenants to buy landlord's holdings, tenants to pay 3¼ per cent interest on loans. Free grant of $60,000,000 to provide funds until interest payments begin. Advances to tenants limited to $2,500 in congested district and $5,000 elsewhere. Sales to be supervised by three "estate commissioners." Untenanted farms and grazing lands to be sold to neighboring tenants. Estimate of money involved in proposed reform, $500,000,000. Maximum annual charge on British treasury, estimated at $1,950,000, against which it is proposed to commence reductions in the cost of administration in Ireland amounting to $1,250,000 annually forever. The bill provides for sweeping away all arrears of rent except for the year preceding the passage of the act.

General Officers at Evanston. Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon, our National President and vice-president-at-large, returned to Headquarters in Evanston, March 30, after a most successful lecture tour in Indiana. They will spend two weeks at Rest Cottage, perfecting plans for the coming National Convention, and giving personal attention to numerous other matters of National interest, preparatory to their departure for the World's Convention, to be held at Geneva, Switzerland, June 9-11. The official party will sail from New York, May 16.

Samuel D. Hastings. We review on another page the notable career, now terminated by a glorious translation, of Samuel Dexter Hastings, of Wisconsin, prohibitionist, philanthropist and friend. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union had no more devoted ally than this Christian gentleman, who honored the organization and himself by becoming a life member. Mrs. Barker represented us at the service held at the home of Mr. Hastings' daughter, Mrs. H. R. Hobart of Evanston, Saturday morning, March 28. The interment was at Green Bay, Wis.

Dove Slaughter. About the most cowardly "fun" of which the American can boast is that of live-bird trap shooting, a cruel diversion which, sad to say, is gaining in popularity among boys and sportsmen. It is said that last spring there was "one series of live-bird shoots in which nearly 20,000 pigeons were slaughtered in a single week." The brutalizing effect upon hundreds of boys employed each year to feed traps and club to death the wounded birds that fall within bounds, is something that no state can afford to overlook. Let us have a bill in every legislature which, if passed, will make it illegal to use birds as "flesh and blood targets."

The Commissioners' Report. On another page will be found a summary of the report of the anthracite coal commission. The appointment of this tribunal, its five months' arduous labors, and its findings, as set forth in the report, together constitute a notable victory for arbitration. Notwithstanding the contention of the operators that there was "nothing to arbitrate," and that the public should mind its own business, the people demanded and secured an investigation and a trial. That the investigation would be thorough, the trial fair and impartial, the decision just and equitable, was assured by the high character of the seven men selected by the President as arbitrators, but that they would succeed in pleasing everybody was hardly expected. It is a triumph of good statesmanship that the awards are, on the whole, satisfactory to the chief parties concerned, the mine workers, the mine owners and the public. The miners especially have reason to rejoice. The commission does not hesitate to place the responsibility of the strike where it properly belongs—upon the shoulders of the operators—and the men will not regret now the long and severe conflict ending with the trial before the bar of public opinion. The interests of organized labor and of industrialism generally have gained immeasurably by this experience.

Lost by the Strike. The losses occasioned by the anthracite coal strike are estimated at a total of $99,100,000; to the mine owners, $46,100,000; to the employes in wages, $25,000,000; to the transportation companies, $28,000,000.

A Signal Victory. The genuine prohibition sentiment of Kansas has of late been clearly mirrored in the state legislature. The supreme court deciding that the injunction feature had been repealed by legislation enacted in 1901, a more stringent injunction bill was drafted and introduced into the senate. It was forthwith advanced to the third reading, in a few days it passed the senate by a vote of twenty-six to one, and the day following went through the house by a vote of eighty-four to nine. No more conclusive proof than this could be brought forward to controvert the statement that prohibitory legislation is no longer desirable.

Women's Daily Paper. An afternoon daily newspaper, run exclusively by women, to be called "The Daily Bulletin," is what Chicago announces for the near future. Nearly all of the $100,000 necessary for the enterprise has already been subscribed. The paper will be distinctively a newspaper, covering the different classes of news. In outlining the policy of this new venture, Dr. Frances Dickinson, one of the promoters, says: "As to crime, we shall publish news of that character, but it will be written from a scientific standpoint. None but doctors who understand the causes of many crimes will be assigned on such subjects." Higher wages are promised to the staff than most Chicago papers are paying to-day. Here will be an opportunity for woman to show what she can do in the business world, for her environment is that of a typical American city distinguished for pluck, and indomitable courage.

Mrs. Hunt Honored. The International Anti-Alcoholic Congress, made up of representatives of the governments and universities of Europe, is to hold its ninth biennial meeting this year in Bremen, Germany, during Easter week. The official invitations on behalf of this Congress are issued over the signatures of the Secretary of the Home Department of the German Empire and the Mayor of Bremen, the honorary presidents. A special request has been sent by the officers of that Congress to President Roosevelt asking that Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Boston, Mass., well known as the leader of the scientific temperance education movement in this country, be appointed to represent the United States at the Congress to present what have proved here the best methods for such education. In response to this request, letters of credit have been issued to Mrs. Hunt by the Department of State at Washington, signed by Secretary Hay, and the courtesies of the Congress have been bespoken for her by Baron von Sternberg, the German minister at Washington. As a preventive of alcoholism, scientific temperance education in the public schools, although better developed and more universal in the United States than elsewhere, has in reality become a world-question as its relation to abstinence and consequent national power is observed. It is to be a pronounced feature of the Bremen Congress.

Prohibition in Canada.

Elizabeth Griswold Waycott, Correspondent.

MONTREAL, Canada, March 27.—For more than forty years the movement for prohibition has been in progress, meeting with varying degrees of success. The first prohibitory law to be enacted was local option, which still serves in some municipalities. Then came, in 1864, the Dunkin Act which dealt with counties, and allowed the sale of liquor in quantities of five gallons or more; only one county in the Dominion still holds this in force, and it seems likely to be repealed at any time.

In 1878, another county measure called the Canada Temperance or Scott Act, was passed by the Dominion Parliament; this law was prohibitory and was adopted at once by nine cities and seventy-three counties, but a campaign of repeal has reduced the number to one city and twenty-seven counties. The Dominion government was forced to give further consideration to this question in 1891, owing to public agitation, and a commission was appointed to gather evidence. For years the commissioners traveled over the country, and in 1895 sent in a voluminous report with a majority against and a minority for prohibition.

Meanwhile the provincial legislatures took action, Manitoba leading in 1892 with a plebiscite which gave a majority of 12,485 in favor of the principles of prohibition. Then followed Prince Edward Island in 1893 with a majority of 7,226; Ontario and Nova Scotia a year later reporting the same result with majorities of 81,769 and 31,401. New Brunswick followed in line declaring in favor of prohibition. Legislation was not passed because of the doubtful power of the provinces to constitutionally pass this law.

In 1898 the question again became national and a plebiscite majority of 13,687 for prohibition, Quebec Province being the only one with a majority against. The government, when called upon to legislate, refused because only 23 per cent of the electors declared themselves in favor, the total vote being almost 44 per cent.

Again provincial agitation began, Manitoba leading. The Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, leader of the opposition in the legislature, promised to meet the wishes of the people, and after his election in 1900, a law was passed forbidding the sale of liquor except in drug stores, where it could be procured under the certificate of a physician. The manufacture of liquor for export was not forbidden, but free drinks and the dispensing of liquor by the flask or bottle to friends was prohibited. The penalty for violating this act was severe, the first offence calling for a fine of not less than $200, nor more than $1,000; and the second, imprisonment for three months, with hard labor. The legality of this act was at once disputed. The first test was in the provincial courts, where the measure was declared "ultra vires" of the legislature. An appeal was made to the Privy Council, the highest judicial body in the country, where the ablest lawyers argued pro and con. Judgment was at length given sustaining the law. In the meantime, Premier Roblin had succeeded Mr. Macdonald, and decided on a referendum, which resulted, on April 2, in the defeat of the measure. Many prohibitionists refused to vote, claiming that the act should be enforced like all other laws on the statute books.

Then interest was transferred to Ontario, the decision of the Privy Council opening the way for Ontario to fulfill the long-standing pledge, that the full extent of provincial power should be used. A referendum, the provisions of which are similar to the defeated Manitoba liquor act, was taken on December 4, 1902.

The result of this vote is well-known; the exact figures have fallen slightly short of an aggregate of 200,000. For the liquor act, 199,749, and against, 104,539, majority being the gratifying number of 95,210. The conditions made necessary for the act to be adopted was 213,723.

While all this agitation has been going on, successful efforts have brought about more stringent license laws. Stronger restrictions have been put upon the sale of liquor, applying to certain persons, hours and legal holidays; the reduction of licenses has been most marked. The decrease in Ontario represented one license to 700 people, as against one license to 278 people twenty-five years ago. British Columbia is the worst drink-cursed Province in the Dominion with 8¾ gallons per capita, and indictable cases for crime are in proportion, being 156 per 1,000 of the population; Prince Edward Island is at the other end of the scale with ¾ gallons per capita and indictable cases are 18 to 1,000. This will encourage prohibitionists to greater activity, and confirm public opinion that the present license laws serve best to reduce crime.

Institute Work in California.

Dorcas J. Spencer, Correspondent.

San Luis Obispo has held its first Institute. On the promise of the state corresponding secretary to help them out, the county president, Mrs. M. H. Whitmer, the daughter of an old crusader, and a most efficient worker, prepared a program in which her own women presented several departments, notably that of Franchise, and freely discussed several others.

MRS. M. H. WHITMER.

Mrs. Dorcas Spencer gave them her impressions of the National convention and urged the importance of additional departments. Teachers and school officials were invited to hear her address on School Savings Banks and take part in discussion of the subject. A lady present told of a young girl who had by this means accumulated money enough, when she entered the high school, to buy herself a cabinet organ and pay for music lessons during the high school course.

A medal contest in the evening filled every part of the church. The Institute closed next day with a Mothers' Meeting, in which much interest was shown.

The observance of Red Letter days is growing on the unions. Williard Day, in February, was very generally observed, and more than usual attention and greater care in programs have been evidenced on Neal Dow's birthday. The testimony to that comes in calls for prohibition literature, and a greater interest in Neal Dow's personality.

Miss Webb, president of Fresno county, has just had the state organizer, Mrs. L. F. King, at work a month in her county with fine results. Increased interest and new members always come where Mrs. King goes. Fresno is booming Medal Contests.

"Drys" Win in Robertson.

MT. OLIVET, KY., March 24.—The election on the local option question resulted in a majority of 269 for the drys. There has not been an open barroom in this county for twenty years, and not a murder in the county since 1887.

Local Option Lost in Delaware.

Lila Wilson Aron, Correspondent.

WYOMING, DEL., March 24.—The local option bill was lost by one vote; the people, though disappointed and sorry, are not discouraged, but will continue the work. A correction should be made in the number of signatures petitioning the bill. The correct number of men, women and boys and girls over sixteen years of age was 15,069, not 1,503 as given in THE UNION SIGNAL a few weeks ago.

Dover union observed Memorial Day for Miss Willard on Sunday evening, March 22, taking the opportunity of filling the pulpit while the pastor of the M. E. church was at conference. Mrs. Emma Caulk, state president, gave the address. Smyrna union had Mrs. Ella Boole, of New York, with them morning and evening of March 22, in the M. E. church.

One of the soldier boys at Ft. Delaware, whom Mrs. Caulk tried to persuade to sign the pledge when she visited the fort a few weeks ago, has written her since, sending a coupon to a W. C. T. U. pledge card which he has signed.

LETHA M. JOSEPHS.

JANIE WILSON.

Miss Janie Wilson, state Y secretary, who is enthusiastic about the work, has written to every Y in the state asking them to observe Mrs. Barnes' birthday, April 14, by holding an entertainment. Georgetown Y has recently had a very successful social, when they secured new members, and think the other members are gaining interest. Another earnest young worker in the state is Miss Letha M. Josephs, of Milford, state superintendent of Medal Contests. They are preparing for a contest in her town under her special training and she willingly offers her assistance to any union in the state wishing to have a contest.

The county conventions are to be as follows: Kent county, Harrington, April 16; Sussex county, Bridgeville, April 23; New Castle county, Hillis union, Wilmington, April 30. Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Thacher are to be present at the latter place, and Mrs. Thacher at the other two.

To the Clergy Who Advocate License Measures.

Eva Kilbreth Fowler, Correspondent.

TO those gentlemen of the cloth (and presumably of the highest motives) who have within recent days so assiduously advocated license measures in several New England states—measures sure to work for the interest of the liquor dealer and liquor dealing, whether adopted under the name of high license, or state control, or dispensary—to the clergy who have been conspicuous champions of these measures, we respectfully submit a few questions:

How can you conscientiously vote for the licensing (or the restricted (?) licensing, if you will) of any evil? On what possible authority do you claim that men "indifferent to the interests of prohibitory laws and their proper enforcement," will suddenly become the jealous guardians of license laws? If "prohibition does not prohibit," then why, at the last annual convention of the Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association in Pittsburg, June 12, 1902, was a resolution offered to the effect that the president of the association be authorized to appoint a committee of three or more to formulate a model license law and to submit the same to all the legislatures of the various states, said resolution having this very significant preamble:

"Whereas, the agitation in favor of prohibition is increasing to such an alarming state all over the country that the very life of our business is threatened; and whereas, it has, therefore, become necessary for the trade to take united action towards defending its rights; and whereas, it is the opinion of a large number of the members of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America that that association is the one through and by which work of this kind should be inaugurated and pushed to a successful finish; now, therefore, be it resolved, etc., etc."

The resolution offered we have already indicated, and we now respectfully put this question to the clergy favoring and openly advocating license measures:

How can you bring yourselves to do this when the Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America claimed itself to be the association "by and through which such a system must be inaugurated and pushed to a successful finish"?

Mr. Sherwell, while entitled, no doubt, to the respect given to him by so many English philanthropists and reformers, nevertheless came from his drink-ridden England to our New England with eyes and heart set upon detecting all possible flaws in the prohibition law wherever he might find them. It is to be regretted that his book, "The Temperance Problem," which gives so prejudiced a view of the situation as Mr. Sherwell found it in his visit of 1899, has fallen into the hands of so many honest but too credulous readers.

The speech of Mr. Battell lies before me as I write—the speech which Mr. Battell of Vermont made in the house when introducing his bill—and we see that his conclusions, by his own acknowledgment, were drawn largely from "The Temperance Problem."

If we are going to be credulous, why not give to the Prohibitory Law some of our surplus credulity and drop our "Doubting-Thomas" attitude?

District Convention at Alexandria, La.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, LA., March 30.—The third district W. C. T. U. convened at Alexandria. The state president, Miss May C. Walker, of Baldwin, presided.

Mrs. N. E. Oliver, state corresponding secretary, reported four new unions and forty members, with good collections on her recent itinerary. Rev. C. C. Miller and Attorney Holloman gave short, but appreciative addresses. Greetings were received from the National President, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, from Mrs. A. M. Zable, so long the faithful state corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Emma White, the former state recording secretary.

Mrs. W. A. White, of Pollock, was selected district president and Mrs. L. B. Baynard, of Alexandria, treasurer. With the officers from Pollock and Alexandria, it seems that the headquarters of the third district has been removed into a section of the country which until recently was unorganized territory for the W. C. T. U.

An institute programme was arranged for the two days, and the evening meetings were made bright and attractive by recitations, and music—mandolin and vocal.

The three state officers explained the different departments of work, to the profit of the delegates present; and the concensus is that the Alexandria convention is the best ever held in the Third district.

Miss Walker went to Boyce on Sunday and organized there. Mrs. Oliver reports two new unions at Loring and Converse since the convention. Mrs. Hoffman was at Lake Charles, where she gave an excellent address on the 18th.

Mid-Year Executive Meeting in Ohio.

Anna D. Stillwell, Correspondent.

THE mid-year executive committee meeting of the Ohio W. C. T. U. was held in Mount Vernon, March 10-13. The members were delightfully entertained by the local union, which last year won the National banner for the largest increase in membership, and which, under the able leadership of Mrs. Cora Spitzer, has recently aided in a local option campaign resulting in a "dry" victory of 279 for the city and in banishing the last saloon from the county.

The state president, Mrs. Annie W. Clark, of Columbus, presided, and gave an encouraging report of the past six months. The Beal law local option agitation throughout the state is arousing and educating public sentiment. The revised hand-books have proved the best helps ever sent out by the state union. Many new unions are being organized, and thirty new L. T. L.'s and six Y's have been formed.

Mrs. Lillian Burt, editor of "The Ohio Messenger," reported 5,500 subscribers, with all bills met. County presidents and state superintendents gave encouraging items and suggestions.

Mrs. Mary D. Ogle, president of Marietta union, described the good government campaign in that city, conducted by the W. C. T. U., by which moral conditions were greatly improved and good city officers elected.

Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins, of Cleveland, gave a valuable paper on "Pioneer Temperance Work," which it was voted to place in the state W. C. T. U. archives.

Mrs. Ella Roller, president of Hamilton county, reported plans for entertaining the National Convention in Cincinnati next November.

Copies of the proposed new constitution, reported by a committee appointed at the last state convention, are to be sent to each member of the executive for consideration. Some radical changes are proposed, most of them bringing Ohio more in line with the National's way of doing things.

The first evening a grand gold medal contest was held, Miss Johnson, of Fredericksburg, receiving the medal.

Wednesday afternoon there was a fine demonstration by the school children, led by Mrs. J. Frank Smith and Mrs. Carrie Tilton. Fully 600 children marched to the church, where they sang songs and gave salutes.

A successful platform meeting was held the second evening, with ten-minute addresses by Miss Frances Ensign, state corresponding secretary, and by Miss Quinby, Miss Thomas and Mesdames Stone, Richards and Romans.

MISS FRANCES ENSIGN,
State Corresponding Secretary.

MRS. ANNIE W. CLARK,
State President.

MRS. LILLIAN BURT,
Editor "Our Messenger."

Legislative and Other Work in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Augusta E. Strong, Correspondent.

BARABOO, Wis., March 28.—Wisconsin W. C. T. U. is working through its superintendent of the legislative department, Mrs. M. A. B. Smith, for the passage of the anti-cigaret bill before the state legislature, and with good prospects of success, the bill having recently been engrossed preparatory to its final passage.

The equal suffrage bill has also had attention and has been ably urged by the superintendent of franchise, Dr. Maude M. Sanders. The outcome is not as yet assured, but the voices of several of our ablest and most earnest women have been heard on both these bills, and we feel sure that legislators who have heretofore ignored us, or, at least, have been indifferent to our cause, are now giving the subject earnest thought.

The winter meeting of our state board of directors was held in Milwaukee and was unusually well attended. An invitation from Eau Claire unions for our next convention was accepted, and preparations are already being made for "the best convention of all." The program committee arranged the program for the convention at the same time, and one interesting feature of the occasion will be "Demonstration Night," when, it is hoped, new interest may be awakened in the departments of our work and the people may become better enlightened as to our methods and the good we are trying to do.

Several unions are working for the five-dollar prize offered by Mrs. Mary C. Upham, state president, for correct answers to a list of questions arranged by a special committee upon our Annual Report of 1902 and the Annual Leaflet of the National W. C. T. U. for the same year. The object, of course, in the minds of the president and the committee, is the more thorough acquaintance of members with the organization to which they belong.

Mrs. Florence D. Richards, of Ohio, is a favorite in Wisconsin and is again with us to work among the unions until about May 1. She was in Milwaukee one week and some of the prominent daily papers of that city gave good reports of her meetings. They seem generous in their estimate of her ability and appreciative of the efforts of the W. C. T. U. towards purity, clean living and righteousness in a city so famous for its saloons and breweries. The Federation of Unions in Milwaukee seems to be gaining ground and is securing the attention of many people who are beginning to realize its earnestness of purpose and its power for good.

MRS. S. D. WARNER,
Credited with securing the largest number of members for the W. C. T. U., of Los Angeles, Cal.

Women Attack Saloon Evil.

CHICAGO, March 27:—With a view to attracting North and West Side street railway men from saloons, at which they are said to spend their time and transact business, fifty women met last evening at 984 West Madison street and organized the Women's Alliance.

The plan of the Alliance is to rent a room in the vicinity of each car barn where the railway employes can rest while off duty, secure their working cards, and transact other business connected with their union. At the present time, it was declared by Mrs. Anna Finsterbach, who is at the head of the movement, most of this is done in the back room of some saloon near the car barns.

The first step will be taken to-day in order to have rooms in the vicinity of the Western avenue barns when the April working cards are distributed among the men.

World's Convention Program.

Anna A. Gordon, Correspondent.

EVANSTON, Ill., March 23.—It is not possible to give a full program of the convention of the World's W. C. T. U. in Geneva, Switzerland, June 9-11, but its general features have been outlined as follows:

The executive committee will meet on Monday, June 7, in an all-day session. Tuesday will be a devotional day, the program to be arranged by Miss Elizabeth Greenwood, superintendent of the Evangelistic department. The Convention will open on Wednesday morning, when there will be the usual roll-call, appointment of committees, report of the executive committee, address of the president, and reports of the secretary and treasurer. The afternoon meeting will be given up to reports of superintendents and short addresses by representatives from different countries. The programs for the morning and afternoon meetings on Thursday and Friday will be of a similar character, with reports from round-the-world missionaries, considerations of appeals for new workers in different countries, discussions of departmental work and of questions vital to the best interests of the World's Union, etc.

As there is no doubt about the adoption of an amendment to the constitution by the executive committee, which will bring the election of officers and the consideration of the executive committee reports into the Convention itself, there will be an opportunity for comparison of views and discussion of important questions which heretofore have not been a feature of our World's Conventions.

There will be a devotional meeting every morning at nine o'clock, preceding the opening of the Convention, and department conferences will be arranged in order that delegates may have ample time for discussion of our varied lines of work. On the first evening there will be addresses of welcome and responses. One evening meeting will be given to one or two-minute speeches from as many of the delegates as can be heard within the time allotted to the meeting, and another will be devoted to a platform meeting, with eminent speakers from different countries.

There are numerous invitations for afternoon teas, garden fetes, receptions, excursions on the lake and banquets, and we shall wish there were more than twenty-four hours in the day in order that we may attend to all the important business that will come before us and, in addition, accept these numerous and kind invitations for social functions where we may become better acquainted with each other and enjoy the delightful hospitality offered us by our Swiss friends.

Miss Slack writes that temperance friends in Geneva are planning for a large demonstration for the girls of that city, when we shall hope to have addresses from Y representatives. It is hoped also that there will be a Band of Hope meeting on a large scale. On one of the afternoons of the Convention we are planning for an informal reception for the delegates, in order that we may meet one another socially.

Every mail is now bringing us names of delegates whom we shall have the pleasure of meeting in Geneva. Our World's W. C. T. U. treasurer, Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson, is planning to attend the Convention, and we hope there may be a large party from Canada. Later we shall be able to send a list of delegates as far as heard from.

Activity Along Many Lines in Connecticut.

M. Josephine Lockrow, Correspondent.

MERIDEN, Conn., March 30.—The Loyal Temperance Legion work is very active in our state at present. The general secretary of the Branch sends the following:

"Companies A and B, of Hartford county, have been organized at New Britain, and anti-cigaret work inaugurated in the public schools of Pawcatuck, the teachers aiding. A class of nine boys and girls of a school L. T. L. in Hanover held a medal contest. A fine program was well rendered before a good audience. The medal was won by a boy of twelve."

Middlesex county has published a directory which will be very helpful. The Deep River union has had four of the best entertainments ever given in the place. Gospel temperance meetings are held, being union Sunday evening services, with good speakers, and are well attended. Two large barrels filled with reading matter, clothing and comfort bags have been sent to the "Seaman's Bethel" in Boston. Three yearly and fifty ten-weeks subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL have been given away, also twenty yearly subscriptions to a temperance paper for the village boys and girls. Essex union rejoices over their free-will offering, which was $20.50.

The union at Waterbury has been obliged to give up their mission rooms where they have long held their meetings, and for want of funds their Rescue Mission has also been closed. But the Christian Alliance, with which some of their members are identified, very kindly offered the use of their room, where the weekly meetings are held, also gospel temperance meetings every Sunday afternoon. The Mission Sunday School is continued, finding a place of meeting with the Salvation Army. The city is suffering from a long continued street railroad strike.

Samuel Dexter Hastings, Promoted.

A GREAT friend of ours is gone; gone in a good old age, full of honor, full of love, full of hope. He was, nay, he is, eighty-seven years of age —the Hon. Samuel D. Hastings, of Wisconsin.

Mr. Hastings was one of the most noted philanthropists and reformers in the country. Born in Leicester, Mass., in 1816, he came to young manhood when the public conscience was stirred to the depths by the iniquity of the slave system. He was intimately associated with William Lloyd Garrison, John G. Whittier and Wendell Phillips in the creation of abolition sentiment. Removing to Wisconsin, then a territory, in 1846, Mr. Hastings became a member of the first state assembly. He served four terms as state treasurer, from 1857 to 1865, and during that time had charge of the disbursement of the state appropriations for the soldiers and their families. Later he identified himself with the Prohibition party and for the last twenty years had been a member and treasurer of the national executive committee.

Mr. Hastings was at the head of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Wisconsin for many years, and for several terms was chief executive of that order in the world. In the organization of this society he crossed the Atlantic many times and spent two years, from 1874 to 1876, in Australia.

Mr. Hastings was Prohibition candidate for Congress in 1882, and in 1884 was choice of that party for governor of the state.

Among the other offices held by him were those of treasurer of the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, curator of the State Historical Society, trustee of the state insane hospital, president of both the state and national Congregational conventions and a trustee of Beloit College and Rockford Seminary.

HON. SAMUEL D. HASTINGS.

"We live but once," Joseph Cook used to say; "let us strike home, for we are going home." That might have been the life motto of our friend.

We speak of Mr. Hastings as our friend. He loved the temperance cause; more than that, he loved all temperance workers. He had a great, tender, strong heart of friendship, not only for the temperance leaders and workers of a generation ago, but as well for those of our particular time. For all, everywhere, who strive to make the world in any wise better, to make homes safer and happier, for all who would lessen the temptation of youth and strengthen their aims and ambitions for the true nobility; for all who, in the words of Gladstone, would make it harder to do wrong and easier to do right, Mr. Hastings was perpetually offering the open heart of a great friendship. And, altogether naturally, his life became the embodiment of all the benedictions.

He believed in prohibition. Some men had no need of it; but, alas, in every community there are only too many men, younger and older, who do need its protection, and who ought to have it. He believed in state prohibition; for a state is in truth a commonwealth, and therefore, as a commonwealth, it has the right to enact and enforce a policy for the common protection and well-being of all its citizens; and that it was its clear duty to do this.

He believed, also, in constitutional prohibition, as a vital part of the fundamental law of the commonwealth, voicing the specific and definitive conviction and will of the people as a whole. Mr. Hastings was honorably among the very first temperance leaders in advocating the principle of putting this home protection into the constitution.

And so THE UNION SIGNAL, speaking for the whole army of earnest, out-and-out temperance workers, men and women, in this and in other countries, can do no other than speak of this venerable man, this strong and beautiful personality, this life-long reformer, with something of the Master's own pity in heart, as our friend.

HEREDITY.

BY T. D. CROTHERS, M. D.

THE following incident has deepened my previous impressions of the extent of heredity and the unknown laws which control the impressions that go down from one generation to another.

Many years ago a patient, dying from consumption, confided to me the fact that the great dream of her life had been to write a story which would be read and be popular in the world. This secret ambition began in early life and seemed to have followed the reading of some of Scott's novels. She was a woman in humble circumstances with a moderate education, who had married early and from circumstances had been forced to live away from society with few opportunities for becoming acquainted with books. The care of an invalid husband and parents had absorbed all her time. The Bible, a few stray novels, and the weekly paper had constituted all the books she had read.

The ambition to write a book had been the secret dream of her life, and under the pledge of secrecy she told me of her disappointments and failures to do more than dream of this accomplishment. Soon after this she died, leaving a daughter four years old, who was taken into the family of a relative to live. The daughter was educated very carefully and seemed to show no particular taste for literary matter or work. Her taste seemed to be in the line of music and painting. When about twenty years of age she married, and before the end of the year her husband died. This event was followed by a long period of illness and a sudden change in all her tastes and habits. She now began reading stories, and for months she seemed to have no other thought than to read books of fiction and biography. Then she began to write stories for the weekly papers, and she talked frankly of her intense desire to be an author, and that this had become the absorbing thought of her life. This ambition is now realized, and she is of the rising story writers of the day.

The ambition of the mother materialized in the daughter. The daughter could not have been aware of the mother's ambition, being too young to understand it at the time the mother died. The mother seemed to think that this dream of her life, which she had concealed through all the years, might be a sin, and she confessed it to me, asking for my opinion, as she thought she had done wrong to spend her energies in thinking about it. My assurance that it was a natural impulse shared in common with many persons, relieved her mind, but she enjoined secrecy upon me. The daughter's sudden literary turn, following misfortune and sickness, and the growth of the same ambition, could be assigned only to the influence of heredity. How the impression of the mother's mind could remain latent in the brain of the daughter and only burst out after a long period, is a mystery.

I have met many instances in which the religious impulses of parents appeared in their children long years after, without any previous inclinations or favoring conditions. A chaplain in the Civil war, of very strong religious impulses, died leaving two little boys, the one four and the other two. The mother having previously died, these little children were brought up in Girard College without any religious training. Years afterwards, one became a contractor and the other a merchant. Both were skeptical and irreligious men. Suddenly, without any special exciting causes, they both began to take up religious studies and in time they became intensely religious. Both men are now living, and each is a very active, devout exhorter, one in the Methodist church and the other in the Presbyterian.

This appears to me to be another example of the transference of mental heredity from parents to children. We all recognize the re-appearance of physical peculiarities of the parents in the children, also the transmission of traits of character, and may it not be possible for the ambitions and purposes of the parents to pass over to the next generation? It is stated of the mother of Jonathan Edwards that it was the great dream of her life that her son should be an eminent clergyman. To this end she, no doubt, gave all the physical aids in her power, besides constant prayer.

If it should prove to be true in the future studies of heredity that the intense thought and longings of parents can be projected into the minds of their children, to continue and make possible what they had failed to accomplish, a new realm of forces will be open for our use. In my studies of heredity I have often been impressed with peculiar tastes and delicate traits of character foreign to the every-day life of the hardened inebriates and drinking men, whose lives had been at variance with all that suggested beauty and refinement. From inquiries and study, I have found that these were traits of their ancestors, particularly of mothers. In some instances where the mothers had died and they could not have known of these characteristics in infancy, it was evident that they were inherited. In one example, a man who had never been connected with any church, and was apparently a skeptic, always bowed his head unconsciously at the sight of the cross. He could not explain why he did it, but he said it was simply his habit. His mother had been a very devoted church woman, and this trait was, no doubt, transmitted to her son and had become an automatic act which he was powerless to control.

In another instance, a skeptic and materialist knelt at the side of his bed and put up his hands in silent supplication before retiring at night. This he explained as something that he could not help; he was simply impelled to do it. His mother had died in his infancy, and when a boy at school he had noticed that his roommate did this, and becoming impressed with the idea that it was right, he had since continued this act himself. He is now unable to sleep until he kneels beside the bed and raises his hands in silent supplication. There was, no doubt, heredity in this. The mother's act of prayer was so large a part of her life that it was transmitted to her son and appeared in him all unconsciously.

These are only hints of the immortality of good deeds and good thoughts in the great world of heredity of which we know so little.

Hartford, Conn.

Easter Lilies.

By Lulu Whedon Mitchell.

FULL blown, behold them in their silvery ranks,
Near by the murmuring streamlet's mossy banks,
Pure chalices of perfume and sweet dew,
Uplifted to the Easter skies' clear blue.
They shed such radiance of love and peace,
Thoughts inharmonious and selfish cease;
Uplifted, rapt, we catch the winnowing
Of some bright seraph's overbending wing.

For holy are the pathways where they spring,
The smile of God still on them lingering,
They bear the message of His love divine,
Of light the herald and of hope the sign.
Howe'er in dust the roots of life be set,
Arise, O soul, above earth's care and fret,
Make thou a garden of thine own small place,
With Easter bloom, brave heart and happy face.

Evanston, Ill.

Promoted:—Another of God's High Priestesses.

By Ruth Shaffner-Etnier.

EARTH would be vastly poorer than it is without the life of Frü Thorbjörg Sveinsdottir, who was undoubtedly the most remarkable woman of that most remarkable north country, Iceland.

So far as human insight can penetrate, this strong leader lacked no natural or acquired grace. She was the embodiment of the ideal woman. Strong as she was tender, brave as she was loving, broad as she was discerning, masterful as she was womanly, her great mind brought every one to recognize her leadership in all upward and onward movements, and that without any effort on her part to have it so. Unassuming as a little child, this giant-woman resembled in character more nearly our Frances Willard than any one else I have ever known. Had she been born in a country less remote from the great life-centers or even in her own selected land, a decade later, her name would now easily take rank with those of our recognized greatest women.

Frü Thorbjörg was the aunt and foster-mother of that younger and most promising Icelandic woman, our first National president of the Icelandic W. C. T. U., Olafia Johannsdottir, and no natural daughter could have rendered her more loyal and loving devotion. Upon her the mantle of her aunt has undoubtedly fallen, and to her the people will naturally turn for leadership as they continue their struggle towards the consummation of many of the ideals avowed by her predecessor. In a private letter received from Olafia, she gave the following brief and tender account of her aunt's life and triumphant entry into her own "dear spirit-land," which I pass on to the sisterhood of white-ribboners whose privilege it should long ago have been to know more about this "Great-heart of the North."

"After six months of awful suffering my dear aunt has finally passed through the dark valley. She is at rest, but I am left in its shadows, and it is bitter work trying to get back into the world, to again assume old duties without her. She maintained her immense power of will and energy of body till the last, and that was what made it so difficult and painful to properly care for her. You who have known her and have looked into her burning soul can understand what we have passed through.

"In 1828 Thorbjörg Sveinsdottir was born, the daughter of a minister in the far east of the island. When twenty-five years of age she went to Copenhagen for the study of nursing, and all that the schools would then allow to women in the line of medicine. Returning to Reykjavik, for forty years she followed her chosen work, always with increasing fidelity and skill. She was recognized as an unusually skilled and clever woman in her line and especially as a trusted physician for the young. The city doctors sought and trusted her advice and often asked parents to avail themselves of her services. There is no doubt that had she been born after women were lawfully admitted to the study of the sciences, she would have been a famed physician.

"Very early in life she began the study of politics and took a leading hand in elections and other public functions. Her knowledge of international law was remarkably comprehensive, and she knew the main points of each national code, especially as they affected women and children. She had paid particular attention to the laws in our own several states and could tell with surprising accuracy many points of difference as they obtain in different states. She had no special use for such mental accumulation except as it broadened her intelligence and united her to the interests of all humanity.

FRU THORBJÖRG SVEINSDOTTIR.

"She fearlessly took part in public discussions, and was acknowledged to be one of the most powerful agitators of this country. Among women she has always been their leader, first arousing them, then organizing them for systematic service. She was one of the founders of the great Icelandic Woman's Association, affiliated with the World's W. C. T. U., which aims at full suffrage for women, besides other matters. She was ever its soul and heart, and died as its president, having held that office for the past five years. She was also a strong arm in the work of the Good Templars, having joined them in 1886. For the Icelandic Woman's Association she worked with that burning energy and devoted love which characterized all her efforts. When I went to the London convention, two years ago, and later to work for some months in Norway, the office of National president was passed on to her, so that she died as its head. Her last words for temperance were these: 'Nothing less than Prohibition for Iceland! Let us claim nothing less and we will get it!'

"When an idea got a hold in her mind she saw no hindrances to its execution. She absolutely believed in its victory and then set to work with an energy as though it would take only a few days to complete the task. Her zeal never tired; she endured as seeing the invisible, utilizing every opportunity in the belief that the least neglect might imperil the whole thing. She always expected people to measure up to her own abilities, and the only disappointment that ever seemed to overtake her was when she found they did not. These disappointments, however, she threw off in a moment, and to the next fellow-being she met she would exhibit the same warmth and belief in human nature. Her patriotism was of the kind that moulds the fate of nations.

"She passed from our human touch the 6th of January. Almost her last request was that no flowers should be used at her burial, but that any who might have thought to contribute such gifts, should send them to sick mothers or give their value towards the founding of a fund to provide comforts for poor women in need."

With a courage peculiarly characteristic of great souls, Olafia continues:

"The temperance work is still going on. I have not been to a meeting for months, but now I shall again begin to watch for the people who want to open saloons. The law-suits we had here last year seem to have made some good people timid, but I do not care much for lawyers or juries. By God's grace I am going back into the battle, and I am sure some others will join me. If possible, I shall go to the Geneva convention, where I hope to see and greet so many of my dearest friends in the blessed white-ribbon cause."

Avalon, Pa.

A Couplet in Snow and Rain.

BY FANNIE B. DAMON.

A DAY of soft piling snow and warm riotous winds. There is a blustering good-nature about the storm that makes one a comrade to it.

I look out at the appletrees, leaf-stripped and wind-shaken, but possessing their souls with dignity and content. Yonder, on the smoking hills, parallels of elms sweep along the sky like a troop of white-plumed ghosts—attendant spirits of the storm.

The vision, the music, the roar, the rush, stir my being, and I cry, "O God, how glorious!" I almost hear the sneer of the quick after-thought:

"What extravagance of feeling and all but irreverence of expression! What are you actually looking at? Backs of shabby little houses and sheds, disjointed fences, and an old two-seated family carriage that has flapped miserably in every wind that blows, through the fall rains and snows of winter. Don't call on God for what is nothing better than a land-scrap. People who have traveled outside of their own door-yard would laugh at you."

I gird myself tightly and answer: "Any scene on the earth that has the sky and the primordial elements of life has beauty. The sky and the trees, the line where earth and heaven meet, the joy of the wind and the bounteousness of the snow, make even this picture sublime—utterly wanting in anything common or unclean. These same humble houses and workshops and weather-riven and deserted wagons and gears have each a history, did I but read it, that dignifies the meanest."

I am conceited enough to quote Emerson to myself and say: "The difference between landscape and landscape is small, but there is great difference in the beholders." And I bring up Lowell who has written: "I remember people who had to go over the Alps to learn what the divine silence of snow was, who must run to Italy before they were conscious of the miracle wrought every day under their very noses . . . One might be worse off than even in America, I thought."

The very house is hodden-gray,
The color of the leaden day.
The windows one by one repeat
From every vacant witless pane,
That stares upon the sullen street,
Where up and down, with noiseless beat,
Patrol the maples in the rain.

From shrouded hill to shrouded hill
The wet sky hangs unfurled and still.
The stifled fields lie fold on fold,
A monochrome of drear expanse
Save there, the ledges, purple-cold,
And here, shrunk limbs of fences old,
Beyond, the river's breaking lance.

Yet 'tis the season's half-way place
From winter's lack to summer's grace—
This interim of gray.
I like it thus: it bodes a spell.
A thousand dreams are in the day,
A thousand more are on the way;
Dream with the dreamer. All is well.

Dexter, Me.

Paul Lawrence Dunbar—The Poet.

BY IDA B. COLE.

"YOU must be very proud of your son," I said to Mr. Dunbar's mother.

"Well—I'm satisfied, satisfied," she replied, her black face shining with motherly love.

The admiration between Mr. Dunbar and his mother is mutual. He says he owes much to her faith in him, for even in his earliest years, she carefully preserved the jingles he made and told him he was going to be a poet. Her prophecy has been fulfilled; for he is not only the leading poet of his race, but he has achieved a place of distinction among his white contemporaries. What a lesson for the youths who are complaining about the lack of chances in life, that the son of poor slave parents should win rank in the literary world!

After the war, the Dunbars went to Dayton, Ohio, where their poet-son was born, a little over thirty years ago. He was very poor but he had the public schools. His surroundings were not helpful, but he had in him the spirit of conquest. Most young men would consider it enough to battle against poverty and uncongenial environment; but this boy had to struggle against race prejudice as well.

PAUL LAWRENCE DUNBAR.

He wrote for newspapers five or six years before the public knew that he was a colored man; indeed this was not generally known until W. D. Howells wrote the introduction to his book of poems. Much to Mr. Dunbar's surprise his color has not interfered with his work.

During his six months abroad he gave readings in London drawing-rooms and was received with great cordiality. In this country he has delighted many audiences, both white and colored.

In religion, he is an Episcopalian, but he sometimes preaches lay sermons in churches of other denominations.

In his home life Mr. Dunbar is most fortunate, for his wife is a cultured woman who is an intellectual help-meet. "She writes better stories than I can," he declares.

In personal appearance this poet is a typical negro in features and color. I first met him in the study of a clergyman. I was looking for a dignified, scholarly appearing man. The door opened and a slender young man, in a light coat, came bounding in with an elastic step and an air as if he were about to seat himself, cross his knees and pick the banjo. I was a little surprised when Mr. Dunbar was introduced. There is nothing flippant about him, however. His voice is musical and it is a delight to hear him read his own poems. That melody of tone, characteristic of the negro, and grace of manner, lend a charm to his readings. Even the solemn looking minister in the audience smiled broadly when with graceful gesture and well-modulated voice, Mr. Dunbar read:

"Case de time is mighty temptin' when de chune is in de swing;
Fur a darky, saint or sinner man, to cut de pigeon wing;
An' you couldn't he'p f'om dancin' ef yo' feet was boun' wif' twine,
When Angelina Johnson comes a-swingin' down de line."

One of his tenderest little poems that finds a response in the mother-heart is "The Little Brown Baby," from which I can give you only a line or two. They had been having an evening romp and "pappy's chile" is snuggled close in the strong arms.

"Come to yo' pallet now—go to yo' res';
Wisht you could allus know ease an' cleah skies,
Wisht you could stay jes' a chile on my breas'—
Little brown baby wif' spa'klin' eyes."

There is a soul-pleading and exquisite pathos in his Lil' Lamb poem, and we wonder how a weary Christian or sinsick heart can resist it:

O, li'l lamb out in de col',
De Mastah call you to de fol',
O li'l lamb!

He hyeah you bleatin' on de hill;
Come hyeah an' keep you' mou'nin' still;
O li'l lamb!

Oh, tell de Shepard whr'h you hide;
He wants you walkin' by His side,
O li'l lamb!

He know you weak; he know you so';
But come; don' stay away no mo',
O li'l lamb!

The elderly people who are standing in the vestibule of the Other Land will appreciate his wish expressed in the little "Death Song."

"Let me settle w'en my shouldahs drap dey load,
High enough to hyeah de noises in de road;
Fur I t'nk de las' long res'
Gwine to soothe my sperrits bes',
Ef I's layin' 'mong de 'tings I's allus knowed."

Mr. Dunbar told me he considers his latest book, "The Sport of the Gods," his strongest work. He has recently written the words for the first negro opera, but I believe his great contribution to literature will be the folk songs written in his own inimitable manner.

Chicago.

The Anti-Profanity Crusade.

By Rev. Roland D. Sawyer,

General Secretary of Anti-Profanity League.

THERE was recently held in the historic Park Street church, Boston, the first annual meeting of the Anti-Profanity League, an organized movement for the suppression of our national vice, swearing, and the only movement of its kind in the world. Starting in 1899 in a Massachusetts city, in a local crusade against the blasphemy so common on the streets, in street cars and public places, its success warranted its extension to larger fields. One year ago a plan of organization was adopted which commended itself to the judgment of some leading New England pastors and laymen, and, placed under their supervision, the League entered upon its larger work. So well has the movement been prosecuted and so cordial has been the reception extended to it from the Christian world, that in the year's time it has established itself in forty states, two territories, Canada, Nova Scotia, Scotland, England, Ireland and Switzerland; making international its field of service. Sixty efficient working organizations in various states have been formed, five states have state secretaries in charge of their respective states, hundreds of Christian workers have taken it up, through its efforts pastors have preached upon the vice of swearing, young people's societies have given their aid, and both secular and religious papers have devoted space to the crusade. An extensive propaganda has been waged through the distribution of tracts, cards and treatises against swearing. Notable sermons, such as that of Rev. Frank Dewitt Talmage, D. D., have been syndicated through newspapers having a constituency of millions.

To three facts this League owes its existence and its claims to the support of Christian people—the prevalence of profanity, our indifference to it, and the success of the League's methods of suppressing it.

The prevalence of profanity is shocking and is undermining the reverence of our land. We are becoming known as the "swearing nation." Profanity is our national sin; more men swear than drink, steal or lie.

The triviality, the recklessness, the wickedness with which God's name is daily used is heart-rending. Who can ride on a street car, wait in a public room, or even walk the street, and not hear the name of the God he loves and the Saviour he worships, desecrated and profaned?

God's name is treated with contempt, our feelings as Christians despised, and the laws of the state trampled upon. Notwithstanding that this sin is so prevalent and is growing with such rapidity, it has been practically ignored. Sermons against it are few, the pulpit is silent, hymnals, stated topics for prayer meetings, young people's selected topic-lists, etc., all pass it over. The "Devil's talk" has met with but little rebuke. Apart from the fact of its being incorporated in the "Triple Pledge," we know of absolutely no rebuke. We would not wish to detract in the least from the excellent results of the most worthy efforts by promoters of the "Triple Pledge," but experience has proved to us that linked with anti-tobacco and anti-liquor, the anti-swearing element in the pledge has been overshadowed by them; and that, pushed in a pledge by itself; an anti-swearing crusade can be much more effectually carried on—just as the anti-cigaret movement is now being pushed by the W. C. T. U.

The Anti-Profanity League comes forward and proposes, with the help of all lovers of decency, to arouse the sleeping Christian conscience and by a campaign of education and evangelism to teach men that to swear "is neither brave, polite nor wise." The methods by which it proposes to do this are practical, effectual, evangelical and easy.

As an organization it is adapted to be worked in connection with Sunday schools, young people's societies, day schools, W. C. T. unions, Y. M. C. A., etc., thus instead of adding another to the multiplicity of movements, it furnishes the existing society with something to do. A local League, however, may be formed apart from any of these other societies if so desired. Many such are being formed, particularly among the boys.

Profanity is the easiest of sins to reprove: a button worn, a tract slipped into the hand of the offender, a card posted, a printed admonition prayerfully given, literature distributed, a motto displayed—these are ways by which the Devil's talk may be rebuked, and may be employed by many who would shrink from verbally rebuking a swearing man. These rebukes are effectual: a card tucked into a showcase stopped the swearing in a country store; a distribution of literature stopped the oaths of a school playground; the wise use of printed matter stopped the swearing of a stitching room in a Massachusetts shoe factory; a card over a bench stayed a profane foreman. Such cases may be enumerated to great length. If it be wished to go beyond moral suasion, as has been done in some sections, it may be borne in mind that profanity is punishable in every state in the Union, and every offender can be brought before the court and fined. A better way, however, is to get some earnest Christian men to put through your town meeting or city council, an order to secure the posting of notices against swearing, after the manner of the Board of Health and Selectmen notices against spitting. Such action is certain to have a wholesome effect and may easily be secured.

But our work is more than a reform, it is thoroughly evangelical. It aims to convict the swearer of his sin; and thus follows the example of Christ (John 4: 16-29). There are scores of cases where swearing men, reproved of their wickedness, have thereby been brought to Jesus Christ. Most notable among these was John Bunyan, whose thoughts were turned to the things of God by a woman's remonstrance against his notorious profanity. "The Pilgrim's Progress" is a monument to fidelity to the Third Commandment.

Will you not give your prayers and support to this battle that is being waged for the greater honor of God's Name?

Hanson, Mass.

Round-the-World Temperance Studies.

The Pacific Islands Our Own and Others.

BY MRS. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

We conclude our Temperance Tour of the World with the story of what intemperance and temperance have done for the Pacific Islands—our own first of all.

Hawaii.

In the case of Hawaii, commerce, unfortunately, outran the church. Captain Cook introduced the white man's commerce, with which came the poisons of drink and lust, in 1778, but the church did not send missionaries until 1820, when the stalwart Hawaiians, who had been barbarians but never cannibals, had already begun to "wither before the hot breath of the white man's vices." The year before the missionaries came the idols had been burned at the command of the two reigning queens, Keopuolani and Kaahumauu, and in this respect the way was clear for the swift Christianizing of the islands, which occurred. But, alas! even the repentance of prodigals can not wholly stay the physical poison of debauchery, and the race has been slowly dying out to this day.

When the Hawaiians were Christianized they straightway prohibited liquor selling. Wherever, in mission fields, individuals become converted they straightway give up harmful drugs and drinks, and when the tribe is converted, the chief prohibits intoxicants, unless some "Christian nation" prohibits prohibition. This last occurred in Hawaii. French liquor sellers finding they were losing the sales of their wines and brandies, appealed to the French government. It would not have responded favorably if Christian citizens had been as alert as bad citizens, but in default of that a warship was sent to the harbor of Honolulu which demanded $20,000 damages because prohibition did prohibit, and also, as a further penalty, the submission of the islands. Only international jealousies prevented the retention of the money and the sovereignty by France. At last the Hawaiian government, which became a republic in 1894, having been able to prohibit only the sale to natives, feeling that was a degradation that classed even cultivated Hawaiians with American Indians, adopted the license system, which was in force when we took possession. At once the liquor traffic increased. Over one of the rum shops "Uncle Sam" was pictured in the usual style, pointing to a certain brand of whisky, and saying: "It's pure, boys; it was bottled in my warehouse." When the civil government bill for Hawaii had passed the Senate with no liquor law in it, the International Reform Bureau had the following amendment introduced by Congressman F. H. Gillett, who has introduced more moral measures than any man in Congress: "Nor shall saloons for the sale of intoxicating drinks be allowed." In spite of the opposition of Congressman Bartholdt, the brewers' champion, on two successive days, the amendment passed the House by a good majority, but in the conference committee, consisting of Senators Cullom and Lodge, Congressmen Hitt and Knox—we believe Senator Lodge, from his record, was for us—the law was reduced to mere local option in this form: prohibition was to be the law of Hawaii until its own legislature voted otherwise. The result has been the discredited dispensary system has been authorized by the legislature for all places where a majority so vote, with prohibition in all other cases. If temperance forces are faithful in exposing not only the evils of license but also the ineffectiveness and wrong of the dispensary, abstinence and prohibition may be maintained and increased, since the natives, not much involved in the liquor business and mostly abstainers, still have a majority of the votes under the plan of manhood suffrage. There is danger, however, in the increasing power of political demagogues over this half-developed race.

Guam and Tutuila.

Guam and Tutuila, the first one of the Ladrone Islands, acquired from Spain, the other one of the Samoan Islands, acquired by treaty with Germany and Great Britain, are coaling stations under full control of the Navy, which even under the administration of such a temperance leader as Secretary John D. Long, lost rather than gained in a temperance point of view, from coming under our flag. Tutuila had no liquor selling of any kind when under British control, but Mrs. Isabel Strong, stepdaughter of Robert Louis Stevenson, wrote in December, 1900, that permission had been granted to build there a hotel in which liquors would be sold. Guam was put under prohibition by its first American military governor, Lieut. R. P. Leary, but he was soon after recalled. A letter to Secretary Long about both islands brought only a promise of "strict regulation," whose fatal meaning Americans know all too well.

HAWAIIAN BEAUTY.

BOYS AFTER COCOANUTS.

HULA GIRL.

The Philippines.

1. Mr. O. E. Edwards, consul and merchant in Manila thirty-six years, testifies that down to 1888 there was nothing there that could be called a saloon. Abundant testimony proves that only three saloons existed when we took possession, and that Spaniards and Filipinos alike were almost never intoxicated—not more than two or three in a year.

2. The brewers' agents came in the very van of the army, some of them uniformed as "aides," and presently four hundred saloons were opened, whose deadly work was at once shown in the increasing sickness, vice and disorder of the "soldier boys."

3. Various slight restrictions have been put on this evil: (1) In the Sulu Islands, inhabited by Mohammedans, who are abstainers and prohibitionists, all open liquor selling has been forbidden. (2) The soldiers have been forbidden to buy in native shops where they had been wont to gulp a strong gin which the natives are wont to sip without any manifest intoxication. (3) The saloons and bars were on the first day of the twentieth century removed from the Escolata and other prominent streets, and all saloons kept by Europeans and Americans were forbidden to sell to natives, leaving them only the native shops which they had never abused. This great prohibition for ten millions of natives, was secured by calling the attention of the Philippine Commission to the new British policy which is, to prohibit the sale of intoxicants and opium, in the interest of trade as well as for higher motives, inasmuch as these drinks kill buying power, and ere long the buyers themselves, especially in the case of the child races in the world's new markets. Notwithstanding these restrictions the consumption of liquors has not decreased and the new Philippine civil government should be asked to make Manila as sober as we found it.

New Hebrides and Other Unattached Pacific Islands.

On September 10, 1902, another encouraging victory been accustomed since 1879 or earlier to prohibit British subjects from selling liquors in savage islands, not only where she has sovereignty or a protectorate, but also in independent islands where she can control no traders but her own, as in the case of the New Hebrides, from which Rev. Dr. John G. Paton has twice come to the United States to ask our government to prohibit American traders also from selling to the cannibal savages the guns and rum that make them fiends. For eight years Dr. Paton plead without result, partly because getting the law was everybody's business and so nobody's, but in 1900 the International Reform Bureau, with the active aid, as always, of the W. C. T. U., undertook to secure such legislation, and the desired Gillett-Lodge bill was approved by President Roosevelt on Feb. 15, 1902. It applies not alone to the New Hebrides, but to all Pacific islands not under any civilized power.

This is but an installment of a greater project to which the President and Senate of the United States are committed, a world-treaty which Secretary Hay has asked the British Government to join us in submitting to all commercial powers, that will prohibit the sale of intoxicants and opium to all the uncivilized races of the world—the greatest movement now before the world that is really moving toward immediate accomplishment. Let us unite all temperance and missionary forces in this new crusade.

On September 10, another encouraging victory was added to the numerous recent acts of our national government, looking to the protection of native races against intoxicants and opium—the eleventh in the series—namely, the restoration of prohibition by Secretary Moody of the Navy in Tutuila, where liquors were not sold at the time of our coming, but were licensed in a hotel built by our vice-consul, who was licensed to sell intoxicants, which was almost as if Uncle Sam himself had appeared as bartender among these religious and moral natives, who wanted none of the white man's rum. The drunken disorders which the liquors promoted among naval officers and men may have had some part in securing the return of prohibition, which was also undoubtedly helped by the agitation of the subject by the W. C. T. U., the "New Voice" and the Reform Bureau.

Washington, D. C.

PASIG RIVER IN FRONT OF THE CUSTOM HOUSE, MANILA.

UNDER THE WHITE RIBBON.

BY MARY HENRY-ROSSITER.

The Physical Basis of Child Culture.

WHEN we study the principles upon which the development of a child depends with as great interest and as much good sense as we now study floriculture, or gardening or stock raising—if we are giving attention to any or all of these—we shall have better results for our labor.

The body bears the same relation to child-growth that the soil does to plant-growth. The normal, healthy child is happy, teachable and beautiful. Most problems of child-training would solve themselves, vanish into nothingness, if subjected to the principles that health is the foundation of character and conduct. If everybody, or when everybody, in the home is in good health, questions of discipline seldom arise. Mother is not irritable or nervous, father does not lose his temper, little Tommy or Susie obeys because it is a pleasure.

The baby who has the colic is not in a position even to appreciate the moral and intellectual significance of red and violet balls. The child who needs sleep or fresh air, or who is suffering from over-eating or improper food, can not fairly discriminate between a just and an unjust requirement. So the first and best culture for the child, as well as for the man, is health-culture.

It is of the highest importance that the very youngest baby form regular physical habits, that he be fed regularly, that he go to sleep at a certain time, that he have fresh air and sunshine every day. And "regularly" does not mean within half an hour or so of the time appointed. A variation of ten or fifteen minutes may not seem to make much difference today or tomorrow, but twenty years hence the chronic dyspeptic is more than likely to lament an irregular and perverse appetite.

Many parents do not realize the harm they do by comforting or rewarding their children with candy or pastries. Papa gives little Billie a stick of candy because he has tumbled and hurt his knee. Years afterwards he wonders that his son William should drown his sorrows in beer and whisky. Mothers teach their children to eat cakes, pies, and puddings; to use pepper and mustard, and vinegar; they give them pickles and sweets, and allow them to overeat, and to eat between meals, all with the distinct understanding that they are gratifying appetite; not that they need these things to make them strong and healthy, but that they are allowed and encouraged to eat them because they "taste good going down." Is it any wonder that as a people we are fast becoming slaves to the pleasures of sense?

How much better it would be if we should teach our children that the sole and only object of eating is to provide the body with the necessary materials for growth and repair; that nature has given us hunger and appetite, mouth, teeth, saliva, stomach, gastric juice, the entire alimentary canal, to aid us in providing the cells of the body with this material; that if we eat wholesome foods our bodies will grow strong and sound and healthy; that if we eat unwholesome foods we are striking at the very foundation of health—undermining this wonderful structure given us by the Creator simply to please our sense of taste.

If children could be led to take the same interest in their bodies that they do in their flower beds or their animal pets it would not be necessary to forbid them to eat unsuitable foods. I know a little boy who was taught from his infancy that his body was a living dwelling, that it was full of busy little workers that were all the time building the different parts of it—the wall of skin, the framework of bones, the living windows, the toes, the nails, the hair; that the little workers must be taken good care of every day so that they could make his body grow tall and strong; that they get hungry and thirsty and must be fed the right foods and given the right drinks; that they need fresh air and plenty of sunlight and a long night's sleep every night. This little boy never asks twice for anything he is told will not be good for the little workers.

Furthermore, his history shows that children left to themselves prefer simple, natural foods to any artificial dishes. They prefer apples, oranges, bananas and other fruits to candies or sweetmeats. They prefer bread and butter, honey, maple syrup to cakes or pies.

The food question, however, is not the only one that has to do with the physical basis of child-culture. It is far more important than most mothers realize that babies should go to sleep without being rocked and that all children should apply the old maxim, "Early to bed and early to rise." It is astonishing how unprogressive some very intelligent women can be. Even yet it is dangerous in many circles to mention not rocking the baby, to say nothing of advocating so cold-blooded a procedure. Some mothers declare that their chief pleasure in their little ones consists in rocking them, hugging them, and singing them to sleep. Their sentiments are expressed by the following verses:

"You may tear away the rockers from the cradle, if you will,
And beckon to the sandman, with the baby lying still;
But yet there's something lacking, and you listen with a sigh,
For you seem to hear the echo of the mother's lullaby.

"'But rocking spoils a baby,' the modern mothers say;
'They're better off without it, if you just begin that way.'
You can do without the cradle and the crooning if you try,
But you can not spare the echo of your mother's lullaby.

"'He's crying? Never mind it; 'twill make his lungs expand;
You'll have a model baby if you keep the upper hand.'
Close all the doors and windows that you may not hear him cry,
But you can't shut out the echo of your mother's lullaby."

I suppose there is not a mother in the world whose heart does not respond to this feeling, who does not sometimes look back to her own babyhood and listen and long for the echo of her own mother's evening lullaby. She remembers, as is best, the happiness, the sweetness of it. But the modern principle of putting babies to sleep without rocking or jouncing or crooning need not interfere in the least with any of the pleasure, the poetry, the charm of the old way.

We grown-up babies and gray-haired mothers have long ago forgotten the vexations attending those times when it was not convenient to get the baby to sleep, when there was baking or washing that could not wait without spoiling, when there was a party on hand, or company coming, and the baby, scenting the excitement in the air, would not be rocked or crooned or jounced or sung or scolded or even spanked to sleep. If the baby has formed the habit of being tucked into bed, left alone, and going to sleep at a certain time without other attention than being made comfortable for the night, he will be equal to the emergency of a party night or an afternoon baking. On the other hand, the modern mother need give up none of the delights of the "children's hour." She may, and does, take her child in her arms in the evening at bedtime, tell him stories, sing to him, play with him. But the gentle, unconscious lullaby of nature is the sweetest and the most healthful. Mother's evening song as a supplement is charming, but as a compelling force, in opposition to nature, it is exceedingly injurious. For those who doubt this, let me quote from a work on "Sleep," by a distinguished Russian authority:

"All methods of putting children to sleep artificially ought to be proscribed, including monotonous and unmusical lullabies, and the rocking of babies in cradles or simply in the arms. I have found, by direct experiment, that swinging, even for only a quarter of an hour, produces in healthy adults a lowering of temperature of 0.5 deg. C. and more or less pronounced phenomena of brain anemia and pain at the heart. The decrease of temperature may be as much as 1.5 deg. C. Alexander, in the beginning of the century, even proposed to swing patients in fever to reduce the temperature. Rocking a child in the arms or the cradle produces sleep artificially, partly because consciousness is fatigued by a sense of monotonous sensations, and partly because at the same time artificial anemia of the brain is provoked. Those authors who assert that the cradle is a fruitful source of stupidity, and even of idiocy, have not, therefore, been altogether wrong, though they supported their assertions by no experimental facts. In Germany it is proverbial to say, 'He has been rocked into stupidity,' which seems to indicate that the injurious effect of the cradle on infants has been popularly recognized."

Whether to let him cry or not to let him cry, is another question that is much discussed. Of course, a healthy baby can not be entirely prevented from crying by any measures short of strangling, but I have observed that, as a rule, those babies are most given to crying whose parents are most constantly engaged in efforts to keep them from crying. It is, indeed, a stupid baby that does not cry when he always gets what he cries for, when his crying or not is the one matter about which the family comfort centers. It is a long step towards peace when mothers and nurses really believe and act as if they believed that a little immediate firmness will save them and the children sorrow and trouble in later years. Fathers must be persuaded of this, too; at least, they must be persuaded not to demand at the outset that "that little rascal be made to stop his noise at once, no matter how."

A baby only a few weeks old will very soon stop crying if no attention is paid to him. If the mother has made sure that no pins are pricking him, no clothes are wrinkled under him, or otherwise annoying him, that the baby is "warm and dry and full," and if she then goes away and leaves him, he may cry hard for a moment or two, but if he has not been spoiled already, he will soon become quiet and go to sleep, or lie awake kicking and cooing. If he has heretofore been humored, of course he will cry longer, but if one is absolutely firm about it two or three times, even quite an experienced baby will ere long submit gracefully; and no mortal being can learn too young that nothing in this world is to be gained by crying.

Many mothers, however, lack courage. When they start to lay the baby down, he turns so red in the face and emits so fearful a shriek that they are afraid, and show it. The baby has learned that he can scare his mother in this way. If she persists, notwithstanding, tucks him up gently, kisses him, gives him a last loving caress, and then immediately goes out of the room and shuts the door, she will be astonished to see how quickly and easily her darling has learned one important lesson.

When we compare the past with the present we see that the child of today has a vast advantage over his father and grandfather. He is beginning to enjoy a hygienic as well as a religious and poetic inheritance. We realize this when we look back to our childhood and think of that dread ordeal, the weekly bath; how we were chased and caught, struggling like kittens held over a brook; how we were soaped and scrubbed until we were red as lobsters; how we rebelled and ran away and hid, all in vain, to escape this Saturday-night performance.

We realize it still, in the dead of winter, on a zero morning, when, mindful of the new teaching that a daily cold plunge is the best protection against disease, we stand beside the tub of grim, blue water and gingerly put in one toe.

But we realize it most of all when we look upon the modern baby crowing at the sight of this morning tub bath, almost jumping out of our arms to get into it, kicking and splashing, and even going under, face and all, with high glee.

Formerly, as soon as the baby outgrew the wash-bowl, he was bathed by hand, and gradually reduced to once a week with the other children. But now we see what is good for a little, fresh, sweet baby is good for a child that goes out in the dirt and works and perspires, and is also good for a man whose system needs a physiological stirring up at least once a day.

I have dwelt particularly upon the problems of babyhood because it is chiefly in infancy that physical habits are formed. If mothers were better qualified to deal with the first stern difficulties of maternity, if young parents knew better how to train their children into right habits before they have an opportunity to form wrong ones, if they could keep this fact constantly in mind, that babies are neither toys nor dolls, brought into the world for their own selfish enjoyment, but sacred treasures intrusted to their care, for whose future they are responsible, there would be far less need of the great philanthropic organizations that are so overwhelmed with work today.

Evanston, Ill.

Martyr's Memorial in honor of Bishops Cranmer. Ridley, and Latimer who were burned at the stake, 1555 and 1556.

Radcliffe Reading Room of the Bodleian Library.

The University Church where Amy Robsart is buried.

English Literature at Oxford University.

BY CHARLOTTE E. JOSLIN, A. M.

MORE interest is manifested now in Oxford than heretofore, since, by the provisions of the will of Cecil Rhodes, a hundred scholarships are available for American students at that great university.

Oxford has always been noted for classics and history, but its advantages seem especially fine for a student of English Literature.

An American student coming to Oxford in October for the Michaelmas term, starts with a sense of bewilderment and possibly of disappointment. The men frequently join one of the twenty-three colleges, while the women usually become members of the Home-Student department, rather than regular students at any of the four Halls for women. The student is at once placed under the care of a tutor who personally directs his work and suggests helpful lectures and instructors. Arranging hours for classes and coaching is very tiresome during the first term, but by the end of the year one feels quite at home with English methods.

One of Oxford's specialties is essay writing. No matter what department is selected, essays are required each week by the tutor, the student thus gaining a remarkable command of the English language, incalculably useful in his work in literature as well as in his social life.

The Bodleian Library is a treasure house for all students of literature, whether they are copying musty old manuscripts, studying homilies of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, or reading modern English. Some little trouble is experienced in gaining entrance, for the application for admission as a reader must be signed by two M. A.'s of Oxford.

The list of Oxford lectures open to women for the past year is as follows:

Michaelmas Term.

OPEN TO MEN AND WOMEN.

The Ninth Century in the Saxon Chronicle; Specimens of Old English Dialects; Old English Literature; Old English Authors; Sir Gawayn and the Green Knight; Shakespeare; Nineteenth Century Prose.

OPEN TO WOMEN ONLY.

Old English, or Anglo-Saxon (classwork); Beowulf; Old English Philology; Form of Verse; History of Literary Movements.

Hilary Term.

OPEN TO MEN AND WOMEN.

The Saxon Chronicle (continued); Specimens of Middle English; Old English Literature (continued); Old English Authors; Sir Gawayn and the Green Knight; Elizabethan Poetry (non-dramatic); Shakespeare.

OPEN TO WOMEN ONLY.

Old English Translation (classwork); Old English Philology; Beowulf; Elizabethan Prose; Gothic (classwork).

Easter and Trinity Terms.

OPEN TO MEN AND WOMEN.

The Extant Remains of Anglo-Saxon Art; Specimens of Middle English (continued); Old English Authors; Sir Gawayn and the Green Knight; Milton.

OPEN TO WOMEN ONLY.

Old English Translation; English Philology; Chaucer; Spencer and his Predecessors; Gothic (classwork).

This list although not so exhaustive as that given in the calendars of some of our own great universities, contains a preponderance of philology, which, according to the Oxford idea, is of the greatest value. At the head of the Department of Philology is Dr. John Wright, editor of the great Dialectic Dictionary and successor of the late Max Müller; while well known as the champion of Old English Scholarship in the university is Professor Napier.

Dr. Wright and Dr. Hardale conduct classes, open only to women, in Gothic and Old English. In both classes written papers are required each week. In Modern Literature an Oxford M. A. gives lectures to both men and women, and a London M. A. gives Association lectures exclusively to women. A few minor lectures and occasionally public lectures are open to those interested in literature.

The fees for three terms (twenty-five weeks) would not exceed $200. This fact leads to the practical question: "Can an American woman gain more by coming to Oxford than by taking a course at one of our best universities?" Without hesitation my answer is, "She can."

Acquaintance with English undergraduate college girls has led me to believe that they know far more of English Literature, from its beginning to the present, than do our American college girls of a corresponding age. I believe, however, that if our college girls were placed in the subtle literary atmosphere of Oxford, or Cambridge, they would not only equal but would surpass in brilliancy the English girl who specializes. The English girl is always working for an examination ("schools" they call it here) while the American who comes to Oxford works for an entirely different purpose.

Women are not here given degrees, but even if they could obtain them, I feel that American women would work for what they want, and not for what happens to be prescribed for them. We come to Oxford because we feel a lack in some particular part of our education. While we are supplying the deficiency, which may be in English literature, history, or the classics, we are learning far more from personal intercourse with the literary people we daily meet.

While listening to lectures we sit in dim old wainscoted halls whose walls are covered with portraits of the great men who once attended the college and dined in those very rooms. In our walks we pass historic places which thrill us with memories of the past. Here in Broad street, opposite Balliol College, at whose head was Wycliffe, "the Morning Star of the Reformation," is the spot where Bishops Cranmer, Ridley and Latimer were burned at the stake, while near by is the beautiful memorial erected in honor of these martyrs.

Here is the pulpit in which John Wesley preached, and here are his rooms in Christ College where was started the great Methodist movement which now embraces adherents over the known world. Not far away may be seen the spot where Amy Robsart was buried, and a little beyond Addison's Halls by the Cherwell. At the famous Bodleian Library we gaze sadly at the print of the fingers on the cover of the books found in Shelly's hand when he was drowned near Pisa, and we go to see his memorial at University College where he was a student.

In these colleges, beautiful with ivy and woodbine, lived and worked some of the great men who have gone; Sir Philip Sidney, Locke, Ben Jonson, Southey, Dr. Johnson, the Wesleys, Wellington, Ruskin, and Gladstone. The American student may attend chapel exercises in the evening and hear sacred music of the highest order. The Vesper Services at Magdalen College always attract many who delight in hearing the surpliced choir intone the psalms, and once a week sing the anthems without organ accompaniment. On Sunday one listens, in the University church or chapels of Mansfield and Manchester colleges, to great men who have come from far and near to give their best to the Oxford students.

All this, and far more, Oxford offers to the searcher after knowledge. It is an education merely to live in the towered city—which can never become commonplace—and dull must be the spirit which does not respond to its magic influence. To the practical matter-of-fact American whose life has been spent in an altogether different atmosphere, an inspiration, which cannot be obtained elsewhere, is given by this storied city, beautiful with its towers and spires, its quadrangles and gardens, its flowering shrubs and grand old elms.

Shall an American go to Oxford to study literature? Yes; if the purpose of his stay abroad is culture rather than scholarship; if he desires to obtain not so much technical information as the broader knowledge of men and women. If an American student has an opportunity to study a year abroad, I can truly say, Go to Oxford by all means, and you will be repaid a hundred times.

Chelsea, Mass.

Conquered. By Kate Lunden Sunderlin.

FOR ages long, a spectre walked the earth,
A king of terror, with his ghastly train.
His footfalls echoed through the halls of mirth,
His name was linked with every throb of pain;
Before him thrones went down and monarchs quailed;
To stay his steps no earth-born power sufficed,
Until at last, when all his weapons failed,
He broke his sceptre at the tomb of Christ.

Still walks the silent spectre through the world,
And still we trace his steps in broken hearts;
Yet, not defiant are his arrows hurled,
But moved with pity, tender ties he parts.
Obedient, waiting for his Lord's command,
A willing servant stands the vanquished king,
And faith, unfrightened, clasps the friendly hand
And calmly asks: "O death! where is thy sting?"

Blairstown, N. J.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter V.

DR. Mann's house was kept for him by a widowed sister of whom Pitsmoor spoke disparagingly. Miss Smith said she was a "Madam," with an emphasis that declared the case against the lady to be sufficiently stated without recourse to details. Tummus pronounced her to be "no good," but Tummas probably spoke with an eye to grocery tickets—a probability that tended to weaken the force of his testimony. Enoch shook his head with caution.

"I aren't a-goin' to speak evil o' no one," he said staunchly, as one resisting strong temptation, "but such feathers and flowers and gimcracks I never see in Pitsmoor before she set foot in it, and to-day they're on every other lass's head. And that's not the worst on't. She'll come rustlin' up the church aisle, now and again on a dull Sunday, when she's in the mind to patronise God Almighty; but as to a sober, godly, weeknight meetin', neither she nor Mann have ever been seen in one, barrin' the few minutes that Mann put in—for some reason of his own, I'll be bound—t'other evenin'. I doubt they'll both have summat to answer for."

After hearing these criticisms, it was with considerable interest that Hugh recognized the woman who alone, of all the women he had met in Pitsmoor, justified the description. At the mission service, on the Sunday evening following the temperance meeting, his eyes fell upon her as he rose to read the opening sentences. Her refined features and graceful form looked oddly out of place amidst the grim faces and sturdy figures by which she was surrounded. The pale beauty of her face shone out in startling contrast to the rugged severity of theirs, and, as Hugh's eyes met her look of evident interest his pulse quickened. Evidently he had not yet come to the end of Pitsmoor. He tried honestly to give his exclusive attention to the words he was reading with even more than his usual earnestness, but, again and again, as the service proceeded, his eyes went back to that other pair which looked, and looked again, with such flattering interest at him. But it was not only to Hugh's vanity that the stranger appealed. She was still young, and, under any circumstances, her singular beauty must have attracted his attention. As she stood with her eyes fixed on her open prayer-book, he was struck by the sadness of her face; but this sadness was startlingly intensified when, from time to time, the drooping lids were slowly lifted from the large dark eyes.

Throughout the service he was more conscious of that quiet presence than of all the rest of the congregation, and when, at last, he walked up into the little pulpit and gave out his text, the sermon which had been specially prepared with an eye to the delinquencies of Billy Sellers and his friends struck the young curate suddenly as being utterly and disastrously out of place. While in vigorous but anonymous terms he denounced those black sheep of the flock, as cravens who lacked the will and the moral courage to amend their ways, his eyes seemed almost to look an apology to the lady with the pale, sad face. Yet as he looked, he faltered and all but paused. Was it—was it possible that, even as he uttered his righteous denunciations, a derisive smile had flitted momentarily over the beautiful face? After all, he was not sure, for before he had recovered from the shock, the great eyes were fixed, as sadly as ever, on the simple design of the east window. What a sad face it was! Betokening a sad history, of that Hugh felt assured. As for that derisive smile, he came by degrees to the conclusion that the light, or his own senses, had played him a trick. He closed his sermon with the secret consciousness that he had never spoken better, and in the flattering belief that Mrs. Langley would be seen in the mission-room again.

Dr. Mann called at the Vicarage the next day, and incidentally Hugh contrived to allude to the fact of Mrs. Langley's presence at the service on the previous evening.

The doctor laughed.

"Yes, she was there; she told me so. For my part, when I go anywhere, I go to church. So, as a rule, does she. It's more respectable, and no one insists upon shaking hands with you when you come out. But someone had given her an account of your temperance meeting, and nothing would do but she must hear you for herself. You seem to have taken your revenge on the 'odd dozen.' She was—well, amused."

"Then she did smile," thought Hugh, with a sudden pang. He felt unreasonably wounded for so slight a cause, but none the less readily did he accept the invitation to supper of which Dr. Mann was the bearer.

The doctor, for his part, went away well pleased with himself. He would not go so far as to say that all curates needed snubbing, but, by all accounts, there seemed to be no doubt whatever about this one. Perhaps both he and Hugh were mutually surprised when, in the evening, one proved himself to be an agreeable host, and the other an amusing guest. Mrs. Langley provided another surprise for Hugh by showing herself in the character of a bright and charming hostess. Except in complete repose, her face had not a trace of the sadness by which he had been so impressed last night. It was difficult to see what inducements Pitsmoor could have offered to this seasoned man and woman of the world. The practice could scarcely have been the attraction, and of society there was little, or none. In the course of the evening, Mrs. Langley supplied a possible clue by referring casually to her brother's writings.

"All dry, wonderfully instructive medical treatises, you know, Mr. Boyd—things I never should dream of looking into; but Bob finds them all-engrossing, and, of course, this world-forsaken village is an ideal hiding-place for a scribbler."

This, then, was the explanation, thought Hugh.

But the doctor, who had been listening with genuine amusement to the versatile curate's account of an average day's visiting, turned suddenly to look his sister full in the face.

"It won't do, Ethel. We—I—should only be found out. Almost any other role you please, if my credit must be saved; but an industrious literary man should be known, if at all, by his works, which in my case are non-existent."

Mrs. Langley laughed gaily.

"Nonsense, Bob! You know you do write quite a lot. Only not in his own name, you know," and she turned to Mr. Boyd; "Bob is too modest for that."

Dr. Mann turned impatiently to Hugh, and the latter could not help noticing that, from that time, he gave him but a divided attention. Very soon, by his contrivance, as it seemed, the conversation became general. The temperance meeting was not mentioned. Indeed, by Mrs. Langley's laughing decree, all subjects that bordered on "shop" were strictly avoided.

"It isn't because we don't sympathize with you, but because we do, and because we both want you to feel that in this house at least, you have a refuge from parochial worries. Oh, don't imagine that I don't know all about it! My husband was a country clergyman. He died, quite young, of parochial criticism."

She spoke flippantly, but Dr. Mann doggedly qualified the assertion.

"That, no doubt, was one of the causes of his breakdown; but you must remember, Ethel, that he had other worries as well."

Mrs. Langley turned her head, and the eyes of the brother and sister met in a glance of peculiar meaning.

"I am far from forgetting it," said the lady. "During the last year or two my brother lived close to us," she explained to the two guests, "and no one knows the unhappy facts better than he. Such facts, however, should, no doubt, be forgotten. Shall we have some music?"

Seating herself at the piano, she broke at once into a gay ballad, but the scowl did not at once pass from Dr. Mann's face. Glancing at him as she finished her second song, Mrs. Langley selected another and simply remarking: "This is one of Bob's favorites," she sang it wih admirable taste and feeling. In spite of himself, as it seemed, the doctor's face softened, and at least one of his guests caught the sound of a smothered sigh. Was it possible that he had helped to hasten his brother-in-law's early death? The idea, once formed, was not easily banished, for it supplied a possible explanation of many puzzling things. For the next day or two, the beautiful young widow was much in Hugh's thoughts, and on calling, he was distinctly pleased with the warmth of his welcome.

"It is good of you to take pity on me this dreary day!" exclaimed Mrs. Langley, as she sank into her low chair. "Isn't it a horrid, wet-blankety drizzle?"

"Is it horrid? I don't think it had struck me in that light. On the whole, I think I rather liked it, after the dust and heat of the last few days."

"How good, and proper, and altogether admirable of you to say so! Do you make a point of glorying in your tribulations, Mr. Brotherton?"

"Not I! I am capable of as much discontent as my neighbors, if it once entered into my grumbling soul to count a few hours of summer rain among my tribulations," said the young man frankly; "but I assure you that after the coal dust and the glare of the last fortnight, it really is enjoyable."

"It looks so," murmured Mrs. Langley, with a plaintive glance at the streaming window-panes.

Hugh laughed.

"Oh, no doubt it looks dreary enough from the inside. One needs to be out in it to realize the luxury of rain-washed air."

"And clothing?" murmured Mrs. Langley interrogatively.

"It is not so bad as that, but you are evidently incorrigible," laughed Hugh, as he rose to take the cup of tea she offered him.

"Any tea going, Ethel?" asked Dr. Mann, putting his head in at the door. "Oh, you here, Brotherton! How do?"

He came in, shook hands, and sat down amicably enough, yet Hugh somehow got the impression that it was the knowledge of his being there that had brought Dr. Mann to the room. They were talking politics with all the zest of differing opinions when Mrs. Langley plaintively interposed.

"It's all very interesting, but now that we have Mr. Brotherton to ourselves, I do want to hear what he thought of the temperance meeting. I didn't dare to mention it before Mr. Boyd."

Hugh turned to her with a sudden lighting up of his handsome face.

"Oh, Boyd was not responsible for it, and, for my part, I'm sure I don't grudge anyone the enjoyment of that fiasco. No doubt I was too ready to be convinced of the parochial need, but no suspicion of the real state of the case entered into my mind! How I did rate those old teetotallers! And how delighted they were! I admit that I am very far gone on the subject of total abstinence—" He stopped abruptly, struck by some fleeting expression on the lady's face, and added hesitatingly: "I don't know whether—whether—"

He was looking at Dr. Mann, but the lady answered his implied inquiry.

"Whether you have our sympathies? Indeed, yes—most emphatically you have mine; but teetotaller as I am, and as Bob could tell you, no member of your flock could possibly be more teetotal, I would give much to know the names of that heroic dozen who, in this teetotal parish dare to drink."

"Don't tell her, Brotherton," interposed Dr. Mann, hastily; "it wouldn't be fair."

"I scarcely think that it would," laughed Hugh. "Apparently they are already a sufficiently marked set."

"Well, it's very shocking—if they really are as intemperate as report makes them. For my part, I shouldn't be much surprised to find that after all, the guilty dozen consists of nothing worse than a group of old fogies who still cling to their mildest of mild home-brew. I couldn't imagine anyone in this God-fearing village the worse for drink."

Dr. Mann made an impatient movement, and even Hugh demurred.

"I am, perhaps, too new a comer to hazard an opinion, but I have heard of three or four cases."

"Accidental cases, I hope you mean. That is, of course, bad enough—terribly bad—but not so bad as it might be. We have surely no habitual drunkards in Pitsmoor!"

For the moment Hugh forgot to answer, so intently was he looking into the beautiful face. It had gone again; the wistful eyes looked back innocently enough into his, but it had momentarily been there—the same swift, sardonic smile that had puzzled him in the mission-room. Surely these were not secret taunts aimed at Dr. Mann? At all events, the doctor's cup and saucer rattled noisily as he put them down. He struck into the conversation with a decision that saved Hugh from the necessity of making any answer to Mrs. Langley's question.

"Brotherton, there's a bedridden parishioner at the top of the hill whose acquaintance you have not yet made. If you care to atone for your omission this afternoon, I can give you a lift there and back. She has strong opinions on the subject of clerical neglect of duty, and if you take my advice you'll go."

"Strong opinions, and a certain enjoyment in the expression thereof, seem to be prevalent in Pitsmoor," said Hugh drily, as he rose. "Thanks very much. If it is my bounden duty to go to-day, I shall be glad of the lift. But"—and he turned to Mrs. Langley—"I must not forget that I came as a beggar, in the hope of persuading you to take pity on me. The young women's class at the mission-room is absolutely without a teacher, and the districts, many of them, have no visitors. May I hope—"

(Continued on page 20.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

Children's Cozy Corner

The Easter Lily.

WHO would have thought
From that darkened thing,
The dull, brown bulb,
A leaf would spring?
A stalk uplift
To peerless height,
And its bud unclose
A lily white?
Hold it now in your little hand
Its shining message to understand.

Nothing freer
From stain of earth
Ever from hindering
Bonds burst forth,
Out of a dark
And dreary prison
This Easter morning
It has arisen.
It does not speak in a living voice,
But its fragrance whispers, "Rejoice! Rejoice!"

It seems to say,
"I but repeat
That old, old story
So wondrous sweet,
That though in the grave
Christ's body lay,
Yet the stone was rolled
From the door away;
Though nailed to the cross and pierced and slain,
Yet, joy to the world, He rose again!"

Oh, let us think
When we behold
This emblem lily
With heart of gold,
How it typifies,
In its first gloom
The crucified Savior
Within the tomb,
And in its Easter blossoming white
Christ's risen glory and life and light.

—Clara Doty Bates.

The Voice Behind The Lilies.

By Julia F. Deane.

"I'M to have a singing-piece Easter Sunday. Don't you girls want to hear it?" asked Gladys Sercomb, as she hopped, skipped and jumped on her way to school with a merry group of girls. "This is the way it goes:

"Easter morning, bright and fair,
Birds and blossoms fill the air,
Song and fragrance everywhere."

"And when it comes to the part about the 'lily so pure and sweet,' I'm to wave a great white lily. Mamma is making me a white taffeta silk dress, all hemstitched and ruffled, and oh, it's all going to be just lovely!"

"It's such a pretty song, yours is," chimed in Jean March. "I heard your mother when she was teaching it to you, and I thought it was so nice I learned it, too."

Gladys' pretty face suddenly clouded. "I don't like other girls to be learning my pieces, and you learned it, Jean March, you did, when your mother was doing my mamma's washing out in our kitchen."

"Are n't you ashamed, Gladys Sercomb!" cried the other girls in a chorus, as Jean's bright face flushed crimson, and she dropped behind the rest.

"Just as if Jean March hadn't as much right to learn a singing-piece as you, if her mother does have to do folks' washing," said Nellie Brown indignantly.

"Miss Wilson says Jean's voice is lots nicer than any of ours," Sadie Bright quietly remarked. "She says, too, Jean's got a perfectly wonderful ear for music. She hears a song and then she can sing it right off." And Sadie ran back to comfort Jean.

The Sercomb family pew was full Easter morning. Papa Sercomb, Uncle Tom, Aunt Evelyn, Aunt Jessica and Cousins Dorothea and Mildred were all there to hear Gladys' Easter solo.

Gladys nestled in her seat with a self-satisfied air, as she looked down upon them from the platform. It was delightful to be a part of the melody and fragrance and loveliness, and Gladys could not help feeling a little bit sorry for Jean March, who sat in the corner of the second seat from the front, her brown cashmere more noticeably shabby than ever before in contrast with the Easter glory about her.

"Miss Gladys Sercomb will sing," announced the superintendent, and Gladys fluttered from her chair and poised in the center of the platform with all the grace and airy lightness of a white-winged butterfly. It was really very interesting, she thought, to have the eyes of all that great congregation fixed upon her; she hoped Aunt Jessica had remembered to straighten the bows on her hair.

The lady at the piano had played the prelude to Gladys' song twice, and the faces of Gladys' father and cousins and aunts were shadowed with embarrassment, for now the child's eyes, big with dismay and fright, were turned appealingly towards the musician. Her hands were clasped tightly in front of her, and she stood in speechless terror, for —Gladys had forgotten every word and note of her song.

The bows upon the hats of Gladys' aunts and cousins trembled with excitement; Papa Sercomb stroked his mustache nervously; Uncle Tom studied the singing book with a feverish interest. The great congregation wore one huge smile of sympathy for the suffering child. For the fourth time the accompanist played the air very slowly and smiled encouragingly; she could do no more, for no one but Mamma Sercomb knew the song, and Mamma Sercomb had been detained at home at the last moment by a sick headache.

Suddenly a little dark-robed figure stole out from the second seat from the front, concealing herself behind a clump of Easter lilies near the singer.

"Easter morning, bright and fair," caroled a childish treble, clear and sweet, from behind the lilies. Gladys caught her breath with a gasp; her troubled eyes, fast filling with tears, turned towards the sound. Then a smile of relief chased away the fear as together the two voices finished the verse. Gladys' eyes said so beseechingly, "Please don't stop, I might forget again," that the voice from behind the lilies sang with her through the four verses, ringing out joyfully in the glad refrain,

"Angels rolled the stone away,
Christ is Lord of Easter Day."

That afternoon a box of beautiful blossoms was left at Jean's door, and with it was a note which Jean prized far more than the flowers. It read:

"My dear, dear Jean:—You are the very preciousest girl in the whole world, and I am the horridest. My papa says your voice is just fine and he is going to see your mamma about taking music lessons right away, and I am just as glad as I can be. Good-bye till tomorrow.

"Yours forever and ever,
"Gladys Sercomb."

Elgin, Ill.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to Puzzlers' Packet, The Union Signal, Chicago.

Prize Award.

The February prize is won by E. W. B. Fischer, Wheaton, Ill.

1.—*Charade.

"This rose is very one," said she.
"I'll wear it on my two," said he.
"And then, O darling, will you be My total?" "Certainly," said she.

M. A. P.

2.—*Riddle.

"Where'er I go I am behind;
'Tis sad 'tis so, but never mind.
Within a shoe I often be,—
That this is true you soon will see.

Roy.

Answers to Puzzles of March 12.

1.—

G					M
E	L	I	S	H	A
O					R
R					T
G	I	B	E	A	H
E					A
W					W
A	R	A	B	I	A
S					S
H					H
I	S	H	U	A	I
N					N
G					G
T	A	L	E	N	T
O					O
N					N

2.—The letter O.

3.—1, Butter-nut, nut-butter. 2, Dogwood, wood dog. 3, Lemon, melon. 4, Ample, maple. 5, Reap, pear. 6, Peach, cheap. 7, Lake, kale.

4.—

A	D	A	N	A
D	A	M	A	R
A	M	E	N	I
N	A	N	A	S
A	R	I	S	H

5.—1, K-nob. 2, I-deal. 3, N-early. 4, G-rasp. 5, E-rase. 6, D-roll. 7, W-ink. 8, A-shy. 9, R-ash. 10, D-art. 11, V-ice. 12, I-rate. 13, I-X. Removed heads, King Edward VII.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, April 2, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Awards and Recommendations of the Anthracite Coal Commission.

THE published report of this commission, awaited with such keen interest by miners, operators and the public generally, covers eighty-seven printed pages. When all the testimony taken, with the proposed illustrations, are added, the document will be a voluminous one. The first and by far the larger part of the report proper is devoted to a review of the anthracite coal industry and of the conditions which led to the appointment of the commission. It summarizes the work of inspection and investigation, gives in detail the reasons for the findings, and states that while there have been differences of opinion among the seven members of the board, there never has been during their five months of labor "any unpleasant word or any indication of thought or desire of aught save truth and justice"—a splendid showing for the arbitration principle.

The main recommendations provide for a general increase in wages of 10 per cent; some decrease in hours of labor; the settlement of all disputes by arbitration; a minimium wage and a sliding scale; no discrimination by either mine owners or miners on account of membership or non-membership in a labor union; discontinuance of the "coal and iron police" system; stricter enforcement of laws relating to child labor; and that the awards continue in force for three years.

The commission disapprove of compulsory arbitration, but recommend that state and government supply machinery for making compulsory investigation of difficulties similar to that just made by their own body. They report inability to accede to the demand of the miners for a recognition of their union, for the reason that the union is not a party to the submission, Mr. Mitchell having appeared before them as the representative of the anthracite coal miners and not in his official capacity as president of the United Mine Workers. Trades-unionism, they say, is a matter of business, and differences can best be settled by conferences between the employer and a committee chosen by his employes; but, they add, "in order to be entitled to such recognition the labor organization must give the same recognition to the rights of the employer and of others which it demands for itself and for its members."

The evidence, it is admitted, shows that the armed guards employed to protect the collieries and the men who worked them were a necessary precaution, and that the governor of the state was justified in calling out the militia, but it is also admitted, "justice requires the statement that the leaders of the organization which began and conducted the strike, and notably its president, condemned all violence and exhorted their followers to sobriety and moderation." The boycott is deplored as a "cruel weapon of aggression" and its use as "immoral and anti-social."

The findings of the commission are very generally characterized as fair and reasonable. Says Mr. Mitchell: "The decision gives the miners greater justice than they have ever had before. The first and most important part is the increase in wages and the establishment of the sliding scale. The 10 per cent will mean $6,000,000 to be divided among 147,000 persons. Next in importance is the reduction of hours. The laborers are granted a nine-hour day at ten hours' pay, which means that the miners will also get the nine-hour day, as they cannot work without the laborers. While the union was not formally recognized, it has made itself felt and its power and influence is fully appreciated by all concerned."

President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, declares the report to be a great victory for the miners and "one of the greatest acts of civilization in this country." The fact that it awards the miners representation on the board of conciliation by any one they choose, he regards as practically a direct recognition of organized labor. Other labor leaders speak in the same terms, and the submission of the findings to Mr. Mitchell by President Roosevelt is looked upon by them and by the public generally as indirect recognition of the union.

Mr. Clarence Darrow, one of the counsel for the strikers, expresses himself as well pleased. While the complainants do not get all they asked at first, they get more than they offered to take last winter when Mr. Baer backed out of the agreement. He has no doubt that the mine owners will carry out the findings in all particulars.

The one unsatisfactory feature of the award to some mine workers is that the old method of payment is continued. Many would have preferred a system of payment by weight to the 10 per cent increase, and it was discussion of this point which delayed the completion of the report. The operators and owners being unable to agree, the commissioners could not fix a scale, and the matter was left to be decided by the board of conciliation.

The operators, upon their side, are not ill pleased with the findings as a whole. Ten per cent is better than 12 or 15, which they feared would be awarded, and they are suited with the action, or non-action, of the board with regard to the system of pay; also with its attitude towards non-union men. Mr. Baer, their spokesman, who has been dubbed the Mephistopheles of the strike tragedy, has up to the present writing refused to express himself, but is reported as happy. One thing, says a leading operator, the award insures in their favor—namely, high priced coal for at least three years. Well, the consumer will know that in accordance with the sliding scale of wages, for every five cents added to the price per ton the miners receive an increase of one per cent; that is, to every dollar a man receives in minimum wage, one cent will be added for every five cents advance in the selling price of coal. Not much, it is true, but something gained for financial betterment, and a good deal gained for principle, even if it is the consumer who pays.

The 10 per cent advance dates from November 1, 1902, therefore the men receive something like $3,000,000 in back pay. The sliding scale becomes effective April 1st, prices to be computed monthly by a special accountant.

The commission, President Roosevelt and the country at large are each and all to be complimented and congratulated upon their wise and peaceful settlement of an industrial war which, it may be, history will record as—in the words of Henry D. Lloyd—"the Waterloo of capitalistic absolutism in America."

One valuable lesson to be learned from the anthracite coal strike and its immediate results is that no man or set of men possesses inherent right to conduct an independent or an organized business on any methods which work injustice to those who labor in it or to the public at large. This important precedent has been established by the sovereign power of this country—the power of public opinion.

The Element of Life.

"If Christ be not risen, our faith is vain."

WITHOUT the resurrection, the gospel would be no message of hope or joy—nothing but a poem of sorrow, a heart-rending tragedy. We have our glad Easter Day because He rose "bringing truth and immortality to light."

Easter turns our thoughts from the cross to the throne; from the darkened earth of the crucifixion hour to the dawning of that heaven which the final triumph of truth and righteouness promises to the sons of men; from the bitter pathos of a lonely, uncomprehended existence, to the glory of a sublime mission fulfilled, a divine purpose accomplished.

The risen Christ takes from death its sting and from the grave its seeming victory. He renews the hope of mankind for the dominion over the moral and the spiritual world and makes possible the resurrection of the race to a higher life. We do not realize the divine meaning of the resurrection as did those early disciples. "The knowledge of the risen Christ sent them forth healing the sick, opening the eyes of the blind, casting out devils, and raising the dead."

Man was made for dominion, he was made for immortality, and through the ages he has sought blindly to learn the lesson emphasized by the resurrection: that truth, purity and righteousness cannot be conquered by the earth. What though our ideals, our hopes, our joys and our aspirations are nailed to the cross and the grave receives them? If they are by nature deathless and immortal, they will rise again, for "Christ is risen." Spirit must conquer matter, Life must conquer death.

We need the lesson of joy and promise which comes to us with the Eastertide, for "Every man is a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. The mortality of every man is Jesus, suffering and sorrowing; the immortal spirit is the risen Christ." Christ is risen; so may the immortal in us rise to the throne of our being, and rule, even in this earthly life. The tomb could not hold the Nazarene because He possessed, in all its perfection, the element of life.

We need this Easter thought of joy, and we need to look, with Mary, into the tomb where we think our holiest treasure lies buried, and hear from the angel the blessed assurance "He is not here: He is risen."

The Eternal Possession.

NO festival of the Christian church has such fascination for the worshipper, or holds his interest so strongly, as that of Easter.

Clustering our thoughts round that first Easter morning, we go to the tomb of our Lord with the faithful women and witness their disappointment as they discover that the body for which they had prepared their costly spices is no longer there. The announcement of the angels, "He is not here, remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, saying that the son of man must be crucified and the third day rise again," was necessary to remind them of the words of the Master.

Again, in the afternoon of the same day, we find two disciples of Jesus on their way to Emmaus, mourning because their dream of earthly glory had faded away in His death and burial, and telling the Lord, when He joined them in their walk, "But we hoped that it was He who should have redeemed Israel."

How their hearts burn within them as He talks with them! Under His exposition how different the predictions of the old prophets sound to them, and as they constrain Him to abide with them, we wonder why the words of Jeremiah did not come to them: "O, the hope of Israel, the Savior thereof in time of trouble, why shouldst thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?"

All down the ages His own had waited for the "Hope of Israel" as He who should accomplish their redemption; now through the centuries, since that first glad Easter morning, we who believe can rejoice and sing, "The Lord is risen and has become the first fruits of them that sleep." To us has been given the gospel of Jesus, that "through comfort of the Scriptures we might have hope," not for this world only, but "the hope of glory."

What's In a Name?

WISCONSIN politicians are greatly agitated over the possibility of the time-honored custom of election treating falling into disrepute because of being incorrectly labeled by the legislature as a "misdemeanor," the new appellation carrying with it certain disagreeable and expensive penal features.

It is not often that legislators turn their attention to mere matters of nomenclature, and when they do it is time for private citizens to study up definitions and see what is wrong.

"Treating," the politicians tell us, is a very innocent political hospitality by means of which a candidate shows his kindly interest in his fellows and his fervent desire to serve them in an official capacity. The proposed bill, however, conveys the idea that what is known as "treating" is a sort of traffic in citizenship privileges and patriotism; is, indeed, an attempt to purchase an unmarketable commodity—a man's civic rights; is the taking advantage of his moral poverty and extremity to secure a mortgage on his political principles. Under this keen legal analysis the custom presents such a different aspect that there seems ample justification for a change of name to "misdemeanor."

One cannot but feel that even this analysis is incomplete. Unquestionably treating is responsible for enticing many a young man to take his first drink or to make his first visit to a saloon, and has occasioned the relapse of many a reformed man—is, indeed, too often the first step down the broad and easy stairway to ruin. Viewed in the light of these well-known facts, the term "misdemeanor" seems inadequate. "Crime" is the word.

One Wisconsin politician urges the continuance of the practice as a legitimate factor in political life on the ground that to legislate against it would seriously injure the business of the saloonkeepers, and would likewise deprive candidates of a fit opportunity to acquaint themselves with their constituency, which, as the gentleman very frankly admits, is to be found in the saloons.

No extremist in the temperance ranks could have framed a more striking and forceful argument in favor of the bill. Even the respectable, lukewarm citizen, dozing in his easy chair beside his fireside, will raise his eyebrows at this high-handed attitude. Is our country to be run in the interests of the saloonkeepers and their kinsmen, the corrupt politicians? Are our politics and our government to be controlled over the bar and bought and sold by drinks? Shall the dramshop dictate the laws of this commonwealth?

It is to be hoped that the good citizens of Wisconsin will answer these questions in a vigorous negative by no longer permitting the easy vice of "treating" to masquerade in society under an alias, but that it shall be branded in unmistakable letters for the pernicious and dangerous thing it is—a menace to society and to the nation.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Elma M. Preston, state L. T. L. secretary of Pennsylvania, gave THE UNION SIGNAL office a pleasant call last week. Mrs. Preston, accompanied by her sisters, Mrs. Lydia Linvill, Mrs. Margaret Brosius and Miss Linvill, is taking an extended western trip. They will see the wonders of Arizona, California and the Yosemite, and return by the northern route, stopping at Yellowstone Park. Family visits at Topeka and Spokane are included in the program of this delightful journey.

President's Letter.

MY DEAR COMRADES:—Several weeks ago Miss Gordon and I received an urgent invitation from Mrs. Brand, corresponding secretary of Indiana W. C. T. U., to come to Indiana to speak at a series of meetings she wished to arrange at several points in the state. It has been our custom to devote a few weeks each year to such meetings, for we believe it to be advantageous to thus come in close touch with the local union and the local union workers.

Last year we spent some time in this way in South Carolina and in Georgia, and when Mrs. Brand promptly accepted the only dates we were able to give, we cheerfully came to this state, beginning our meetings at Richmond, March 15. The evening audiences, the children's meetings in the afternoon, have been large and enthusiastic. We have spoken in colleges and public schools and I should also mention the informal receptions. The principal of one of the large high schools said to us, "A few years ago I could not have invited you to the school, but public sentiment has changed and is rapidly growing stronger for temperance."

The temperance people of Indiana are "rowing hard against the stream" and they are making good time. They succeeded, a few months ago, in securing a legislative enactment that removes the saloon one mile from the Soldiers' Home. This seems but small gain, but it is a move in the right direction. The recent favorable decision as to the validity of the Remonstrance law will enable localities to prevent the establishing of the saloon, if the people will exercise their power through this remonstrance.

It is true in Indiana as elsewhere that all good people are not so united, so alert, as they should be. We find here as in other license states that the restrictive measures of the license law are not enforced. Liquor is openly sold on Sunday and it is sold to minors. It is sold to drunkards the same as to moderate drinkers, many of whom will soon become drunkards. In one of the cities we visited, a young man told us of a terrible scene he witnessed a few days before on his way home from school—the death of a drunkard in one of the licensed saloons of the town. And the coroner's verdict was, "Died from alcohol poison."

The temperance people of Indiana are not satisfied with so-called "wholesome license laws." They are working and praying for the overthrow of these vile laws and for the substitution of prohibition.

At Fairmount and at Marion we had the the pleasure of having with us the state president, Mrs. Wilson, and we have been glad to see here three of our National evangelists, Mrs. Haughton, Mrs. Gibson and Miss Barbour. Mrs. McWhirter, ex-president, was with us at Terre Haute, where she spoke with her usual earnestness. Large delegations from the country round about have come short and long distances to attend the meetings.

Mrs. Brand has accompanied us during the entire trip, carefully looking after details and participating pleasantly and effectively in all of the meetings. Unless "all signs fail," Indiana will surely go up to the next National Convention with a gain of at least five hundred members. I would like to record the names of all of our pleasant hosts and hostesses, of all the faithful officers and members who have notably helped to make this tour a success. On Friday of this week Miss Gordon and I go to Cincinnati to see Mrs. Roller and other members of the local committees who have in charge the preparations for the National Convention.

We shall spend the early part of April at National Headquarters.

Early this morning, before leaving Terre Haute, we visited the Maple Avenue M. E. church, that we might see the Memorial Window, placed there by the W. C. T. U. It is a large and handsome window, having in the center the pictured face of Miss Willard. Above is her motto—our motto—"For God and Home and Native Land," and below, "In Memoriam, Frances E. Willard, W. C. T. U."

As we turned to leave the church one of the white-ribboners, who accompanied us, said, "It is a great blessing to Terre Haute, cursed as it is by the manufacture and sale of liquor, to have such a reminder as this of better customs, of a better time coming." And we reverently thought of the many ways in which Miss Willard still speaks to us, still inspires us to go forward.

We are receiving reports from many states, indicating that our workers are wide awake and that our work is prospering. With a loving greeting to all, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

On cars in Indiana, March 25, 1903.

Monthly Bible Reading.

Little Things.

By Mrs. R. B. Hall.

ARE not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows. (Luke, 12:6-7.)

One of the impressive lessons to be learned from these words of Christ is the value that God puts upon little things. That which we think of little account He thinks of great importance. The tiny sparrow, He watches and notices when it falls: He does not forget it; and we are of more value than these, hence He is interested in all that we do, in all that in any way concerns us.

This metaphorical expression of the hairs of our head being numbered shows the minuteness of His care over us and for us. It also shows God's thought of "little acts of kindness, little words (deeds) of love," for has He not said "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these ye did unto Me"? Then He can multiply our little efforts a hundred fold, like seed sown in good ground, and make them redound to His honor and glory. Take for illustration the lad's bread and fish. "There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes, but what are they among so many?" (John, 6:9-13.) I have always rejoiced because of that boy. Doubtless he went out there to see the great teacher who was doing such wonderful work, and boy-like, took his lunch with him—five barley cakes and two dried fishes. He gave it willingly, all he had, made no excuse, at least none is recorded, gave the little he had to Christ. Mark the result. This little multiplied in the hands of the Lord Jesus until over five thousand were fed and twelve baskets of fragments were taken up.

Shall we not bring to Him for His use our little, whatever it may be, our mites of time, of talent, of money, and trust Him for the result, believing that "the least we do for Jesus will be precious in His sight"? Not the least thing we do for Him for love's sake shall be lost.

Even a postal card written, a petition carried, a word fitly spoken, the least thing in any department of our work, which may seem trivial to us, even so small as a hair of the head, is noticed by Our Heavenly Father, and He can multiply its influence beyond what we can ever ask or think. Like a stone cast into the water, the circle widens and widens until it reaches the shore of eternity.

In the parable of the talents, if he with the one talent had used it for the Lord, he doubtless would have received the same blessing of "Well done, good and faithful (not successful) servant, thou hast been faithful over the little," I will enable thee to do more for me by multiplying thy usefulness—for that is its meaning; "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord"—the joy of doing good. Notice the little things in nature, how the united littles make the great things and accomplish so much. The raindrops, for instance; they disappear from sight, but wherever they go the sun finds them and lifts them up into the heavens, keeping them there until it has gathered and warmed others with them, and then sending them out to refresh the earth, making it bud and blossom, fill every little lily cup, bring to light the violet that it may shed abroad its fragrance. By and by the sun calls back again these raindrops, warming them and again sending them out to do their work, and so the great sun and the little raindrops keep working together, beautifying the earth and making it a fit abode for man. You and I are as little raindrops, to be drawn by the Sun of Righteousness up into a nearness to Himself, where we are warmed with that divine love which makes us like unto Him, and then sends us out on our mission of mercy, a ministry of love to brighten and cheer the darkened lives all about us, and thus we are co-workers with God.

But there shall not a hair of your head perish. (Luke, 21:18.) This was said by Christ to His disciples. What could He mean, for He had just told them that they would be persecuted and some of them suffer death. It was not literally, but really true, since not a single suffering of any description borne for Christ's sake has perished or was ever lost.

Whatever we may have to endure for Christ's sake shall not have been in vain.

The reproaches, the prejudices, the criticism, the misunderstanding of our motives, these are but trifles which are but light applications that shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory and need not distress us in the least.

That which is the most in the way of the advance of any reform is the apathy and indifference of those who are Christ's own.

"Not a sparrow falleth but its God doth know,
Just as when His mandate lays a monarch low;
Not a leaflet waveth but its God doth see;
Think not then, oh, trembler, God forgeteth thee.

For more precious surely than the birds that fly
Is a Father's image to a Father's eye.
E'en thine hairs are numbered, trust Him full and free,
Cast thy care upon Him, and He'll care for thee.

For the God that planted in thy breast a Soul,
On His sacred tablets doth thy name enroll.
Cheer thine heart, then, trembler, never faithless be.
He that marks the sparrows will remember thee."

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

With the Treasurer.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Memorial Fund as follows, $2 except as noted:

NEW YORK: Malone, Ransomville, Tottenville, Addison, Bath, Corning (5th ward), Painted Post, East Randolph $1, Falconer, Akron, Buffalo Anna Gordon Y, Buffalo, Lucy Hayes Y, Niagara, Hamburg, Kenmore, Lockport, Middleport, Fulton, Hannibal, Mexico, New Haven, New Haven Y $1.50, Palermo $1, Phœnix, Jamaica, North Lawrence, Corinth, Clyde, Gainesville, Mrs. Dr. Hunt.

MAINE.—North Waldoboro, East Jefferson, Auburn.

MISSISSIPPI.—Meridian, Gunnison W. C. T. U. and L. T. L.

NEBRASKA.—Peru, Lexington.

INDIANA.—Muncie, Oak Ridge, Petersville.

CALIFORNIA.—Ontario, Goleta.

SOUTH DAKOTA.—Pierre.

VERMONT. — Middlebury, Burlington, $5, Barre, Jamaica, Chelsea, Shelburne, West Charleston $1.25.

KANSAS.—Iola.

MASSACHUSETTS.— Concord Junction, Malden, Winchester, Boston Y, East Brookfield.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. — Soldiers' Home Union Washington.

OHIO. — Maplewood $1.10, Oberlin, Cleveland Ensign Y, Xenia, Urbana, Brooklyn.

OKLAHOMA. — Bridgeport, El Reno, Perkins, Guthrie.

CONNECTICUT. — Wethersfield, Willimantic, Bristol, Branford.

MICHIGAN.—Alice Winchell Bowen $5, Sparta, Ishpeming.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—West Milan.

DELAWARE.—Middletown.

LOUISIANA.—Raymond.

MARYLAND. — Baltimore City, eleven unions, $23; Montgomery County, Westminster, Westminster Y, Winchester, Pocomoke City Willard Y, Neal Dow Y, Anna Gordon Y, Jessie Ackerman union, all of Baltimore.

ILLINOIS.—Litchfield, De Kalb, Collinsville.

COLORADO.—Colorado Springs, Canon City.

TEXAS.—League City.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Barnes, New Castle.

OREGON.—Beulah.

KANSAS. — Independence, Abilene, Oatville, Ransom, Arkansas City, Newton, Baldwin, Argonia, Chanute, Mound City, Heber, Concordia, Hutchinson, Hutchinson Y, Burlingame, Topeka.

ARIZONA.—Tempe $4.25.

WASHINGTON.—Seattle St. Frances union.

Dues have been received from Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan and Kansas.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Organizers.

DEAR COMRADES:—I have just returned from a trip in Ohio, in the interests of our work. In spite of all the difficulties of rain and mud and counter attractions, four good unions were organized, 128 active and forty-four honorary members were secured. I also organized an L. T. L.

Two weeks of October and three of November were spent organizing and lecturing in Ohio. During that trip I organized three unions and one L. T. L. This gives seven unions and two Legions, 230 active and eighty-six honorary members, as a result of my two trips.

Under the direction of the county president I made a ten-days' trip in Moultrie county, Illinois, which resulted in securing thirty-one active and five honorary members. I am engaged for six weeks of Institute work in Illinois, beginning April 2 at Joliet.

I expect to return to Ohio early in October for another tour. The Beal local option law is productive of much enthusiasm in that state, and is awakening new interest and zeal in our workers. Town after town has voted "dry" and in every case the local W. C. T. U. has been greatly in evidence. This law encourages local workers to bring about an election, as it provides for a "special election," taking it out of partisan politics at municipal elections.

I find our W. C. T. U. everywhere is honored and appreciated, and receives credit for being the greatest force extant in moulding public sentiment and securing an arrest of thought on the great question of the overthrow of the liquor traffic.

Sincerely yours,
ANNA R. SIMMONS.

Chicago.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL AND COMRADES: I have been in Oklahoma almost continuously since last fall. Many places are virgin soil in temperance work, but the many Kansas people in the territory have brought a sentiment for prohibition most agreeable to find and not very hard to quicken into temperance organizations. Of course the newness of the country forbids very excellent railroad service, yet "all in all," it's a wonderful new country and matters are adjusting themselves rapidly.

Last fall I traveled over Grant county, canvassing very closely, which gave me numberless drives over faultless roads in almost perfect weather. We had over 700 total abstinence pledge signers who put on the white ribbon, thus painting almost the entire county white. I left seven new unions and one reorganized.

Returning after holidays I went into Comanche, Kiowa and Custer counties, organizing Custer into a county union. The "blizzard" caught me in Custer county, compelling a few days' halt. It rained, sleeted, snowed and blew the same day, and I drove twenty-eight miles through all this, finding at the end of my journey a dear old lady whose kindness provided a good hot meal and an equally hot fire to thaw me out.

Oklahoma has turned her "best side" to me and every local as well as county and territorial officer has pushed the work by planning wisely for my meetings.

The territorial president, Mrs. Cleveland, has won the love of her constituents, and all goes smoothly, as was evidenced by the harmonious territorial convention last September. I think I've organized between twelve and fifteen new unions since convention.

LILA CARLIN MOORE.

Raton, N. M.

Why Modify Milk

for infant feeding in the uncertain ways of the novice when you can have always with you a supply of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, a perfect cow's milk frm herds of native breeds, the perfection of infant food? Use it for tea and coffee.

Superintendents.

Physical Education.

THE March number of the Physical Education quarterly contains the following leading articles: "Water Drinking"; "Correct Breathing"; "Obesity and Exercises for the Same"; "Eyes and Ears"; "Simple Tests for Sight and Hearing"; "Decalogue of Natural Law"; "High School Gymnasium," and other contributions of interest.

This number is particularly valuable in the home and the school because of the eye and ear tests by Dr. J. F. Byington, a skillful specialist of Battle Creek, Michigan. Unions are urged to place this number in the hands of teachers. It will be furnished at the rate of thirty-five cents per dozen, and fifty copies for one dollar. Address all orders to

MRS. FRANCES W. LEITER,
Mansfield, Ohio.

Anti-Narcotics.

THE March first pledge signing day was a grand success. It is impossible to tell how many children were pledged, but 75,000 cards were sent out by me in January and February alone; one St. Louis woman, Mrs. Magil, secured 1,400 pledges. We believe thousands of boys and girls signed this pledge. Best of all, of the 75,000 pledges sent out only 5,000 were against cigarets, the rest were against tobacco in every form.

Success has crowned our efforts in Missouri for an anti-cigaret law. It is now unlawful to sell or give away cigarets or cigaret paper to minors. The law was secured by the united efforts of the Woman's Clubs and the W. C. T. U. I was made a member of the legislative committee of the Federation of Woman's Clubs to secure a law, and I worked at my desk as hard as mortal woman can, while our faithful secretary of the state W. C. T. U., Miss Ellen D. Morris, was at the capital, ever awake to the needs of the hour. More petitions were sent in for this measure than for all other bills put together.

ELIZA B. INGALLS.

St. Louis, Mo.

Promoted.

"Forever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead."

Mrs. F. P. Beach, aged seventy-four years, passed away in Onarga, Illinois, March 9, 1903. She had been a white ribboner for many years and attended the National Convention in St. Paul, Minnesota, in 1898 as a delegate. Her home was the home of the circuit rider, the pastor, presiding elder, and temperance worker. Her husband, now seventy-five years old, has been a Prohibitionist for many years and the two had walked together in love and charity nearly fifty-four years. She was devoted to the welfare of her children and was a friend to every good cause. Mrs. Mattie Beach Whitcomb, of St. Paul, Minnesota, Mrs. Libbie Beach Brown, of Seattle, Washington, and others of her sorrowing children ministered tenderly to her in her last illness. Rev. J. G. Evans, of Grant Park, Illinois, a lifelong friend, conducted the funeral services. Members of the union at Onargo expressed their love by beautiful floral tributes and while they feel that they have sustained a great loss, they know that "for her to die was gain" and that "her works do follow her." A devoted mother, a consecrated Christian, a consistent white ribboner has added her voice to the choir invisible.

Dropped Them.

Quit the Medicines and Got Well on Grape-Nuts.

Made over on a change of food is rather a fascinating experience. Sounds like fiction, but an employe of the Anaconda Copper Co., of Anaconda, Mont., had just that experience, being cured on Grape-Nuts.

"For several years I was so run down from indigestion and improper foods that I had to resign a $125.00 a month position in Chicago," he says. "I was in such a bad condition that if I stooped over the sour food came boiling up into my throat and out my mouth.

"I lost nine months' valuable time, and three of Chicago's best physicians said I must die. I weighed about 140 pounds, which is skelton weight for me. So I resigned myself to my fate and went home to the country to die. It was there a cousin introduced me to Grape-Nuts and new life. I threw all my medicines away and at the end of two weeks' use of Grape-Nuts had to admit that I had gained 4 pounds. In the next few weeks I ate absolutely nothing but Grape-Nuts and pure rich cream and gained 18 pounds.

"I began to take interest in the events of the world again. From this point my recovery has been rapid and today I am physically in the best condition I ever was in my life. I had no trouble to get a position with the Aanaconda Copper Mining Co. at a better salary than before.

"This is what Grape-Nuts has done for me. It saved my life, thanks to pure food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

PORTRAITS OF

Frances E. Willard

AN ENLARGED PHOTOGRAPH.
New Process. A General Favorite.
SIZE 18 x 22, PRICE $5.00. Carriage not prepaid.
SIZE 8 x 10, PRICE, POSTPAID $1.50.

THE OFFICIAL ETCHING.
The Celebrated Evangeline Picture selected by the National W. C. T. U. as their official picture.
SIZE 20 x 24, PRICE, POSTPAID $1.50.

THE ENGLISH PICTURE.
With Autograph. Very Popular.
SIZE 18 x 22, PRICE, POSTPAID $ .50.
SIZE 11 x 14, PRICE, POSTPAID .40.

Aquarelle Tint: Life Size Portrait in Colors.
Used Extensively for Schools.
Price, Postpaid, 35 cts.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 La Salle Street,
CHICAGO.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

North Yakima, Wash., union observed Willard Memorial day. A large audience, good program and collection of $5 rewarded their efforts.

During the stay of Mrs. Florence D. Richards, National organizer, in Milwaukee, thirty new members were added to the First Milwaukee Union.

Mrs. Helen D. Harford, president of Oregon, is in the field in her own state. Corvallis union enjoyed her help at a parlor meeting and in an evening address.

Manilla, Ohio, observed Prohibition Rally Day, with an address by Rev. E. A. Coil. Mrs. Laura Buckner, state worker among colored people, also spoke.

The union at Orono, Me., arranges to serve a dinner in the Town Hall, on town meeting day. Their catering is well patronized and becomes a source of profit.

Miss Mary E. Barbour, National evangelist, has been in evangelistic work in Michigan during the winter and is now in Cass county engaged in a local option campaign.

A delightful parlor meeting was held by the union at Washington, Pa. The county president, Miss Pollock, of Canonsbury, was present, and aided in the success of the meeting.

The president of the East Rochester W. C. T. U., Mrs. S. M. Wales, received a fine piece of silverware from her sister members on her departure to make a new home in Caswell Mills, Vt.

The W. C. T. U. of Perry, Ohio, organized December last with twenty active members, has eight new members and now rejoices in two L. T. L.'s, a Junior of thirty-two and a Senior of forty members.

Union Signal Day was observed, and the program carried out at Akron, Colo., and Hammond, La. At the former meeting a little girl of seven, dressed in cap and gown of Union Signals, recited a Signal poem and solicited subscriptions.

Owatonna, Minn., union is actively engaged in good work. It has taken up the study of the state laws, has had an anti-cigaret rally, had an address by Miss Annie Robbins, and has done active work in a local option campaign.

Miss Christine Tinli-- delivered one of her very interesting lectures March 20 in the Friends church at Rose Hill, Kansas, under the auspices of the local union at that place. A crowded house listened with marked attention to her address.

Gunnison, Miss., union and L. T. L. made a deep impression on the town by an entertainment given largely by the children. A good collection was received which was divided between the memorial fund, the state work, and campaign work.

The Roanoke, Va., union presented a large framed picture of Miss Willard and a complete set of her books to the Y. M. C. A. and the Railroad Y. M. C. A. of the town. A reception was held at the Y. M. C. A. building in connection with the presentation. A program was given and a "book contest" engaged in for amusement.

A very enjoyable entertainment was recently given by the Loyal Temperance Legion in Schuylkill, Pa. The program consisted of recitations, dialogues, hoop drills, dumbell drills, and a few records on the phonograph, vocal and instrumental music, and an address by Miss E. J. Battersby. A neat sum was realized for the benefit of the Legion.

The union at Dows, Iowa, held a "cigaret quiz" at one of their regular meetings. An Anti-Cigaret League is to be formed in the public school, the result of this union's work. All needed supplies for the league will be furnished by the union.

The "St. Louis Republic" of March 24, 1903, contained this item: "Twenty-five years ago today a cottage temperance meeting was held at the residence of Miss Eliza Buckley, at which Capt. O'Neal spoke." Miss Buckley is now Mrs. Eliza B. Ingalls.

We are in receipt of a very interesting account of a meeting at Milltown, Me., addressed by Miss Alice H. Moore, state Y organizer. Welcome addresses from the pastors and flowers from the Y greeted her. The address was much enjoyed and appreciated.

Salem, O., union recently held a membership contest, gaining one hundred new members, also has a fine new Y. and L. T. L. and will soon open headquarters. Miss Ensign, state corresponding secretary, visited Salem and was tendered a large reception.

Virginia voted at the last state convention to abolish districts, and work under county organization. County conventions are being held this spring, and are of unusual interest. The close touch that the county can give is an inspiration to the local workers.

Dr. Sarah J. Elliott is actively engaged in an anti-polygamy crusade for the Pensylvania W. C. T. U. The second series of mass meetings has been opened in Philadelphia, and much interest aroused in the campaign for an anti-polygamy constitutional amendment.

An all day's meeting of the Binghamton, N. Y., W. C. T. U. was largely attended. A very interesting program was carried out. One topic seemed especially practical: "How can the W. C. T. U. help to make a better Binghamton?" "The best way to secure new members" was the subject of a helpful discussion by the local presidents.

The executive committee of Kansas W. C. T. U. in session at Topeka last week, passed a resolution of appreciation of the service rendered the state by Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, of Le Loup, as state reporter and editor of the state paper, "Our Messenger." Mrs. Kemp placed her resignation in the hands of the executive committee, and will remove to Chicago in April to become an associate editor on the staff of The Union Signal.

The Immanuel Baptist Church of Syracuse, N. Y., distinguished its dedicatory services, last week, by inviting the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to a representation in the Woman's session. Miss Fife, of Japan, who spoke for Foreign Missions, paid a fine tribute to the W. C. T. U.; Mrs. McCullough, of Syracuse, for Home Missions, referred to the influence of the organization and Mrs. J. A. Bidwell, state evangelist, spoke for the W. C. T. U.

One of the hardest fought battles in the interest of local option ever waged in the state of Michigan will close in Van Buren county the sixth of April. This county has enjoyed twelve years of prohibition under the local option law, it being the only county in the state to have maintained the law since its first adoption. The liquor men have pledged $50,000 to the county for the license compaign. The W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League are leading the temperance forces.

CONSTIPATION
TRIAL TREATMENT Sent Absolutely FREE Without Any Conditions.

A sample for the asking by return mail prepaid.

We do this to demonstrate the fact that "RELIEVETS" permanently relieve constipation, without the use of injections or taking cathartics. ONE "RELIEVET" will cure the most obstinate case of constipation in less than thirty minutes, while one hundred times the amount of medicine if taken into the stomach would have no effect. No more complicated and troublesome injections. No more swallowing of nauseous potions. No more sickening, griping pains. To get the results produced in a few moments by this MILD, NATURAL, ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS STIMULANT. Your name on a postal brings a sample by mail prepaid.

We will convince the most skeptical.

THE NEW REMEDY CO.
834 LA SALLE AVE., SOUTH BEND, IND.

FINE CAMERA AND OUTFIT FREE
FOR A $1.00 ORDER.

I Personally request every Union Signal reader to read the extraordinary bargains I offer on page 22. Surely no one would miss growing these beautiful, easy-growing, fragrant climbers. They succeed everywhere. The Premiums I give with orders are worth more than the whole cost.

I want every reader and especially every Lady to get up clubs for my seeds and vines. It is very easy.

☞ Do not overlook that I send 22 Cinnamon Vine Roots, 6 grand Novelties, and this elegant, perfect Camera and full Outfit, all postpaid, for $1.00. (The actual value is $2.50)

☞ Full particulars of all my Premiums, terms, Catalog of Bargains, etc., sent with every order for roots. Please order today (if only 10c worth) and tell your friend, also.

Yours with best wishes,

Complete Outfit.
1 Pkg. Plates.
1 Pkg. Hypo.
1 Pkg. Developer.
1 Pkg. Card Mounts.
1 Pkg. Sensitized Paper.
1 Sheet Ruby Paper.
1 Developing Tray.
1 Toning Tray.
1 Printing Block.
1 Complete Instructions.

A. T. COOK, Seedsman, HYDE PARK, N. Y.

Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED ..BY.. THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS, 84-90 Beekman St NEW YORK.

Easter Cards. Beautiful Easter Cards, 20 cents a dozen. Address Mrs. Cora Howe Beebe, Lacona, N. Y.

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department
Union Signal
184 La Salle Street
CHICAGO

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

Among the New Books

When one takes up a book of George Cary Eggleston's he is certain of a pleasant hour or two of good, wholesome reading; in fact, he knows that he will shortly be hopelessly lost in pictured charm of southern hospitality and romance of heroic maid and gallant cavalier. In The Master of Warlock, as in "Dorothy South" and "A Carolina Cavaner," there is an absorbing love story, but that is far from being all the interest of the book. The setting of the story is Virginia in the early stages of the civil war. The point of view is purely southern and is doubly valued on that account, as without the slightest touch of sectionalism there is presented clear and authoritative studies of American conditions in the South during the critical period of Virginia's forced secession. "The Master of Warlock" is strong in plot and full of purity of sentiment, charm of atmosphere and dramatic action. Seldom will a reader willingly lose the single thread of a romance so often as is here rerequired, but the swift movement of the intervening happenings carries him on with little protest, and he is finally rewarded by having the bright threads gathered and knotted quite to his liking.

Baillie Pegram and Agatha Ronald are at first separated by one of the typical family feuds of Virginia, but the combined efforts of love and war break down the barriers that have withstood several generations of formal courtesy.

The book is one to appeal to readers of South and North alike, and it makes clear, especially to the young mind, as perhaps no purely historical narrative could do, the social customs and political views of Old Virginia. It is in fact an intimate glimpse of Virginia at the time of the civil war. There is an illustrated cover and six drawings by C. D. Williams. (Boston: Lothrop Publishing Company. $1.50.)

"The Boy Puzzle," by Rev. Joseph F. Flint. The illustrations are a unique feature of this book, and they fit in well with the original style of the author. The chapters are helpful to guardians of the American boy, as they give a synopsis of his characteristics, foibles and virtues, and tell how to cope with them. A review cannot give an adequate idea of the contents, as the book must be read and studied. Mr. Flint says, among other good things:

"The boy is wax to receive, marble to retain. There is some good in every boy."

"The purpose of mother love is the nurture of life. Every mother is a priestess ordained by God."

"The proper book for the mother to study is the child's heart."

"The better the soil the ranker the weeds of conceit and self-indulgence, unless early counteracted by the good seeds of reverence and obedience."

"By justice and kindness we can make almost anything we like of children. They will be frank and open if encouraged to be confiding."

"The voice of conscience holds the same relation to the spiritual harvest that the separator does to the crop of cereals—it discriminates between the chaff of error and the golden wheat of truth. It is a happy hour in the life of a young man when he is willing to follow his conscience, though it take him straight over Niagara."

Supplementary papers by the Rev. Clement E. Babb, D. D., Mrs. E. M. Adams, and the Rev. James R. Kaye, Ph. D., are included in the volume. (New York: Pacific Press Publishing Company.)

The Upper Currents, by Rev. Dr. J. R. Miller, is a book of short essays, simple, popular, pat and pithy in style, frankly religious, free from cant, sincere, manly and genial, on such subjects as "Catching the Upper Currents," "Transfiguration," "The Ripening of Character," "Things That Last," and "The Art of Living With People." Dr. Miller has published many books, and more than a million copies of them have been sold. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

Perhaps no single volume contains so much information essential to the intelligent temperance worker as does Liquor Laws, published by the Tuttle Company. It gives in full the liquor laws of Massachusetts, Maine, New York, South Carolina, Wisconsin and Kansas, with extracts from the laws of New Jersey, Iowa, Illinois and Maryland. There is also a summary of the liquor laws of every state and territory acting under high license, low license, local option, prohibition and dispensary systems, besides articles pertaining to the Liquor Traffic, Gothenburg or Norwegian System, High License, Nationalization of the Liquor Traffic, and the Referendum. It is a legislative manual, especially adapted for lecturers, lawyers, legislators and workers in temperance reform. It should find its place in every temperance home. One-half of the 392 pages are left blank for possible notes of reference. (Rutland, Vermont: The Tuttle Company. $1.00.)

Joe's Place, by John Rosslyn, is a narrative dialect poem of some 200 pages telling the life story of Joe, the darling and pride of a loving father's heart. Beginning with the boy's "Knickerbocker days" when he was "bereft of her that made life sweet," the recital continues through boyhood's days on through college life, then into the deeps of temptation when the curse of the wine cup holds him in thrall. But the love of his father and that of a true woman restore his wandering heart, and the erring one returns to the safety of his father's house.

The book is full of homely philosophy cast in rhythmic mould, and reads so easily and naturally that in no way is impaired the directness of the story. There is genuine pathos, genial humor and withal a deep human interest which appeals to all classes. It is a wholesome, helpful book offering the means of solving some of life's hardest problems.

The volume is attractively bound in blue cloth and is fully illustrated. It is just the book to place in the hands of our boys and girls. (Philadelphia: George W. Jacobs & Co. $1.)

Behind the Bars, by Mary A. Jenks, M. D., Police Matron of Pawtucket, R. I., and president of the Pawtucket W. C. T. U., is a plain tale setting forth the experience of life in a police station, with its sad stories of wrecked humanity. Interspersed are chapters of personal interest, a pleasant vacation, and echoes of National conventions. Those engaged in rescue and reform work in cities will read the book with keen interest. One feels, after closing the volume that she has been having a rambling visit with the dear motherly-looking woman whose face is shown on the title page. (Published and sold by the author, Pawtucket, R. I.)

The Jewish Sacrifices and Their Christian Meaning, by Rev. John Worcester, is a small, well written and earnestly spiritual book, which takes for its appropriate motto the following sentence from Swedenborg: "The externals of the Ancient Church were all representative of the Lord, and of the celestial and spiritual things of the kingdom—that is, of love and charity and faith thence—and consequently of such things as are of the Christian church. Thus when the externals of the Ancient, and also of the Jewish church, are unfolded, and, as it were, unwrapped, the Christian church is disclosed."

In certain broadly important respects Swedenborg's peculiar philosophy of nature and of life, of human and of divine things, is perhaps more influential than ever. At all events, he has a most vital way of looking at all things. (Chicago: Fleming H. Revell Co.)

There is something trite and familiar in the sentiments expressed in The Road, by Rev. C. C. Harrah. Many before have traveled over "the road" that eliminates the sectarian element and advocates the one church embracing all followers of the Christ. This book teaches the brotherhood of Christ, and that the church which Jesus planted was a community of brothers.

One might not take issue with the author on the "one church," but the question of the inefficiency of the present system of denominations might occur to some readers. The author will also find many not willing to agree with him in the statement that "ordinances were never thought of by Jesus or the Apostles." No one, however, will deny that the "permanent ingredients of religion are faith, love, worship and righteousness." There are also many other facts stated that will easily be concurred in. "The Road" contains much of good teaching. (Des Moines, Ia.: Scott Heights-Book Company. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.)

There is much interesting reading and practical teaching in The Lovers' World, by Alice B. Stockham. It treats of love in its many phases, of marriage, parenthood, mind cure, recreation, sleep, dress and numerous other topics, the most delicate of which are handled in an admirable way. The author of "Toxology" will find many readers for this new book of hers, as people have learned to have confidence in Doctor Stockham and her writings and believe that she knows whereof she speaks. The book is destined to be a missionary in every home it enters. (Chicago: Stockham Publishing Company. $2.25.)

In a few compact pages in Books—Their Value and What to Read, is given a selected list of the best books for children and young people, prefaced by an interesting essay on "Books." The author is Miss Ementine M. Craig, Beatrice, Neb. Price. 10 cents.

Books Received.

A Ministerial Misfit, or the Biography of Rev. Timothy Tanglefoot. By Isaiah Villars, D. D.

Letters of an American Countess, by the Countess herself. (New York: J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company.)

The Left Side Man. By Margaret Robinson. (New York: J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company.)

Money to Cooks.

$7,500.00 Donated, to be Divided Among Family Cooks.

The sum of $7,500.00 will be distributed between now and midsummer among family cooks, in 735 prizes, ranging from $200.00 to $5.00.

This is done to stimulate better cooking in the family kitchen. The contest is open to paid cooks, (drop the name "hired girl" and call them cooks if they deserve it) or to the mistress of the household if she does the cooking. The rules for contest are plain and simple. Each of the 735 winners of money prizes will also receive an engraved certificate of merit or diploma as a cook. The diplomas bear the big gilt seal and signature of the most famous food company in the world, The Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., of Battle Creek, Mich., the well known makers of Postum Coffee and Grape-Nuts. Write them and address Cookery Dept., No. 482 for full particulars.

This remarkable contest among cooks to win the money prizes and diplomas will give thousands of families better and more delicious meals as well as cleaner kitchens and a general improvement in the culinary department, for the cooks must show marked skill and betterment in service to win. Great sums of money devoted to such enterprises always result in putting humanity further along on the road to civilization, health, comfort and happiness.

If you are troubled with constipation, the adv. of the New Remedy Co. may interest you. They have helped others, they may be able to relieve you. See page 17 for their adv.

Say-"I'm Sick"

And I Will Supply You With a Cure.

I ask for no money—just a postal; just say that you need help.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

Over half a million sick ones have done what I ask of you; and 39 in each 40 have paid for the treatment gladly, because they were cured.

I don't know your condition, nor how difficult your case. That doesn't matter. If you will make the test, and be fair with yourself and me, I am willing to take the risk.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves, which operate the vital organs. I have spent my life in learning how to do it. A weak organ means weak nerve power. It is like a weak engine that needs more steam. To doctor the organ is useless; what it needs is power to act. My Restorative alone brings back that power, and in most of these diseases no other way can cure.

My book will tell you why.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists

Signal Notes.

A bill now in the Wisconsin legislature provides that the percentage of alcohol in patent medicines shall be plainly printed on the bottle.

A state hospital for inebriates is a matter that is being agitated in Iowa State buildings at Knoxville that are standing idle may be utilized for the purpose.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has prohibited the playing of cards or drinking of liquors on its trains by passengers, and other roads are likely to follow its example.

Prohibition won in Oakhurst, Texas, and the credit is given to the women, who, although it rained all day, went to the polls early in the morning and remained there all day.

The Beal local option law has been in force in Ohio less than a year, and under it over 500 saloons have been closed. Local option elections have been held in 177 municipalities and 114 of these have voted "dry."

Ashtabula is the largest place in Ohio that has voted under the Beal law. Out of a large vote cast a small majority gained for the saloon. The temperance people consider this a step toward ultimate success.

At a recent election for mayor in Topeka, Kansas, 6,000 women voted. The candidates were known to be on opposite sides of the saloon question. The women cast an almost solid vote for the prohibition candidate.

More Than Half

Suffer From Coffee Drinking.

Coffee does not set up disease with all people using it, on the other hand it absolutely does create disease in thousands and thousands of cases perfectly well authenticated and traceable directly to coffee and nothing else.

This statement may hurt the feelings of some coffee drinkers but the facts are exactly what they are.

Make inquiry of some of your coffee drinking friends and you may be certain of one thing, one half of them, yes more than half, suffer from some sort of incipient or chronic disease. If you want to prove it's the coffee, or would prefer to prove it is not the coffee in these cases, take coffee away from those persons for ten days to a month, don't change the food in any other way but give them Postum Food Coffee, and the proof of whether coffee has been the trouble or not will be placed before you in unmistakable terms.

A young lady in the St. Mary's Academy, Winnepeg, Can., says, "One of our teachers suffered a long while from indigestion. She was a coffee drinker. She became worse steadily and finally was reduced to a point where the stomach did not retain any food, then electricity was tried but without avail. She, of course, grew weak very fast and the doctor said the case was practically incurable.

"About that time I was attracted to a statement in one of the papers regarding the poisonous effect of coffee and the value of Postum Food Coffee. The statement was not extravagant but couched in terms that won my confidence and aroused me to the belief that it was true. I persuaded our teacher to leave off the morning cup of coffee altogether and use Postum Food Coffee.

"A change took place. She began to get better. She has now regained her strength and is able to eat almost every kind of food and has taken her position as teacher again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB.

By JOHN F. COWAN, D. D.

CAPTAIN BILL (Bilious Temperament in full) had not been to the meetings of the club since his public reprimand for saying, just after eating heartily of Welsh rarebit, that he believed the human race was going to the bow-wows. But the reports that reached him about the new club room, and posters, renewed his waning spark of loyalty, and he came, bringing a friend of his, Colonel Killjoy (the corners of whose mouth had a chronic droop). "Been reading the newspaper stories of you," he said. "That reporter, Slingsink, calls this 'The Optimists' Sun Parlors.' He says it's a sure cure for the blues, and all that. If I tell two rose-colored facts, may we both sit in the 'Sun Parlor'?"

"Sure! sure!" answered President Sunnyface. "Out with them before they fade to drab."

"Well, down at the hotel where Colonel Killjoy and I live—that is, we stay there—(it's noted for its Welsh rarebits) there's a surprising new wrinkle. We have a chaplain—a hotel chaplain. A minister has given up a prominent church to live with and minister to us. He's already got me to sign a pledge not to moralize after eating rarebit. The hotels will all have chaplains, he says.

"The other fact is that Colonel Killjoy and I happened to be in Washington when General Booth, of the Salvation Army, was there; and, would you believe it? this gray-haired, gospel slum-worker was the lion of the day. He was banqueted and toasted by senators and judges and diplomats, and treated with more honor by the President than a titled foreign visitor. The Colonel can't get over it; that's one thing that's brought him here."

"Halleluia!" exploded Deacon Hilarious Giver, and at once proceeded to take up the collection in the waterpail, and when his mistake was pointed out he forthwith took up another in Mrs. Seraphic Smyle's shopping bag.

"I want the club to know," said Harry Heartsease, "that 300 soldiers at Fort Slocum have presented Helen Gould with a loving cup."

"Out of which no alcoholic drink will ever be drunk," added Miss Thankful Frame.

"And, do you know," put in Professor Gladsmile, "that the Czar of Russia has sent army officers over here to inspect Helen Gould's Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. building? He wants to provide his soldiers with that kind of religious influence."

"That reminds me," said John Beamingeye, "that the Philadelphia Daughters of the Revolution have given the War Department $10,000 for an army recreation building, to give the anti-canteen argument a fair chance to demonstrate that beer is not necessary to patriotism."

"While we are veering four points to the wind'ard of the temperance question," spoke up the Unquenchable Enthusiast, "isn't it good news that Senator Seay, who has been leading the temperance forces in the Tennessee legislature, has been made speaker of the state senate, and but one temperance legislator was defeated, while several anti-temperance leaders were sent up Salt River?"

"Yes, and doesn't it mean much for temperance when an influential paper like Leslie's Weekly commends Governor Odell, of New York, for his courageous stand against Sunday saloons, and says, "The clamor of a few money-making saloonkeepers for an open Sabbath does not voice the opinion of the masses?"

By this time the downward curves of Col. Killjoy's lips had begun to reverse themselves. In lieu of rapping with the gavel (which had rolled off the dray in moving) the president snapped his watch-case loud three times. "The order of the day has arrived," he announced, "our prize competition in tabloid optimism. Ready! Play ball!" As the following rapid plays flashed before them, Captain Bill forgot that his full name was Bilious Temperament, and the curves of Col. Killjoy's mouth became like Cupid's bow.

The will of the late Jacob H. Fecht, of Boston, provides for bequests of $135,000 to about thirty charities.

Mrs. Mary J. Northup's will bequeathing over $2,000,000 to Princeton Seminary has been probated.

An anonymous donor gave $10,000 to the Wellesley, Mass., children's hospital as a Lenten gift.

An English nobleman pays the salary of John McNeil, the famous Scotch evangelist, and thus makes it possible for him to preach the gospel without charge.

Twenty prominent Detroit ladies have set out to raise $1,000 each for the Young Woman's Christian Association, to complete the $100,000 needed to erect a new building.

The Awdiffred prize of $30,000 has been awarded to Mme. Meyrier, wife of the French consul at Diarbekir, Turkey, for her heroism during the Armenian massacre in 1895. She fed and sheltered more than 700 Armenians in the consulate, and inspired the staff again and again to repulse the Turkish assassins who would have murdered them even there.

The committee of music box reported that the flat tones resulting from the fall in moving couldn't be remedied, and they recommended that the mechanism be removed and the box be used for offerings for the Fresh-Air fund.

The program committee announced that for the next meeting, Squire Hardsense, the Yankee Mr. Dooley of the codfish metropolis, would make an address on "How to Cook a Croaker.'

Boston, Mass.

A Healing Mineral At Your Door.

Every reader of this paper who is sick and in need of medical treatment should be interested in the offer which the Theo. Noel Company, of 527, 529, 531 West North avenue, Chicago, Illinois, are making in this issue under the heading "Personal to Subscribers." The offer will be found on page seven, and should be read and accepted by every sick person. This company is the proprietor of the famous Vitæ-Ore medicine, a natural healing and curing mineral, which was discovered many years ago by Theo. Noel, the President of the company, at that time a prospecting geologist, while prospecting in the neighborhood of an extinct mineral spring. The ore or rock from this locality, when properly oxidized, possesses marvelous curing and healing properties, and since its introduction has been instrumental in curing thousands of people all over the country of the diseases named in the announcement. The Theo. Noel Company desires no one's money whom Vitæ-Ore can not positively benefit, and for this reason desires each person to test it before paying for it, and none need pay unless benefited and satisfied. The company is reliable, have what they claim and will do as they agree.

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

Fat Folks

BEFORE—267 lbs. AFTER—180 lbs.

Mrs. E. Williams, 55 Chatham St., Rochester, N. Y., lost 87 pounds, 8 in. bust, 10 in. waist, 20 in. in abdominal measure, on a 6 months' course of the Dr. Snyder Obesity Treatment.

DR. SNYDER guarantees his treatment to be perfectly harmless in every particular. No starving, no detention from business, no wrinkles or discomfort. A 40-page booklet, telling all about it, free. Call or write to-day.

O. W. F. SNYDER, M. D.,
21 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.
or 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS,
39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

HOME ENTERTAINMENT SOCIETY

You Can Have Any Columbia Edison or Victor Talking Machine

WITHOUT ONE CENT OF COST

Except the records. Write

B. S. NOBLE, Mgr., 237 Broadway, N. Y.

HANDSOME WATCH FREE

We give a guaranteed stem wind, stem set watch, also chain and charm. Watch warranted to keep good time. FREE for selling 20 useful articles at 10 cents each. Handsome jewelry and home supplies. Agents often sell all in one home. Send your address and we will send goods and large premium list postpaid. When sold send the $2.00 and we will send watch, also chain and charm.

Royal Supply Co., Dept. 13, Chicago.

Two Rings Free!

We will give these Two SOLID GOLD laid Rings, one set with large Garnet and three Pearls, one with Ruby and two Brilliants, FREE to any one that will sell 12 of our Gold Plate Enameled Brooches, set with different colored stones at 10 cents each, and sends us the $1.20. No money required until brooches are sold. We take back all not sold. Address HOWARD MFG. CO., PROVIDENCE, R.I.

AN EASTER GIFT if you send 15 cents to Mrs. Cor Howe Beebe, Lacona, N. Y., for her beautiful Easter temperance story, "The Mission of a Little Easter Bud," you will receive a picture of Miss Willard; 5 copies 10 cents each.

PRICES REDUCED FOR 60 DAYS.

$4.00 Vapor Bath Cabinet $2.25 each
$5.00 Quaker " " 3.50 each
$10.00 " " " 6.10 each
$1.00 Face & Head Steam. Attch. 65c
Quality best. Guaranteed. $2. Book Free with all "Quakers." Write for our New Catalogue, special 60-Day offer. Don't miss it. Your last chance. New plan, new prices to agents, salesmen, managers. Wonderful sellers. Hustlers getting rich. Plenty territory.

World M'f'g Co., 620 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Parliamentary Difficulties.

Conducted by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin

QUESTION: (a) When a woman gives her name to a union but does not pay her dues, has she the right to put on the white ribbon?

(b) Suppose a woman moves to a new locality where there is no union, and year after year continues to wear the ribbon, but does not pay dues anywhere; is that the thing to do?

ANS: Technically, a woman has not the right to wear the ribbon until she has paid dues. What constitutes membership in the W. C. T. U.? Taking the total abstinence pledge, and paying annual dues. This, as will readily be seen, virtually answers the second question. Suppose a woman pays the required fee, but refuses to take the pledge; would she be considered a member? Assuredly not. In either case she has not met the requirements. To become a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union means that the candidate must subscribe to the pledge and pay annual dues. The next answer will give additional light.

QUES.: Should a new union, so-called, be reported and go on the state calendar, with a given number of members, when not a woman of the lot has paid any dues?

ANS: Opinions would differ as to that. Personally I never report a new union, until I send the dues to the state treasurer for the exact number reported. After the preceding answers, the reason is obvious. I have known an organizer to report as high as eighty new members in a single city, not one of whom ever paid dues. Such reports are not only misleading, but positively create discouragement. In any case, it is not a correct statement, and white-ribboners, of all women, should be truthful. To take a new name is one thing, to secure a new member is sometimes quite another. When we talk about a "paid" membership, we ourselves have made the qualifying word a necessity by our lax methods. It should never be necessary to talk about a "paid" membership. Even our honoraries are not honoraries until they have paid their dues.

QUES: Every now and then some woman transfers herself from one locality to another. In her new place of residence there is no W. C. T. U., and all the conditions are so unfavorable as to make it impossible to organize. Should not each state have a special law to meet such cases, and should it not be so written that such a woman could be admitted directly to the state union? Some of us so believe. Will you kindly formulate such a law and print in the April "Difficulties"? I almost forgot to say that we wish the law to provide for representation in state convention. We believe it can be logically done. This must be answered in THE UNION SIGNAL.

ANS: Being totally opposed to any such law, the above request cannot be acceded to. We cannot enact law to meet a now and then exceptional case, and whatever may be the belief of the interrogator, "this Chair" does not believe it could be "logically done." To begin with, there are very few localities where a live white-ribboner could not organize at least a small union; but we will assume that the woman who desires to belong directly to the state finds it impossible to effect an organization. Let her pay her membership fee to some nearby union. She can send her dues to a local union just as easily as to the state. It takes no more time, no more postage, and no more money. Then her dues will go through all the regular channels, and if that union, knowing the woman, and knowing the circumstances, chooses to make her a delegate to the state convention, they are at perfect liberty to do so. She would then go up with her credentials in hand and take her place a regularly accredited delegate. Our membership is on a numerical, as well as financial basis. Who would group these exceptional women scattered all over the state? Even if grouped, how would they go to work to elect the woman who should represent them? As a rule, they would be entire strangers each to the other, and the whole thing from first to last would be not only inexpedient and irregular, but totally uncalled for. Every now and then this ghost rises. We have tried, and fondly hoped to lay it by private letter, but as it would not down, once for all we have stated our "views."

Now a word of exhortation. In almost every state we seem to have a few women who desire things some other way. There is always something lacking, or something askew. They doubtless mean well, but the trouble is they fail to see the question in its all-roundness. Dear comrades, when looking for something new, be sure that it is superior to the established order, and in asking for special law, put entirely out of mind personalities.

This "batch" clears the docket of difficulties along this line for the present.

QUES: Will you please make the way to take that question from the table a little plainer? You promised to do it in the April UNION SIGNAL but we are so afraid it may be crowded out.

ANS.: After such a pledge it could not be "crowded out," and the authority that two or three insist upon, is after all in our own manual, not by direct illustration, but really there. Few things (I imagine) bring to a teacher such genuine pleasure as the knowledge that the learner is not only anxious, but determined to know the why. When state presidents, and state superintendents insist on a "satisfactory reason" it means that we are settling down to such careful study as will enable us to know whereof we affirm. I hardly dare "ask the editor to re-print," so every woman must turn to her Parliamentary Scrap-book, or her file of UNION SIGNALS. In either case, under date of Feb. 5, will be found the mooted question.

First of all, the copy as you know did not say definitely postpone. What follows proves that. In the fourteenth line of the question, "indefinitely" should read "definitely." What is giving some of our best parliamentarians their trouble is the decision as to what was before the house after the question was taken from the table. They do not agree to the "ruling" that only the original motion with its amendment was before the body. They believe that what was first before the body was the definite postponement with its amendment, and if voted down, then the motion to commit with its amendment, and so the "rendering" was not to their satisfaction.

When the column of "Difficulties" was before me, and I went calmly over the printed ground, the very satisfactory proof of absolute correctness came to me, and I at once looked up page and paragraph. Take Roberts' Rules of Order (edition 1901) and turn to page 34. You will find at the top of the page the list of Subsidiary Motions. In the second sentence after the list, you will find the following: "They cannot be applied to one another." That settles it. That makes it clear that the motion to table could not be applied to the "definite postponement," nor to the "motion to commit." There are exceptions to this rule but our "difficulty" is not among the exceptions. If there is still doubt we will try again, but it can only be fought out on this line, if we discuss it all summer.

Portland, Mich.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

Shines for a world of housekeepers, and best of all the shine will last. Will not cake on the iron. Lustrous as the sun.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.

(Continued from Page 12.)

He was presenting his petition with the confidence so rapidly acquired by the average curate in his dealings with the opposite sex, when his plea was interrupted by a little cry of delight.

"And you came to ask me to undertake both class and district! How charming of you! Bob! how I should love to do it!"

Dr. Mann vouchsafed no direct reply.

"Mrs. Langley is pleased to amuse herself at your expense, Mr. Brotherton. She has not the slightest inclination towards either Sunday school teaching or district visiting," he said bluntly.

"Don't listen to him, Mr. Brotherton. Such may be his opinion, but the fact that I have not lately had the opportunity of engaging in good works is surely no reason why I should not avail myself of that opportunity when it comes. I assure you that you see in me a lamentable waste of good material."

"Material of which I should be only too glad to make use," said Hugh readily.

But again Dr. Mann interposed.

"Mrs. Langley knows that there are insuperable obstacles in the way. You may take my word for it, but if you are desirous of pressing the point, I am willing to tell you at once what those obstacles are," he said, with a glance at his sister, that seemed designed to quell her on the spot.

"You poor old Bob! what a shame it is to torment you so! He is quite right, Mr. Brotherton. Bob knows that there are excellent reasons why my charity should begin at home. Shall we tell him all about it, Bob?"

She flashed a defiant look at her brother, and Dr. Mann turned away, muttering something under his breath that Hugh found it expedient not to hear.

"Oh, must you really go? Good-bye, then. Of your charity come again soon, and be sure you let me know when next you intend to hold a temperance meeting."

Hugh went away puzzled—perhaps slightly bewitched as well. He had not dreamed that Pitsmoor could contain so interesting a personality. How strangely the gaiety of her manner, in moments of animation, contrasted with the sadness of her face when in repose. He wondered much what was the nature of her hidden trouble; for trouble there clearly was—trouble, as he greatly feared, connected with Dr. Mann. With all his heart he hoped that Mann might not prove to be, secretly, on the side of the "odd dozen." He hoped not, but whether or no, there was something about the brother and sister that was distinctly puzzling. Hugh supposed that there was nothing for it but to wait and see what time would show.

He mentioned his attempt, and its failure, to Mr. Boyd, by whom Mrs. Langley's refusal was accepted as a matter of course. By-and-by they might try again with a different result. It was impossible that the presence of a lady at the vicarage would make all the difference in Mrs. Langley's, and even in Dr. Mann's views. Hugh gave due consideration to that aspect of the case, but decided that something yet remained to be explained.

(To be Continued.)

An obedient husband up in Franklin county, Maine, was objecting to doing certain work about the house, and he quoted scripture to his wife, showing that the household duties should properly be assigned to the woman. The good wife replied by reading to her astonished liege 2 Kings 21:13, "I will wipe out Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down." That husband has wiped the dishes ever since.

A little 4-year-old was taken on a visit to grandmamma in the country. There for the first time he had a view of a cow. He would stand and look on while the man milked and ask all manner of questions. In this way he learned that the long crooked branches on the cow's head were horns. Now, the little fellow knew of only one kind of horn, and a few days after obtaining this information, hearing a strange kind of bellowing noise in the yard, he ran out to ascertain its cause. In a few minutes he returned with wonder and delight depicted on his countenance, exclaiming: "Mamma, mamma! Oh, do come out here. The cow's blowing her horns!"—Exchange.

Bright's Disease and Diabetes Cured.

University Chemist Acting as Judge

Irvine K. Mott, M. D., of Cincinnati, O., demonstrated before the editorial board of the Evening Post, one of the leading daily papers of Cincinnati, the power of his remedy to cure the worst forms of kidney diseases. Later a public test was instituted under the auspices of the Post, and five cases of Bright's Disease and Diabetes were selected by them and placed under Dr. Mott's care. In three months' time all were pronouced cured, one of the most prominent Universities in the United States having been chosen by the Post to make examination of the cases before and after treatment.

Anyone desiring to read the details of this public test can obtain copies of the papers by writing to Dr. Mott for them.

This public demonstration gave Dr. Mott an international reputation that has brought him into correspondence with people all over the world, and several noted Europeans are numbered among those who have taken his treatment and been cured

The doctor will correspond with those who are suffering with Bright's Disease, Diabetes or any kidney trouble, either in the first, intermediate or last stages, and will be pleased to give his expert opinion free to those who will send him a description of their symptoms. An essay which the Doctor has prepared about kidney troubles and describing his new method of treatment will also be mailed by him. Correspondence for this purpose should be addressed to IRVINE K. MOTT, M. D., 158 Mitchell Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DUMMY Washing Powders need soap with them. No matter the directions, you must use soap with them to get any work done. Some are made of nothing but common salt and Soda. These are sold cheaply in place of PEARLINE. Do you want them? Pearline costs a trifle more—but, used alone by itself, it does better work and 692

SAVES the Soap Money

HANDSOME WATCH

FREE Watches or 50 other premiums given away for selling 20 packages of bluing at 10c each. Send your address and get blu ug and premium list postpaid. Wl bluing is sold send the money and select your pn ium. Address Excelsior Bluing Co., De,.. 210, Chicago

$1.50 SAMPLE OUTFIT FREE to Agents selling our Flavoring Extracts, Toilet and Laundry Soaps. Large cash profits or elegant premiums easily earned. No money required in advance. Particulars free. KIDD & CO., State and Taylor Streets, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

IS YOUR HUSBAND, SON OR FATHER A

Drunkard

If so, send us your name and address with 4 cts. to cover postage, packing, etc., we will send you a package of our "Secret Cure" free, in a plain package with full directions how to give it secretly in tea, coffee, food, etc. It is odorless and tasteless and will cure this dreadful habit, quietly and permanently without the patient's knowledge or consent. It is a positive and permanent "Secret Cure" for the Drink Habit, and will cost you nothing to try it. Good for both sexes.
MILO DRUG CO., Dept. 137 St. Louis, Mo.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

PROGRAMS for an Evening's Entertainment

At the White Queen's Court.
Mrs. Edna Moore Gunnison-Hawley.
Price, 10 Cents.

The Doom of King Alcohol.
Mrs. Clara B. Drake.
Price, 10 Cents.

The Milkmaid's Convention.
Mrs. Laura J. Rittenhouse.
Price, 5 Cents.

An Anti-Cigarette Program.
Mrs. Ida Cole.
Price, 5 Cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

Practical Talks with Housekeepers.

By Mrs. L. W. Mitchell.

Eggs.

NOW that winter is no longer abroad in the land, and in the country dooryards the cackle of the hen is prominent among the cheering sounds of spring, the housewife's thoughts turn to omelet, custard and sponge cake—luxuries she has been obliged to curtail. The vegetarian who does not exclude all animal products, finds in the egg all the essential elements he needs. It is said that if the fresh-laid egg is coated with grease, before it has had time to cool, thus sealing the pores of the shell, it will keep fresh indefinitely. Eggs from cold storage have a decided flavor of their environment, and although they must answer on baking day, there is no cold-weather treat for the table quite like fresh eggs. If the grease-theory could be proved by practical development on a large scale, what a boon it would be.

As about eighty per cent of an egg consists of nitrogenous and fatty matter, it will be seen that it offers in small bulk a very valuable concentrated food. The white of the egg is mostly albumen, which coagulates at 160 degrees F. and becomes tough and very hard to digest at a higher temperature. For table use, put eggs in boiling water, cover the pan and place it for ten minutes where the temperature of the water will not rise above 168 degrees F., when the white will be jellied and the yolk hard.

The substitution of eggs and milk, with fresh fruits and vegetables, for meat during the spring and summer, will do more to banish that "tired feeling" than any pills or powders.

Baked Omelet:—Six eggs beaten separately, two heaping teaspoons flour, one cup milk, butter the size of an egg. Take enough of the milk to wet up the flour, heat the rest of the milk, and when at the boiling point, stir in the flour paste, pour upon the well-beaten yolks, add the melted butter, lastly and lightly the whisked whites of the eggs. Bake fifteen minutes.

Egg Pudding:—Slice six hard-boiled eggs and arrange in a baking dish in alternation with crumbs of stale bread. Season with salt and pepper and pour over a cup and a half of sweet milk. Bake half an hour.

Creamed Eggs:—Take as many hard-boiled eggs as you need, halve them, and cut a piece from the ends so that they will stand alone. Make a sauce of one cup of milk, two tablespoons of butter, and season with pepper and salt. Thicken with flour, pour over the eggs and serve.

Hot Deviled Eggs:—Halve hard-boiled eggs, remove the yolks and season them with melted butter, salad dressing, and a dash of cayenne. Fill the hollowed whites, dip in egg and crumbs and fry a rich brown.

Bread Omelet:—Soak until soft three-fourths of a cup of fine, stale bread crumbs in three-fourths of a cup of milk. Add a teaspoon of salt, the well beaten yolks of six eggs, and then the whisked whites. Cook on buttered spider until brown underneath; fold, dish on hot platter, surrounded by the following:

Sauce:—Melt one tablespoon of butter, add two teaspoons flour, salt to taste. Pour on one cup hot milk, stir until thick, add one teaspoonful of chopped parsley and a dash of white pepper.

Quick Egg Soup:—This is easily made, and is a nourishing and light soup. Stir two teaspoons of beef extract into a quart of boiling water, or use stock, if you have it—season with onion juice, celery salt, salt and pepper. While hot pour it on the well beaten yolks of two eggs, add three or four tablespoons of boiled rice, and serve.

The secret of having custards of a smooth, velvety texture, consists in slow cooking. Boiled custards should be made in a double boiler. Baked custards should always be set in a second dish containing water, the temperature being easily regulated by the addition of a little cold water. Test with a clean silver knife. A boiled custard will coat the knife when done, and in the case of a baked custard, the knife will come out clean.

Almond Cream:—Make a plain boiled custard, and stiffen with one-half a box of granulated gelatine, which you have softened in a cup of water. Stir in one-fourth of a pound of stale almond maccaroon crumbs, and flavor with almond extract. Set on ice and serve in a ring of whipped, sweetened cream sprinkled with chopped almonds.

Prune Souffle:—Cook one-half a pound of prunes, drain and chop fine. Beat to a paste with six tablespoons of sugar. Add to the paste the well-whisked whites of six eggs, turn into a buttered baking dish, and bake in a hot oven half an hour. Serve with cream or a hot lemon sauce.

Orange Omelet:—Beat the yolks of seven eggs with seven teaspoons of powdered sugar, whip the whites to a stiff froth, and pour over them the mixture. Stir very lightly, adding the juice and rind of a large orange. Brown in butter, set in a hot oven two minutes, fold, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve at once. This is nice for luncheon.

Baked Caramel Custard:—Stir one-fourth of a cup of sugar in a saucepan until a light brown, add a tablespoon of water and stir in a pint of warm milk. Beat four eggs and add to the sugar.

Baked Eggs:—Beat smooth a cup of bread crumbs (seasoned to taste) with one-half a cup of milk. Spread on the bottom of a baking dish, break on top as many whole eggs as you require, and set in the oven a few minutes. Be careful not to spoil the shape of the eggs, and remove from the oven as soon as they are set.

An egg-and-cheese dish, capable of taking the place of a meat dish in Lent, is made in this way:

Put one cup of rich milk into a pan, thicken with a tablespoonful of flour, season with butter, salt and cayenne, and add three tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese. Beat three eggs until very light, and add when the mixture is nearly cold. Bake in paper cases, or ramakins.

A nice luncheon dish is prepared as follows: Take some cold, mashed potaties and shape into triangles; brown in butter. Poach as many eggs as you have triangles, and serve an egg on each.

Pop-overs, one of the nicest hot breads for breakfast, for the characteristic which gave them their name depend upon plenty of eggs. They are made as follows: Stir together one pint of milk and one-half pint of flour, add a pinch of salt and five eggs well beaten but not separated. Bake in gem pans in quick oven. If you find it convenient, they may be served hot with liquid lemon sauce, as a dessert.

NOTE:—In the recipe for Plain Pie Crust, given last month, the amount of shortening was accidentally omitted. It is, three-fourths of a cup, half butter, half lard.

Evanston, Ill.

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 19.

It Doesn't Scare Folks to be told the truth about

Lion Coffee

The scare-crow coffees are those that hide under a glazing of factory eggs, glue and such stuff.

Lion Coffee is pure, wholesome, unglazed, rich in flavor and uniform in strength. The air-tight, sealed package insures cleanliness, freshness and uniformity.

Ferry's Seeds

are planted by farmer and gardener who has stopped experimenting. It pays to pay a little more for Ferry's and reap a great deal more at the harvest. All dealers. 1903 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.
D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Mich.

Leaflets Just Issued

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law. Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Central System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89,
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
....CHICAGO.

The Local Union.

One hour for business, and one hour for a program seems to be the rule of procedure in the majority of unions, therefore a suggestive working program will be given to cover each hour.

Every union should have a program committee to select topics and leaders, for the entire year if possible. A sum of money should be appropriated for the use of this committee, that they may be able to supply necessary helps for an intelligent, comprehensive preparation of papers and discussions. Each leader should know that she can obtain these helps from the committee. This would obviate much of the difficulty in securing members who would be able and willing to prepare the different papers. The White Ribbon Hymnals, for the music, are necessary. A W. T. P. A. catalogue gives the leaflets and prices and is indispensable to a program committee. So, also, is the National Report for the current year and the National Annual Leaflet. Send to the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, for the Hymnal and Catalogue, and to Helen M. Barker, Rest Cottage, Evanston, Ill., for the Report and Annual Leaflet. The White Ribbon Hymnal will be sent, one copy for 35 cents, one dozen copies for $3.50. A two-cent stamp with request will bring the catalogue. The National Report can be obtained for 15 cents, and the Annual Leaflet for one cent each, or seventy-five cents per hundred.

NOTE.—The recitations in this department are indorsed by the National Superintendent of Medal Contest Work.

Program.

Singing "The Crusade Psalm," page 95, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Responsive Reading, "Praise," arranged by Lady Henry Somerset, to be found on page 163, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Prayer.

Roll call; responses from the words of Frances E. Willard.

Report of recording secretary.

Report of corresponding secretary.

Reports of special committees.

Unfinished business.

New business.

Intermission.

Singing, "We All Belong," page 155, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Paper, "The Privileges of Citizenship, a, to the individual voter; b, to the home community; c, to the world at large." Help for this paper can be obtained from editorial of same name on page 9 of THE UNION SIGNAL of March 19. Also from department leaflets numbers 151 and 152, published by the W. T. P. A., at 2 cents each.

Reading, "The Christian and His Ballot." (See this page.)

Singing, "Christ for the World We Sing," page 7, White Ribbon Hymnal.

The Christian and His Ballot.

By Antoinette A Hawley.

Two hundred years ago a poet, gray
And wise beyond the England of his day,
Cried, "What alone can make a nation great?
What mighty forces constitute a state?
Not cities proud, nor harbors, deep and wide,
Where, laughing at the storm, rich navies ride;
Not spangled courts, nor wealth of wall or tower,
Where low-browed baseness wafts perfume to power;
But men, high-minded men, who, trained to serve,
Will never, knowingly, from duty swerve.
But true as steel, to tyrants will make plain
They know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain."

Perhaps the titled poet whom I quote,
Heard, pealing from these shores, the thrilling note
That spoke of a nation born, whose name should be
A synonym for all things great and free;
And then, with holy emulation stirred,
He uttered clear and true his forceful word
That states are made of men who dare to live
Up to the highest truth their God can give;
That is to them; for each age is given
To build some mighty stepping stone to heaven.

And independence, liberty of speech,
Was high as even Washington could reach.
But to the nineteenth century God said:
"Build higher," and with Lincoln at her head
She piled the shackles of four million slaves
Above the priceless dust of countless graves.
To make a sure place where the coming race
Could grasp a truth of yet diviner grace,
And build thereon, if haply it might rise
To hear the benediction of the skies.

So bear with me a space, as from this height
We look unflinchingly up to the light
And ask this twentieth century in view,
"Lord, what is it that Thou wilt have me do?"
Nor fear to hear what must the answer be,
"Take up your cross today and follow me."
Words that are still far-reaching and sublime,
The Christians' marching orders for all time.

We look abroad: upon our East and West
Wide oceans guard this land we love the best;
Nor never hostile flag floats in the air,
Nor foreign foe these peaceful shores will dare;
But at the nation's throat a vampire hangs,
That sucks her heart's blood, and with poisoned fangs
Pours into every pulsing civic vein
The venom of a godless greed for gain
That paralyzes every noble thought,
And scorns a virtue that can not be bought.

Such is the Liquor Traffic; such the foe
That fills the land with mourning and with woe;
Whose annual murder crop is more, you'll find,
Than famine, war and pestilence combined;
That steals one billion dollars every year
That else would fill all homes with joy and cheer,
And stands, the blood sponsor for all time,
For more than three-fourths of recorded crime.
Rich, powerful, it marshals its platoons
In miles and miles of legalized saloons,
Upon whose walls, to our eternal shame,
A license hangs that bears this nation's name,
And, therefore, ours; for plain U. S. spells us,
And we perpetuate this incubus.

What have we done this monster to dissuade
From plying everywhere his awful trade?
We've taken a collection; that's the way
We choose to take, expenses to defray;
And the wise liquor traffic, knowing that,
Has dropped its millions in the Federal "hat,"
And when the city fathers passed the plate,
With cheerful promptness, beautiful to state,
Piled thousands up, its evils to adjust,
With every dollar marked "In God we trust."

Why not? God's regent is the voting church,
And has it ever left them in the lurch?
Can you remember an election day
When Christian voters did not plainly say,
With ballots, that they thought saloons should stay
And fatten on our homes as lawful prey?
So long as that is true our words fly back
As does the stick from a skyrocket's track,
And "resolutions" are but wooden guns
That make a noise from which nobody runs.

Is it not pitiful? What do we need
But Christian citizens in every deed,
Pure men and women, loyal first of all
To Christ, in pulpit, pew and council hall;
Grand business Christians, meaning what they say;
Their moral stock above par every day.
Politically righteous, not afraid
To have their "record" openly displayed;
But, standing on the word of God, proclaim
No nation has the right to license shame;
No right to make it easy to do wrong;
No right to lash the weak beneath the strong;
No right to sanction, by paltry fine,
The awful ruin of a soul divine.

"Peace! Peace!" men cry. "What care we for the lives
Of starving children or of drunkards' wives?
What matter that our nation stains her fame
By black collusion with a lasting shame?
What matter that a hundred thousand graves
Yawn in the road our license ballot paves?
What matter that the church in wild alarm
Shouts vainly, while her palsied civic arm
Hangs helpless, and the duty of the hour
Finds her Delilah-charmed, and shorn of power?"

Peace? Peace? What loss of all that God holds dear,
A brave, true manhood, and a conscience clear?
Peace? bought with money, votes, or ease, or praise,
A dastard peace in these tremendous days?
Nay; rather face the jeering, hooting crowd,
And, like the prophets, "Spare not," cry aloud,
"Rise up, oh, children of the King, and know
There is no peace while there exists a foe;
Rise up, oh, Christians, lolling in the sun,
There is no peace till victory is won;
Till every home is safe from sea to sea,
And from the cursed saloon the land is free."

Hark! Ringing down the hills from Galilee,
"Take up your cross to-day and follow me."
What cross? To lead a meeting? Fill with prayer
And pious speech the Wednesday evening air?
No! Just to lift, with shoulder sure and strong,
Your part to rid the world of sin and wrong;
Just to take up the ballot sheet and say
"Thy kingdom come," and help it come that way.
Just to stand true; to fear not gain or loss,
But bravely to ignore the party boss.
Never for silver the dear Lord betray,
Not once deny Him on election day.
But, careless of the world, of bonds and stocks,
Dare follow Jesus to the ballot box,
And hear Him say, with voice clear, sweet, divine:
"We conquer still by Love's immortal sign."

Denver, Colo.

W. L. DOUGLAS 7 Per Cent STOCK

Safest Investment in America.

Less than $200,000 of the issue of $1,000,000 Preferred 7 per cent. Stock of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., of Brockton, Mass., Remains for Sale in Lots of One Share or More. If you want Some of this Gilt-edge Stock You Must Act Quickly. Stock Pays 7 per cent. Annual Dividends, Payable Semi-Annually.

Shares are Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

Sold at Par ($100.00) One Hundred Dollars Each.

Send for Prospectus and Make all Remittances Payable to the order of

J. LEWIS RICE, 45 Milk St., BOSTON.

MAKE HOME BEAUTIFUL

THE CINNAMON VINE From the Oriental land is one of the Most Beautiful of Climbers; the Most Fragrant; the Easiest to Grow and the Easiest to Sell. No Home is Complete Without Them. Friends, you should have them around your windows, porch and trellises. They will grow 30 feet in a single season and perfume the air for a long distance with the most delicious fragrance. There is nothing like them. No insects ever trouble, and once planted will grow a lifetime. GET THEM AT HEADQUARTERS AND AT REDUCED PRICES. I am the largest grower in the world. When first introduced from China the roots sold for $10.00 each.

Beautiful, Hardy, Entrancingly Fragrant, Once Planted will Grow for a Lifetime.

W. WEEKS, Worcester Co., Mass., writes:—"I enclose an order for 100 more roots. I sold the last lot in fifteen minutes."

MRS. ALLEN, Mystic, Ct., says:—"The vine is beautiful and so fragrant it perfumes the whole house."

REDUCED PRICES OF CINNAMON VINE ROOTS.

I offer true stock, extra selected roots at a great bargain. Order at once.

2 Strong Roots, 1 Valuable Novelty and Catalog, all for ONE DIME, or 12 cts. in stamps.

6 Roots, 3 Pkts. Choice Novelties and Catalog of Bargains, all for 25 cts.

22 Roots, 6 Pkts. Superb Novelties (worth 60 cts.) and Catalog, all for $1.00, and your choice of the following Free, as a Premium: Fine Camera and Full Outfit; Splendid Fountain Pen; Lovely Neck Chain with Secret Heart Locket, set with 10 Pearls.

☞ You surely never heard of such a bargain for $1.00. Given solely to introduce my Seeds and Vines. Everything prepaid by mail, and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ CLUB AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE. You can make big money. Remit by Cash or Money Order, and be sure and mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Address, A. T. COOK, Seedsman, HYDE PARK, N. Y.

Publishers' Notes.

Easter Remembrances

The Easter tide is almost here and with it comes the thought of Easter remembrances. A beautiful line of cards and booklets are to be had from us and we shall take especial pleasure in making up packages of assorted cards for Sunday School classes.

Kindly let us urge that all orders be forwarded EARLY; this will insure perfect satisfaction.

Tri-colored Badges.

Owing to the great advance in the price of ribbon we are obliged to slightly advance the price of the tri-colored badges. The badges from this time will be 5 cents each, or 50 cents per dozen, instead of 3 cents as formerly. Kindly make a note of this in your catalogue so that it will not be overlooked in placing your next order.

A New Club Rate.

We take pleasure in announcing that hereafter a club rate of $1.25 each in CLUBS OF TEN will be granted our patrons. Either new names or renewals will be received in these clubs but to secure the reduction the club must consist of TEN NAMES. Every union that has not at least a club of ten subscribers to the UNION SIGNAL should commence at once to secure one.

The special rate of ONE DOLLAR is made ONLY to clergymen, reading rooms and public libraries.

An Hour in Babyland.

"An Hour in Babyland," by Ada Wallace Unruh, is a plain talk with mothers, and as needful to fathers as well. The language of the book is chaste and tender, and the message is strong and true. Mothers cannot read and follow its teachings without being better mothers to the coming children, to the babies already here, and better advisers concerning the growing lads and lassies who are beginning to think about entering upon the new duties of married life. We would like to introduce this booklet into every W. C. T. U. home in our land. Nature studies, examples that have come to her notice, and confidences from mother hearts, all enrich the pages of Mrs. Unruh's book. The price is 25 cents.

"The Doom of King Alcohol."

"The Doom of King Alcohol," by Mrs. Clara B. Drake, is a poetical drama in three acts, suitable to be given in a parlor or hall. While it is gracefully written and effectively planned, it is also a strong lesson for temperance, and is especially adapted for the use of a local union. Perhaps nothing is more difficult to secure than material for a good evening's program, but in "The Doom of King Alcohol" this need is fully supplied. The curtain rises with Tellus (the earth) mourning over the desecration of her children, the spirits of the field—Wheat, Barley, Rye, Corn, Hops, Grapes, Apples and Peaches—by King Alcohol.

In the second act King Alcohol and his minions—License, Avarice, Appetite and others—are in the throne room, and listen to the appeals of the Spirits of the fields. License speaks for the King, refusing their requests. The Angel of Prohibition enters and hurls King Alcohol from his throne. The last act shows Tellus again. Around her are the spirits of the fruits and grains rejoicing. Over the ruins of King Alcohol's palace stands the Angel of Prohibition ready for flight.

Those desiring material for an evening's entertainment will be delighted with this little drama. Send for a copy. The price is 10 cents.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

MISS MITCHELL.

WOMAN'S WISDOM.

Experience is our best teacher, and it is only through experience that women generally gain a knowledge of themselves — from maidenhood to womanhood. The change involves the whole body and the future health, yet during these epochs many a woman is left without the necessary medical advice she should have. Dr. R. V. Pierce, a specialist in the diseases of women and the head of the famous Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., says that many a woman traces back a prolonged existence of invalidism to exposure and lack of care during the period of her early life. Too much brain work and little exercise out-of-doors also predispose to womanly disease.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross. Womanly health may be retained or regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolaplapsus, or Falling of the Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"I am glad to be able to testify as to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the many ills that women suffer with," writes Miss Gertrude Mitchell, President Young Ladies' Christain Endeavor Society, 43 Columbia Street, E., Detroit, Mich. "After many years of suffering and pain I took your medicine, and in a short time began to feel stronger, became more regular, and didn't have the pains which had been my lot for so long. Continued its use until I was a well woman, and shall never cease to be very grateful that it was brought to my notice. I have no pains, and feel much stronger generally."

It is natural that a woman who has been cured of womanly disease by "Favorite Prescription" should believe that it will cure others. It is natural too that she should recommend to other women the medicine which has cured her. It is such commendation and recommendation which has made the name of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a household word throughout the land. It is the women it has cured who are its firmest friends and most enthusiastic advocates.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is free from opium, cocaine, and other narcotics. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It cures backache, headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and other consequences of local womanly diseases which undermine the general health.

A book which every woman should have—whether married or single—is the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," by Dr. R. V. Pierce. Nearly two million copies have gone into American homes. The cost of mailing is 21 one-cent stamps, for paper-covered volume, or 31 stamps for book in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I had been a sufferer from inflammation of the ovaries for six years, and doctored with good physicians, receiving only temporary relief," writes Mrs. B. W. Starkweather, of Despatch, Monroe Co., N. Y.. "For nearly two years of that time I had falling of uterus and general female weakness. In December last I was obliged to go to bed, and suffered everything for about ten weeks. The doctor said the only help for me was an operation, so my husband wrote to Dr. Pierce for advice. He advised my taking his 'Favorite Prescription.' I did so and could see a change after taking three doses. In about three days I was sitting up in bed, and in a week's time I had my clothes on. Am getting better all the time, and I have not felt so well in years—thanks to Dr. Pierce."

"I suffered for eight months with troubles peculiarly feminine, which caused a great weakness all through my entire body, with faint and dizzy spells," wirtes Mrs. F. B. Pierce, President Housekeepers' Economic Club, 327 North Summer Street, Nashville, Tenn. "I kept getting weaker and weaker. Tried several medicines that claimed to be 'sure cure' for female troubles, but I found them absolutely no good. But your 'Favorite Prescription' was quite different. I was persuaded to take it by the druggist, and he said that if it did not help me he would give me my money back, but he did not have to, for, to tell you the honest truth, that bottle was worth $25.00 to me.

Every day I improved, and only six bottles cured me.

"I am very grateful to you for my restoration to perfect health, and take this opportunity to let you know."

MRS. PIERCE.

About Women.

The House of Commons ordered war medals to be presented to the five American women nurses who served on the hospital ship Maine in South African and Chinese waters.

Senator Depew employs a woman, a graduate of several cooking schools, and a past-mistress in the art of political economy to superintend the domestic arrangements in his Washington home. She receives $100 per month, and has $6,000 at her credit to draw upon and make famous the hospitalities of his historic old Corcoran house.

Perhaps the most extensively traveled woman in the world is Mrs. Crossley, of Indianapolis. She is now preparing to make her twenty-first voyage round the world. She has crossed the Atlantic no fewer than seventy times, has made twelve journeys to the top of the pyramids, and has visited every town of note in Europe, Asia, Africa and America. All this amount of traveling, too, she has crowded into eighteen years, and she possesses a wonderful collection of curiosities from every quarter of the globe.

Miss Gwendoline Stewart of California is lecturing in London, on American Ways of Housekeeping. She claims her own countrywomen have mastered the servant girl question. She advocates a system of hiring servants to come certain hours every day, the same as though they worked in factories.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for April Reading,

Work Among Lumbermen.

By Mrs. E. W. Shores.
National Superintendent of the Department of Work Among Lumbermen.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A HEALING MINERAL SPRING AT YOUR DOOR!

FOR MANY CENTURIES,

Almost since the world began, MINERAL SPRINGS have been utilized for their curative and healing power. The ancients knew of them and had their favorite springs and baths to which they resorted when weak of body or feeble of health. We read in the Testament of the POOL OF SILOAM, whose waters were troubled twice a year and at these times possessed healing powers which brought health and strength to the multitudes who sought their aid.

MEDICAL SCIENCE,

With all its latter-day knowledge, has failed to improve upon or even equal the remedial virtue found thus in a free and natural state. Physicians in every clime, of every nationality, acknowledge this to be a fact and when they encounter a disease or disorder which is not amenable to the action of Drugs, they pack the patient off to Carlsbad, Saratoga, Baden, there to drink and to bathe in the waters which contain the essential properties for the restoration of Health and the patient returns, greatly benefited, if not entirely cured.

THE MINERAL PROPERTIES

Which give the waters their curative virtue come from the rock or MINERAL ORE through which the water is filtered on its way to its outlet, only a very small proportion of the medicinal power in the ORE being thus assimilated with or absorbed by the liquid stream. The rock contains the much desired medicine, the water serves only as the conveyance to carry but a small part of its properties to the outer world.

None but the Rich can afford the trip to the springs, but the poor need not continue to suffer for their lack of means, as the healing, medicinal and curative virtues of the springs can be brought right to their chamber door.

PROF. THEO. NOEL, A PROSPECTING GEOLOGIST,

Discovered a mine of this mineral Ore many years ago, while prospecting in the neighborhood of a once powerful but now extinct mineral spring, which ORE is being offered to the public and the readers of this paper under the name of VITAE-ORE. Vitae-Ore is a mineral spring, condensed and concentrated. It is not the WATER, but the ROCK from which the water derives its power, its strength, that is placed right in your hands.

What Vitæ-Ore Is. Vitae-Ore is a natural, hard, adamantine, rock-like substance—mineral—ORE—mined from the ground like gold and silver. It requires about twenty years for oxidization by exposure to the air, when it slacks down like lime, and is then of medicinal value. It contains in part free iron, free sulphur and free magnesia, three properties which are most essential for the retention of health in the human system, and one package—one ounce—of the ORE, when mixed with a quart of water, will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful mineral water drunk fresh at the springs. It is a geological discovery, to which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Lumbago, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Blood Poisoning, Heart Trouble, Catarrh and Throat Affections, Liver, Kidney and Bladder Ailments, Dropsy, Stomach and Female Disorders, Malarial Fever, La Grippe, Nervous Prostration and General Debility, as thousands testify, and as no one, accepting this offer and writing for a package, will deny after using. READ OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

PERSONAL TO UNION SIGNAL SUBSCRIBERS AND READERS.

We will send to every subscriber or reader of The Union Signal, or worthy person recommended by a subscriber or reader, a full-sized One Dollar package of VITAE-ORE, by mail, postpaid, sufficient for one month's treatment, to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the reader can truthfully say that its use has done him or her more good than all the drugs and dopes of quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used. Read this over again carefully, and understand that we ask our pay only when it has done you good, and not before. We take all the risk; you have nothing to lose. If it does not benefit you you pay us nothing. We do not offer to send you a free sample to last only three or four days, nor to send you a medicine which will cure you with only four or five drops; but we do offer to send you a regular $1 package of the most successful, natural medicine known to the civilized world, without one cent of risk to you. We offer to give you thirty days to try the medicine, thirty days to see results before you need pay us one cent, and you do not pay unless you do see the results. We know that when this month's treatment of Vitae-Ore has either cured you or put you on the road to a cure, you will be more than willing to pay. Vitae-Ore has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced-incurable cases than any other known medicine, and will reach every case with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, treatment, or combination of medicines which it is possible to procure.

Vitæ-Ore Will Do the Same for You as it has for hundreds of readers of this paper, each one of whom can act as a pilot for you, if you will give it a trial. Send for a $1 package at our risk. We want no one's money whom Vitae-Ore cannot benefit. Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try Vitae-Ore on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases; two or three for chronic, obstinate cases. We mean just what we say in this announcement, and will do just as we agree. Write to-day for a package at our risk and expense, giving your age and ailments, and mention this paper, so we may know that you are entitled to this liberal offer. This offer will challenge the attention and consideration, and afterward the gratitude, of every living person who desires better health or who suffers pains, ills and diseases which have defied the medical world and grown worse with age. We care not for your skepticism, but ask only your investigation, and at our expense, regardless of what ills you have, by sending to us for a package.

Send for a $1 Package at Our Risk. You Have Nothing to Lose.

THEO. NOEL CO., UNION SIGNAL Dept. Vitæ-Ore Bldg. CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 15. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, APRIL 9, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH 4
CONTRIBUTED:
Pen Sketches of National Organizers 5
A City Tulip Bed. By Florence Bronson Tucker—Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
Poor Children's Feast in Tokyo, Japan. By Kara G. Smart—Puzzlers' Packet 7
EDITORIAL:
The Hope Immortal—The Bible in the School a Necessity—Unclaimed Influence 8
President Roosevelt's Lay Sermon—Capital and Labor—Personal Mention—W. C. T. U. Storiette—Toward the Sun-Rising 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 11
W. C. T. U. NOTES 11
THE FRANCES E. WILLARD NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL 21
SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 12
THE LOCAL UNION 13
APRIL MAGAZINES 14
ABOUT WOMEN 15
SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHER'S NOTES 16

News of the Week.

Sir Chiang Tsung Liang, new Chinese minister, arrives in Washington.

New York saloonkeepers announce a plan to sell beer by the pound and abolish the free lunch.

The bubonic plague has reappeared in some parts of Egypt. Cholera cases are reported at Alexandria.

Texas legislature adopts sweeping anti-trust law, applying to labor organizations as well as to corporations.

Dr. Rouse of the Pasteur Institute, Paris, who discovered the anti-diphtheria and anti-croup serum, has been awarded the Osiris prize of $20,000.

Christian Scientists will replace the "mother church" in Boston, with one costing over $1,000,000. It will be one of the largest churches in the world.

King Oscar of Sweden and Norway resumes duties of ruler of the kingdom after a regency administered by his son, Prince Gustaf.

Two new Cuban bishoprics created by Pope, according to Archbishop Chapelle's announcement at Havana; Porto Rico detached from Santiago see.

Opposition to Panama Canal treaty reported to be developing in almost every department of Colombia except Panama.

Mrs. Margaret E. Armour gives $40,000 to Kansas City Woman's Christian Association to establish a home for worthy old people.

Edgar E. Clark, grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, who was a member of the coal strike commission, is slated to succeed Carroll D. Wright, as United States Commissioner of Labor.

The John Brown cottage at Tabor, Iowa, destroyed by fire. Was headquarters of the underground railway system for assisting runaway slaves, before the war.

Plan to instruct all American public school children in scientific farming considered by Secretary Wilson; elements of plant life, grafting, and composition of soil would be taught with other lessons.

Injunction to prevent Wabash railroad strike, granted by United States court at St. Louis on March 3, dissolved by Judge Adams; peaceable settlement is expected.

An uprising of Albanians in the Balkans, ascribed to the inauguration of the reform scheme proposed by the powers, results in much fighting and in panics among the Christians of the country.

A press dispatch from St. Petersburg, states that, in consequence of scenes of disorder caused by women students, the authorities have stopped the advanced medical science lectures to women.

Principal feature of Venezuelan protocols by which German, British and Italian disputes were to be submitted to Hague peace court rejected by Minister Bowen; payment of blackade cost by Venezuela objected to.

The police of all departments of France are distributing notices from Premier Combes to the Catholic congregations requiring them to disband. This affects twenty-five teaching orders, having 1,580 branches, with 15,964 members and twenty-eight preaching orders, having 3,040 members.

To National Superintendents. The superintendents of our various departments of work are again invited to send to THE UNION SIGNAL such official communications as will create new interest and spur local workers to greater activity in these departments. The Local Union page is open to contributions in the way of comprehensive programs bearing on the work of any department. National superintendents should avail themselves of the opportunity to bring their work directly before the program committees of local unions.

Not Consistent. General F. D. Grant, in command of the United States army in the department of Texas, condemns in the strongest language the members of a court-martial which tried a non-commissioned officer charged with visiting a saloon and drinking with private soldiers. The officer was acquitted by the court, on the ground that these offenses were not "to the detriment and scandal of the military service." If General Grant, the secretary of war and other military officials would be equally outspoken in regard to drinking on all occasions, whether in low dives or the army canteen, the result being the same in all cases, the morale of our army would not be a by-word of the nations.

From a Commercial Standpoint. Some of Toledo's largest industrial enterprises are assuming responsibility for the abstinence of their employes during working hours. They are buying up property adjacent to their manufacturing plants in order to defeat the efforts of liquor men in establishing saloons. Like the railroad companies, they are coming to realize that the virtue of temperance in their workmen has a definite commercial value, capable of being measured in dollars and cents. Experience has taught them that if they are to have a high quality of workmanship and immunity from damage suits, occasioned by accident to limb and life, they must prevent their men from stupefying their brains by two or three glasses of beer at the noon hour. With such method of regulating the habits of employes the line will be definitely drawn between the idler and the drinker, the worker and the abstainer, and the saloon will no longer pose as the laboring man's friend.

Is He Responsible. "At what stage of intoxication does a man so completely lose control of his faculties that he ceases to be legally responsible for his acts?" is a query which has been disturbing the minds of Kansas jurists. The question was occasioned by a habitual drunkard's signing another man's bond, then fleeing from the country, and when apprehended, setting up the defense that he was drunk at the time of signing the bond and did not know what he was doing. It being proved by a host of witnesses that even while intoxicated this man was notorious for getting the better of his fellows in a horse deal, the judge held him responsible. The question ought to read: "Is a man who wilfully contracts a disease responsible for the development later of some of its most violent and well known symptoms?" If the man is not to be held responsible, who is accountable for his condition of irresponsibility? The liquor dealer, of course. Who is responsible for the liquor dealer? The city government which licenses him, without doubt. And this composite municipal responsibility, of what is it made? Let every citizen propound to himself this instructive catechism.

Politics Obliterated. A remarkable condition obtains in a thriving little village in Ohio, where on account of the strong feeling on the subject of temperance, both Democrats and Republicans have disappeared from view, their political identity being wholly merged in that of either "Wets" or "Drys." This is, perhaps, the first instance on record where any kind of sentiment has been able to wipe out party lines. Shall we regard this as another proof of the force of that vital principle which is at the heart of the temperance cause?

A Call to Prayer. The request comes from Mrs. Mary E. Teats, National evangelist, that all W. C. T. U. evangelists, and others so inclined, will spend one hour in earnest prayer on Sunday, April 27, for the gospel temperance and purity revival, which begins in the city of Omaha, Neb., about May 10. Prayer is especially desired for the meeting with the Ministerial Association, May 27, also for the Conference of Workers to be held on the afternoon of the same day. The Omaha white ribboners are making every possible effort for the success of these meetings, and they believe that humanity will receive an uplift as the direct answer to united prayer.

A Duty of the Church. Statistics set forth by Dr. Walter Laidlaw, of the Federation of Churches in New York City, show that during the past year the great metropolis has expended more for church extension than in any previous year, the sum being fully twenty millions. Thus equipped, the churches have the best opportunity in the world to prove the strength of their aggressive power for good by uniting their forces against the violation of Sunday laws. Leslie's Weekly emphasizes this point by urging the friends of Sunday observance to keep a watchful eye upon the legislature at Albany this session, where a bill has been introduced amending the penal code so as to permit the playing of baseball on Sunday, and where District Attorney Jerome will try to secure the passage of his bill providing for the opening of saloons on Sundays during certain hours.

The Face in the Window. Never are more frantic efforts made to impress the ballot-casting public than those put forth at our municipal elections by some of the candidates for office. All the cardinal virtues, and a few others invented for the occasion, are projected before the citizens in large and glowing capitals as attributes of these seekers for office. The candidates themselves sacrifice their modesty and frankly tell the voters of the community what really magnificent specimens of manhood they are offering for public service. At the same time they permit their faces to be displayed in the windows of every dram shop and sample room of the city, by the side of bottled poisons and advertisements of prize fights and indecent exhibitions. It is a justifiable inference, which every citizen is free to draw, that the candidate who thus displays himself is sold, in some measure, to the saloonkeeper who advertises him, and it is public notice to the world of what he is and what will be the character of his administration. The right-minded citizen should ponder long and seriously before he squanders his vote upon an investment, political or otherwise, advertised in the window of a saloon.

WORLD'S CONVENTION

Agnes E. Slack, Correspondent.

Ripley, England, March 17.—World's convention plans are going on splendidly. Our Swiss friends are not unmindful of life's little kindnesses and one of the most charming of the Swiss ladies will give our delegates a reception at her lovely country house near Geneva during one of the convention days between the afternoon and evening meetings. This will give us a delightful glimpse of Swiss national customs in the home life. We shall probably have a reception among our own delegates on Monday evening, June 8, when we can have an opportunity to meet and know each other. I am looking forward to that reception as being the most interesting one I have attended for years.

Among those who will be with us at Geneva will be Mrs. Newton and Mrs. Wright, of New Zealand. The former took an active part in helping to win the suffrage for the women of her country. Mrs. Cole, of Queensland, who has made quite a reputation by her charming evangelistic addresses and reaches masses of people in Australia with great effect. Mrs. Pettifer, of Victoria, president of the Portland W. C. T. U. and one of their best workers.

Cape Colony is sending five representatives; some of them will probably be appointed to represent Natal and the Orange River colony. Among them we are hoping to welcome Mrs. Abbott, president of the Rondebosch W. C. T. U., Miss Leppan, Miss Sally Parker and Miss Chandos Pringle. South Africa. will be better represented than ever before we hope. We are only sorry the Colonial president cannot be with us.

Mrs. Birkett, M. D., will represent India. She has been one of the National officers for some time. The National organizer, Miss Dunhill, is also hoping to come. Mrs. Arms is coming from Chile. We know she will bring an appeal asking that one of our missionaries be sent to her country. Germany sends its president, Fraulein Ottilie Hoffman, our trusted talented leader there. She is now carrying out a most successful woman's program for the International Temperance Congress which meets at Bremen next month.

At least one representative will be with us from France, Mrs. Armfield. We hope Madame Legrain may be able to come. The president of the Belgium W. C. T. U. and the president of Finland, Fru Ali Trygg Helenius (without whom a World's convention would lose a most interesting personality), will be present.

Froken Jeannette Hjorth of Kristiania and Froken Jelstrup of Trondhjem, will represent Norway. I met them during my Norwegian tour and was greatly impressed by them.

One hundred and fifty members of the B. W. T. A. have sent in their names to go to Geneva. This number will probably be increased to 200 before many weeks have passed. The list of American delegates has not yet reached me.

The Swiss ladies have translated some of our pamphlets into French and are circulating them, showing the international, non-sectarian character of our convention. One leading woman has written me that she is hoping her country will receive an immense impetus by our meetings as the evils of alcohol are being felt more and more in lovely Switzerland.

Legislative Work in Canada.

Annie M. Bascom, Correspondent.

Toronto, Canada, April 4.—Mrs. Waters, of Hamilton, superintendent of Anti-Narcotics for the Dominion W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Geggie, of Quebec, superintendent of Legislation and Petition, are in Ottawa interviewing the members of the House of Commons concerning the anti-cigaret bill which came up for its first reading on Wednesday, April 1. The ladies report very encouraging success.

Toronto District W. C. T. U. held its usual monthly prayer meeting on Thursday, April 2, from 3 to 5 p. m. Mrs. Asa Gordon, of Ottawa, Evangelistic superintendent for the Dominion, asked that special prayer be made for the success of the anti-cigaret bill. Members of the W. C. T. U. in Toronto and elsewhere were urged to write to their members of Parliament now in Ottawa, asking them to support the bill when it came up. Petitions for the prohibition of the cigaret have been signed in thirty-seven schools in Toronto. Not a single public school teacher refused and 521 signatures of teachers have been sent on to Ottawa.

Ottawa, April 1.—Mr. Bickerdike's motion for prohibition of the importation and manufacture of cigarets in Canada was adopted this afternoon on a division by a vote of 103 to 48. Although the result was a foregone conclusion, the debate was long and animated, many influential members of the W. C. T. U. being interested spectators. The text of the resolution is as follows:

"That the object of good government is to promote the general welfare of the people by a careful encouragement and protection of whatever makes for the public good; and by an equally careful discouragement and suppression of whatever tends to the public disadvantage.

"That the smoking of cigarets has been proved by overwhelming testimony to be productive of serious physical and moral injury to young people; impairing health, arresting development, weakening intellectual power, and thus constituting a social and national evil.

"The legislation licensing and restricting the sale of cigarets has not proven sufficient to prevent these evils, which will continue while the public sale of the cause of the mischief is permitted to go on.

"That this house is of the opinion, for the reasons hereinbefore set forth, that the right and most effectual legislative remedy for these evils is to be found in the enactment and enforcement of a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarets."

Local Union Elections in Louisiana.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

Baldwin, La., April 6.—At the annual meeting of the Berwick union, Mrs. C. R. Brownell was re-elected treasurer for the seventh year. The union was organized ten years ago and Mrs. Brownell has also served two years as president. She is the treasurer for the Second district, and her work is only limited by the time she is able to devote to the cause.

MRS. C. R. BROWNELL.

The Berwick ladies are happy in the possession of a pleasant, commodious room for the W. C. T. U. headquarters. Mrs. Brownell was the first to suggest and urge action towards securing this building. She was largely instrumental in securing the necessary funds, over two hundred dollars, for papering and furnishing the room.

Three new members joined the Berwick union, one of them, Mrs. Eugene Pharr, was appointed superintendent of the L. T. L. Mrs. H. C. Pharr was re-elected president.

The work of the Marksville union has been along the line of prohibition for the parish and city. Mrs. Clara Edwards was re-elected president at the annual meeting. Hammond has secured a law against saloons in proximity to their schools, and the conflict is now to convict and drive out "the blind tigers."

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman had a good meeting here and the local press awarded her due meed of praise The weather throughout Mrs. Hoffman's lecture tour in southwestern Louisiana was unprecedentedly bad, which interfered with, and several times prevented her from, holding her meetings.

Miss May C. Walker, the state president, was at Hammond March 22. She met the ladies in the afternoon and spoke to a full house at night in the Tabernacle. Miss Walker organized a new union at Ponchatoula and she feels hopeful of the work in the eastern part of the state and intends to send an organizer there as soon as practicable.

"America leads the world in violent crime, in murders and in manslaughter; not Italy where human life is held so cheaply and every man is supposed to carry a dirk, but the United States. For the same population England has seven (7) murders, France eight (8), Austria nine (9), Spain twenty-three (23). Italy tweny-nine (29), and the United States fifty-two (52); and the American saloon is the cause of ninety (90) per cent of this awful record.—C. H. Howard.

Great Temperance Meetings in Indiana.

Mrs. Hattie Wright Braud, Correspondent.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 4.—For several weeks we have been looking forward to the coming of Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens and Miss Anna Gordon. Every date they could give us was filled, and many urgent invitations had to be declined. Their first meeting was held at Richmond March 15, and eleven other cities and towns were visited. At each place they were most cordially received, and every hour was filled with earnest work for our blessed cause. The regular plan was a mass meeting for children in the afternoon, addressed by Miss Gordon, and a meeting at night at which Mrs. Stevens made the principal address. At some places there were as many grown children as little ones to hear Miss Gordon, and at others every seat was filled with little people. School teachers had taught them to sing Miss Gordon's songs, and it was an inspiration to hear them so heartily sung. Legions marched with waving banners, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. In her own sweet way Miss Gordon instilled the gospel of temperance into their young hearts. New Legions were organized, old ones strengthened, and an impetus has been given to L. T. L. work in Indiana.

Although the largest churches were secured for the meetings, they were not always large enough to accommodate the many who were eager to hear Mrs. Stevens. We were pleased to note the large number of men who attended the meetings, and the interest with which they listened to her forceful arguments for the legal prohibition of the liquor traffic. The growing interest in our cause was manifested in many ways. If Indiana comes in on Benefit Night, as she is trying to do, we know that much will be due to the visit of our National President and vice-president-at-large.

Local Option Interest in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., April 4.—The Anti-Saloon League local option bill is making some of the members of the legislature remain awake at night. The influences behind the bill have been for two years quietly organizing and getting into line to push it. It has been carefully prepared and when they finally got it introduced and won their first victory by getting it referred to the committee on license the saloon men began to realize how powerful the friends of the bill were. The war is on in earnest now. The liquor dealers are sending delegations here from all sections of the state, each delegation to see the members from its own locality. The ministers and the leaders of the various church organizations have been flocking here. Oliver Stewart, the only prohibition member of a state legislature, has been active and has been accomplishing results. Stewart, by the way, is regarded as thoroughly conscientious. He is the best and most forcible speaker on the floor. When he rises to speak noise and confusion cease and he is listened to to the end. No one man in any party wields as much influence on the floor of the house as Stewart. The local option bill has therefore had a champion in committee and on the floor who has been able to do something for it. The result is that the saloon people are flooding the members with petitions and remonstrances but the inflow from the other side has not ceased. And the bill is gradually making its way to the front. It is going to get to a vote and the house must either take to the timber or kill it or pass it. The liquor interests are threatening the republican party and "Remember the Edwards law" is their slogan.

Temperance Testimony From Supreme Court.

The following utterances should be printed from time to time in our official papers, and W. C. T. U. press superintendents throughout the country would do well to secure their insertion in the local papers. Let us keep them before the public eye:

"No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them."—102 U. S., 816.

"There is no inherent right in the citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail; it is not a privilege of a citizen of a state, or of a citizen of the United States."—U. S. Supreme Court, 137 U. S., p. 86.

"Nor can we ignore the fact, established by statistics accessible to every one, that the disorder, pauperism, and crime prevalent in the country are, in large measure, directly traceable to this evil"—the saloons.—U. S. Supreme Court, Dec. 5, 1887.

"Nor can it be said that government interferes with or impairs any one's constitutional rights of liberty or property when it determines that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks for general or individual use as a beverage are or may become hurtful to society and to every member of it, and is therefore a business in which no one may lawfully engage."—U. S. Supreme Court, Dec. 5, 1887.

"By the general concurrence of opinion of every civilized and Christian community, there are few sources of crime and misery to society equal to the dram shop, where intoxicating liquors, in small quantities, to be drunk at the time, are sold indiscriminately to all parties applying. The statistics of every state show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits obtained at these retail liquor saloons than to any other source."—U. S. Supreme Court, 1890.

REMINISCENCES FROM IOWA

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

Volga, Ia., April 4.—Thirteen years ago last October the "non-partisan" Iowa W. C. T. U. withdrew from the National organization. That same afternoon a company of loyal write-ribboners, eighty in number, met in Park Street Congregational church and organized the W. C. T. U. of the state of Iowa, auxiliary to the N. W. C. T. U. Mrs. Marion H. Dunham was chosen president. Doubtless there was not another woman in all our great state who could so ably have filled the difficult position to which she was called. Constant increasing numbers and influence for good all over the state prove that our choice was a wise one.

MRS. MARION H. DUNHAM, State President.

MRS. JOANNA B. SHESLER. State Vice-President.

When the Iowa W. C. T. U. severed its auxiliaryship from the national organization, Mrs. Joanna B. Shesler was the only district president loyal to the parent union, who had not been deposed. Firm, faithful, tried and trusted she has held her office for twenty years. She has also served as state vice-president-at-large for several years.

She has recently arranged for meetings in Sioux Rapids, Spencer, Milford and Marathon, conducted by Rev. and Mrs. A. J. McColl, of DeMoines. During these meetings twenty-one members have joined the W. C. T. U., and 780 have signed the total abstinence pledge. De Moines unions are gaining members steadily under the influence of meetings held by the McColls from week to week, when they are not a-field.

Willard Union, Des Moines, recently held a farewell service for Mrs. Natalie B. Gordon, who is about to move to South Dakota. Mrs. Gordon presented the union with a gavel made from the old Crusade church, as a parting gift, and the union gave her and her daughter souvenir spoons with the Crusade church engraved thereon. Mrs. Gordon is state superintendent of Christian Citizenship work and will be much missed.

Iowa white-ribboners are mourning the loss of our beloved corresponding secretary, Miss Belle H. Mix, who has been called of God to another field of labor. Mrs. Ida B. Wise, of California, president of the Sixth district W. C. T. U., will serve as secretary the remainder of the year.

Mrs. Anna E. Halvorson has brought Mrs. Ulrikka Bruun into the state to work among our Norwegian people. Council Bluffs union is doing a remarkable work. A committee of six well-known women have been visiting the saloons in that city, interviewing the proprietors, and securing a personal knowledge, as far as possible, of the way in which their business is conducted.

Will Watch for the Blind Tigers.

Union City, Tenn., April 6.—A mass meeting of citizens was held to perfect an organization to look out for the blind tigers and other violators of the Adams law, which promises immunity from the sale of intoxicants. The people have been waiting expectantly to see what would be the outcome should two of the saloon keepers who have license for a year undertake to carry on their business after the last day of this month, but it is understood that they will await the result of the test case to be made at Franklin. Union City had nine saloons, but now has only six, one or two having failed, and the license of one having expired Saturday. If the Adams law holds the people of this city will see that it is not cursed with blind tigers and bootleggers.

Work for Miners in Pennsylvania.

H. Frances Jones, Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 6.—Pennsylvania presents a boundless field for work among its miners and people from across the seas. The largest coal mining state in the Union, over 300,000 miners, 76,000 children employed in breaker, mine, factory and store, and more than one million people from all lands give unlimited opportunity for missionary work. We are in the midst of an unrest from the greatest strike known. The perils of the miner and the foreign born would be lessened greatly, if the saloon were exterminated. With the saloon on one side, the avarice of the coal baron on the other, these people are surrounded and some times overwhelmed. The state superintendent of these lines of work, Miss Puella C. Dornblazer, is actively engaged in mitigating the dangers and evils that constantly menace her people. She has distributed thousands of tracts in fifteen different languages. Her workers visit the homes, schools and missions and distribute Bibles in the language of the people they meet. Also on the street cars, in railway stations, hospitals and on the street.

MISS PUELLA C. DORNBLAZER.

Special meetings and cottage prayer meetings are held in all the mining towns. Twenty boxes and barrels of clothing have been sent to the miners' families. In 1870 Pennsylvania stood second in intelligence and in 1890 twentieth. The need of better laws concerning child labor has brought us before the legislature this winter to advocate raising the age of boys employed in the mines to sixteen years, in the breakers, factories and mills to fourteen years.

Converts in Southern California.

Lou M. Young, Correspondent.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 6.—Since our president, Mrs. Emma Cash, returned from National Convention, she has been very busy touring southern California in the interests of W. C. T. U. work. She has given forty-nine public addresses, thirty-two talks to local unions, helped conduct six institutes, organized two unions, and attended eight receptions. This effort has awakened great interest, has inspired and encouraged the workers, and has secured for us a gain of 120 active and twenty honorary members.

MRS. EMMA CASH, State President.

While at Santa Ana she had the joy of receiving into fellowship 100 more members. Most of these were secured through the efforts of Major Hilton. She will soon visit and address each county convention, completing the rounds just before our state convention to be held in San Diego, our southernmost city by the sea.

While passing through Riverside county she had the pleasure of delivering the first temperance address ever given to the pupils of the Indian school at Soboba, and was surprised and pleased at the interest manifested. A few days later, with Mrs. Simmons, county president, she visited the great Sherman Institute, near Riverside. This is a national school for Indians, with 340 students. As the managers are favorable to our work, there is a possibility of an organization in the near future.

While at San Jacinto, at the close of Mrs. Cash's address, a well educated Spanish lady from Costa Rico, Central America, granddaughter of the president, desired to know more of our work, of which she had never before heard. She will soon return to her home to carry not only the gospel of Christ as a missionary, but also that of temperance, as a white ribboner.

The outlook for our work in southern California is hopeful, sentiment is growing, and in many places we are jubilant over the removal of the saloon. Our white ribboners have had a strong hand in their removal. The people everywhere in this southland are waking up to the fact that "where there's drink there's danger."

How the Dispensary Bill Was Defeated in Tennessee.

[The following personal letter from Mrs. S. M. Holman, state president of the Tennessee W. C. T. U., to Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, contains so much of encouragement to our workers in other states that we have asked permission to quote it in The Union Signal.—Eds.]

Fayetteville, Tenn., March 20.—I write to give you the joyful news that the Dispensary is dead beyond resurrection in this state.

The first bill was "sprung" on us very suddenly. It was a bill to permit Columbia, a town too large to come under the provisions of the Adams law, and so get rid of whisky, to establish a dispensary. I had seen a little paragraph concerning this in a paper favoring the dispensary in a general way, but not urging the passage of such a bill in the state, so I had written a short article for one of the Nashville papers, which appeared about the time the Columbia bill was introduced, denouncing the measure. I wrote again, but before I could get my forces together it had passed the House, practically without opposition, only eight votes being recorded against it. Ministers, temperance people, almost all of the best people of Columbia, were pleading for the bill.

About this time a bill was introduced in the Senate permitting almost any town in the state to establish a dispensary. I called in the help of half a dozen members of my own local union, and we wrote hundreds of letters, sending petitions for circulation all over the state. Numbers of our women didn't even know what the dispensary was, but had faith enough in me to fight it, and circulate petitions as requested. Fully ten thousand or more names were promptly gathered, and the Senate and House were flooded with petitions before the bill was ready for final passage.

In the meantime I consulted with one of the ablest lawyers in the state as to the legal status of the measure. He told me the bill was unconstitutional and could never become a law in our state. A clause in our constitution reads: "That perpetuities and monopolies are contrary to the genius of a free state, and shall not be allowed." Bouvier's Law Dictionary defines a monopoly as the exclusive right given by the state to any person or corporation of buying, selling or using anything—just as plain as a, b, c.

If I had known this at first I might not have appealed to our women. But I had already done so, and petitions were flooding the capital. Then I was a little fearful how the matter might be decided by the Supreme Court. We had one Supreme judge to decide that a matter was constitutional because it was in the Democratic platform! And so I thought it best to leave no stone unturned. I went to Nashville, secured a hearing before the Senate committee and explained fully by abundant testimony from South Carolina and Alabama, and in other ways, that the dispensary was not a temperance measure, but worse than the saloon, as it was a worse enemy to fight and delayed prohibition. The lawyer who had advised me as to its unconstitutionality was with me, and argued from that standpoint against the passage of the bill. We defeated the general dispensary bill without a bit of trouble.

But the Columbia bill was a different matter. The best people of the place wanted it. The senator from Columbia was working "like a tiger" for it. And in our state through "senatorial courtesy" Senators will let a colleague be sole judge of any matter pertaining wholly to his own town. So, as he insisted that being a "police regulation" it was not unconstitutional, through "senatorial courtesy" it was passed by a small majority.

I came home, and when it passed I was very blue about it. But a day or two later, as I was wondering what to do next, a something said to me as plainly as a voice from the outside, "Appeal to the Governor." I at once wrote a man I could trust there and asked him to have a good lawyer argue the matter before the Governor and urge his veto. Today he vetoed it on the ground of its unconstitutionality. So the measure is dead beyond question and forever here.

Conventions and Institutes in Virginia.

Mrs. George W. Oliver, Correspondent.

Winnie, Va., April 4.—Virginia white-ribboners are rejoicing over the passage of the Mann bill, and hope this is a presage of greater victories.

Nottoway county W. C. T. U. is much encouraged at the recent "dry" election in Blackstone. Thus the whole lump is gradually being leavened.

The union at Roanoke has held a very successful membership contest, resulting in sixty-eight recruits. Willard Memorial Day was observed by Lincoln, Crewe, Danville, Winchester, River View and Lexington, Portsmouth and Wright's chapel.

Our state president and her husband Rev. Howard M. Hoge, have conducted W. C. T. U. institutes at the following points: Wakefield, Windsor and Newport News. They attended county conventions of Henrico and Chesterfield and the bi-county convention of Assomac and Northampton.

Windsor, Lambert's Point, South Norfolk, Denby's, Berkeley, Portsmouth, Atlantic City, Norfolk, Dover and Mary E. Webb and Norfolk Y's have been visited and helped by these untiring workers.

Our Y secretary, Miss Laura Smith, is still helpless and suffering, but brave and cheerful.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

The Value of Literature.

My Dear State Secretaries:—The foremost thought in my mind as I begin my message to you this week is, How can we increase the circulation of The Union Signal among the Y's? Many things have come to my notice recently which prove conclusively that our excellent organ is not nearly so generally read by our young women as it should be. How can it be put in their hands? Surely we can find a road out of the wilderness if only we are agreed that its weekly visits are of paramount importance to the work.

For my own part I am more thoroughly convinced each day that there are just two things of vital import to you and to me as state and National leaders, viz.: to get local unions to completely outline and print their programs for the year and to read our literature—The Union Signal, the catalogue of publications, the Annual Leaflet, Y Manual and Year Book. If we can do this "all (those other) things shall be added unto them." We should not then need to urge them to do this or that, to adopt certain departments, observe a certain day, pay dues, etc., but reading our literature they would fall into line with the round-the-world accepted plan and would have far better ideas of what methods to pursue locally than we. Then, too, they would accept all suggestions in such matters as holding contests and organizing other Y's because they could not resist the universal spirit of combining with the work and workers everywhere. Shall we not make the bringing of this about—that is, the influencing them to use programs and reading of our literature—our special effort for the future? A thorough study of the single issue of our very fine Y number alone (Sept. 25, 1902) would furnish material enough for a whole year's program and inspiration sufficient to carry any up-to-date young woman through the remainder of life.

The number of ideal Y's is increasing I am sure, and I note, with no small degree of pride that one of the largest, if not the very largest, amounts sent to the National treasurer for the Memorial Fund was forwarded by a Y, the Y of Goldendale, East Washington. I predict for Mrs. Lottie Hannon, the president, an early call to a larger field of usefulness as an outgrowth of just this interest and work, for promotions come not by seeking them but by excelling in the particular place (however small it may be) where we now stand. This is a digression but it gives much food for thought to young women who are ambitious—and it is a worthy ambition—to come into the larger relationships which have broadened and have made more meaningful so many of our lives.

Very soon, possibly even before this is read, I hope to put into your hands the report blanks for 1903. I do this early in order that you may have time to return to me a more complete list of answers than some of you have been able to give heretofore. I shall thus give you nearly half the year to collect and I do so earnestly pray that no state secretary must needs report a decrease in membership in October next. If you are discouraged let me know the "why" now and I may be able to help you. I believe I have aided more than one anxious young woman by removing, through correspondence, some of the hindrances to progress, and perhaps I can assist you. I am going to be woefully disappointed if a single one of the older states—older in the work—have a falling off this year. But I will not be nearly so grieved as you will be if you have to place your girls in that list.

With implicit confidence in you all and great joy in your unselfish service, I am,

Loyally yours,
Clara Parrish-Wright

A Promoted Honorary—Dr. J. Howard Yarnall.

By Frances J. Barnes.

Those who have been specially interested in the Y Almanac, will be surprised and pained to learn that on March 20, (the birthday of Neal Dow), our staunch ally and faithful friend, Dr. J. Howard Yarnall, was summoned to answer the roll call among the promoted veterans.

Ever since his dear wife, Frances B. Yarnall, joined the ranks of the church triumphant, Dr. Yarnall has seemed to be living in a heavenly atmosphere, sustained by supernatural power. A man of sterling integrity, strong for the right, yet so filled with gentleness and humility that to all who knew him he seemed, indeed, to be "an Israelite in whom there was no guile."

A long and praiseful eulogy could be written of him, he was beloved by so many. He will be greatly missed by the county Prohibitionists, the W. C. T. U., his medical fraternity, and his church, where he had for many years filled the position of elder and overseer with constant fidelity. The Christian Endeavor temperance committee, Bible School committee and other departments of church work will feel his loss very keenly, and we, of the Y Branch and special Almanac work, are again truly bereft.

It was all a labor of love to him. He loved to exploit the Y Almanac for the good it accomplished, and for the sake of her who had made it so much a part of her life. The day was never too cold, nor too warm, nor too stormy to prevent Dr. Yarnall from going on long and tiresome journeys in the interests of Y work. We could not have had a more self-sacrificing and devoted white-ribbon brother-in-law.

During the eight months since his beloved wife had passed into the Beyond his heart had been full of loneliness, and yet so full of joy because of her joy, that he said to me, "I often find myself praising God aloud and almost all the time I am singing to myself the hymns she loved so much." He deeply appreciated the letters of sympathy written to him by the Ws and Ys, and said, "They are so beautiful and comforting. I am glad they knew and prized her labors; I can never tell them all how much their words have been to me."

A few weeks ago he came one morning to read some verses he had written on the last words "our dear Fannie" (as we always spoke of her) had spoken. They came to him one night when he could not sleep and he modestly said, "I do not know that they have any merit, but I think she would speak to us in this way." These verses were read at his funeral service in the Friends' Meeting House, in New York, and seemed like his own message to us, as if, though dead, he was yet speaking.

He was laid beside his wife in the Cemetery at Madison, N. J., and beside her now in spirit, they will together sing and serve in the glory land. And our hearts will be cheered, as was his, by catching the echoes of eternal joy.

Faith Triumphant.

[Lines Suggested by the Last Words of Frances B. Yarnall. Written by Her Husband, Dr. J. Howard Yarnall.]

Heavenly Father, Heavenly Father,
I see Thee in Thy glory now.
Oh, the rapture of Thy presence;
Thy radiance gleams upon my brow.

My delight has been to serve Thee,
In Thy cause to labor on,
'Till the coming of the morning
When this happy day should dawn.

Now I know Thee in Thy fulness;
I behold Thee as Thou art.
Shall be with Thee in Thy Kingdom;
With the ransomed take my part.

Oh! my dear ones, do not hold me.
Jesus calls me to my home;
Earthly cares no more shall claim me,
Pain and sorrow ever gone.

Heavenly Father, I have loved Thee,
Loved to do Thy blessed will;
Now I leave my earthly mission,
But in heaven to serve Thee still.

Heavenly Father, Jesus, Saviour,
Thou dost bid me come to Thee,
Thou alone on earth did'st keep me;
Now in glory I shall be.

I've no claim upon Thy mercy,
Thou didst die that I might live.
I have tried to give Thy message
Where Thy Spirit said to give.

Happy years we've had together;
Soon the clouds that intervene
Will be rolled away forever,
We shall see as we are seen.

And in all the glad forever,
We shall do our Master's will,
Countless ages will not sever,
We shall be in glory still.

Notice.

Owing to the death of Dr. J. H. Yarnall, please send all communications concerning Y Almanacs to Mrs. E. L. Evans, 248 West 105th St., New York, N. Y.

Will all who have not paid for their Almanacs, kindly send remittances for the amount of their bills, as soon as possible, that the accounts may be settled and the report prepared for the World's Convention, as it must be ready before May 1st.

E. L. Evans,
Acting Custodian.

Gleanings.

Miss Louise Hollister is in West Washington.

Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart's next field is Ohio.

Most excellent reports of the work of Miss Christine Tinling come from Kansas.

Miss Alice H. Moore reports another Y which makes the fourth for Maine in a month.

The Albermarle, N. C., Y observed February 17, with an enthusiastic contest.

At Reno, Nevada, fully forty young people belong to the W. C. T. U.

Miss Clara M. Sears, Indiana's consecrated secretary, organized a Y at Oxford on one of her recent institute tours.

Miss Annie A. Robbins has been invited to spend the whole of next year in Minnesota, to do special Y and L. T. L. work.

A number of W. C. T. unions in different states report having taken many of their topics from the Y Year Book.

Between fifty and eighty local Y branches in England observed February 17. Miss Swankie-Cameron was in great demand as speaker at these meetings.

The Milton, Me., Y has doubled its membership within a month. When Miss Moore spoke for them they gave her a full house. Prosperity in one line of work is contagious when we adopt another.

Mrs. Minnie J. Grinstead organized a Y in Simpson, Kansas, last month. This makes about a dozen for that state, which looks as though they may keep the banner.

The Shelton, West Washington, Y engaged Miss Hollister for a week. If all our unions would do that once a year, there would be no "deaths" to record. But then Shelton is the home of Clara Ansorge!

Miss Margaret Bilz, of Michigan, state corresponding secretary, has done a great work among the girls in the silk mills of the state, and writes most hopefully of Ys organized among them.

Miss Rose A. Davison, of Colorado, who is accompanying the vice-president on an itinerary through the state, says: "We are not going to be able to fill nearly all the calls for services."

Miss Carrie Lee Carter began work in Tennessee the first of April. She has been instructed by the state president, as well as the Y secretary, to keep on the lookout for opportunities to organize young women.

Mrs. Thacher has been most cordially received by the Ys of Delaware, for whom she has gained a number of new members. The St. Paul Y had violets on the table in her room when she reached there, on a cold and most disagreeable day.

In connection with the coming World's Convention a platform meeting of Ys will be held outside the time of the regular session, at which young women representatives from the various countries will speak.

The St. Louis Y, the oldest and largest Y organization in Missouri, on March 19 decided to join the St. Louis Central W. C. T. U., thus giving that union a gain of fifty members. Before going into the Central union this Y collected dues on forty-three members, paid state pledge of $25, and their memorial fund, held two socials, one Mothers' meeting, had one lecture, did considerable Flower Mission work, distributed 15,000 pages of literature, twenty-five articles of clothing, spent a day sewing for the Home for colored orphans, and held one contest. We feel sure such earnest workers will make their influence felt wherever their membership is held.

The new secretary of Northern California, Miss Anna E. Chase, is beginning a most thorough work. Here is the report of just one society sent in to the General Secretary:

Pleasant Valley Y, organized February 16, 1902. Number of regular meetings held, 23; gospel, 5; special evangelistic, 6; parlor, 9; L. T L., 1; Sabbath Observance, 1; Health and Heredity, 2; Christian Citizenship, 1; mothers', 1; Purity, 1; Systematic Giving, 1; Peace and Arbitration, 1; visits, 182; bouquets, 9; delicacies taken to the sick, 77; bouquets distributed at gospel meetings, 98; meals given to the poor, 26; poor persons helped, 25; collected and given to a needy family, $47; boxes of flowers, 8; dried fruits, nuts, etc., sent to San Francisco for distribution, 100 pounds; box of papers sent to the Indians in Lake county, 1; good reading matter given around neighborhood; graves decorated, 12; subscriptions to The Union Signal, Pacific Ensign, American Mother, 1; subscriptions to the Angel of Peace, 10; large framed pictures of Miss Willard to be presented to two public schools in the neighborhood, 2.

The wonderful president of this society is Mrs. Lucy J. Pleasants.

MISS HARRIET LEE HENDERSON.

MRS. MAUDE LORENE GREENE.

MRS. ADA WALLACE UNRUH.

MRS. ANNA R. SIMMONS.

MRS. EMELIA UNDERHILL BURGESS.

PEN SKETCHES OF NATIONAL ORGANIZERS.

Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh inherits the grit, persistency and will-power characteristic of her Scotch ancestry, and these qualities enable her, though frail physically, to labor so continuously in her chosen vocation as often to call forth the remark, "What a tremendous worker she is!" Connected with the W. C. T. U. from its very beginning, she has been a writer and a speaker on the various phases of temperance work for more than twenty years, and for more than fifteen years she has been an accredited organizer.

A state president in whose state she was engaged not long since writes: "To those of us who have come into personal touch with Mrs. Unruh, the coming to our state of this strong, clear-brained, consecrated National worker has been a matter of more than usual moment. Wise and winsome, she has made friends for our cause wherever she has spoken. Her long experience in the field has stored her mind with facts, figures and illustrations which lend rare interest to her addresses, no matter what theme she illumines."

Mrs. Unruh has made a careful study of organization in general and the W. C. T. U. in particular. Few have brought to this work more thorough and specific knowledge. She is a veritable mine of information concerning new plans and methods.

Of broad education, a keen student of books, men and affairs, eloquent of speech, and determined to excel, Mrs. Unruh is counted by her comrades a peerless worker in the field.

Mrs. Maude Lorene Greene was born in Michigan, and she received her education in a denominational college of that state, where she was able to carry out some of the work begun along missionary lines during her younger days.

In early life she showed a remarkable skill in using the pencil and the brush, and this talent was carefully developed. It was her pleasure to gather up neglected children from the street, make them tidy and coax them into the Sunday-school, where she would draw pictures, giving them so happy a time that they gladly came again. Later on this gift of drawing was used in young people's meetings and college societies, and in missions and churches, and finally in the work of the white-ribbon army. The tender, loving words of Frances E. Willard inspired her first temperance work. As she looked into the beautiful face of this great leader, turned earnestly, as was her wont, towards the "young folks," a deep conviction came to her that here was God's call to her life work.

Mrs. Greene's first public office was that of state L. T. L. secretary of Colorado, in which position she for three years rendered faithful service; but while in the midst of this work the doors of the National were opened to her.

For nearly eleven years she has held the position of National chalk-talker and organizer, visiting every state in the union and spending a year and a half abroad in the interests of our cause. In 1900 she went as delegate from her home state to the World's Convention in Edinburgh, Scotland. The months given to Great Britain were full of earnest service, and she was greeted everywhere by large and enthusiastic audiences, receiving many appreciative words from the officers and workers of our white-ribbon host across the sea.

Mrs. Greene has done much work in the southland, and she has been made a life member of the Alabama W. C. T. U. She is an able worker on the staff of the National L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Helen G. Rice. Of her ability to interest, the "Christian Herald," of London, England, says:

"Mrs. Greene is a fine artist and she wields the crayon with skill, using right, left or both hands at once with equal freedom. Beautiful and humorous scenes grow with lightning rapidity under her clever fingers, while her words, full of earnestness or sparkling with humor, keep pace with her crayons."

Miss Harriet Lee Henderson is a daughter of the sunny southland, her birthplace being in Texas, the great Lone Star state. Her childhood and youth were spent on a plantation, away from the rush and roar of city life, and there amidst the quiet beauties of her country home, she was fitted for the busy life awaiting her.

Until entering college her education was directed by private tutors under the home roof. After being graduated from a prominent southern college, a busy world of work opened before her.

On one of Miss Willard's first visits in the south, Miss Henderson became interested in the great cause of temperance, and she gladly entered into the children's work. From the L. T. L. she advanced into the older branches of the organization, until she was claimed by her state W. C. T. U. for its efficient corresponding secretary. For five years she served faithfully in this capacity, and Miss Willard coming again to this southern home, in her quaint way said: "This young woman can chipper a little, why not let her chipper more," and from this kindly suggestion Miss Henderson was brought into the National work.

For more than six years she has held the office of National lecturer and organizer, and, with her friend and co-worker, Maude L. Greene, she has labored in nearly every state in the Union, going into the lonely mining towns in the mountains of the west, carrying the gospel of temperance to many a wandering sin-sick soul, and speaking in towns and cities where the little "ribbon white" was already a familiar sight to young and old.

In June of 1900 she crossed the Atlantic as delegate from Texas to the World's Convention in Edinburgh, Scotland, remaining for eighteen months thereafter, in acceptance of an invitation from the British women.

A bright and forceful speaker, both at home and abroad Miss Henderson is everywhere representative of a noble young womanhood.

Mrs. Emelie Underhill Burgess has an unusual record of service in the annals of the W. C. T. U., having been actively engaged as an organizer, with but few years exception, since 1879. Entering the work at an early age, she for ten years served as an officer of the Westchester county (N. Y.) W. C. T. U., and she has for seventeen years been president of the Ulster county union, which is second in membership in her state. She is loyally loved by her magnificent constituency, who have never failed to unanimously re-elect her as their leader.

Mrs. Burgess is a minister in the orthodox Society of Friends, and she has regularly occupied a pulpit in a Friends' church near her home in Highland, N. Y. She is prominent in the work of Peace and Arbitration, being lecturer and state superintendent for that department.

She is generously gifted with "grace, grit and gumption," the three great essentials for success as a National organizer, and as a speaker she is eloquent. Those who have been guests in her lovely home and at her state conventions, have been charmed by her genial hospitality, humor and vivacity.

An appreciative white-ribboner pays her this well deserved tribute:

"Ella Wheeler Wilcox divides the people of the world into two kinds—the people who lift and the people who lean," and if there was ever one who rightfully belongs to the first class it is Emilie Burgess. In fact, she is one of the kind to whom all the leaners naturally turn for strength and support.

"Lovable as strong, gentle as forceful, winning, sunny, companionable, and withal a leader, she is one to whom all women turn for a friend, a comforter and a guide."

Mrs. Anna R. Simmons, who was, previous to the call into the National service, State Superintendent of Evangelist work and vice-president-at-large of the South Dakota W. C. T. U., has for more than twenty-five years labored in reform work, ever seconding her husband's efforts in his ministerial labors, and toiling unceasingly for the betterment of humanity. Mrs. Simmons, who is a woman of fine appearance, is an able speaker. She possesses so much of the great mother heart and the sweet spirit of Christ that she never fails to win a following for the cause.

As president of the Equal Suffrage Association of South Dakota, she has rendered her state a most valuable service in legislative work, the passage of the Equal Suffrage amendment being largely due to her untiring effort.

As a speaker she is earnest and convincing, always impressing her hearers with her honesty of purpose and nobility of soul. She has successfully addressed the franchise committee of the United States Congress, lectured at various Chautauquas and responded to calls from many states besides her own.

Rev. and Mrs. Simmons went to Dakota in 1884, and their work in that state has been a benediction to many lives.

A City Tulip Bed.

By Florence Bronson Tucker.

THOU brilliant-hued but evanescent flower,
How like to us, the creatures of an hour!
Yet unlike us, so patient, gladly willing
To lift thy cup of life for heaven's filling.

And when 'tis filled with radiant beauty rare,
Holding it high that rich and poor may share,
Bowing in stately grace to them who fare
Along thy way, with every breath of air.

A veritable beauty-spot thou art,
Close shrined, like love, within the city's heart;
A symphony in yellow, red and white,
A poem in color, writ for our delight!

Pure and devout, with unassuming mien,
Yet in thine own small sphere a peerless queen;
Placed in the public way by hand of man,
Thou lendest e'en thyself unto his plan.

Still holding clear thine individual right
To live thine own life in thy Maker's sight,
Softening with thy rich tints the city's glare
To tired eyes that fain would linger there.

Bloom on, fair tulips, in thy bright array,
Since all too soon we'll mourn thy swift decay;
For somehow in that busy, worldly mart,
Thou seem'st to draw men near to Nature's heart.

Springfield, Mass.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter VI.

FOR the three months following his appointment to his first living, Mr. Boyd's time was occupied in house renovation, furnishing and other preparations, with a view to his early marriage. Thus it happened that temporarily the chief burden of parochial visitation fell upon Hugh. Of all his duties, this was undoubtedly the most irksome; yet, as a rule, he went heroically from door to door, making friends everywhere, save in the homes of the odd dozen, where, clearly, it was his duty to make himself unwelcome. To Billy Sellers, the Widgerys (father and son), and the rest, he was proud to be known as "a terror." After the first encounters, with one consent they avoided him, and he plumed himself upon the fact; but Tummas Windle occupied different ground. Notwithstanding his membership of that odd dozen, Tummas was one of the curate's staunchest champions, and often, when ruffled by reiterated criticisms, Hugh betook himself for solace to the stuffy cottage, where he was ever sure of a welcome.

But while keeping a soft corner in his heart for Hugh, Tummas had nothing but the sternest disapprobation for Mr. Boyd.

"Him a parson? Him? Why, look 'ee here. Boyd have about as much right to be a parson as me; and happen not as much, for I do reckon to know when a man's goin' downwards way. Now, I tell tha, he's never been inside my door but once; look at that to begin wi'. A onconverted man like me, wi' one foot in the grave—if Mann's to be believed, which I'm for doubtin'—one foot in the grave, and the parson manages to get to see me once in three months!"

"You old sinner! You know perfectly well that you recovered years ago from that illness. Do you mean to say—"

"Ye can spare your breath," interrupted Tummas, frustrating Hugh's attempted defense of his absent chief. "I tell ye he's never been here but once, and then he sat in that there chair where you're a-sitting now; and instead o' dealin' wi' me straight for my sins, he made out as there might be a good deal to be said, even for the likes of me. And him a parson! It were a downright scandal to hear him. Mon! if I'm bound to go to the bad place, I'm not such a fool as not to know it."

"Yet fool enough to go on in the same way, knowing all the time where it's leading you, eh?" said Hugh.

"Ay, ay, that's reet enough. Who's denying it? But as for Boyd, he had ought to be ashamed of himself."

"And how about Tummas Windle?" persisted Hugh, with a determined attempt to steer the conversation clear of the vicar. "Ought not he to be ashamed of himself, too?"

"Well, sir, I don't mind ownin' to it as it bothers me a deal, at odd times. I know well enough that I'm no better than I should be, and whiles I've had desp'rate thoughts of turning over a new leaf; but I doubt I'm past praying for. Do ee' think I don't know what I ought to do; and, still better happen, what I ought not to do? But when it comes to the p'int, t'other side o' the question, as Boyd says, all at once seems to rise up and give me a knock-down blow. I've warned ye as I'm past prayin' for; and look ye, sir, when it comes to the p'int, and I've got to decide for this way or t'other, once for all, it do seem a powerful lot to give up for the sake o' goin' to live for ever and ever with they teetotallers. It do, sir; and that's the livin' truth."

Once more did Hugh imperil his reputation as a righteous man, for he laughed long and loud.

For some time Tummas eyed him in severe displeasure.

"Nay, I cannot fashion to unnerstan' you gentlefolk," he said huffily. "I thought we was speakin' o' serious matters, but it's all one to you. If a thing happens to strike your fancy, no matter how solemn a matter it be, you can see nowt but the queer side of it. And for the matter o' that, wheer do the queer side o' this here matter come in? That's what I want to know! Wheer do it come in?"

Recovering himself hastily, Hugh pleaded that he was one of the teetotallers; but Tummas was but half appeased, and alas! for the curate's next words.

"Why, look here, Tummas," he said, impetuously, "if that is all that holds you back, God is very good, and there are many mansions. Who knows but He may be even now preparing a little crib for you with some good fellow who served Him truly, according to his lights, without ever seeing his way to total abstinence at all."

"Now, look 'ee here, sir," said Tummas, severely, "I dunnot know what sort of a doctrine that may be, but it ain't gospel truth no way, and so I tell you straight."

"Well, perhaps it isn't," admitted Hugh, recollecting himself, "and anyway, it wasn't quite the thing to say to an old sinner like you," he added, with a freedom for which the old man secretly worshipped him. "But after all, why should you funk the teetotallers if you believe total abstinence to be the right thing? Practically, you admit that you do believe it."

"Who's denyin' it?" asked Tummas, fretfully. "In course it's the right thing; but right though it be, I can't bring my stomach to it noways, and that's where it is, d'ye see. There was a time when I went the length o' namin' it to Mann, but where was the use? Mann aren't so much better than the heathen. All the advice he had by him was somethin' like your own. 'Well, Tummas,' he says, 'if I was you, I should just start out to see whether I couldn't make out to be a good Christian and yet stick to my pint o' beer.' What d'ye think o' that, from an eddicated gentlemen, to an ignorant man like me? But he hasn't never been no better than he should be, hasn't Mann. Now, I tell tha—"

Profiting by past experience, Hugh rose in alarm.

"Ye're never goin' a'ready?" ejaculated Tummas. "Well, I will say that ye're as poor a visitor as ever I see. Ye're not a patch on Miss Milner for visitin'."

Hugh smiled. It was not the first time he had noticed that the reputation of the lady visitor was rising steadily.

"Might you be goin' on to Miss Smith's?" queried Tummas, sulkily.

"Well, no; I wasn't thinking of it, unless you know of any particular reason why I should," said Hugh, with his hand on the latch.

"Please yourself, but I should put it to you this way," retorted Tummas, acrimoniously. "Ye passed her door, as ye may remember, the last time you was here, and that's the sort of behavior as makes things rather unpleasant for me. Mary Jane Smith is a Christian as don't own no call to put a curb on her tongue. More particularly when she's been defrauded of what she takes to be her due. She knows as well as most that you and Boyd is paid to visit the flock and she expects to be visited. As to her nastiness with me, maybe she had her suspicions as you'd been leavin' a grocery ticket, but as you'll perhaps remember, she never made a greater mistake. Not that she needs a ticket, or would be best pleased to have it offered, for that matter; but she's just that suspicious kind of a body."

Thus astutely reminded of a forgotten duty, Hugh produced the grocery ticket, which was shamelessly accepted without the disclaimer which Tummas must have known to be in decency due.

Then the unlucky curate vainly essayed the impossible task of making his peace with Miss Smith. He was frigidly received and icily entertained with an account of Miss Milner's friendly habit of "dropping in" whenever she had occasion to pass that way.

"But she was a good Christian woman, was Miss Milner," stonily remarked Miss Smith to the attenuated geranium in her window.

"I hope you sometimes told her so," Hugh could not help saying. For he was young, and loved popularity, and his heart was sore.

Miss Smith turned her stony gaze full upon him, but he was glad to see that his shaft had gone home.

"What I may have been in the 'abit of saying to Miss Milner is neither here nor there," she replied with dignity. "I could wish that there was one of her sort about the parish now, and there's many another that thinks the same."

If Hugh felt snubbed, he took care not to let Miss Smith see it.

"And so do I for one more," he said, heartily. "I verily believe that in Miss Milner you entertained an angel unawares."

"Umph; I don't know so much about angels, but anyway, she was a right good visitor. She did her duty that way, did Miss Milner."

After making that unpleasant innuendo, Miss Smith shut her lips with stern determination on a huge reserve of opinion, and proceeded to water the geranium.

"In that way and in every other, surely," said Hugh, with some warmth.

Miss Smith kept her reserve fund well in hand.

"Miss Milner bein' dead and gone, no one wouldn't wish to say otherwise," she observed, magnanimously.

"No one could say otherwise and speak the truth," retorted Hugh. "That at least was Dr. Mann's opinion, and he ought to know."

"Just so. Seeing that she lived in his house, Dr. Mann ought to know," retorted Miss Smith in her turn. "He ought to know, and no doubt he does know, what she done with her time when, now and again, she was not to be seen in the parish for a week on end. I'm not a gossiping woman myself, but there was many a one as did talk about it."

She was quite unconscious of her slip, as, for the moment, was Hugh, and she had the satisfaction of seeing that he was taken by surprise. Neither Mrs. Langley nor Dr. Mann had spoken of Miss Milner's residence in their house, and the village folk had probably taken it for granted that Hugh was acquainted with the fact.

"And this I will say," concluded Miss Smith, "if Miss Milner didn't want to be talked about she hadn't ought to have given folks the occasion to do it."

"Possibly Miss Milner didn't care a jot whether she was talked about or not," remarked Hugh, valiantly, as he prepared to make his escape.

Nevertheless, he was struck by this piece of information. It seemed odd that Mrs. Langley had never alluded to Miss Milner as a personal friend. Hugh did not come out of his brown study until, having climbed to the top of he hill, he came within sight of a one-roomed cottage standing apart from any other dwelling upon the moor. Never yet had he been admitted, but with a sudden determination to make one more effort to effect an entrance, he crossed the corner of moorland that lay beween it and the road. To his first knock there was, as usual, no response, but on a second and louder application of his stick a rough voice impatiently shouted, "Come in!"

He obeyed, and advancing to the hearthstone, stood bewildered. At that moment he would have given much for a more perfect acquaintance with his neglected register. The voice, the strong, wrinkled face, the sinewy form, the short, black pipe, and the jug of beer, all betokened a man, but the short, rough petticoat—

"Shut the door, can't ye!" growled the deep voice. "What might your business be? You're one o' the new parsons, I reckon."

"Yes, I'm the curate," said Hugh, recovering himself, and doing as he was bid. "Mr. Boyd is getting ready to be married, so he hasn't much time for visiting just now. You'll have to make me do for a while instead."

It was a plea of which he had often—all too often—proved the inadequacy, but he offered it as cheerfully as he could.

"I doan't know but I could make shift to get along well enough without either one or the other of ye," said the person of the house, taking a long pull at the beer, and setting down the jug with an appreciative smack.

"And might be no great loser so far as I am concerned," said Hugh, good-humoredly.

"Like enough. I'm none so fond o' parsons," said his new acquaintance, grimly.

"Well, I'm only half a parson as yet; let me hope that you will take that into consideration," said the young deacon, pleasantly apologetic.

The fierce eyes gleamed at him in disdain. "Ye look but a poor wee thing, anyway."

"Oh, come now! I'm a fair average specimen as far as size goes," remonstrated Hugh; "and for the rest, I'm not above being improved."

The imperturbable being opposite puffed stolidly at the black pipe.

"That sort o' talk'll do fine for Mary Jane, and such like, but it none goes down wi' me. I want nowt o' parsons. They'm all alike. I knows 'em. Choose where they begin, sooner or later they work it round to God A'mighty, and I want none o' God A'mighty. Him been powerful hard on me."

Hugh was silent from sheer dismay.

"See here." The black pipe was withdrawn at last from the hard lips for greater emphasis. "He took the honest bread out o' my mouth. Him, and the woman 'at's sittin' on the throne to-day. I'm come to charity—me, as could have earned my bread

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

(Continued on page 14.)

Children's Cozy Corner

Poor Children's Feast in Tokyo, Japan.

By Kara G. Smart.

CHILDREN GATHERING FOR ENTERTAINMENT, KABUKI THEATER.

SOMETIME during the first part of December, the "Jiji Shimpo," one of Japan's best and most influential native newspapers, suggested a New Year's treat for the poor street children of Tokyo, promising five hundred yen towards bringing it about. The management of the paper then sought out the president of the Tokyo W. C. T. U., Mrs. Chise Ushioda, and asked her to take the affair in hand, which she agreed to do.

As soon as the proposed treat became noised about, contributions of money began to pour in from all sides, until nearly a thousand yen ($500), besides many presents, had been received. One generous merchant gave one thousand pounds of sugar, done up in pound sacks, a pound for each child, and it took eight Japanese carts to convey the sugar to the place of entertainment.

Each section of the city was asked to search out at least ten of its most needy street children, to furnish one adult as overseer, and to bring the children, on the day mentioned, to the Kabuki theater, located near the heart of the city. The owner of this theater had very generously offered the use of his building, free of cost, for the three days necessary to prepare for and give the entertainment, and all of the servants and assistants gave their services.

January 3 dawned bright and sunshiny. Promptly at eight o'clock in the morning the doors of the theater were opened to receive the arriving guests. The children had undoubtedly dressed in their best, but it was evident to the looker-on that they were the children of the poor. By 9:30 o'clock a thousand children had gathered, with one hundred and thirty helpers, consisting of eleven white-gowned, white-capped nurses from the Nurses' Training Hospital, three well-known physicians, many prominent temperance and Christian workers, and representatives from the "Jiji Shimpo." I was one of the three invited foreign guests.

Without and within, the theater had been most gayly and attractively decorated in honor of the occasion. On the main floor, which had been covered with red woolen blankets, the children were seated in double rows, and between these rows was a line of long, narrow tables, upon which were two rows of what appeared to be tiers of boxes with small teacups fastened on the top. At one side of the room, resplendent in black gold-braided uniforms, the members of a Japanese brass band had taken their positions, and throughout the day they furnished excellent music. The galleries were well filled with Japanese friends who were interested in the children's treat.

The exercises opened with a hearty welcome speech from Mrs. Ushioda, general manager, after which the chorister, Mr. Akabashi, led the children in singing the national song, "Kimi Ga Yo," and considering the untrained voices, the song was sung remarkably well. Mr. Yoshida, representing the "Jiji Shimpo," then told the children to "see all they could, eat all they could, and enjoy themselves." The president of the National Temperance League was introduced and gave a short talk on temperance and the care of the body. He closed his remarks by telling the children that while they were the recipients of all these pleasant things now, they should remember that when older they ought to be the givers to those similarly situated.

A Japanese song, prepared especially for the occasion, was enthusiastically sung, then followed an interesting program, rendered by specialists and consisting of remarkable top spinning, vocal imitations of birds and animals, and historical tableaux, wherein living pictures, representing Japanese and Chinese soldiers, officers, captives and fugitives, ancient gods and different wild animals, were made up, in full view of the audience, and acted out upon the stage. There were quaint Korean dwarfs, handsomely dressed; an exciting and most amusing Formosan dance, by four strangely costumed figures, and a remarkable sleight-of-hand performance with silken flags, handkerchiefs, strings, rings and pigeons. The most marvelous feats were performed by Chinese jugglers and acrobats. There was Japanese posturing by a Japanese dwarf in schoolgirl attire, Japanese story-telling, and music by the band, among whose selections we recognized "Marching Through Georgia" and a well-known rag-time composition.

JAPANESE LADDIE.

A pause was made in the program in order to serve luncheon, and Mrs. Ushioda, like the general she proved herself to be, took her position at the front of the stage, surveyed the field over, and began issuing orders to those at her right and left. Immediately her captains, lieutenants and privates were seen moving here and there among the children distributing gifts. Every dark-eyed little maiden was presented with a beautiful red "kanzashi" (artificial flower for the hair), and soon each bobbing little black head was properly bedecked. The boys were given tiny national flags, which they pinned on their kimona fronts.

CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT, KABUKI THEATER.

The decorating process over, fifty or more waiters served tray after tray of "zoni," a fish or fowl soup in which were three kinds of vegetables and two pieces of mochi, rice cake. This mochi is a favorite food, served in every Japanese home on New Year's. Then came the opening of the boxes on the tables. The first row was full of well-cooked rice, the second contained an assortment of vegetables, fish, eggs, pickled lotus root, ginger root and other dainties. Then came a box of Japanese cakes. Underneath all was a Japanese towel and a dark blue furoshiki, a large colored handkerchief used for wrapping up parcels. Each child was also given two pairs of chop-sticks, one set for the zoni, the other for the bento (luncheon).

It is doubtful if many of the participants had ever before been given an opportunity to fill themselves with goodies, and how they did go at it! In their hands those funny, and to us unmanageable, chop-sticks seemed imbued with life. One thousand children poked rice down their little throats at a two-forty gait, and all at once. Try sometime to use chop-sticks yoursef, and see how little food you will get into your mouth. A cup of hot tea completed the repast, and with the greatest satisfaction the youngsters at last sat back on their heels and enjoyed the remainder of the program.

At the close of the exercises, which lasted until nearly three o'clock in the afternoon, the waiters again entered the room. This time each one was loaded with large white packages and a bunch of good-sized flags, which were soon distributed among the children. In each bundle were twelve gifts, among them a pound of sugar (considered a luxury), a picture postcard, a roll of Japanese writing paper, a pencil, and a ticket for a year's free treatment from a physician in case of illness.

As each child passed out of the door to go home, carrying a large package of good things, an expression of genuine content was on its bright and shining little face. There was no doubt that the New Year's treat had been a grand success and was something to be remembered with pleasure for many a long day to come. It was hard to tell which had enjoyed it the more, the children themselves or those who had spent so much time and labor in their behalf.

No. 30 Tsukiji, Tokyo, Japan.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1.—Charade.

A boy's nickname my first,
His father's second was he.
If you look in the list of our presidents,
The name of my whole you'll see.

E. W. B. F.

2.—*Deeply-Hidden Flowers.

(The name of each flower is reversed before hiding.)

1. Get him a slab to lay across the stream.
2. Old dog Tray snaps at every one.
3. The sore from a burn is painful.
4. Her ways I admire.
5. He frets a good deal.

3.—Transposition.

I should be utilized for good,
For when I'm gone 'tis understood
Return I would not if I could.

Transposed, a little thing I'd be,
So small the eye can scarcely see,
Yet value always is in me.

Transpose again and you may find
Me in the prints of every kind,
In readings that improve the mind.

Transpose again ('twill be the last),
The timid ones will stand aghast
When I send forth my final blast.

UNCLE TOM.

4.—*A Grove of Trees.

1. A tree that is neat.
2. The tree that is bright.
3. The tree that is not alone.
4. The tree that cries.
5. The tree that sighs.
6. The tree that is always upright.
7. The tree that quakes.
8. The tree that is pale.

5.—Decapitations.

1. Behead a shepherd's staff, and leave a bird.
2. Behead a bird, and leave to impel through the water.
3. Behead to impel through the water, and leave to separate.
4. Behead to separate, and leave a fragment.
5. Behead a fragment, and leave one form of an auxiliary verb.
6. Behead one form of an auxiliary verb, and leave to hesitate.
7. Behead to hesitate, and leave something elevated.
8. Behead something elevated, and leave a number.
9. Behead a number, and leave equal.

C. A. A.

Answers of Puzzles of March 26th.

1.—Leopard (Lion, Elephant, Owl, Pig, Ape, Rabbit, Dog.)

2.—Organ-grinder.

3.—(Answer will be given later.)

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND. The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON. NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, April 9, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Hope Immortal.

"I HAVE seen the Lord." These were Mary Magdala's thrilling words of greeting to the heart-broken apostles gathered together in heaviness, mourning the death of Him who was to have redeemed Israel. Can you not realize the triumphant blast of courage such news was to those despairing men? The apostles had seen the Master, who spake as man never spake before—whom they had loved and believed in and given up all to follow—torn from them and crucified, dead and buried. He had left no supports for them to lean upon, but had seemingly deserted them. All their high hopes and convictions were shattered by the death of the man who had gone from them. It was then that Mary had come to them with the announcement that Jesus had sent by her: "Go to my brethren, and say to them, I am ascended to my Father and your Father and my God and your God."

This sublime word brought deliverance and joy; they had not trusted in vain; their Master was the Christ, the Savior of men. The deep mysteries of His mission, the grandeur of His work began to dawn upon them with a power and significance past telling. The surety of an immortal future life, of supreme blessing, burst upon their dazzled vision—the thrill and joy of this truth which has ever since run down through the ages until even to us comes the revelation of eternal security.

The divine truth, uttered so long ago, has lost none of its significance, but comes with its olden power to the universal heart of men, and with unshaken faith we exultingly cry, "The Lord has indeed risen!" The victory through suffering was a transcendent truth embalmed in men's souls, and our hearts are still with an awesome reverence for such wonderful promise.

Earth responds to this same glad faith. A magic touch has thrilled her, too, and the spring air is full of blossoming heart-throbs. Listening you can feel the new quiver of life as it awakens from winter's sleep. We respond to the gladness that the birds are voicing in their rapturous home-coming. Every twig and leaf impress us with this new beauty of restoration, and with it comes the joyful rush of soul-life. So death to winter gives spring; so death to man makes alive.

The Bible in the School a Necessity.

WE rejoice in every wise and aggressive effort to secure for the Bible a larger place in our public schools. Some strong words advocating the daily reading of selected portions of the Bible were uttered at the recent National Convention of the Religious Education Association, and now the Pastors' Union of the Congregational church of Chicago is making strenuous efforts to induce the school board to take up this important matter.

The reasons advanced for the general introduction of the Bible in the school impress us as eminently wise and statesmanlike. The actual moral status and the higher needs of our people are kept constantly in mind, and it is pointed out how admirably the Bible is fitted to meet these needs.

Thus it is urged that it is the duty of the state to foster and conserve a high type of moral character in its citizens. Having undertaken the task of education once for all, the state cannot stop short with providing elementary mental training, but must complete its task by making provisions for the culture of conscience and the moral nature—a culture of which many of our school children obviously stand in need. And where in all the world can we find a text book on morals that is at all comparable with the Bible in the clearness of its statements, the pertinency of its commands, the loftiness of its motives and tenderness of appeal? There is not a phase of moral obligation involved in good citizenship that is not adequately treated in the sacred volume.

Do we seek for an accurate definition and the highest sanction of law? We find them in the majestic deliverance of the Old Testament, where Sinai looms before us robed in the imperial splendor of the revealed will of God. Do we look for expressions of reverence that measure up to the best in man's spiritual nature, reverence toward God and reverence for ideals? The Bible fairly teems with object lessons in this particular. If for no other reasons, the Bible should be in our schools to teach our notoriously irreverent generation the lost art of worship, appreciating what is divine at its true worth. The icy hand of disesteem has been laid upon pastor, teacher and parent, and who now feels the old-time awe and humility in the presence of God?

We need the Bible in the school to counteract the sharply accentuated individualism of the day. Even young people are apt to have exaggerated notions of their self-importance. They seem to think the world revolves about their own little selves, and many things tend directly to foster egotism in Young America. Now, the true center of life is not in ourselves but in God and a redeemed society, and the children need to be enjoined in ringing tones, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness;" "He that loseth his life shall save it." We need the Bible in the school to dispel the growing fascination of material things. What amounts almost to a hypnotic spell, seems to rest upon our people, leading them to place things above persons, money above character, matter above spirit, and to stake their all on the fleeting present. The eye is fascinated by mere bigness, the imagination is dazzled by long columns of figures, and the heart is drunken with prosperity. How necessary, then, to place over against this worship of what is of the earth, earthy, the glorious revelation of the spiritual realm, radiant with celestial light, and enriched with the enduring treasures of love and truth. Before the burning eloquence of the prophets and the peerless wisdom of the Sermon on the Mount, the proudest fortunes of earth melt away as so much dross.

But it is objected by those who themselves hold the Bible in high esteem, that many teachers in our schools are not believers, and, therefore, are not in a fit frame of mind and heart to read the Bible to others. In that case if one must go, it should not be the Bible. There are states, notably Arizona, which require by law that only the teacher who is a believer in God can hold a certificate. That teacher is to be pitied who cannot, in a reverent voice, read the Bible, we do not say as a manual of devotion, but as a text-book of morals. The objection that all Bible instruction should be left to parents in the home, has often been advanced, but what if a large percentage of parents have neither the time nor aptitude to give the Bible the place it deserves? Here the state must exercise a more far-reaching wisdom and not leave to the chance purpose of the individual what is so important to society.

By far the most serious objection to the reading of the Bible in the school is that it is apt to cause needless friction between the Catholic and the Protestant churches, the latter preferring the authorized or revised version and the former the Douay version. We doubt seriously if in most communities, and apart from here and there a ward of a great city, even a ripple of hard feelings would arise; and for the rest, when a carefully prepared book of selections from the Bible is used, no trouble need be anticipated. In fact, more than once, it has come to pass that Catholic bishops and Protestant leaders have heartily united in endorsing certain books of selections from the Bible.

Unclaimed Influence.

"I AM a saloonkeeper and you are a saloonkeeper. In fact, we are all saloonkeepers, except the women. They are not because they cannot vote. If we send men to Congress who favor the whisky element there, we favor the same by so doing," so says the Rev. Dr. Chas. Crane, pastor of the People's Temple, Boston.

It is very generous of Dr. Crane to thus exonerate women from all complicity in this national sin, but we cannot lay the flattering unction unreservedly to our souls. There are other methods of influencing public opinion than by the ballot, and the woman who does not throw against the saloon all the influence she possesses, cannot wash her hands in innocency merely because she has never cast a ballot in favor of the liquor candidate. The presumption is that the only reason why she has not done so is because she has not had the power. Women, and women only, can banish the social wine-glass and the punch-bowl from the private table. Mothers better than any one else, can train their children in the principles of total abstinence and prohibition. These two things done, the liquor traffic is under mined.

Even in the matter of voting, disfranchised women are not entirely without responsibility. While there is absurdity in the assertion sometimes made by the opponents of woman's suffrage, that every woman controls one vote, myriads of women do greatly influence the vote of one or more men. Such women are just as responsible for their influence as are the men for the way in which they cast the ballot. But this is not all: most of us could have much more influence than we actually do possess, and for the influence which we might have, but which, through our own indifference or negligence, we fail to acquire, we shall one day be called to account. No one has the right to be a cipher on the wrong side of the decimal point. It is quite as much a duty to try to gain influence as it is to use rightly the influence we already possess. The wife, or mother, or sister, or daughter who one day sees that she might have won the power which could have saved her dear one from eternal ruin, will grieve with a sorrow as bitter and despairing as she who, possessing the necessary influence, did not wield it.

What, indeed, is there to choose between the two? Influence and power are not independent of our own choice, but they bear a steady proportion to our worthiness and effort. Joan of Arc demanded, with a persistence which could not be denied, that she, an unlettered peasant girl of seventeen, be made general of the armies of France. Could anyone have blamed her if she had shrunk back and refrained from making so preposterous a demand? Possibly not; yet afterward, in the light of eternity, if she had seen that it had been appointed her to save her country from a foreign yoke, and that, failing to demand the power which was rightfully hers, she had failed of her life work, could any excuses have soothed the bitterness of her remorse? The "worm that dieth not," "the fire that is not quenched," is the anguish of looking back upon noble deeds and great achievements, to accomplish which we were born into the world and which we left undone.

Women in general cannot vote, hence they are not responsible, as are men, for the licensed liquor traffic, but every woman should ask herself if it is not her duty to seek to obtain the ballot that she may use it against this destroyer of home; if failing thus to seek to extend her power she does not become as guilty as those who, having the power, use it in the unrighteous cause.

President Roosevelt's Lay Sermon.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, off on his fourteen-thousand mile continental trip, made his first stopping place Chicago, on Thursday of last week.

"This country has two symbols," said Mayor Harrison, at the great meeting in the Auditorium. "One is the President, the other the Flag."

Happily for the country, President Roosevelt adds to his functions as the chief executive of the nation, the sincere and majestic impulses of a great preacher of personal as well as civic righteousness.

The more formal address at the Auditorium was on the Monroe Doctrine, in which he spoke as one conscious of having not the ear of the nation, but of the civilized world. But his other two addresses—lay-sermons, shall we call them?—were given before immense academic audiences—one at the Northwestern University of Evanston, the other at the University of Chicago.

On both these occasions it was evident how profoundly moved the President was at sight of such eager throngs of young men and young women. The intensity of his moral earnestness found sympathetic and impassioned utterance. Some things which he said were indeed commonplace, but all the more vitally important because of their common, their universal pertinence and need.

The elemental virtues, which go to make what is called character, were insisted upon as, after all, the supreme things—honesty, purity, courage, common sense, uprightness, square dealing, putting a good conscience into every action. The President pleaded earnestly for the "sound mind in the sound body." Moral sanity is as necessary as mental sanity, and both have need of the physical nature at its very best—a body kept at the top of its all-round wholesomeness.

As all the world knows, Mr. Roosevelt likes the kinds of exercise, the masterful self-discipline, which keep the eye clear, the color in the cheek, the pulse forceful and steady; the total personality in tone for its highest being, its best work.

"It is a great thing to have a safe and a strong body," he declared; "it is a better thing to have a sane, a strong and a vigorous mind; but best of all is it to have that which is made up partly of both and partly made of something higher and better—character.

"Physical strength? Yes. Mental strength? Yes, even more than physical. But, above all, let us strive to develop that for the lack of which neither bodily prowess nor mental capacity can atone, the quality of the soul, of the heart, the qualities of strength, of courage, of sweetness, which we group together when we say that a man or woman has character."

How infinitely repugnant to such an ideal of life are the influences which the saloon represents.

Capital and Labor.

THE two hands are a picture of the contending forces of capital and labor. The left less skilled, more choice, served often by its fellows, and decked with rings; the right—forceful, ingenious, busy, unadorned.

Only by bringing them together can harmony be had and a full day's toil accomplished. If they contend, they work each other's ruin; if they combine they reach each one its utmost. * * * Fighting each other, they will but mar and finally destroy the social fabric; and the left hand of Capital will first give way under the pitiless blows of Labor's strong right hand."—Frances E. Willard.

Personal Mention.

Rev. Frances E. Townsley has finished her work for the Covenant Baptist church of Englewood, Chicago, and has returned to her home in Vassar, Mich.

One of Iowa's state workers, Mrs. Satella Penman, called on The Union Signal editors last week as she passed through Chicago en route to her home after an extended visit in the south. Mrs. Penman gave good reports of the work in Georgia and other states, as she saw it during her visit.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Hobbs, of Chicago, celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage, March 20, at their pleasant home on La Salle avenue. An informal reception was held in the afternoon and evening and the house was thronged with the friends who called during these hours. Congratulations, good wishes for the future, and many flowers were the tributes offered to this worthy couple. The W. C. T. U. has had no warmer friends and co-workers in all the years of its existence than Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs. The Union Signal voices the congratulations of many well-wishers who were not priviliged to present them in person.

W. C. T. U. Storiette.

IT was a tired, but tireless National organizer who entered a little town in western Kansas one night about a year ago, and began a series of meetings where the most of the men knew not the Joseph of prohibition.

The only available place in town for the meetings was a large barnlike hall, but the crowds filled it, and the truth of temperance was brought home nightly to the people.

It was feared by the element that defied the laws of the state and outraged the rights of the people, that too much influence was being brought to bear upon the town. and a crowd of the careless attempted to stop the speaking by arranging a dance in the hall to shut out the temperance lecturer. Then out of the crowd to the speaker's side stepped a "great, splendid, big" lawyer, wrought up to the highest pitch of indignation at the insulting assault. A tower of strength he was to the organizer, who went on with her work, and left a vigorous union as the result of her efforts.

Now comes the sequel. This is what the faithful worker will find when she returns: Her big lawyer elected county attorney, and the town free from the liquor traffic. Soon after taking his office this noble champion gave the liquor dealers and gamblers notice to stop business or get out of the town. He called witnesses and took their evidence for possible use. One of the joint-keepers went to Oklahoma; one went still further west; one converted his "place" into a restaurant, and published a card saying he had quit the business and was going to keep a respectable house.

Our Goliath also gave the druggists to understand that they, too, were included in the notice. Before he began his crusade he had said to his wife:

"I'll do it, but it means a loss to me of more than my salary will amount to," to which the brave little soul had replied:

"Well, it will be worth more than that to the community, and I think we shal be able to live."

"I did not fear any loss to him, even in a financial way," she said to our organizer, "because I knew he could do it successfully, and you know the old adage, 'Nothing succeeds like success.' But while I predicted that temperance would be the popular thing as soon as the whisky business was stopped, even I am surprised at the extent of it."

She might have added that her husband is the most popular man in the county since the saloons are closed, and the most surprised man, as well, at the general approval his action has aroused.

One white-ribboner said to the now rejoicing organizer:

"How I wish our experience might be given to every county attorney in Kansas who is making no effort to enforce the law because of supposed public sentiment in favor of saloons. There is a lot more public sentiment against this business than some men think. I believe decency is popular in these United States, and the man, anywhere, who is manly enough to stand for it will be a popular leader, whether he sits in the President's chair or acts as city marshal in some obscure village."

There are other things that will make that temperance lecturer glad when she returns. She will find a union of over fifty members, which has raised nearly $140 in its short life. The little wife of the big county attorney is the president of the county W. C. T. U., and the women have never ceased to thank God for the share the National organizer had in the redemption of the little town in western Kansas from the accursed saloon. Happy organizer? Ask Mrs. Unruh.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

"Give thanks for the Easter gladness
With humble and grateful hearts;
Forgotten are doubt and sadness,
And the shadow of death departs."

***

Human help in our need, human forgiveness in our wrong-doing, human love in our loneliness—these are the sacraments through which, at their sweetest and purest, we feel a divine help and forgiveness and love flowing into our souls.—G. S. Merriam.

***

"Go ring the blessed Easter bells,
Till every tongue His triumph tells,
Till every knee in homage bending
Shall welcome him in power descending,
While love's eternal anthem swells."

***

Oh, there is a fine passion in feeling the heart of humanity beat, and in setting your heart to its music, which will lift you above a diseased self-brooding in a glorious way, and link your whole life in healthy union to God through union with man. —Stopford A. Brooke.

***

"Behold the stone is rolled away.
He is not here, the angels say.
The crucified has burst His prison;
The Christ is risen! risen! risen!
Come see the place where Jesus lay."

***

Love is the everlasting worker of miracles. When all seems hopeless, and the soul is descending upon the road that has no turning, let it be awakened to love, and immediately all the forces of the spiritual world converge upon it to lift it toward God. Love is the savior, love is the perpetual wonder of life.—Edward Howard Griggs.

***

"If sorrows come, they also go;
If joys must fly, they reappear.
Still gladsome bells swing to and fro—
Life and death, human breath
Joy and pain, naught in vain,
For Christ is risen! Heaven is near!"

***

I can not always see the way that leads
To heights above;
I sometimes quite forget He leads me on
With hand of love;
But yet I know the path must lead me to
Immanuel's land,
And when I reach life's summit I shall know
And undertsand.

***

Open the door, let in the sun;
He hath a smile for every one;
He hath made of the raindrops gold and gems,
He may change our tears to diadems—
Open the door!

Open the door of the soul; let in
Strong, pure thoughts which will banish sin;
They will grow and bloom with a grace divine,
And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the vine—
Open the door!

—British Weekly.

***

"Thy will be done." For instance, when you wish, and by every means endeavor, to be well, and yet remain ill, then say, "Thy will be done." When you undertake something, and your undertaking does not succeed, say, "Thy will be done." When you do good to others, and they repay you with evil say, "Thy will be done." Or when you would like to sleep and are overtaken by sleeplessness, say, "Thy will be done." In general, do not become irritated when anything is not done in accordance with your will, but learn to submit in everything to the will of the Heavenly Father.

The Lord calls for our burdens, would not have us wrestle with them ourselves, but roll them over on Him. Now, the desires that are breathed forth in prayer are, as it were, the very unloading of the heart; each request that goes forth carries out somewhat of the burden with it, and lays it on God. Tell Him what are your desires, and leave them there with Him, and so you are sure to be rid of all further disquieting care of them.—Robert Leighton.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS:—When you read these "Notes" you may think of four of the National officers at National Headquarters. Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon will be here for several weeks, and we will be busily engaged in trying to solve some of the important problems which come to us constantly. Our two chief officers have been on a speaking campaign in Indiana, with Mrs. Brand, the state corresponding secretary, as their constant companion and helper. Mrs. Brand carried her typewriter with her, and we have had letters, typed out in depots and other unusual places.

I am wondering if all of you have noticed the two new leaflets by Mrs. Stevens, one concerning the dispensary, and the other testimony as to the value of prohibitory law. There was great need of information on both of these subjects, and it is to be hoped that the leaflets may be purchased in great quantities and scattered among the people, especially in those states where there is agitation on the dispensary and on prohibition.

A caller at Rest Cottage and National Headquarters a few days ago referred to my advocacy of printed programs for the unions, and asked this question, "Do you think it best for unions to spend so much money on their programs that it cripples their work in other directions?" In other words, she wanted to know if I thought it was best for unions to get out expensive programs. I showed her some inexpensive ones, and promised to advocate such in my "Notes." I have received some samples myself which awakened the query as to how the union could afford to spend so much on its program—large, elaborate, heavy paper, which must necessarily be expensive. The value of a program depends upon the helpfulness of its topics, and the fact that a printed program is worked out with care, made comprehensive and progressive, thus avoiding the desultoriness of union meetings where there is no course of study. These programs need not necessarily be printed. They can be run off on a copying pad, or written out on a typewriter, and if printed, can be simple and inexpensive and at the same time serve every purpose. THE UNION SIGNAL is now furnishing a weekly program for the benefit of the unions that have not yet arrived at the dignity of a printed program for the year.

For some time I have been intending to speak of institute work. New York says a symposium to occupy one afternoon is one of the best features ever introduced. "What can be done next to rid the world of the drink and tobacco habits?" was the subject of a symposium reported by Mrs. Frances Graham. The little word "next" was, of course, the pivotal point of all of the discussion. This topic was divided as follows. By the Churches; By the Schools; By Young People's Societies; By Business Men; By Colleges; By Sunday schools; By the Press; By the Medical Profession; By Women; By Mothers; By Reform Organizations. Each of these was presented in a ten-minutes speech by representative men or women, as for instance, the Schools were represented by the superintendent of the public schools. The topic impressed me as a very practical one, far superior to the old plan of reports, and well calculated to bring new ideas to the workers. I quite agree with Mrs. Graham that the institute has "come to stay a spell."

By the time this meets your eye Evanston will have been honored by a visit from President Roosevelt as the guest of the Northwestern University, and the students and citizens will have heard him make an address on the college campus. In this connection I am glad to remember that the President has given orders that the women inspectors of New York shall not be dismissed, for the present, at least. The time has been too short to furnish a basis of judgment as to the value of their work. Neither are we disposed to agree that men could do the work just as well or better than women. Men could not so readily gain the confidence of strange and inexperienced women coming to these shores for the first time. Neither would they be so well fitted to advise them or take them in charge temporarily until their future course could be marked out. The National has expressed its mind to this effect to the secretary of the treasury, under whose jurisdiction the inspectors are.

Yours for success all along the line,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

With the Treasurer.

CONTRIBUTIONS for the Willard Memorial fund continue to come in very encouragingly. In many states the local unions send through the state treasurers, and until we hear from them we cannot form a correct idea of the amount contributed during the month.

Some of the state treasurers have already reported generous sums, notably New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Rhode Island, Montana, Kansas, Vermont, East Washington and Arkansas.

Since last report receipts are as follows, $2.00 except as noted:

OKLAHOMA: Stillwater.
INDIANA: Goshen.
VERMONT: Manchester.
MINNESOTA: Alexandria.
WISCONSIN: Ashland, Richland Center.
GEORGIA: La Grange, Columbus.
OHIO: Akron, Athens, Salesville, New Concord.
NEW YORK: Jamestown, Pawling, Grahamville, $1.60; Blodgett's Mills, Jacksonville, Elba, Orangeport.
MISSOURI: Burlington.
MICHIGAN: Detroit, Shelby, Martin.
EAST WASHINGTON: North Yakima, Everett.
ILLINOIS: Gibson City, Upper Alton.
CONNECTICUT: Essex, Winsted.
MAINE: Monmouth, Bingham, Hallowell, Westbrook, Bath, Bowdoinham, Popham Beach, Waldoboro.
MASSACHUSETTS: Florence, Vineyard Haven, Barrett.
SOUTH DAKOTA: Watertown, Brookings, Medas.
LOUISIANA: Morgan City.
PENNSYLVANIA: Lebanon, $1.
NORTH DAKOTA: Lisbon.
TEXAS: Melissa.
KANSAS: Lakin.

Miss Julia A. C. Harmon, of Glenville, N. Y., has sent $25 for a life membership in the National W. C. T. U. South Dakota and Arkansas No. 2 have sent in welcome dues.

HELEN M. BARKER

Superintendents.

Proportionate and Systematic Giving.

THIS department does not have the power to produce enthusiasm as do many others. It is simple and entirely without glamour depending on, "thus saith the Lord." But it is the very center of all, for its business is to provide a consecrated fund to carry on the work. A fund which will be ample for all Christian work, because divinely appointed, a fund which will be blessed because it "proves" the Lord.

So I can come to you with the plan of assured income, adequate to the occasion, and can ask every local union, every state which has not enlisted, to do so. It does away forever with that word which has closed so many doors to us, "no money." It is infinitely easy —compare it with the many devices which we have tried to raise money. Give it an earnest, prayerful trial and you can never want to go back to the old, uncertain, laborious ways which dishonor our Master and His word and His cause. Dr. Pierson says, "It has occurred to me that the Bible system of giving is the only perfect plan ever devised to meet all the demands of the church and that if it were adopted and followed in these days we should have ample funds for church support and church work." The system was of God, hence no failure.

It seems to me the very exigencies of the case, our great need of money, the fact that there is plenty, but not in our treasury should bring all of us to one infallible plan. I shall be happy to answer inquiries or to send literature.

ESTHER PUCH.

Selma, Ohio.

Peace And Arbitration.

Call to Commemorate the Fourth Anniversary of the Opening of the International Peace Congress.

MANY peace organizations and individuals interested in promulgating peace principles are intending to observe May 18, or the Sunday previous to that date, in commemoration of the opening of the International Peace Congress held at the Hague in 1899. As that congress resulted in the creation of our International Court of Arbitration, which has already settled some very old and complicated disputes, it is fitting to commemorate the date of its inception.

Will all superintendents of the Peace department of the W. C. T. U., or presidents of local unions, please, if practicable, arrange for an appropriate public meeting in the interests of Peace and Arbitration on either May 17 or 18, as may be most convenient? I especially hope that those unions which did not observe Peace Day by public meetings last December will observe this anniversay.

The following is a suggestive program which may be changed at discretion:

Hymn: "Angel of Peace." White Ribbon Hymnal.
Bible Lesson and Prayer.
Song: "The Peace Jubilee."
Recitation: "Home and War." Voices of Peace.
Address: "War; Its Causes and Remedies." (Fifteen minutes.)
Read the Czar's Rescript. Gleanings.
Song: "The Coming Triumph." Voices of Peace.
Recitation: "Life's Heroes." Voices of Peace.
Remarks or short talks. Voices of Peace.
Song: "A Peace Song." Voices of Peace.

The poems and "Voices of Peace," Czar's Rescript, Gleanings, etc., can be obtained of me at the Peace department office, Winthrop Center, Maine.

HANNAH J. BAILEY.

World's Fair Fountain.

THE W. C. T. U. of the Louisiana Purchase states will place upon the World's Fair grounds a bronze ice water fountain, modeled by a woman and costing $3,000. This is a large sum to pay, but the World's Fair management will accept nothing but the best, and the fountain will be permanent.

We have talked much about the cup of cold water; here is an opportunity to literally give this boon to the weak at a time of great temptation.

A handkerchief and stock sale will be held in St. Louis May 15, for the benefit of the fountain fund. Donations of these articles will be thankfully received if sent to 4119 Westminster place.

The World's Fair will be dedicated April 30, May 1 and 2, with elaborate ceremonies. We will dedicate the ground for the fountain at the same time, and we invite W. C. T. U. women to attend. Railroads will make cheap rates and the trip will be well worth the money and time expended. Four models for the fountain will be on exhibition at this time, and a choice will be made by our committee and the World's Fair gentlemen.

MRS. E. B. INGALLS,
National W. C. T. U. Commissioner to World's Fair.
4119 Westminister Place, St. Louis., Mo.

Smiles,

Good Cheer and Good Food Go Together.

Improper feeding is the source of most human ails. Sick people don't laugh much. It is the healthy and strong who see the sunny side of everything. Pure, scientific food will correct most ailments and bring laughter and good cheer in place of sickness and gloom.

The wife of a physician of Dayton, O., says:—"Before I had finished the first package of Grape-Nuts, which I got at the urgent request of a friend of mine several months ago, I was astonished to find I was less nervous over small matters and worried less over large ones, laughed more readily and was at all times more calm and contented than I had ever been in my life. I found also that the hollow places in my neck and shoulders were filling out and that astonished me as I had always been very thin, as women with starved nerves are apt to be.

"After a time I discontinued the use of Grape-Nuts for two months and found the old symptoms return at once. I went back to the use of the food and again feel well and strong. I can increase my weight at will from five to ten pounds a month by using more or less of the food. Before I was married I was for five years a trained nurse and I have never in all my experience seen anything to act as quickly and favorably as this scientific food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Convention Calendar.

The twenty-first annual convention of Southern California W. C. T. U. will be held in San Diego May 18-22, 1903.

Mrs. Emma Cash, Pres.
Mrs. L. M. Young, Cor. Sec.

The twenty-first annual convention of Texas W. C. T. U. will meet in Fort Worth May 7-10. The executive committee meets May 6 and 11. Mrs. Weed and Miss Mosher are the visiting speakers. Mrs. Sweeney, Mrs. Zehner and Mrs. Curtis, state speakers, will be present.

Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard, Pres.
Mrs. Minnie M. Kirtland, Cor. Sec.

The Breakfast Food Family.

JOHN SPRATT will eat no fat,
Nor will he touch the lean,
He scorns to eat of any meat:
He lives upon Foodine.

But Mrs. Spratt will none of that,
Foodine she cannot eat.
Her special wish is for a dish
Of Expurgated Wheat.

To William Spratt that food is flat,
On which his mater dotes.
His favorite feed—his special need,
Is Eta Heapa Oats.

But Sister Lil can't see how Will
Can touch such tasteless food.
As breakfast fare it can't compare
She says, with Shredded Wood.

Now, none of these Leander please,
He feeds upon Bath Mitts;
While Sister Jane improves her brain
With Cero-Grapo-Grits.

Lycurgus votes for Father's Oats;
Proggine appeals to May;
The junior John subsists upon
Uneeda Bayla Hay.

Corrected Wheat for little Pete;
Flaked Pine for Dot; while "Bub,"
The infant Spratt, is waxing fat
On Battle Creek Near-Grub.

—Chicago Tribune.

Prizes to Cooks.

$7,500.00 in Cash to be Distributed.

Between now and July 1st, family cooks, whether employes or the mistress of the household, will be following the plain laid down for improvement in cooks in a contest for 735 cash prizes ranging from $200.00 to $5.00 offered by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.

The winners must show improvement in general cookery as clearly stated in the rules for the test.

No one has to buy or pay anything whatever. It is simply an earnest effort on the part of Mr. Post to stimulate the household cook to more careful and skillful cookery.

To have light, sweet bread and cakes instead of heavy, sour and indegistible things. To have no more greasy, burned or dried-out meats. To have properly made coffee, Postum and tea. To have delicate and digestible, toothsome desserts and a table, clean, tasty and a pleasure to look upon.

And so $7,500.00 in actual money will be spent to encourage the cooks of the country to better effort. And you housekeepers, please forever abandon the term "hired girl." Teach your cook the dignity of her profession, call her the cook.

If her duties include other service, well and good, but don't detract from her professional title by calling her the "hired girl." That term don't fit a good cook. A certificate bearing the large seal of the Postum Co., Ltd., will go to each of the 735 winners in this contest. These certificates or diplomas will be as valuable to the holders as a doctor's sheepskin is to him.

A postal card to the Cookery Dept., No. 482, of the big pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich., will bring a sheet of plainly printed rules for the contest.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A

India.

BY the invitation of the president and the executive committee the Bengal division of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held a social meeting on Friday, February 6, thus opening the eighth annual convention. A pleasant evening was spent. One of the visitors, having lately come from Canada, told of the work done there by the W. C. T. U. The president gave a talk on "The Union and Its Work." In the intervals music, both vocal and instrumental, was given.

On Saturday, the 7th, a Bengali session was held; two addresses, a recitation, hymns and prayers being the program. Monday and Tuesday were given to business. Each day the session was opened with devotional exercises, the noontide hour also being remembered.

After the opening address by the president the reports—secretary's, treasurer's and departmental—were given. These showed work had been kept on in spite of difficulties.

Last year the Bengal division had been asked to raise Rs 750 toward the expenses of the "Willard Memorial Home," to be opened in Poonah; the treasurer reported having realized Rs 452-14-6, leaving Rs 297-1-6 still to be collected.

Monday afternoon the Rev. A. E. Summers spoke of the work of the "Society for Protection of Children." His address will be published in the "White Ribbon."

Tuesday morning a vice president gave a resumé of temperance work done during the past year. This showed improvement had been made all along the line. The number of doctors pledged against the use of alcohol has greatly increased and more interest is being taken generally in temperance. A splendid paper was read on "Heredity" by a lady doctor. By unanimous vote it will be published in the report of the society shortly to be brought out.

The resolutions passed included thanks to all who had helped in preparing for the meetings. A warm welcome to Mrs. Brockway and Miss Billing on their return from the home land. Regret at the loss sustained in the death of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who had been a sympathetic friend of the temperance cause. Thanks to God for His blessing on the work of the past year. Thankfulness for the recent temperance legislation in Great Britain; for the growth of the prohibition movement in the United States. Congratulations to Australia for granting the franchise to women as far as the commonwealth parliament is concerned. Regret that the out-still system is working such havoc in Assam among the coolies, and protests against the revenue being increased by this means. Congratulations to Rev. A. S. Summers on the good already done by his society, which is the outcome of the work of former members of the W. C. T. U.

An interesting temperance meeting closed our annual convention. It was held in the Y. M. C. A. new hall, which was well filled. Mr. Maurice Gregory and Mr. Goodwin gave addresses. Representatives of thirteen different temperance societies were present and gave two-minute speeches. The musical part of the meeting showed great pains had been taken on the part of Mrs. Bushnell, and the collection taken amounts to Rs 50.

Convention Reporter.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Members of the Newburgh, N. Y., union held a fair which netted them over $400.

The W. C. T. U. of Kansas is overwhelming Gov. Bailey with petitions, asking that the battleship "Kansas" be christened with water instead of wine.

Marshalltown, Iowa, and Wheeling, W. Va., made elaborate preparations for the observance of Memorial Day. Good programs and much interest marked the occasions.

Milwaukee county, Wis., has adopted the plan of School Savings Banks. Lawrence county, Pa., is energetically planning for a Sabbath Observance conference.

County Institutes are being held all over Illinois. The state president is attending many of them. Unorganized counties are being organized and the work is being pushed.

A protest against the election of a liquor dealer to the presidency of the Chamber of Commerce of Denver, was sent to that body by the Colorado Eighth District, W. C. T. U.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of East Stroudsburg, Pa., directed the secretary to notify all dealers of the town who sell on Sunday to cease doing so or stand prosecution.

The Delaware county, Pa., W. C. T. U. unanimously passed resolutions denouncing the Phillips' racing bill, and appealed to the legislature and the governor not to permit it to become a law.

Mrs. J. K. Barney was greeted with large audiences at her recent meetings in Syracuse, N. Y. "Around the world with the white-ribbon" is one of her popular addresses, and was enjoyed there.

At a meeting of the Saginaw, Mich., union, Miss Lucy K. Cole, special teacher of music in the public schools, spoke on the subject of "Intemperance among children." The annual report of the Flower Mission department showed over $70 expended in that line of work.

The Tennessee No. 2 union held a successful convention at Memphis. Four of the seven unions in the state were represented. Mrs. Lucy Thurman was present, and gave several helpful addresses. Dues have been sent in for 120 members.

The W. C. T. U. members at Milo, O., visited the saloon of a man named Whitman in order to qualify themselves as witnesses, in prosecutions against him for keeping open on Sundays. Mrs. Alice Manter, president of the union, was the first witness called. This is the only saloon in Milo.

Prohibition Rally Day was observed by the union at Gay Head, Mass., assisted by the L. T. L. The meeting was held in a school room, which was decorated with flags and evergreen. The picture of Neal Dow was made prominent and draped with silk bunting. A good program was well rendered.

Jacksonville, Fla., W. C. T. U. takes advantage of the winter visitors, and presses them into service. Mrs. Alice C. Brown, president of the state, addressed one of their meetings, and Mrs. Lydia J. Newcomb-Comings, former state Y secretary of Michigan, was also a guest and speaker.

The St. Paul Y of Wilmington, Del., gave a reception to Mrs. Ella M. Thacher and the new soldiers' union at Fort du Pont called the "Donnell Christian Temperance Union." The reception was given at W. C. T. U. headquarters. A program and address by Mrs. Thacher were much enjoyed. Four new members were gained for the St. Paul Y.

Lion Coffee
States
of America

The greatest nation in the world is the greatest consumer of coffee.

Lion Coffee

is the standard beverage of every state and territory of the Union. It's pure—that's why.

Always in 1 lb. air-tight, sealed packages, insuring freshness and uniform quality.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS, 39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

If You Want To Be Sure You Are Right USE

EVERY HOME

should own the New Edition. Hundreds of the most eminent authorities agree that it is the most accurate and useful dictionary published.

It gives correct answers to questions concerning words, places, notable persons, fiction, etc.

The New Edition has 25,000 new words and phrases, 2364 pages, 5000 illustrations.

Let Us Send You Free

"A Test in Pronunciation" which affords a pleasant and instructive evening's entertainment.

Illustrated pamphlet also free.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

A Fight Against Odds

BY KATE ANDERSON

The thrilling anti-cigarette story which has been running through our columns as a serial, will shortly be issued in Book form, illustrated

Price, $1.00

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
Chicago

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

Westchester County W. C. T. U. celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in Yonkers, March 19 and 20. Many notable speakers were present and added their words to the general interest. The county was organized in 1878 by Mrs. S. A. McClees. The only officer elected at that meeting, present was Mrs. Emilie U. Burgess, who spoke of the growth and progress of the quarter of a century. Mrs. Boole gave three addresses during the meeting, and Mrs. M. J. Annable gave "Around the World Glimpses," illustrated by young ladies in costumes of the various countries. It was all in all an inspiring and interesting occasion.

Battle Creek, Mich., union held a Valentine social. Guests were given as a souvenir a red cardboard heart, tied with white ribbon, and inscribed with appropriate temperance sentiments.

The W. C. T. U. of Council Bluffs, Iowa, secured the arrest of a theatrical company of fifteen members who played there on Sunday night. This in pursuance of the union's decision to crusade against the Sunday theater.

Promoted.

"Forever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead."

The W. C. T. U. of Barnes, Pa., mourns the loss of a faithful member. Mrs. William Smiley entered the life beyond, March 14, 1903.

DR. SHOOP'S Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital.

THE month of March was one of activity at the Hospital. The private rooms are in great demand, far exceeding the supply; the service is well spoken of and the standard of excellence required by our efficient superintendent of her able corps of nurses is most satisfactory to the physicians in attendance as well as by the patients. A complaint rarely comes to the members of the Board, who spare no pains to give full satisfaction to the patrons of the hospital. We believe this to be the only way to bring steady and increasing prosperity to our institution.

The visiting committee noted with satisfaction the thrifty appearance of the linen closets at a recent date. This is the work of the nurses at odd moments, thus teaching them habits of economy and thrift which are indispensable to a well balanced woman, be she a nurse or home keeper. Recent donations from friends have made it possible to equip the beds freshly and in a most attractive manner; the soft, warm bedding and comfortable mattresses are a blessing to the many sufferers whose days of pain are much lightened thereby.

A new hospital is the hope of the near future. We believe it would be the greatest object lesson in the way of teaching practical temperance truths that could possibly exist, for is it not admitted by all temperance reformers that if the hospital theories of non-alcoholic medication had proved a failure, and in some of the struggles for existence that the institution has passed through, the brave women who have worked for it, had lost heart and given up, the whole temperance movement would have received a serious set-back? The clouds seem clearing away and if in the present year practical plans can be worked out the central hope of many a white-ribboner will be realized in a modern, up-to-date building where infinitely better results may be secured. The entertainments given recently have netted the hospital about three hundred dollars, which has been most acceptable in paying our bills and keeping our credit good.

Our Matron reports donations from unions of supplies that are always acceptable, and we thank our good sisters for their thoughtfulness. We trust that the unions will be planning ahead to help furnish our new rooms, if we are so fortunate as to have rooms to furnish.

Calsomining and a general spring cleaning have made pleasant our rooms and wards, and with our finely equipped operating room major operations are of common occurrence. The California women who so generously furnished this room would view with satisfaction the well cared for instruments and furniture were they permitted to do so. The gift has been one of great value to the work of the hospital.

As in the days of Nehemiah the work is great and the workers are few. The little we can do, let us not neglect to do, for cannot our God use all honest effort for the building up of His kingdom upon earth and in our hearts?

Yours for service,
MRS. MARGARET INGLEHART,
President.

Sunday School Lesson.

The Law of Love.

By JOHN F. COWAN, D. D.

Quarterly Temperance Lesson, April 19. Lesson Study: Rom. 13: 7-14. Golden Text: "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfillment of the law." Rom. 13: 10.

THE law spells love. The law is love in its business garb. God's "Thou shalt nots" are like the strap that imprisons baby in the baby carriage, the gate at the top of the stairs or porch steps that keeps baby from tumbling down, the rim around the table on baby's high-chair, that keeps the little plate from being pushed off, and the string that sometimes ties baby to the doorknob or table to keep him from straying, or the "walking-frame" that pens baby into four square feet of carpeted space. Love devised every one of these, just as much as love wrote the poem on the valentine or love bought the engagement ring.

Even a prohibition law is love, and the man who enforces it, even though he has to spill hundreds of dollars' worth of liquor in the gutters, and take men in irons to prison, is a lover, though you call him "Sheriff." His ways may not seem loverlike, always, to all men, but it is a loverlike deed to rescue a maiden from drowning even if you have to pull her hair; or to waken her when the house is on fire, even if you should have to slap her or pinch her.

If we can find out just what love would do under all circumstances, we shall see very clearly what we should do in this temperance work; for the "law of love" is always to do the loving thing, and do that only. Has love ever sat for her picture? Yes; Paul coaxed her to pose in all kinds of attitudes. Look over his pictures of love and you will find just the pose that answers your question: "What is it my duty to do in this temperance work?"

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." There are so many ways in which we may work ill to our neighbor. We may vote ill to him.. We may tolerate ill that will harm him, just as we tolerate thistles or smallpox germs that do him damage. We may work an ill example for our neighbor, or our neighbor's boy or girl. We may patronize papers or stores that work ill to our neighbor by their advertisements or their narcotic goods. We may withhold good from our neighbor, and thus work him evil, by not being positive and outspoken for temperance.

Do you love your neighbor? How about the man who was killed by the train? The coroner's verdict was, "Accidental death, due to drunkenness." Who sold him the liquor that put his brain out of action? Mike Sullivan. Who gave Mike Sullivan the right? The people. Did you, one of the people, withhold your consent? Then, God pity you! I have to say it—you helped kill your brother; you have not fulfilled the law. "Love worketh no ill."

On your street is a place called an "Exchange." The men who keep it grow rich; the men who patronize grow poor. If a steel company or a coal mine did that, men would be marching the streets carrying transparencies with the indignant protest: "Down with the robbers!" If the proprietor of that "Exchange" went to people's houses and took their clothes and left rags, and took away their beefsteak and white bread and left cornmeal mush and liver, he would be mobbed or shot. He is none the less a robber because the liquor he sells makes men bring their property to him.

When you walk down the street, do men say, "There is a man who is square against the saloon"? If they don't know that of you, how can you claim to love your brother? If you favor the use of public revenue from that robber, you are a receiver of stolen goods; you are not fulfilling the law.

Some people think they love their brother because they do not hate him. But I would rather have a man hate me than be utterly indifferent to me. He would not hate me unless he set some value on me; when he is indifferent, he holds me cheaper than old junk, for that is worth saving.

The law of love makes every man my neighbor. I will risk my life to put out a fire in my neighbor's house, or snatch my neighbor's child from under the horses' hoofs. To say that you are a neighbor, in Paul's sense of the word, is as strong an expression as to say you are a total abstainer, that you are a Prohibitionist, as strong as to wear the white ribbon, for these are involved in being a neighbor.

Now let me tell you some things that this law of love might prompt us all to do that would make this word "neighbor" a "terror to evil-doers:"

Suppose that every man and woman who claims to be for temperance should wear the white ribbon; what a magnificent, impressive declaration of neighborliness that would be. Suppose they should all agree to patronize no trader that dealt in liquor, narcotics, or sweat-shop goods, or no periodical that advertised them; what a powerful pressure that would bring to bear for righteousness. Suppose they should all give regularly for temperance work as they do for missions or charity, what new life might be injected into all temperance reform, and what strides forward the cause would take. Suppose that all the temperance voters should agree to vote for no candidate for public office, and insist that no man be appointed to a subordinate public place, who would come under the ban of the railroad companies and many large business firms in regard to the total abstinence from liquor;—what a galvanic shock that would be to rum-soaked politicians, and what a stimulus to clean young manhood.

Yet all this that has been suggested, is no more than the law of love requires of every mother's son and every mother's daughter of us. The trouble with this whole matter is that our love has not been working half the time; for when love bestirs herself the saloons must go.

Boston, Mass.

Would You

Blame Him?

The effect of coffee on brain workers is more injurious than on those who work with their hands, but still the hard physical worker is often seriously hurt with coffee.

A man from Mead, Wash., says: "Coffee drinking had a different effect on my wife than on me, it ruined her nervous system and put her in very bad condition that way. With me my nerves seemed to be all right but my stomach was disordered and I was suffering from dyspepsia from drinking coffee, so finally we concluded to begin using Postum instead of coffee.

"In a very few days the dizziness and headaches that she had suffered with more or less, disappeared, and her nerves kept getting better and my dyspepsia left; now I can eat anything. I have noticed that in hard work in the harvest field the days when I used coffee I was not near as strong and vigorous as when I used Postum.

"I have had many chances to prove, and have proved that Postum is far and away better for me than coffee, besides I am well now and while I was using coffee I was half sick." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Local Union.

THE editor of the Local Union page in THE UNION SIGNAL went visiting one day that she might get practical hints from a wide-awake union to pass on to all the other unions who are looking out for "something new." She was the guest of a union in Illinois. After the devotional service, which consisted of a short psalm, read responsively, the singing of "Nearer my God to Thee," found on page 123 of the White Ribbon Hymnal, a brief prayer and the singing of "There is a Land of Pure Delight," page 150 of the White Ribbon Hymnal, the meeting was open for business.

The recording secretary called the roll, to which the members responded with facts "About Women," found in recent copies of THE UNION SIGNAL. She then read a concise report of the last meeting, which was accepted without correction. Several important communications were presented by the corresponding secretary, and were quickly acted upon, with no appearance of haste and yet with much expedition, owing to the business-like way in which the matters were taken up. The members seemed to realize that they and not the president were responsible for the carrying on of the work of the union, so there was no hesitation in motions or remarks.

After all unfinished and new business as disposed of, the president suggest- that, as there were no new members esent at that meeting, and they hoped o welcome several at the next one, they proceed to practice on a program "For the Reception of New Members" which had been prepared by the state secretary of the Illinois L. T. L. The suggestion was considered practical, and they proceeded to carry out the following exercise:

Program for the Reception of New Members.

BY MRS. CLARA E. BEEDE.

PRESIDENT: The object of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is "to educate public sentiment to the standard of total abstinence, to train the young, save the inebriate, secure the legal prohibition and complete banishment of the liquor traffic and to enter into any Christian work to which the Lord may call."

We gladly welcome as active members of the organization all women who will sign its pledge, pay one dollar per year membership dues, and wear the white ribbon. We are also glad to welcome the gentlemen as honorary members, by the signing of the pledge and payment of one dollar annually. Possibly there are those here this afternoon (or evening) who would be glad to identify themselves with the white-ribbon army. If so, will they kindly stand?

When all have risen, the president invites them to the platform, and the members of the union rise and sing, "Some Glad Day," page 54, White Ribbon Hymnal.

At close of the singing the members of the union resume their seats, and the president asks the secretary to read the pledge.

SECRETARY (Reading slowly and distinctly): "I hereby promise: First, that with God's help, I will abstain from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage, including wine and any kind of beer or cider. Second, that I will not make, sell or give them away for such use. Third, that I will not allow my premises, or any premises subject to my control, to be employed for their manufacture, sale or use as a beverage. Fourth, that I will endeavor by all honorable means to promote the cause of temperance."

PRESIDENT: You have heard the pledge of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Are you willing to sign and to keep the same? If so, please answer, "I am willing to do this."

PRESIDENT: You will now be given an opportunity to sign your names at the secretary's table (or desk).

(While this is being done let the members of the union sing "Throw Out the Life Line," or other selection, standing while they sing.)

PRESIDENT (To new members): We gladly welcome you to the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. We welcome you as co-workers in a cause that needs united, earnest effort. May each member of this union put on "the whole armor of God," and trusting in Him, go bravely forward in this work for "Home and Mother, God and Native Land."

(Here the president may offer a brief prayer for guidance and help in being always true to the pledge and to the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

The secretary now brings forward white ribbon bows for new members. These are pinned on by the president, who may repeat some appropriate Scripture text or selection of poetry or prose for each.

MEMBERS OF UNION IN CONCERT: "The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace." (Num. 6:24, 25, 26.)

As the new members return to their seats all join in singing, "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

Readers of the Local Union page will notice that Mrs. Beede has used the Illinois "pledge"; other states can insert their "pledge" and "object" as it reads in their own constitution.

After this part of the program was concluded to the satisfaction of all, an informal discussion was entered into on the ever-recurring subject of "luncheon or no luncheon."

Various opinions were ventured on both sides, and this is what one white-ribboner said: "The great object of the W. C. T. U. is the destruction of the liquor traffic and the uplifting of our race to a higher plane of living. To this end it is necessary that we enlist and retain in our ranks the largest possible number of consistent members. It is also necessary that we raise as much money as possible in order to carry on the many departments of our work. Most of all, it is necessary that we work together harmoniously.

"Many of the white-ribboners are so very hospitable by nature that when the union meets with them in their homes they can scarcely refrain from giving expression to that hospitality by serving luncheon to their friends. But if they do this, will not every other woman in the union feel that she is socially compelled to do as much, or more, for her friends when the union meets at her home? Will there not soon spring up a rivalry among the members, each vying with the others in an exhibition of hospitality, thus overshadowing the great purpose of the meetings and causing more to be spent for the luncheon than is collected from the whole membership for the work?

"It is well for unions to have their occasional social gatherings and invite outsiders that we may try to enlist them in the work, but let these socials be held at other times than at the regular afternoon meetings of the union.

"The afternoon luncheon custom would make some of our most consecrated and zealous workers inactive and would keep many from enlisting in the work whose hearts are with us, but who do not care to put themselves in a position where they would obligate themselves to conform to this custom."

The meeting closed with singing, "God Be with You till We Meet Again," for which no books were needed, and formal adjournment was made. Everybody seemed loth to leave, and an informal social followed.

The editor of this department would like to give further forms for the reception of new members, as they have been successfully used, and she would like to know if all our readers agree with the white-ribboner who spoke against the luncheon in the regular meeting.

Food For Thought.

TOTAL ABSTAINERS should not allow the laxity which is becoming almost characteristic of our people to creep into their association with our glorious cause. The hard work has always been left to a few, and the many have reaped the benefit. Why cannot the enthusiasm which marks the close of each Convention be kept alive until the opening of the next? So many resolutions are made! Communications will be responded to, dues will be paid promptly, and the request of the secretary for an annual report will not be disregarded.

The months pass; other interests claim our time, and total abstinence does not seem quite so inspiring as it did when earnest speakers blazed forth its principles, and flying banners and stirring hymns made us feel like warriors of old, set sternly on a battle for the right.

We appeal to our members once more; not to their sentimentality, but to the pure love for truth that has survived months of conflict, and which may be dormant, but which must respond to the bugle-call with the same intensity of spirit which thrills the soldier when he knows his country is in danger. Our Saviour calls to us, his "soldiers of the Cross." Self-denial, renunciation, self-conquest—an old, old story, but it must be anew, lest Christians should forget their mission.

Spring is here, the season of awakening. The call to arms is sounded. "What will you render to the Lord for all that He hath rendered unto you?" What have you done for the cause since our last convention? Remember that only those dare sit with folded hands who have borne the burden of the day. Do not be content to be an echo; live your own life, voice your own principles, and be ready to say at our annual meeting that you have fought the good fight with all the power that is in you.—"Temperance Truth," bulletin of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union.

Consistent.

A NEWSPAPER in McDonald county, Mo., promised the district press superintendent to grant her a W. C. T. U. column, then withdrew the offer in less than a month, on the plea that their columns were so crowded that they could find no room for temperance matter. But they did find room in the issue of March 27th for an editorial, of which this is part:

"A saloon, if conducted properly, is no more a disgrace than any other kind of business. As a general rule the saloon men are the most generous class of business men, when it comes to charity, and why, if they run their business in a legitimate way, should they be censured more than other business men of our town? There is just as much harm in a preacher gorging his stomach with yellow-legged chickens, as a man drinking too much liquor."

No wonder that editor could find no room in his paper for a temperance column.

PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST

Catalogues mailed on request, and specil prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED BY THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS, 84-90 Beekman St., NEW YORK.

MADE $105 THE FIRST MONTH

writes FRED. BLODGETT, of N. Y. J. L. BARRICK, of La., writes: "Am making $3.00 to $8.00 every day I work." MRS. L. M. ANDERSON, of Iowa, writes: "I made $3.80 to $6.50 a day." Hundreds doing likewise. So can you. $5.00 to $10.00 daily made plating jewelry, tableware, bicycles, metal goods with gold, silver, nickel, etc. Enormous demand. We teach you FREE. Write—offer free.

G. GRAY & CO., Plating Works, A Miami Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

TO INVESTORS.

Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in a few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have Cattle and Sheep on our Ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Mont.

THE Y. W. C. T. U. MANUAL

By Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Containing page of errata, By MRS. CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT which brings it up to date, at the SPECIAL PRICE OF 15 Cents Postpaid.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n, CHICAGO.

Portrait of GEN. NEAL DOW

FOR FRAMING. SIZE 11 x 14.

Price, Postpaid, 15 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N, CHICAGO.

W. L. DOUGLAS 7 per cent STOCK

SAFEST INVESTMENT IN AMERICA.

Less than $200,000 of the issue of $1,000,000 Preferred 7 per cent Stock of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., of Brockton, Mass., Remains for Sale in Lots of One Share or More. If you want Some of this Gilt-edge Stock You Must Act Quickly. Stock pays 7 per cent Annual Dividends, Payable Semi-Annually.

SHARES are FULL PAID and NON-ASSESSABLE

Sold at Par ($100.00) One Hundred Dollars Each

Send for Prospectus and Make all Remittances Payable to the order of

J. LEWIS RICE, - - 45 Milk St., BOSTON.

April Magazines.

THE CENTURY, voluminous in size and fascinating in character, presents as its initial article "The Restoration of the White House." There are pictures of the exterior by Jules Guerin and of the interior by Alfred Brennan, and a portrait of Mrs. Roosevelt, by Cecilia Beaux. This recital of the architectural evolution of the White House is of much historic interest and value and shows the skill with which the eighteenth century model has been developed to suit twentieth century needs. Music lovers will enjoy the first of a series of "Modern Musical Celebrities," by Herman Klein, being personal recollections of Verdi, Wagner, Gounod, Liszt, and Tschaikowsky. One is glad to hear once more from "Sonny's Father," who this time discourses upon "Wealth and Riches," with the philosophy and humor for which Ruth McEnery Stuart is famous. "Susanna and I" are the happy duo of Miss French's "Old Maids' Corner," that cosiest of all nooks in the Century's house of good things.

The REVIEW OF REVIEWS offers bright comment on current topics. The editor presents the undiscussed financial side of the Panama canal proposition, the Delaware situation, and many other matters of political and social interest. The award of the Anthracite Strike Commission is reviewed in a practical, untechnical manner, and there is a unique study of school conditions in the south, giving a detailed account of the situation in two Georgia counties. "Political Conditions in Russia" shows that the progress of Russian Liberalism is yearly becoming more rapid, and throws much light on the probable meaning of the Czar's recent manifesto. A reproduction of J. S. Sargent's new portrait of President Roosevelt appears in this number.

Charles A. Conant opens the ATLANTIC with a defense of the stock and produce exchanges, poetically closing by denominating them as "that delicate register of values, that sensitive governor of production, that accurate barometer of the people's needs," and asserting that they "could not be replaced by any process that any state socialist has devised or suggested. Chapter Four of "My Own Story," by J. T. Trowbridge, contains recollections of Emerson's correspondence with Herman Grimm, casting some pleasant sidelights upon the personality of America's greatest philosopher. The weightier articles of this number are relieved by excellent verse and fiction.

The work of the Fifty-seventh Congress is commented on by Henry Litchfield West, in his chronique of American Politics in the April-June FORUM. Mr. Litchfield also discusses the prospects of the next presidential campaign and the political status of the negro. Lee's recent "Life of Queen Victoria" is reviewed exhaustively by Prof. W. P. Trent, who dwells especially on the earlier and less familiar period of the late Queen's life. The shortening of the college course, the organization of the Society of Educational Research," the recent educational convention at Cincinnati, and the Tuskegee conference are among the subjects treated. Special articles are "The Present Estimate of the Value of Human Life," "The Scope of a Permanent Tariff Commission," "Counsel for United States Treasury Department," and "Submarine Navigation."

One seeks in vain for new adjectives by which to describe the excellence of ST. NICHOLAS. The story of "Ben," by H. S. Canfield, relates the bravery of as lovable and intelligent a sheep-dog as ever gladdened a lonely shepherd's life. A humorous turn is given to the present chapter of "The Story of King Arthur and his Knights." "Straight Lines and Circles" show how unskilled fingers can get astonishingly good results very simply and easily. But the article that will especially delight the boys is "Training for Interscholastic Athletics," which will prove helpful to instructors and parents as well. The article treats of improper training, sprinting, distance running, middle-distance running, the high hurdle, and the low hurdle, with excellent photographic illustrations. Palmer Cox, of Brownie fame, contributes five pages of humorous verse and illustrations, and there are stories, rhymes and funny pictures galore.

A special book cover-design and sixteen pages of signed and illustrated book reviews are features of the "Book Number" of the CHAUTAUQUAN. An article on "Social Settlements," by Max West, of New York, reveals the true spirit of the movement which ought to be more clearly understood. In "Home Problems from a New Standpoint," Caroline L. Hunt makes a telling analysis of the fad for simplicity. Rho Fisk Zeublin, of Chicago, in "The Production of Industrial Art in America," describes a growing movement of social significance.

Willis J. Abbott, the editor of the PILGRIM, as usual, comments on "Men and Matters of Moment," a department which, perhaps more than any other, makes this journal unique among American magazines. The present installment of the "Patriotic Calendar" has to do with Benjamin Franklin. "Mary of Magdala" is illustrated by a series of striking pictures. "Household Hints," "The Ways of Society," "The Home Table," and "Hints for Right Living" are notable articles.

In SUCCESS Richard Le Gallienne tells "How to Form a Library," giving some excellent advice on collecting books at a moderate expenditure. Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Stetson, in an article entitled "The Home as a Food-Purveyor," deals with the problem of home cooking, and attributes many ill effects to the general mode of preparing food. "How to Invest Money Safely and Profitably" is an article of practical value, by Edward E. Higgins.

The Easter number of the WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION is full of the spirit of spring. An Easter song, "A Picturesque Moravian Easter," a description of a quaint custom at Bethlehem, Pa., notes about early spring birds, Easter games and Easter gowns are some of the bright features. The story of Abraham Lincoln's early loves is told by Myrtle Reed in a reverential tone, and is a fascinating picture of the great man.

Notable papers in LIPPINCOTT'S are "Lafayette's Last Visit to America," by Theodore Stanton, and "Next Summer's Garden," by Eben Rexford, that wise and helpful authority upon home floriculture. Five select short stories by noted authors, and several good poems, complete a number of unusual interest.

Magazines Received.

METHODIST MAGAZINE AND REVIEW.
PEARSON'S.
HOMILETIC REVIEW.
MIND.
LEND A HAND.
HOME AND FLOWERS.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.

(Continued from Page 6.)

with the best, and was doin'. I've come to parish money, and I winna forgive either the one or the other of 'em. Never! as long as I live."

"Tell me about it, will you," said the young man, gently, as he seated himself on the corner of the deal table.

"Wasn't I one o' them women that she sent out o' t' pits? Hadn't I worked there from a lass as reg'lar as the lads, and hadn't I as much right? But she stopped me, she did. She stopped me from earnin' my bread in the only way I could earn it by then, and she drove me on charity. I've never forgiven her, and I never will, and from what they say, 'twas God A'mighty set her on."

"And I, for one, believe that they say the truth," said Hugh, vigorously. "Look here, granny," venturing on a distinctive title for the first time, "say that such work was suitable for you—and you say it, mind, not I—was it suitable for most girls?"

"And what for not?" demanded the old dame, fiercely. "Think ye that lasses was always the niminy-piminy misses they are now? But I'll none arguy with parsons. Choose where they start from, parsons always works it round to God A'mighty, and when they've got to God A'mighty, they're none so far off from the bacca and the beer. I want none o' ye parsons, so good-day to ye."

Taking the hint, Hugh rose to his feet, but he made no further move to go.

"Didn't you ever suspect that when all was said and done, it might be that God Almighty knew best? As for the queen, she did what she thought right, and I dare say if we knew all, we should find that she was very sorry for you."

"Who arst her to be sorry?" snarled his new acquaintance. "Who arst her for anything but to mind her own business?"

"But suppose she took it to be her business? Were you ever married?"

"Ay!" more fiercely than before; "I were married as a lass, and my man were killed in t' pit before the year were out. I thought mebbe God A'mighty had some pity when he sent me a fine lad. But, look 'ee, the lad turned out ill. Last of all, he ran away to sea, and was drowned. But as he was, he was all I had. Since he was took, I've owned neither kith nor kin, nor want to. I go my own lanes, and bother with no one—not even with God A'mighty. D'ye mind what I said a while since? Good day to ye!"

So emphatic were her tones that Hugh had no choice but to go.

"Can't I do anything for you?" he asked, regretfully.

"Yes; ye can just goa!" replied the imperturbable dame.

As the result of subsequent inquiries, he learned that the defiant old woman persistently lived her life apart from her neighbors, who could do no more than render her an occasional service by stealth. She was now nearly ninety years of age, and was held to be "dotty," but it was universally admitted that the resentment to which she clung had been one of the strongest characteristics of her prime.

Hugh gave a graphic account of the interview and its difficulties on his return home. Mr. Boyd listened with interest and tendered a suggestion in his hesitating, whimsical way.

"How would it be, for the present, to deal judiciously with the supply of coals and groceries, and to wait awhile before attacking the rest? Let me see" —taking out his note-book—"her name is—"

"Colson. Bet Colson! I met Enoch on the way back. He denounced it as a crying shame that a case of such rank heathenism should exist in a Christian parish."

"And who knows but what it is a crying shame—to him? Still, I'll give Enoch credit for having probably done his best, according to his knowledge."

"He has done his best, and just escaped being knocked down for his pains. He told me all about it. Now he opines that it needs a bit of the serpent to enable a man to deal successfully with Bet Colson."

"Which of us two does he recommend for the purpose?" asked Mr. Boyd, solicitously.

Hugh laughed.

"Since you ask, I must say that he favors me, as physically stronger and doctrinally more sound."

"Brotherton, I congratulate you! If Enoch pronounced you sound, your footing in the parish is secured. Let's go and have some tea."

Over the tea-cups he talked of his approaching marriage and of his promised bride in a whimsically compassionate way.

"I could have desired something more for her in the way of natural and social advantages; but happily Mary is a sensible girl, and she already knows something of what a parson has to put up with."

"I trust that she also understands something of what Pitsmoor expects of the parson's wife," said Hugh, grimly, for he was thinking of Miss Smith, and his heart was still sore.

"Ah! not being a parson's daughter, she has much to learn; but as I say, Mary is a sensible girl, and she has the incalculable advantage of having been brought up in a cantankerous atmosphere."

"Oh, you reckon that an advantage?"

"For the future wife of the vicar of Pitsmoor? Why, certainly!" said Mr. Boyd, with his air of mild surprise.

Hugh laughed, and at the same time gave the speaker one of his puzzled looks.

"By the way," said the vicar, as a sudden thought occurred to him, "don't put any pressure on Mrs. Langley to induce her to join the parish workers —at any rate, at present. For some reason or other, Mann is distinctly opposed to it."

"So I found," said Hugh, dryly.

Mr. Boyd looked up as if struck by his tone.

"Ah! then you noticed it?" He seemed to be on the point of adding something, but changed his mind. "Nice fellow, Mann."

"Think so?" said Hugh. "I can't say that I'm exactly convinced of it as yet. Did you know the famous Miss Milner lived in their house?"

"I have heard so. They all came together, I believe. Later on Miss Milner undertook a certain amount of parish work, but she seems always to have been Mrs. Langley's companion and friend."

Now, nothing could be more reasonable than that Mrs. Langley should feel the need of a companion in this society-barren land, yet there was something in the vicar's manner of avoiding his companion's eye, as he gave the information, that aroused the latter's attention.

"Does Mann drink?" he asked, abruptly.

The vicar started.

"Why, no! Mann drink? What can have put such an idea into your head?"

"Is he an abstainer?" asked Hugh.

"That is quite another matter, isn't it? I have no means of knowing. I don't know."

(To be Continued.)

About Women.

The Baltimore Association for the promotion of the University Education of Women offers a fellowship of $500 for the year 1903-4, available for work either at an American or foreign university. In the award preference will be given Southern women.

An important attachment to the sewing machine was invented by Miss Helen Blanchard, and the hand refrigerator and lunch box is the work of Miss Philips, of Dorchester, Mass. A patent on an improvement on a typewriter was devised by Miss Emma D. Mills some time ago. The invention necessitated the construction of special tools, and these she made also.

The fourth volume of "The History of Woman Suffrage," by Miss Susan B. Anthony and Mrs. Ida Husted Harper is now ready. The first three volumes which were prepared by Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Miss Anthony, brought the record of the movement down to 1883. The fourth volume will be found of present day interest, as it deals with the movement up to date.

The Equal Suffrage Association reelected all their old officers in their New Orleans Convention. Miss Susan B. Anthony leads the list as honorary president, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president. The other officers are Rev. Anna H. Shaw, vice president at large; Kate M. Gordon, corresponding secretary; Alice Stone Blackwell, recording secretary, and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, treasurer.

Permission has been given to the faculty women at Oberlin to raise $5,000 for a recreation field for the women of the college. The plan is to have the faculty women, including the wives of faculty members, raise $1,000, and the college classes, the academy and the conservatory $500 each. One person will be asked for $1,000 and the field is to be named in honor of the giver. Alumnæ of the college are not to be asked for subscriptions.

Self-government by the young women students of the Northwestern University is again being agitated. A new constitution has been drawn up and presented to a committee of the faculty for ratification. The faculty amended it by excluding the freshmen from the rule allowing the girls to be out until 9:30 at night, and allowing only those who had met all the requirements for entrance to college the rights of the new democracy. The young women take exceptions to these amendments and the compromise is not yet.

A woman has applied for admission to the English bar, this being the first time such an application has ever been made. The applicant seeks admission to Gray's Inn, one of the four inns of the court. The benchers are surprised that such applications have not been made before, in view of the fact that women practice law in the United States and France. The court will consider the request during April, and the result is awaited with interest. An application made by a woman for admission to the Scottish bar in 1900 was refused. The four inns of court are Middle Temple, Inner Temple, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn.

Hereafter, when the classically educated American girl walks out of Wellesley she will be, besides an educated woman, a farmer. Professor Cummings of the college said: "We are not going to make them husband-women, but are going to make them fit to advise in the Territory. So she saved her salary and bought seventy-two lots in the little town of Sapulpa, paying the Indian owner a trifle over $4 for each lot. The Indian rued his action and when the court house and many real estate records were burned not long ago he brought suit, claiming that the young woman had never paid him. At the trial after he had testified under oath that the land was not paid for Miss Lindley brought forward his receipt for the amount in full, which she had preserved. The Indian is on trial for perjury. The town lots in question are vaued at not less than $15,000.

William E. Curtis says: "Sweden was the first country to recognize the equality of sons and daughters in the inheritance of property, and this is due to a notable event which occurred more than a thousand years ago. While the king and his army were engaged in a foreign war and their homes were left defenseless the Danes invaded the province of Smaoland, where the women organized and armed themselves and were led to battle by a beautiful woman called Blenda, who defeated the Danes and drove them from the country. In recognition of their heroism matters of floriculture and agriculture." He thinks that what the mothers of the next generation teach their boys and girls about the care and preservation of the forests will settle whether America will have any trees on its surface or be a desert in the generations to come.

Miss Florence Lindley, a school teacher of Brown county, Kansas, years ago made up her mind that there were great possibilities in the Indian upon his return the king proclaimed a decree that thenceforth the daughters of Swedish families should be entitled to inherit an equal share with their brothers of the property left by their parents, and that has been the law to this day."

⚜

A bookseller in Cleveland advertised for a porter. A big muscular Irishman walked into the shop and glanced around. Finally his eye rested on a big sign over a table with books: "Dickens' works all this week for $4." The Irishman read it thoughtfully, and then edged toward the front door. The floorwalker asked pleasantly if there was something he wanted, and the applicant remarked, with a backward glance toward the sign: "Oi come in t' git th' job, but Oi'll not care f'r it. Dickens kin worruk all th' week f'r $4 if he wants to. Oi'll not. Ye'd better kape him." And the visitor strode vigorously out.

The Mammoth and the Mosquito.

What has come to pass in thousands of years seems hardly creditable. Is it not strange that primitive man, a weakling in comparison with modern man, was able to conquer the huge monsters of thousands of years ago, such as the Mammoth, and to-day they are dead forever, yet the mosquito and fly have never been conquered. It is now the time for the scientist to devise methods for killing the mosquito and fly, so that they will go to join the mammoth and the monster lizards. The mosquitoes and flies are dangerous enemies of man because they spread contagion. The mosquito often carries the germ of malaria with his bite. The house-fly spreads germs of disease over our food. These germs or bacteria, ever hunting for the weak spot, find a place in our blood, and then we suffer from grip, catarrh, consumption, or malaria.

How can we fight these invisible enemies? There is no known method better than putting the blood into the best possible condition, so that there will be no weak spots for the germs to enter, and by increasing the red blood corpuscles, so that the organs of the body are nourished with rich red blood. Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., says: "There would be no grip epidemics, the germs of consumption, or malaria would find no place in the human economy, if the blood were pure, if the lungs, heart and other organs were fed on good blood. Poisons should not be allowed to accumulate in the body; to be safe it is best to take a gentle laxative at least once a week." Such a vegetable laxative as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets contains nothing which could harm the system.

For puting the blood in order, and as a tissue-builder and tonic for those weakened by coughs, colds, catarrh, grip, nothing will build one up quicker than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is a medicine made entirely of roots and herbs, and without the use of alcohol.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"I feel it my duty to write you as I have received so much benefit from the use of your medicines," says Mrs. R. Sando, of Elon, Iowa. "I was troubled with torpid liver, indigestion, and nervous prostration, for about eighteen months and lost strength so that I was unable to do my work. Consulted several doctors but without receiving help. They advised me to have an operation for gall stone, which I thought would be the very last step I would take. I then sat down and wrote to you for advice, some five or six months ago, and have since been taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Can now say I am well and able to do all my work, besides doing lots of weaving. In the last two months I have woven about four hundred yards of carpet and feel now that I will keep on with it as I like the weaving business so well. I took only eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

"I will be glad if I can say anything to those who are suffering as I did."

When the Druggist says he has something that is as good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, just tell him, "There's nothing just as good." He says so to make a better profit, but his own mixtures have not stood the test of long experience and had the success which Dr. Pierce's medicines have had.

The "Common Sense Medical Adviser," in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A New Club Rate
for
The Union Signal

Yearly Subscriptions, in

Clubs of Ten
or more,

Either new names or renewal, at the special price of $1.25

each.

Regular Subscription Price, $1.50 per year. Special Rate to Clergymen, Reading Rooms and Public Libraries, $1.00.

A club from every union is most earnestly solicited.

The Union Signal
CHICAGO, ILL.

Signal Notes.

Robertson county, Ky., gave a majority of 266 for local option.

The young people's church societies in Martin's Ferry, O., are forming an organization to stand behind the officials of the place, for the correction of gambling and other social evils.

There are 195 parishes in Scotland without a public-house. Seven hundred congregations in Scotland have discarded the use of fermented wine at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The pastors of the various churches of Hot Springs, S. Dak., are seeking to arouse public sentiment so that the saloons and gambling attachments shall be separated according to law, and that saloons shall be conducted with wide open windows, as the law directs.

The new hall of the National Temperance Society and Publication House at 3 East Fourteenth street, New York City, has been dedicated. Dr. Cuyler of Brooklyn delivered an address in memory of the late William F. Dodge and Mrs. Dodge, for whom the new hall of the association is named.

A new "settlement" has been established in Chicago by the members of the Christian Endeavor Societies of the Chicago Union. It has more resident members than any other Chicago settlement except Hull House. Many more workers would be glad to become residents if there was room to accommodate them.

The Illinois Humane Society in its annual report shows that ten cases per day are on the average investigated. Three children per day are aided. Three prosecutions per week are undertaken, the cases of cruelty to animals that are investigated number fifteen per day. Fifty-three street fountains are maintained.

The new temperance blacklist law in England seems to be rigorously enforced. Over 100 inebriates have been blacklisted in London. A woman who is on the blacklist has been sent to prison for a month for trying to obtain drink and a man and woman were fined for obtaining liquor for drunken friends.

The University of Chicago announces $60,000 more in gifts. A "special purpose" gift of $25,000, to complete the school of education group, $23,000 from Leon Mandel for an organ for Mandel Hall, $10,000, and $5,000 for chimes for the tower as a memorial to Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, first Dean of women at the university.

It is a matter of satisfaction to law-abiding citizens of Indiana that a law was passed by the recent legislature driving away the saloons from the gates of the soldiers' home at Marion. These saloons have thrived for many years at the expense of the old soldiers of the home. All manner of crimes, even murder, have been committed there.

"Will you wholly abstain from the use of tobacco in every form?" was put to every candidate for the ministry at the United Evangelical conference at Allentown, Pa., and all of the six applicants for pulpits promised that they would neither chew nor smoke the weed. "The church desires to keep the ministry undefiled in body as well as in soul," said Bishop Heil, as he propounded to each candidate this discipline question.

Bishop Messmer of the Catholic diocese of Green Bay urged his people, in a recent address at Marinette, to put aside all prejudices, and join hands with the followers of other faiths and work for the public welfare. "The time has come," said the bishop, "when Catholics and Protestants should stand shoulder to shoulder to solve the great problems of temperance, public morality and every other question that concerns the public good."

The newly elected secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Mr. Von Ogden Vogt, is a Western man, formerly of Chicago, but more recently of Beloit, Wis. He is a Presbyterian, a graduate of Beloit College, a winner of the college oratorical prize, literary editor of the College Annual and manager of the College Glee Club. After graduating, he was in the employ of the college as secretary to the president, and financial agent of the college. His training and experience seem to have prepared him to make an ideal secretary.

Publishers' Notes.

The Easter Young Crusader.

Our young people and their elders as well, will be delighted with Kate Lunden-Sunderlin's description of an Easter in Scandinavia, as told in the April CRUSADER. There are, besides special stories and verses, an Easter chalk-talk by Miss Wintringer. In fact, from its beautiful cover throughout its well-filled pages, is scattered the glad spirit of Eastertime.

Among the features of the regular departments of the magazine are an illustrated account of the colored L. T. L., at Boydtown, Va., bright Anti-Cigaret pages with recitation, cartoon and picture-story; the article, "Not a Failure," announced last month; and a new Picture-Story for the little ones, with publication of Prize Awards.

Subscription price 25 cents per year. Copies for distribution, $2 per hundred.

New Prohibition Ammunition

"The Prohibitory Law: Facts," by Lillian M. N. Stevens, President of the W. C. T. U., is replete with evidences attesting the value of prohibition, notable decisions of the Supreme Court favoring prohibition, testimonies of Maine governors for the past forty years, and the prosperity of North Dakota under prohibition law. Incontrovertible proof is shown regarding the saving power of prohibition to the nation.

Another valuable leaflet by the same author is "The Dispensary or State Control System of Managing the Liquor Traffic." Abundant data are given to show the failure of the dispensary as a temperance measure and the wrong resulting from an effort to compromise with evil.

Price: per package of ten, 10 cents; per fifty, 50 cents; per hundred, 75 cents.

The Helping Hand.

"The Helping Hand, or the A B C of Organizing a W. C. T. U., by Caroline B. Buell, is a genuine co-worker with women not acquainted with W. C. T. U. methods. Everything is told that one would wish to know in organizing unions, conducting unions, public meetings, etc.

Do Everything.

"Do Everything," by Frances E. Willard, a handbook for all white-ribboners, gives a history of temperance work, with invaluable directions for leading a public meeting, carrying on a local union, conducting a convention, organizing a W. C. T. U., with forms of pledge and petitions, and "the summing up of the whole matter." Workers cannot afford to do without this practical helper for all occasions along temperance lines. Price 35 cents.

April Responsive Readings.

In the responsive reading for April Mrs. Emma W. Shores, National Superintendent of the Department, presents Work Among the Lumbermen, giving a brief history of its organization and growth, the diversity of its work, a strong and characteristic appeal for its cordial support.

This work will commend itself wherever it is known.

Mrs. Shores well says:

"We have long ceased to ask the question, 'Do men read the literature sent them?' for hundreds of letters are sent each year to the Superintendent, expressing their appreciation. Let me impress upon you, in closing, that God will bless every effort put forth in 'His Name.'"

Price, 50c per hundred.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

A New Club Rate.

We take pleasure in announcing that hereafter a club rate of $1.25 each in CLUBS OF TEN will be granted our patrons. Either new names or renewals will be received in these clubs but to secure the reduction the club must consist of TEN NAMES. Every union that has not at least a club of ten subscribers to the UNION SIGNAL should commence at once to secure one.

The special rate of ONE DOLLAR is made ONLY to clergymen, reading rooms and public libraries.

"The Mormon Menace."

THE MORMON MENACE, by Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., LL. D., and Helen M. Fallows, A. M., shortly to be issued by the W. T. P. A., is a timely, valuable, authentic showing of the leprous situation that confronts our nation. Beginning with the history of Mormonism, its rise and progress is traced with an accurate hand. The immoral characters of the Mormon leaders and the monstrous atrocities instigated by them and perpetrated in the name of religion, are depicted with an awful realism, and remind one of the horrors of the Dark Ages, while the puerile, inane declarations of the Mormon faith lead one to wonder if any but unbalanced, weakened intellects can embrace such doctrines.

There is much new and valuable material in this absorbing account of a religion which makes polygamy its essential element. It will form a most valuable addition to the extensive library already issued upon this subject.

Those who have read the advance sheets of this remarkable exposition of the greatest blot upon American history, pronounce it one of the most notable works of its kind which has appeared.

Price, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8912—Blouse Eton with or without Capes.
12 to 16 years.

8927—Dress.
2 to 8 years.

8945—Shirt Waist.
32 to 46 in. bust.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

We Solicit Your Order for

VISITING CARDS

Very Latest Styles.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Engraving plate in Script and 100 cards, name only	$2.25
Engraving plate in Script, name only	1.25
Engraving address, per line	.50
Engraving day, per line	.25
Engraving two names on one plate	2.25
Engraving plate, in Roman or Gothic letters, name only	2.00
Engraving address, in Roman or gothic letter, per line	1.00
Engraving day, in Roman or Gothic letters	.50
Engraving plate, in Shaded Old English	3.00
Engraving address, in Shaded Old English	1.25
Engraving day, in Shaded Old English	.75
Printing Cards, Mr., Mrs. or Miss, from plate, per 100	1.00
Printing Black Border Cards, from plate, per 100	1.50

Mr. Size Card. D

Miss Size Card. C

Mrs. Size Card B½

Mrs. Size Card. B

The Mormon Menace

By SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D., LL.D.
AND
HELEN FALLOWS, A.M.

Containing most conclusive and convincing evidence on the Mormon question.

Price, postpaid, 25 cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for April Reading,

Work Among Lumbermen.

By Mrs. E. W. Shores.
National Superintendent of the Department of Work Among Lumbermen.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 16. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, APRIL 16, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
CONTRIBUTED:
Keep Alcohol from the Children. By Dr. Max Kassowitz—Why Young People Should Sign the Temperance Pledge. By Rev. C. L. Palmer 4
New Year's Rally of the Tokyo Temperance Society. By Kara G. Smart 5
Conquerors. By Henry Davis Middleton—Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 6
THE SENIOR L. T. L. 7
EDITORIAL:
The Gambrinus Product—A Suggested Investment—A Case of Insomnia—Women in the Industrial World 8
All Honor to Kansas—President Honors Rest Cottage—Toward the Sun-rising—Experience Corner 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10-11-12
W. C. T. U. NOTES 12
THE LOCAL UNION 13
SIGNAL NOTES 14
PUBLISHER'S NOTES 15

News of the Week.

King Christian, of Denmark, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday, April 8.

Holland is threatened with famine because of railroad strikes. Country in a turmoil of labor troubles.

Cyclones kill ten persons in Alabama and nine in Arkansas; Hopewell, Ala., swept away.

Mrs. Horace Porter, wife of the American ambassador to France, died in Paris after a short illness from influenza.

News from Venezuela indicates that President Castro will sustain Minister Bowen in his refusal to permit financial syndicates to settle the claims.

Governor of New Jersey, by proclamation, wipes out of existence hundreds of concerns incorporated under the easy laws of that state.

Brigham Young, president of the twelve apostles of the Mormon church, died April 11. Mr. Young was the eldest son of Brigham Young, who was the head of the church for many years.

Governor Murphy of New Jersey, has vetoed the anti-cigaret bill, basing his action on his personal opinion that cigarets are not injurious to boys under sixteen years of age.

Andrew Carnegie has offered the public library board of Cleveland, Ohio, $250,000 for the purpose of erecting seven branch libraries. The offer, which will be accepted, is made on condition that the city furnish the sites and maintain the libraries.

Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania has signed an act of the legislature prohibiting the sale of cigarets or cigaret paper to any person under twenty-one years of age. The penalty for violation of the act is a fine of from $100 to $300.

W. H. McAndrews of Chicago claims to have made a discovery by which gas can be manufactured out of crude oil at a nominal cost, and private citizens will be able to furnish their own light, heat and power.

Eight hundred members of the Chicago Office Building Scrubwomen's union granted eighteen cents an hour pay in place of eleven cents, by John V. Clarke, Hibernian Banking Association president, who acted as arbitrator.

A decision by the Kansas Supreme Court to the effect that the Kansas Utopian Association is an illegal organization whose purpose is to avoid the prohibitory law, closes over 200 "lodges" with 65,000 members.

States Attorney-General Webb, of San Francisco, Cal., has rendered an official opinion declaring the use of the Bible in the public schools unconstitutional. Not only may teachers not use the scriptures as a text book, but even reading from them, as is the custom frequently at the opening exercises, is barred.

Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the United States Senate, died at Santa Barbara, Cal. Mr. Milburn was twice elected chaplain of congress, the first time in 1845, when a little over twenty-two years of age; was twice chaplain of the house of representatives, and lastly chaplain of the senate, to which office he was elected in 1893.

International Anti-Alcohol Congress. It is to be regretted that our National President and Vice-President-at-large, Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon, could not accept the urgent invitation from Germany extended to them as officers of the World's W. C. T. U., to be present at the International Anti-Alcohol Congress, to be held in Bremen, but on account of the demands of the work in this country, they felt unwilling to be absent so long as this Congress and the World's W. C. T. U. Convention would necessitate. We are glad, however, that the National W. C. T. U. will have two able representatives at the Bremen Congress, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt and Mrs. Mary G. Stuckenberg. They will receive many courtesies, as Mrs. Hunt has letters of introduction to the diplomatic and consular officers of the United States, and Mrs. Stuckenberg is going to her own country where she and her husband are both well known in educational and philanthropic circles.

Non-Enforcement of Law. During the past winter Stamford, Conn., has been afflicted with Sunday opening. A committee from the W. C. T. U. interviewing the mayor, were advised to "let it alone"—"as I propose to do," blandly added the mayor. The women, undaunted, got up a petition for the mayor and the common council, signed by 160 voters' names. Interviewing the mayor again, the committee were frankly told that before his election he had promised the liquor dealers to "let matters drift along" as they were. Wishing "to please the ladies," the mayor promised to present the petition to the council, which includes two liquor dealers. There are eighty licensed saloons in the city, and it is reported that some of them have actually been closed since this agitation. The W. C. T. U. has succeeded in stirring up public opinion to the degree that Mayor Leeds need not build his hopes upon re-election.

Relief for Ireland. There is general rejoicing on both sides the water that the Irish land question bids fair to be nearing a final and satisfactory settlement. The situation has been one which, ever since the time of James I, has caused much bitter antagonism and untold misery and crime. Considering the conditions as they were, the results achieved by a few years of agitation are truly remarkable. It is only a little more than twenty years that the burden began to be lifted from the tenantry in western and southern Ireland by the appointment of a rent commission. As a result of this step, the rentals have been reduced in that time nearly one-half. More relief came when the tenants were allowed reasonable payment for improvements, and again when sales of entailed estates were authorized, the government advancing the money to a tenant purchaser on long time and at a very low rate of interest. The increased prosperity which followed these and other changes is indicated by the decreased emigration. Further reforms for some time under discussion are embodied in the measure announced by the king at the opening of parliament, and are so liberal as to involve a loss to the government of some $5,000,000 yearly. To this hopeful outlook for the Land of Erin, King Edward, it is said, has by personal interest and influence contributed much. The King and Queen will visit Ireland in May.

High License Not Opposed by the Trade. Concerning high and still higher license a New York paper utters an obvious truth when it says: "If liquor licenses cost five times what they now cost they would produce no saloon Sahara in New York or any other city. More expensive licenses have not resulted in a general closing of liquor shops, or, for that matter, in working injury to the liquor business generally." An enactment which raises the saloon license carries with it no disapproval from the liquor element that endangers the party in power. It is the prohibitive features of closing hours and other selling restrictions which arouse the active opposition of saloonists.

An Active Force in Politics. One of our state presidents lately received a communication from the Y girls, saying: "We are anxious to have state prohibition and want anti-whisky men for officials. For whom shall we work for governor? Please send any information you think will be helpful, naming the candidates you think ought to be supported." This recalled an incident that occurred many weeks ago in the same state. A leading politician was asked, "Who shall be our next governor?" "The candidate the W. C. T. U. will endorse," was the reply. These are pointers, says the state president, which show that the wind is set steadily in the direction of prohibition for that commonwealth. Though many of its citizens have no friendship for the W. C. T. U., they realize that it must be reckoned with even in politics.

A Question of Profit and Loss. The Iowa law providing for the detention of inebriates in state hospitals has been in force nine months. In one hospital alone 150 such cases have been admitted. After a careful study of these cases, Dr. Applegate, the superintendent, officially affirms that "inebriety threatens to be one of the most serious menaces accompanying twentieth century civilization. No disease seems to be more common, and it requires only a little investigation to prove that there are but few families in which some member is not a victim." In 125 of these cases inebriate tendencies from one or both parents are clearly shown, but in only twenty-one was the inebriety on the maternal side, and of the 150 patients only six were women. One hundred and thirty-seven were American-born—a fact we shall do well to ponder. Dr. Applegate dwells upon the justice of the law and upon the necessity for state treatment. "What better use," he asks, "could a state make of its liquor revenue than to pay it back to the heart-broken wives and the worse than fatherless children by giving them a well husband and a sane father?" From a doctor's standpoint, the question is a pertinent one. The standpoint of the state, however, is, or should be, prevention rather than cure. If the saloon revenue goes back to the drunkard and the drunkard's family, what has the state gained? What it loses in the process of making a drunkard and then trying to make him over into a sober man, who can compute! The hospital authorities admit that the term of commitment—thirty days—is too short a time in which to eradicate the disease of alcoholism. A lifetime would be too short to effect a cure if the patient must go out to face the open saloon.

U. OF MI. LIBRARY

Good Work in New York.

Ella A. Boole, Correspondent.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 13.—The plan of work in New York state, this year, includes a mid-year institute in every county of the state, these institutes to be held on consecutive dates, with something of uniformity of program. Some of the workers and leaders are Mrs. Frances W. Graham, Mrs. Nellie H. Hutchinson, Mrs. E. U. Burgess, Mrs. Emma G. Dietrick, Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, Mrs. P. J. Adams, Mrs. M. M. Allen, Mrs. C. E. Seberry, and the state president, who will attend about half of them. A few counties have been unable to arrange for their meetings on the dates assigned, but the institute features will be introduced into the mid-year meeting.

A very successful tri-county institute was held at Amsterdam (Montgomery, Fulton and Hamilton counties), with Mrs. Rounds as leader. Up to date, fifteen institutes have been held. The symposium on the theme, "What can be done next to rid the world of the drink and tobacco habits?" participated in by county and local workers, is greatly enjoyed, and forms a part of every institute.

Willard Memorial day has been generally observed, and the contributions to the memorial fund, which we call our home-missionary fund, will not fall below last year. We trust it may be much more. These meetings took various forms; sometimes a public meeting, sometimes a parlor meeting, and sometimes the program was combined with the one for Prohibition Rally Day, but they were always used to draw attention to our work.

Legislative work demands much attention during the winter. Mr. Jerome appeared before the joint committees of the senate and assembly to plead for Sunday opening for New York City. About fifty saloon keepers had come up from New York City with him, and others came from other parts of the state, until the senate chamber was crowded. Our side had been well represented at a former hearing, and it was decided that at this hearing only five be heard in reply. Mr. Jerome talked for an hour and a quarter, and when he had finished speaking lighted a cigaret, and smoked it. He was followed by a number of liquor dealers and several representatives of a so-called real estate association but they were thought to be an association of men who rent saloon property.

Representatives of the New York Presbytery, The American Sabbath Alliance, The Methodist Preachers' Meeting, the Anti-Saloon League, and the state president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Boole, spoke in reply. They were all heard courteously. It is not often the lot of a W. C. T. U. worker to talk in the presence of such a company of liquor dealers as were present that day. We have no quarrel with the men as individuals, but we have a great quarrel with their business. The bill will not be reported.

The temperance forces have been greatly stirred by the Yale bill, which provided for hotel licenses in all parts of the state without reference to the vote at local option elections. As there are 287 no-license towns in the state, there was reason for alarm, for if passed this would practically nullify no-license. The protest has been so great that although the excise committee reported the bill in the assembly there is reason to believe that the hotel keepers before election had been promised that the bill would be passed. It was laid aside and it is not likely to be brought up again. The W. C. T. U. has been instrumental in sending thousands of protests to Albany.

The Anti-Saloon League has been advocating a bill to provide for city local option. It is the same bill which the W. C. T. U. had introduced into the legislature four years ago and which two years ago was ordered prepared by a committee representing twenty temperance and philanthropic societies.

The high-license bill passed by both houses and signed by the governor is the talk of the day. This increases the tax on all licenses 50 per cent, and as the tax is now graded from $150 to $880, the increase is considerable. Half of it is to go to the state, instead of one-third, as formerly. The liquor dealers of New York city, and of all the cities, for that matter—for they pay the highest tax—are very angry and are laying all the blame upon the farmers. In order to get even with them they threaten to buy no more New York cheese nor New York hops. It might be a good thing if farmers all over the state would retaliate by boycotting all beer. Then the liquor interests would see that a boycott could work both ways.

The fact is, the high-license bill was not passed supported by either the farmers or the temperance people. It was a political measure pure and simple, passed by a Republican vote, as a revenue measure. We shall await the result with interest, rejoicing whenever a single saloon is closed, but firmly believing that any form of license is wrong in principle, powerless to solve the problem of doing away with the evils of drink, and that no question is ever settled until it is settled right.

Spring Elections.

Topeka, Kan., April 8.—Returns from all the towns in Kansas which held elections yesterday disclose the fact that the vote in favor of enforcing the prohibition law is the most overwhelming in the history of the state.

Burlington, Vt., April 7.—The first saloon in Vermont under the license law was opened at Middlebury, a town of less than 2,000 inhabitants. Seventeen persons were arrested yesterday afternoon for intoxication and warrants are out for twenty-one more.

Viroqua, Wis., April 8.—The cause of temperance, which lost last year in Viroqua by a large majority, won this year by a two-thirds vote. La Farge won by twenty-eight votes. Westby still maintains its high standard of no license. Cashton won for the first time in many years. Sparta lost by only about seventeen votes, a great gain over last year. Soldiers Grove, a strong license village heretofore, turned over a new leaf for the coming year. God help us all to urge on the good work.

Omaha, April 7.—The Republicans re-elected Mayor G. A. Ames at Lincoln to-day on a high-license platform by about 1,000 plurality. The Republicans also won at Fremont and Norfolk, while the Democrats carried the day at Blair, David City, West Point, Elmwood, Neligh, Tekamah, Springfield, Fullerton, Ainsworth, Oakland, Friend, Orleans, Norfolk and Elk Creek will have high license for two years. The Prohibitionists carried Stanton, Lawrence, York, Osceola, Stromsburg, Alma, Nelson, Ainsley, Cozad and Craig.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 8.—"In this district we only lost in one place, Cuyahoga Falls, where the 'wet' and 'dry' fight was an issue in the campaign, and we are very well satisfied," said Rev. T. M. Hare, district superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League.

In Bedford, Berea, Warren, Chagrin Falls, Wellington, Allinance, Glenville, Nottingham, Collinwood and East Liverpool mayors were elected who were supported by the Anti-Saloon League.

The Anti-Saloon League will now devote its efforts to carrying on the local option fight. It is very likely that local option elections will be held in Ashland, Warren, Painesville, Elyria and Oberlin this spring.

Medal Contest Work in California.

Dorcas J. Spencer, Correspondent.

San Francisco, Cal., April 8.—The president of Santa Clara county held a two days' institute at Los Gatos, and a very successful diamond medal contest.

J. C. KENNEDY.

Elk Grove, Lathrop, Binghampton, Auburn, Oleta, San Jose, Oakdale, West Park and Fowler are having silver medal contests, Boulder Creek an equality medal, Binghampton and Selma, gold, and Selma grand gold. Others are in the air.

One of our honoraries, Mr. J. C. Kennedy, of Binghampton, teaches school in a rural district, and is doing splendid work in medal contests. He interests not only his whole school but neighboring districts. All his pupils are drilled at one time for contests and then divided into classes, according to age and other circumstances.

His first effort brought "all the region round about" to hear four contests. Think of it! They made a day of it, with basket lunch. He has since then had three classes at once, and never less than two classes are preparing to contest. He has also trained them to furnish their own music, solos, part songs and choruses.

The president of Fresno local has a roll of honor, on which is entered the name of every member who brings in a new member. Fresno has just succeeded in preventing a retail liquor license being given and expects to revoke another soon. Morgan Hill has closed its last saloon, having for some years had its perennial battle. This victory is presumed to be permanent.

The Y's of Pleasant Valley have presented life-sized colored portraits of Miss Willard, neatly framed, to the schools of that district.

Camden Will Be Dry.

Huntingdon, Tenn., April 4.—Last Saturday an election was held in Camden to decide the saloon question. The whisky people carried the election by two votes majority. The temperance people claimed that the wets had control of the election and that several people voted who should not have been allowed to do so. The matter was placed before Senator Jackson and Representative Leslie, the local representatives, and they introduced a bill in both houses to repeal the charter and reincorporate without saloons. Yesterday the bill passed final reading and the town will be dry. This leaves only two towns in west Tennessee where whisky can be legally sold.

Willard Memorial Hall at Ottawa, Kan.

Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, Correspondent.

Le Loup, Kan., April 13.—The Kansas division of our white ribbon army has pressed steadily forward during the past winter. The midyear meeting of the state executive committee, recently held in Topeka, received many encouraging reports from those chosen to guard the various department interests. The state finances are in a good condition, although unusual expenses have been met. Thirty new unions have been organized and the "Suggestive Programs" published in the minutes are being followed by many of the unions.

There was much cause for congratulation that the threatened resubmission movement had disappeared before the bold stand taken by the friends of prohibition, and instead of any backward step the prohibitory law had been strengthened by the legislature. More than 20,000 signatures, asked for to the resubmission petition, were presented to the legislature, scoring another victory for the department of Petitions.

For more than a year the Kansas W. C. T. U. has been gathering money to be used in erecting a Frances E. Willard Memorial Hall at Forest Park, the location of the Ottawa Chautauqua. The hall is to be used for the W. C. T. U. Headquarters at the assembly. The necessary $1,000 is nearly all in hand or promised, and the building will be commenced very soon. Many special parts of the hall will be placed in honor of certain persons by their friends. For instance, the fireplace will be given by the First district for its president, Miss Olive P. Bray; the largest window will be paid for by the Y's; the remaining windows will bear the names of Rev. Eugenia St. John, Mrs. M. E. Haines and other workers; one of the ornamental central columns will commemorate the $100 legacy of Mrs. Marietta D. Ray; the other will be the gift of Mr. Grubb in memory of Mrs. Sophie F. Grubb. The executive committee carefully considered and accepted the plans for the building and appointed the building committee.

The state paper, "Our Messenger," was shown to be in an excellent financial condition, with a subscription list of over 62 per cent of the membership. As the editor was about to leave the state her resigation was accepted and Alice G. Young, of Downs, was elected editor.

The lecture bureau was discontinued. Mrs. L. B. Smith, state corresponding secretary, was made state reporter for The Union Signal, and Miss Emma Page, of Washington, and Mrs. Lucy Thurman, National superintendent, were engaged for field work.

GENERAL NEWS.

The perennial city election campaign is just closing. As women are voters in the Kansas cities they feel much interest in the spring elections. The usual issue is "wet or dry" and the woman vote is counted on as a factor in the "dry' campaign.

Evangelistic meetings have been successfully conducted by some of our field workers. Miss M. M. Southard, Y secretary, was at Bluff City and Freeport. Some sixty conversions were reported from the former place. Miss Southard is arranging to visit every Y in the state this spring.

Rev. Mary Sibbitt, state lecturer and organizer, returned in February from her five months of work in Ohio and Indiana. She at once commenced a series of meetings at La Loup. The weather and roads could hardly have been worse and many families were "shut in" by ill health. Commencing with an audience of six, the attendance scarcely ever exceeding twenty or thirty, yet there were thirty-three conversions and twenty-seven additions to the M. E. church. A flourishing C. E. Society was organized and named for Mrs. Sibbitt. After helping in the election campaign in several places, Mrs. Sibbitt now goes to do pioneer work in the unorganized part of the state. Without doubt many new unions will be formed in the places she will visit.

Mrs. S. H. Wallace, another lecturer and organizer, after her six weeks in the northwestern part of the state, has been at home in Kansas City for a few weeks. Supposedly Mrs. Wallace has been resting; in fact, she has been one of the leading spirits in the election campaign. She now goes to the extreme southeastern part of the state to conduct a series of Institutes in Third district. New unions were organized, members added and many anti-tobacco and total abstinence pledges secured as a result of Mrs. Wallace's work in the Sixth district; the same good results are expected from her visit to the Third district.

Good reports are received from the places visited by Miss Christine Tinling. Her addresses are very much enjoyed. She is adding many new members and securing a long list of subscribers to "Our Messenger."

Major and Mrs. E. T. Scott are still at work in our state. They are organizing unions, conducting institutes and helping in the arousing of public sentiment before the spring elections.

Minnesota's Aims and Achievements.

Mary E. Hoover, Correspondent.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 13.—In the state legislature Senator Wilson has secured the passage of a bill providing for the establishment of a reformatory for women, with an appropriation of $5,000.

ANNIE. A. ROBBINS.

The county option measure met defeat, as it has for several sessions, but an evening visit of about fifty members of the legislature to the Golden Grain Belt plant and the Gluck plant, with banquet and speech and song, was easy of accomplishment, which points to the fact that Minnesota legislators are lacking in appreciation of the merits of the prohibition question. More home training, more temperance education in communities is the only remedy, and every union should fully realize its great responsibility and ever-present opportunity.

The two bills by Senator Eberhart for the protection of dumb animals it is said will pass. One of these provides that police officers may take animals exposed and suffering to a livery barn, the other that it shall be a misdemeanor for clipped horses to be left exposed to the cold.

The women of the W. C. T. U. and others are working hard to have the age of consent raised from sixteen to eighteen years and to secure the passage of a law forbidding the sale of liquor within one mile of Fort Snelling.

The state W. C. T. U. is using the organizing fund to send speakers and organizers into the field. Miss Annie Robbins, Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mrs. Maria S. Weed have done excellent work. In May Miss Margaret Wintringer and Mrs. Callie Howe are expected to work in the state, and Mrs. Stead and Mrs. Bayrell, state organizers, will be ready for engagements in June. Mrs. Abbie Church and Mrs. Princell, evangelistic worker and superintendent of Scandinavian work, respectively, are now prepared to fill engagements.

Minnesota's state president, Mrs. B. L. Scovell, is secretary of the W. C. T. U. Association of the Louisiana Purchase States, and Minnesota is among the strongest of the thirteen states in the group. Accordingly the women of the state are asked to generously assist in paying for the erection of an ice water fountain at the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904. Each union is asked to give an entertainment during the coming summer and devote the proceeds to the undertaking. State President Scovell is resting from field work, though attending to correspondence and keeping the interests of the state well in hand. Though she is not well it is hoped this year of change will prove beneficial.

The state central committee meets once a month to prepare for the work and the superintendents' quarterly meeting, it is hoped, will be an added stimulus. Hennepin District convention, to be held in June, promises to be an occasion of unusual pleasure and profit. Many unions in the district have learned the secrets of success and the prospect is good for a gain in membership.

One Thousand New Members the Hope for Alabama.

Mrs. Maria B. Douglas, Correspondent.

Bridgeport, Ala., April 11.—Bridgeport held last month the first of a series of mothers' meetings, which were most interesting and helpful. An able paper by Mrs. Addie Lawrence, formerly of Battle Creek, Mich., on "The Mother's Responsibility and Influence," called forth a discussion as to when that responsibility began. There were Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Second Adventist, Unitarian and Catholic ladies present, but all were interested in the subject of motherhood.

The state superintendent of literature is busy trying to place circulating libraries in remote districts. She would like to secure three such by June, if means or books are supplied.

Many of the unions have held memorial services. Birmingham reports a very interesting public meeting, Boaz a parlor meeting; Mobile, Fairhope, Hartsville and others have remembered the day with offerings.

Everywhere throughout the state the watchword is one thousand new members this year. With willing hearts and willing hands to work, we hope to secure them.

Elections in Kansas.

Special Correspondence.

Ottawa, Kan., April 7.—The recent city elections in Kansas demonstrated that the people are in favor of law-enforcement, and in nearly every instance where the "wet" and "dry" proposition was an issue, the "dry" people won by a good majority. The principal fight against liquor in the state was in the capital city, Topeka. Other cities had contests along the same line, notably, Concordia, Salina, and Hutchinson. For the first time in many years, Concordia will have a temperance mayor. There is talk of contesting the election. Great credit is given to the women, and the part they have played is an unanswerable argument in favor of woman suffrage.

Mankato, a city of the third class, adopted a novel way of getting the voters to take an interest in election: small boys rang dinner and cow bells in front of the residences.

What Oklahoma is Doing.

Sue Uhl Brown. Correspondent.

Oklahoma City, Ok., April 14.—Mrs. Abbie B. Hillerman, identified with our organization since 1889, and elected territorial corresponding secretary in 1900, is an Indiana woman, born of Quaker parentage and educated in a Friends' school. A Kansas training has prepared her for her present work in our organization. Her husband and children give her loyal support and she is endeavoring to carry out the wishes of her loved mother in the broader life into which the W. C. T. U. has led her. Her devotion to our cause has broadened the field of our association and her executive ability exerts a wide influence. She has decided opinions and is not afraid to express them.

The territorial semi-annual sessions met in Oklahoma City for two days in March. Important business was transacted and plans laid for future work. Among the most important was for a paper of "our very own." The annual convention was voted to be held in Aloa, Woods county, where there are sixteen unions—more than in any other county in Oklahoma. R. Foster Stone delivered an able address the first evening. On the second a gold medal contest was conducted by Mrs. Abbie B. Hillerman, Miss Fannie Long, of Guthrie, winning the prize.

MRS. ABBIE B. HILLERMAN.

The Canadian county convention at Calumet had a representation of twenty-two delegates from five unions. Mrs. Ella J. Barnes, the county president, presided, and was also re-elected for the coming year. The two days' sessions were filled with business, fine papers and question boxes. The honored guest was Territorial President Mrs. Dorothy Cleveland, whose W. C. T. U. enthusiasm inspires all who come in contact with her. The pleasing home-like arrangements of the church at Calumet are recommended by Mrs. Cleveland as a model for county conventions. Rugs, rockers, small tables, cut flowers and palms made the room very attractive.

West Guthrie union is engaged in medal contests and receptions to school teachers. They observed, with their L. T. L., Neal Dow day, and also circulated petitions for the Sunday closing of saloons, theaters, opera houses and other places of amusement. This union has twenty-four honorary members.

Oklahoma City is in the throes of an election for city officers. Rev. Thomas Harper, for mayor, represents enforcement of law, while the other candidate favors a wide-open town.

R. Foster Stone is lecturing and organizing in Oklahoma county. He has effected two unions at the beginning of his work.

Temperance Mass Meetings in Philadelphia.

H. Frances Jones, Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 13.—One of the pleasant "doings" of this year has been arranging, with the help of committees, the above meetings. The hearty co-operation of ministers and the open doors of churches have shown the interest taken in our organization. We started the meetings in January and will continue this second series until May. Large audiences have greeted the speakers on different phases of our work, among them the Revs. Floyd Tompkins, D. D.; L. J. Graham, D. D.; Geo. Rees, D. D.; W. Yates, D. D.; J. Gough Pidge, D. D.; Madame Barakat, Rev. Anna Shaw and our county and state officers, the unions acting as hostesses and greeting us with a "real royal welcome." New members were gained and fine offerings were received for the cause.

MISS H. FRANCES JONES.

We were glad to start in connection with these meetings the anti-polygamy crusade in our state, with Dr. Sarah Elliott as speaker. From March 17 to April meetings were held each night and often in afternoons. The Methodist and Baptist Women's Home Missionary anniversaries gathered crowds to hear the message and the Lutheran Society had also the pleasure of an afternoon meeting. Each denomination and several organizations rallied to greet our sister in the social meeting in the spacious parlors of the Willard, 1921 Arch street.

The social committee of the Philadelphia union had a delightful program arranged. Dr. Elliott was greeted with hearty applause and the rising vote with uplifted hands gave evidence of the co-operation of all organizations present to aid in the crusade before us.

I regret that I cannot name in detail the pleasantries of this special social meeting, and indeed all the others, for much has been crowded into these meetings to make them tell for God and righteousness.

We trust the Keystone state will really steady the whole on this great question. Our purpose is to continue these meetings, feeling highly honored to have Dr. Elliott as our guest for coming weeks in the state—reaching the principal cities and towns. The earnest, intelligent and forceful manner in which she presents her message has won all hearts.

Prince Issues an Order to Fight Drunkenness.

Berlin, April 7.—The hereditary prince of Saxe-Meiningen, commander of the sixth army corps, who recently issued an order advising soldiers to lodge complaints when they were ill treated, has issued another corps order against drunkenness. He points out to the privates the damaging effects of alcohol on the health and usefulness of men and directs the regimental doctors to demonstrate to the soldiers its evil effects, authoritatively and in a kindly manner. About 1,700 instances of drunkenness were punished in the Sixth corps, numbering 25,000 men, last year.

Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Howe in Mississippi.

Harriet B. Kells, Correspondent.

Jackson, Miss., April 13.—Mrs. Callie H. Howe has just completed a most successful itinerary in Mississippi. She lost one-third of her engagements through floods of rain, yet left a fair surplus in the state treasury. Mrs. Howe inspires and converts pocketbooks as well as people. She always leaves a good impression. When once she has filled a pulpit on Sunday morning she may have it again. Engagements are already made with Mrs. Howe, beginning at the close of the next National Convention, and for 1904 in Mississippi's constitutional amendment campaign.

MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS.

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman began a month's work in Mississippi April 7. Mrs. Hoffman has been gladly welcomed, for she has always been beloved in the "Land of Cotton."

Keep Alcohol From The Children

BY DR. MAX KASSOWITZ

Professor of Children's Diseases in the University of Vienna, Austria

Translated from the German for the Department of Non-Alcoholic Medication of the National W. C. T. U.

ALL of the spirituous drinks, wine, beer, brandy, rum and cognac, contain a poison, alcohol or spirits, which is the cause of their intoxicating effect. Those diseases to which the habitual drinker is exposed, such as delirium tremens, fatty degeneration of the heart, cirrhosis of the liver and the kidneys are also produced by nothing else than the poisonous action of alcohol.

It is manifest that children are especially susceptible to this poison, since it takes only a small quantity to intoxicate them. Among grown people, death rarely results directly from severe intoxication, but such cases are frequent enough among children.

This peculiar susceptibility of children is also evident from the fact that even moderate quantities of beer, wine, rum, or cognac regularly used by children for a considerable period may occasion serious forms of disease, such as delirium tremens, attacks of epilepsy, enormous increase of the liver, and inflammation of the kidneys with dropsy.

All of these dreadful consequences of the so-called moderate drinking by children, have been observed repeatedly by myself and other physicians.

In the face of such facts, people unwilling to expose their children to any such danger must desist from giving them alcoholic drinks of any sort.

Against any such warning one commonly meets the objection that the effects of alcohol are not exclusively injurious, that they are also a benefit and useful, that beer has been recommended for its nutritive action as "liquid bread," that wine is a tonic, that cognac promotes digestion, and that drinks containing alcohol stimulate the intellect.

To all this one can only reply that even if all the above were true, no conscientious father or loving mother would risk the possibility of their children becoming dangerously diseased by means of drink for the sake of any of these pretended advantages. As a matter of fact, these advantages do not exist, and people who ascribe these beneficial properties to alcohol are lamentably mistaken.

Alcohol never affords nourishment, but remains always and only a poison. Food is a protection to the body and prevents it from wasting away, while poison is destructive to the body and hastens its waste. Alcohol certainly is a poison, because any human being, any animal, any plant can be killed by means of it. Scientists have made numerous experiments with it which have invariably led to the same result, namely, that alcohol cannot be substituted for any part of one's food, while even a very little alcohol quickens the waste of the actually living bodily substance. This fact is proved by the observation that children who have been supplied from their earliest youth with this supposed food, are frequently backward in growth and development, which of course would never result from the use of a real food.

The same truth holds with regard to the supposed promotion of digestion. With reference to this question also, experiments on human beings and animals have demonstrated that in every instance digestion was retarded and enfeebled, a fact substantiated by observation among children. Children frequently suffer from a loss of appetite merely because they are being supplied with beer, wine or cognac, and as soon as the alcohol interfering with their digestion is withheld, they regain their former pleasure in eating.

The imaginary strengthening action of alcohol is another fiction. People can only acquire strength by means of real foods, such as meat, fat, flour or sugar, but never by means of poison. The utmost which poison can do is to benumb for a time the sense of fatigue. Following this deadening of the sensibility, however, the weariness and debility always return, increased in degree. That is why any severe physical effort can be accomplished more advantageously without alcohol, why those who wrestle or ride or contest for prizes at a regatta, let alcohol severely alone. They are aware that by means of any such strengthening they are sure of defeat.

As it is in respect to strengthening the body, so it is concerning the intellect. Regarding this, also, numerous experiments have completely demonstrated that either alcohol does not increase the mental capability, or that if momentarily there is a slight increase, that increase is followed in every instance by a very manifest lowering of power. Besides, this weakening of the intellectual power is not temporary; it may last hours or even days. As for children, a very small quantity, a decilitre (1-5 of a pint) is sufficient to obviously diminish their power of attention and capability for instruction. Accordingly, it is not surprising that when this subject was investigated in a public school in Vienna, it was found that those children who were in the habit of drinking wine or beer, ranked mostly among the poorest scholars.

It follows, therefore, that people who desire to have their children healthy in body and powerful in mind, must withhold from them alcoholic liquors of every variety.

Why Young People Should Sign the Temperance Pledge.

By The Rev. C. L. Palmer.

BECAUSE of the nature and extent of the rum power, several important agencies have been created to counteract its influence; one of which is the temperance pledge. Those who sign it promise to abstain from all intoxicants, including wine, beer and cider. It is not inexplicable that objections are made to making such a promise, since a life of conformity to temperance is another advance in the cause of righteousness. Some object to taking the pledge because they are unfamiliar with its contents. Others refuse to promise to be total abstainers so that they may be free to drink if they desire. Still others claim that conscience is sufficient. It will not be possible to answer each of these objections in the introduction to this article, since the purpose is to show that there are reasons why the young should take this obligation; but their fallacy will appear in the following:

1. EVERY YOUNG MAN AND WOMAN OUGHT TO SIGN THE TEMPERANCE PLEDGE BECAUSE IT IS ONLY ONE OF THE CONTRACTS OF LIFE. But it is a very important one. A life of total abstinence is filled with personal peace and blessing to others. Every phase of life has its pledge. Little children promise to obey their parents. Parents in presenting their infants for baptism promise to train them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. When the marriage vows are assumed, each makes solemn promises to the other. Those who unite with the church on profession of faith, pledge themselves to live according to the rules of the church. No one can become a member of any secret organization without binding himself to observe the obligations of the society. The oath of office is administered to every one in the employ of the government. Business men are constantly issuing notes which contain the promise of redemption. Corporations agree to pay interest on stock. The vitality of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League is lodged in the pledge. Every witness in a civil court is sworn to relate only the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Those who serve on the Grand Jury are obliged to promise that they will disclose none of the evidence. The entire social fabric is woven of promises. Why should temperance work be made an exception? The only reasonable answer is that in view of the evil of intemperance, the young should promise to be total abstainers.

2. EVERY BOY AND GIRL SHOULD SIGN THE TEMPERANCE PLEDGE, BECAUSE IT IS SPECIFIC. It defines an evil against which we ought to protect ourselves. It is not an indefinite statement that is capable of various interpretations, but it can be made to mean only teetotalism. Those who sign the temperance pledge promise to do what will be for their own good and the progress of the cause. Every contract in order to be valid must be definite. It must define something specific. It is the important obligation to assume because it gives us confidence in temptation and victory in conflict. Josiah Strong says that he took the total abstinence pledge for the following reasons: "1. Many can be total abstainers who cannot be temperate. There are very few who can be so-called moderate drinkers. 2. Because in total abstinence there can be no risk to health or morals. 3. Because total abstinence can never be dangerous as an example. The moderate drinker is known simply as a 'drinker.' 4. Because total abstinence does not make me in the smallest degree responsible for a traffic which involves measureless evil. 5. Because in the presence of that evil I cannot afford to stop my mouth with a wine glass. 6. Because total abstinence is the highest Christian ground. 7. Because I think if Jesus were to attend some of the modern social gatherings He would convert wine into water." One of the most potent reasons for the justification of this plan is, that it becomes a part of one's life to live his promises. The assumption of such an obligation in early life is the incarnation of a heaven-born principle.

3. ANOTHER ADVANTAGE OF SIGNING THE PLEDGE IS THAT IT DEFINES OUR POSITION. It designates our attitude toward the king of vices. Those in favor of temperance ought to be willing to have it known; the cause needs our allegiance and we require its impetus. Dr. Conwell tells the story of a man who came to him to sign the temperance pledge. He told Dr. Conwell that it was not uncommon for him to have wine in his home and to drink it at the table; but one day he discovered that his little boy was intoxicated as the result of drinking at home. He wished to sign the pledge himself so that he could request his boy to do the same. He must first establish his own position before attempting to influence his boy. It is not so well known as it ought to be that our safety depends upon the security of others. If we can be the means of protecting others from this vice they in turn will become a protection to us.

A captain handed a little drummer boy a glass containing liquor. The boy refused to take it, because, said he, "I am a cadet of temperance." The captain insisted and the boy continued to decline. The captain then said, "I command you to drink, and you know it is death to disobey orders." The boy straightened himself up and said, "Sir, my father died a drunkard, and when I entered the army I promised my mother that by God's help I would not use any intoxicants, and I intend to keep my word." The men cheered the little hero, and the captain had not the injustice to punish him. The child defined his position. The captain and the army saw where he stood; and he took a stand that not only raised him in the estimation of the men, but furnished an example of what can be demonstrated in the time of temptation.

4. THERE IS ONE MORE REASON WHY YOUNG PEOPLE OUGHT TO SIGN THE TEMPERANCE PLEDGE. THE VERY ACT OF MAKING A PROMISE BECOMES AN INCENTIVE TO KEEP IT. Children obey their parents not only because they ought, but because they have promised to do so. Parents endeavor to bring their children up in the ways of righteousness because they have promised that they would. Men pay their notes because they have promised to pay at a certain time. Many are living godly lives because the promise they made has become a power in their lives. One cold dark night Rev. Mark Guy Pearse took a cab from a London suburb. Upon reaching home he bade the driver come in and warm himself. Mr. Pearse noticed that the man had no overcoat, and was otherwise insufficiently clad. Upon inquiry it became apparent that rum was the cause of his poverty. Mr. Pearse said: "I have a coat up stairs that would suit you, but before I give it to you I am bound to tell you something peculiar about it, and it is right that I should explain it to you before you put it on." The driver asked him what it was. Mr. Pearse continued: "That coat has never had a glass of beer or spirits inside of it, and I want you to promise that so long as you wear it you will not defile it by drink." The man replied that he would comply with the condition. Quite a while afterward the two men met, and the driver told Mr. Pearse that the promise was the means of keeping him from drink and that he intended to use the cup no more. The time to make such a promise is not in the future, but now.

A word of exhortation: We are fighting a mighty evil; one that has found its way into nearly every avenue of life. Many important agencies are working to conquer the rum vice, but the end is not yet. There must be more work and prayer before the tyrant will fall; but we can help to overcome the curse if we put our shoulders to the burden in the name of the Lord. We can promise to use no liquor ourselves. We can take a positive stand for the right. We can labor with some temperance organization. We can extend a lifting hand to some fallen brother. We can evince by a consistent life that the power of Christian living is obtained from the Spirit Divine, and that only as we walk in the light of truth can we be bright and shining lights to others. As we enter upon the new year let it be with the promise that we will use nothing to defile ourselves in the sight of man or God.

Shokan, N. Y.

SACRED BRIDGE, NIKKO.

NEW YEAR'S RALLY OF THE TOKYO TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

BY KARA G. SMART.

THE annual New Year's Rally Meeting of the Tokyo Temperance Society was held on Jan. 10. By two o'clock in the afternoon an audience of over 100 men and a few women had gathered at Ginza church, which is headquarters for almost every religious, temperance and philanthropic enterprise in the center of this great city. The audience represented the best and most deeply interested temperance workers in Tokyo. The afternoon was devoted to earnest and inspiring addresses by our Japanese brothers, Hon. Taro Ando, Rev. Mr. Miyama, Rev. Mr. Ukai, and a gentleman, who, I afterward learned, is a member of parliament and a good friend of our cause. Dr. Julius Soper, our staunch helper for many years, spoke most enthusiastically, and I added my mite.

A hot supper was served to all, after which a prayer meeting was held.

The chief speaker at the evening meeting was a well-known Japanese physician, Dr. Kennosuke Wada, a graduate from the Southern California University at Los Angeles. He gave many results of his experiments, and spoke of his conversion to the non-use of alcohol as a medicine. He has placed himself at the service of the temperance forces and because of his statements the Tokyo Temperance Society, having a membership of about six hundred, has changed its pledge, which had heretofore allowed the use of liquor medicinally, to a pledge prohibiting the use of alcohol as a medicine as well as a beverage. So much for the inauguration of a movement for non-alcoholic medication in Japan.

Nor is this all. At this same meeting I saw a series of interesting and remarkable experiments and drawings by a young man under twenty-five years of age, a biological specialist, Rykite Sakai by name.

He had taken a small quantity of rice and, following it through the different processes of digestion, had shown the effects of alcohol thereon. A rat had been preserved in a liquid which was seventy per cent alcohol. The death of this animal had been brought about in four hours by putting three drops of alcohol on its tongue. This same young man has drawn charts, from microscopic experiments made by himself, showing the effects of alcohol upon the blood, bone, nerves, ganglia, brain and eyes. In one of the talks which I heard him give, he said to his hearers: "To drink alcohol is to commit suicide. Ninety per cent of the five hundred inmates of one of the city insane asylums became insane through drink."

At present it looks very much as if in these two bright lights Japan is to find men who will do for her what Doctors Richardson, Kellogg, Davis, Crothers, and others have done for Europe and America.

At this meeting, over two hundred yen in cash and about fifty yen in pledges were raised for our faithful temperance evangelist, Rev. Mr. Miyama, who through his work on the island of Kiushiu recently secured over three hundred new members for the National Temperance League.

It is interesting to know that "The Child's Book of Health," a primary temperance physiology, has been translated into Japanese by Hon. Taro Ando, and that it will be published as soon as the necessary permit is received from the American publishers of the book. An effort is being made to place this book in all missionary and private schools, and it is hoped that it will, in a measure, fill the demand for temperance literature which is daily coming to the Methodist publishing house here. At the above meeting in a very few minutes pledges were taken for over two thousand copies of this book.

An unique feature of the decorations was a physical outline map of Japan, made of heavy paper and tacked upon the wall. This map was deep blue in color, was pitched over sideways, and looked as if it might soon become bottom-side up. We noticed many disfigured spots upon its surface, while the edges were so badly broken in several places that an attempt had been made to repair them with pieces of wood, cloth and card-board. While wondering what this evident object lesson could mean, our glance fell upon a sake keg, bottle and cup, standing just beneath the drawing, and we needed not the additional words to tell us that we were looking upon intemperate Japan, the Japan of today.

A few steps more, and we stood in front of another map, identical with the first in size and shape. This last was perfectly white in color, was in an upright position, and there was not a disfigurement of any kind to be seen on the surface. At one side lay a smashed and splintered sake keg, and a broken sake bottle and cup. Looking up, we discovered draped above all, with staffs united and colors blending, the dear old Stars and Stripes, and the beloved emblem of the Sunrise Kingdom.

While we were exclaiming with pleasure at the significance of it all, our escort told us that this last emblem was the Japan that is to be, through the united efforts of the earnest workers from America and her own valiant soldiers of the temperance army. We pray that this may indeed be a true prophecy of the future.

Japan has its Daniels, and one of them has recently been discovered in Mr. T. Oshima, who has for many years served as principal of the government schools at Shizuoka, the city mentioned in my last letter as the one we visited with such good results. These schools are very large, and the students number several hundreds. Because of his position Mr. Oshima was really the head man of the entire ken, or district. Up to a year ago last November he had been an inveterate user of tobacco and a drinker of liquor as well. He was then converted through the influence of a temperance meeting and not only gave up these habits, but openly declared himself in favor of temperance and forbade the use of tobacco or alcohol in the schools. He was soon made the president of the local temperance society.

Just before my visit to his home city, in November, Mr. Oshima had been removed as principal of the Shizuoka schools and had been sent to Chiba, a much smaller and less important town, to take charge of the schools here. Although the students in the Chiba schools were more in number than in the other city, and his salary was somewhat increased, it was well understood by those who knew the facts, that the apparent promotion was in reality a severe reprimand for the stand he had taken for the temperance cause. Notwithstanding this, he came back to his native city to take a most active part in the series of temperance meetings held while I was there.

THE VEGETABLE MARKET, TOKYO.

After a few weeks I again met Mr. Oshima, when he told me that he had resigned his position as principal of the Chiba government schools and was on his way to take charge of a small missionary school with only seventy pupils. This school is located at Nagoya in one of the smaller towns of the empire. He was so happy, and he grasped my hand with such heartiness that as I looked into his shining face, I imagined he had received the promotion of his life. And so he had, for here he will have liberty of speech and action, although his fare for the future may be only pulse and water. A New Year's message from him in his new home assures me that he does not regret this last step. Let us pray that many more stalwarts, such as he, may be raised up in this land to do battle, at whatever cost, for our cause.

No. 30 Tsukiji, Tokyo, Japan.

Conquerors. By Henry Davis Middleton.

STILL feebler the harsh clash of arms resound;
Hushed is the far-fetched din of cannonade;
Unvanquished warriors, wary, unafraid,
In triumph leave the gory battle ground.
Undimmed their glory, unalloyed the sound
Of copious praise both bard and sage essayed.
Through endless years their triumphs are conveyed
To every clime where mortal man is found.
But nobler those, adept in martial strife,
Who battle not 'gainst foe on land or sea
Nor seek reward of temporal power or pelf,
But ever on the battlefield of life
Do single-handed gain the victory;—
Noblest are they who bravely conquer self.
Chicago.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter VII.

WHILE the vicar divided his time between the making of thoughtful sermons, enemies and a home for his bride, the curate built up for himself a reputation that was more than parochial. If the congregations at the parish church thinned perceptibly those at the mission room grew apace. They were augmented, as the fame of the preacher spread, by visitors from the surrounding villages, who tramped cheerfully through miles of dusty road for the pleasure of smarting under the lash of the Rev. Hugh Brotherton's tongue.

For the present Enoch and his friends had to content themselves with such liberal crumbs of teetotalism as Hugh flung broadcast from his pulpit on Sunday evenings, for Mr. Boyd had not yet consented to the restoration of the weekly temperance meeting.

"To put it plainly, I don't quite see what good we are likely to do by fostering the parochial pride in its pet virtue. Granting the infamy of the odd dozen, personal dealing is the only possible way of reaching them. They certainly will not come to temperance meetings, and for Enoch and his friends, addresses on some other Christian duties might not be out of place."

"That's so like Boyd, and, of course, there is something to be said from his point of view," said Hugh, during one of his pleasant little afternoon calls on Mrs. Langley. "Still, I think he forgets that, unless we show our colors, the interest of the parish in this question will, sooner or later, die out. It's all very well to be liberal minded and all that, but Boyd is like that in everything. He's shilly-shally with the whole question, till in the end nothing is done. That's what Enoch and the rest don't like in him."

"Of course they don't like it," said the lady, sympathetically. "Still, wouldn't it be almost too much to expect all the world should be enthusiasts such as you and I?"

"Well, perhaps it would," assented Hugh, rather narrowly watching the expression of her face, which was guileless and sweet. "Still, if Boyd had seen what I have seen——"

He had not the slightest intention of giving his family history away, but was in no way averse from making the most of his experience in general terms.

"Ah—you, too?"

It was but a little unchecked impulse of sympathy, but to Hugh it seemed to tell a good deal.

"Who has not?" he asked gloomily, but without any particular meaning, since, within his own circle, grandad was the only known victim of drink.

"Ah—who, indeed? Mr. Brotherton, it is not too much to say that it has wrecked my life,"

It was but a whisper, but Hugh thought he understood.

"That is terrible—terrible!" he repeated, genuinely shocked.

"I cannot speak of it," said Mrs. Langley, hurriedly, as if she feared to be questioned; "all I can say is that you have my keenest sympathy."

She put the subject resolutely aside and began to speak of the vicar's approaching marriage, a topic that was not nearly so interesting to Hugh.

When, presumably, he went away to accomplish his afternoon tale of visits—to do him justice, he never lingered over-long in Mrs. Langley's drawing room—he took with him food for much meditation. He feared there was little room to doubt that he, more correctly than the vicar, had divined the cause of Mrs. Langley's aloofness; the question was, how to make judicious use of the discovery. The question was not decided when, in the course of an afternoon's honest work, he called at Sellers' cottage and there encountered Dr. Mann.

Billy, who was one of the most unfortunate as well as the most drunken of men, had come home from the pit with a shattered thumb.

When the weeping Mrs. Sellers opened the door to admit Hugh, the doctor was engaged in applying splints and pointing the moral of the occasion.

"Do well? Let's hope it will; but, mind you, it will be no thanks to you. A man who wants to soak himself with beer, as you do, ought to take precious good care to keep his limbs whole. D'ye remember that broken leg, and what came after it? Wouldn't any decent man have let that be a warning to him?"

"Gar on, and talk to summun o' your own size," said the incorrigible Billy, but his countenance changed when his eyes encountered Hugh.

The doctor might always be put off by a brazen reply, but not so the young parson. The opportune appearance of the Rev. Hugh Brotherton struck poor Billy much more forcibly in the light of a judgment than did the injury to his thumb. Moreover, the curate manifested every intention of staying, while the doctor made haste to go.

"Don't spare him, Mr. Brotherton; he doesn't deserve any pity," he cheerfully remarked, as he looked round for his hat and gloves.

"And ye're a nice 'un to say so, an' all," grumbled Billy, resentfully, "if so be what we hears is true."

"You shouldn't believe anything you hear, and not more than half of what you see; but even that charitable rule wouldn't save you, Billy," retorted the doctor, as he went out.

"He will have his joke, but he likes his glass, for all that, does Mann," was Billy's obstinate comment.

For the next half hour Hugh devoted himself perseveringly to the task of softening Billy's hard heart. He went away at last in the cheering conviction that he had not made the slightest impression, for had not the old tippler the vicar's own word for it that "there was may a worse thing than gettin' a bit drunk now and then?"

With pardonable malice Hugh reported this remark at headquarters; the hint concerning Dr. Mann he kept to himself.

A few days later, either by accident or design, he found occasion to call on the doctor. He went late in the evening and after a brief delay was shown into a private "snuggery" adjoining the consulting-room.

"My own private and particular den, where no one but my own man dares, or would venture, to molest me," the doctor explained, as he pulled forward a well-worn easy chair. "Nothing the matter, is there? No? Thank goodness for that! I'm not in the mood for turning out to-night."

Hugh explained his errand and having received the information he sought was easily persuaded to stay a while. The evening was chilly and the cheerful little fire that crackled in the grate was distinctly pleasant. Save in the presence of his sister, Dr. Mann was at all times an interesting companion, and again, as often before, Hugh said within himself that it must have been some special motive that brought such a man to settle, apparently for life, in so uncongenial a place. Could it be that—— Even as the thought occupied his mind the answer came. It looked like it, for the doctor, who had risen while talking and sauntered to a corner cupboard, returned with a spirit decanter and glasses.

"No use in asking you to join me, I'm afraid?" he inquired, holding up the whisky before proceeding to mix for himself.

"Thank God, no!" replied Hugh, with considerable energy.

"Ah!" and the doctor smiled lazily. "I supposed you to be pretty far gone. Are you a convert, or a lifer? The former, I bet, judging from your zeal."

"You are wrong; I am a life abstainer," said Hugh calmly.

He did not like the implication that such zeal as his was, in all probability, of recent birth.

"My word! What a lot you have missed!" sighed Mann, as he put down his glass. "What are you staring at, Brotherton?"

"At you," said Hugh bluntly. "Do you keep your total abstinence principles and practice exclusively for Mrs. Langley's table?"

Mann coolly puffed at his meerschaum before replying.

"What principles do you mean? I have no recollection of having committed myself to anything very definite in that way."

Nor, as a matter of fact, had he, as Hugh instantly recollected. Still——

"As to my practice, I bring it into line with Mrs. Langley's—in her domain. Here, in my own, I do as I please."

Hugh did not find the explanation satisfactory. "I am sorry for you," he said gravely.

"The sentiment is reciprocal," replied the doctor, in the same tone. "Still, don't misunderstand me," he added, after a pause. "For a limited class of people, I believe your contention is right and sound. By all means, let such degenerates as find it impossible to keep within due limits abstain, if you can persuade them to do so. Any other course is suicidal. But for a wholesome, average human being, who has himself well in hand, I know of no greater solace for the petty ills and worries of this life than a glass of something hot with a pipe. Now, hear me out. Perhaps you are beginning to know, almost as well as I do, what it is to come home from a round of trivial grumbles and grievances in the last stage of exasperation. It is neither the heavy cases nor the death-beds, I take it, that wear a man out. I venture to say that you don't feel so like swearing after a course of Bet Colson as you do after ten minutes of Miss Smith. By the way, though, does a parson ever feel the need of a good round swear?"

"This parson does—very often," admitted Hugh, with one of those boyish lapses into which he was occasionally betrayed.

Dr. Mann looked pleased.

"Well, had you been brought up in a more liberal atmosphere than, I fancy, you have been accustomed to inhale, you would have realized before this that here is a restorative that will enable you to look benignly upon your fellow-creatures, and will open your eyes to see some good in every individual member of the contradictous crew."

"But," said Hugh quickly, "ought not the inclination to swear to be overcome, and the ability to see the good points in one's fellow creatures to be acquired, without any such doubtful agency?"

"Fairly argued. I admit it; if you conscientiously believe the agency to be doubtful. But come now. Putting teetotal cant aside, where is the harm in recuperating one's jaded faculties in this particular way? Suppose, for the sake of argument, that you were to substitute it now and then for that perniciously strong cup of tea to which you have probably accustomed yourself. In what would the sin consist?"

Hugh hesitated.

"There is undoubtedly an element of danger in alcohol that other stimulants, such as tea, do not possess."

"For the degenerates. I have already admitted it; but do you include yourself in that class?"

"Of course not," said Hugh, with some annoyance; "but you have forgotten the very strong argument of example."

"Now we are getting to the point. Do you abstain from alcohol because you feel it to be wrong in itself, for you as an individual man, or simply for the sake of example?"

"Simply for the sake of example," said Hugh, at once.

"Then, were you on a desert island, with a supply of alcohol, you would solace yourself daily with a moderate glass without feeling that you were doing anything wrong?"

"I—suppose so.'

"Very good! My glass of grog, then, is innocent enough in itself. Now I ask you what possible difference does my hour of moderate enjoyment make to the odd dozen who drank long before my day, and will probably drink in spite of all that you can do or say?'

"Why, then, abstain at all—even in Mrs. Langley's domain?" asked Hugh.

There was a momentary silence as Mann carefully cleared his pipe of its ashes.

"You scent a suspicion of false pretenses. There are none. Mrs. Langley knows that I do not entirely abstain."

"She does, indeed, or I am much mistaken," thought Hugh.

"And you are conscious of no danger to yourself?" he asked pointedly.

Mann devoted himself to the careful lighting of his pipe.

"What you mean is, am I never conscious of wanting a little more, when I know that I have already had as much as is good for me. Certainly I am, and I contend that the repeated resolution to abstain, at any point, makes a far greater demand upon a man than the resolution to abstain once for all.

"Possibly," said Hugh, assenting to the proposition coldly because of an instant conviction of its truth.

"The fact is," said Mann, "that though alcohol, when abused, makes fools—and worse than fools—of us all, used in moderation it is a good servant. For a jaded, harassed, hard-driven devil like me, the best servant that I know. We'll agree to differ, Brotherton. It was a merciful dispensation of Providence that bestowed upon me a conscience that permits me to do so."

Quite unconsciously to himself, Hugh's eyes followed the empty glass with somewhat wistful interest as Mann set it down. It was not until after his return home that he remembered how much there was that still called for explanation—Mrs. Langley's dark hints among the rest. Still, whatever he might think of Mann's arguments, he had no longer any suspicion that he drank to excess.

(To be continued.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

THE SENIOR L. T. L.

Conducted by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, General Secretary.

Notes.

HAS your Legion contributed to the Willard Memorial Fund for 1903?

Each Legion should observe a Parents' day during the spring months, if it has not already held such a celebration this year.

The addresses of Mr. Burns and Mr. Shattuck, given at the Portland National Convention, are now ready in leaflet form, as promised, at ten cents per ten copies or seventy-five cents per one hundred copies. These addresses should be read in every Senior Legion and each Senior Legion will desire to own them.

The March issue of the "North Carolina White Ribbon" is an L. T. L. number. It contains a sketch of the work of the state L. T. L. secretary, Miss Frances E. Ufford, in her Home Industrial School for Girls at Albemarle, designating her "life and labors as now a part of the history of education in North Carolina." To this issue of the paper Miss Ufford contributes a resumé of the object and achievements of the L. T. L. in general, and her annual report of the work in her own state.

That enthusiastic and steadfast Senior leader, Professor David E. Arnold, of Elk Garden, West Virginia, reports that his annual graduating class will this year be ready for their diplomas about the first of August, and will number about twenty. The regular meetings of the past winter have been interesting and well attended.

The March number of the "Loyal Temperance Legion Helper" (Miss Alice M. Guernsey, editor), packed full of good things as usual, announces that the annual state conference will be held in Passaic April 9. Among the valuable contents of the paper are programs for March meetings, a leaflet drill and skeleton lessons.

Mrs. Lily F. Blanks, state L. T. L. secretary for Louisiana, has a class of twelve W. C. T. U. women who are preparing to receive diplomas at the next state convention.

Neal Dow Day was delightfully celebrated by the Senior Legion of Paragould, Arkansas. Professor Leggitt of the public schools gave a fine address upon Miss Willard and Neal Dow, both of whose pictures adorned the platform. As a result the Legion received seven new members. The Legioners are preparing flower-beds under the inspiration of the offer of two prizes of $15 and $10, respectively, for the most satisfactory results in floriculture. Two girl Seniors are teachers in the Junior Legion.

We have ceased to be surprised at the frequent success of the wideawake Legion of Dover, N. H., which has just netted $32 from a medal contest. The local press gives a fine report of the handsome decorations, the choice music and the admirable speaking of the eight contestants.

Mr. J. W. Pierce, of Montclair, New Jersey, temperance evangelist, reports as the result of a W. C. T. U. campaign of several months in Iowa, 26 Legions organized, 3,311 pledged members secured, 229 public schools addressed, 75 mass meetings for boys and girls, with many blessed conversions.

Nuggets From New York.

BUT some one says, "We have Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools; why is a Legion necessary?" We thank God and take courage that we have this law on our statute books, but Scientific Temperance Instruction deals with only one portion of the question, that of the effect of alcoholics and narcotics on the human system, and while this is a most important part to consider, still the financial, social and governmental aspects and greatest of all the MORAL aspect of the liquor problem must be taken into account and should be a part of the early education.

Scientific Temperance Instruction is compulsory; but it is not always taught by people who are in sympathy with the text books, or who have had the experience or education in the fundamental principles of the temperance problem. The teachers in the Loyal Temperance Legion are instructing the children in a subject of vital importance to them, one which they are constantly studying from every point of view and to which they are giving their best efforts.

Frances E. Willard said: "Scientific Temperance Instruction safeguards the individual life, specific temperance training gives the expert and reformer. The Senior L. T. L. holds the boys until they are lads, the lads until they are youths, the youths until they are men, and it makes them temperance voters." During the years between thirteen and twenty, character is being formed which will mean to each individual his weal or his woe. The Senior L. T. L. takes the boys and girls from the Junior society and places them in a position where they can utilize the knowledge obtained.

It places about them an environment which strengthens and develops the best that is in them. It sets before them an ideal manhood and womanhood which can only be attained by integrity, purity and the perfect consecration of life's noblest and best impulses. There is no child so protected or surrounded, no young man or woman so secluded from the temptations and evils of the world but needs the fortifying and energizing influences of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

MARY B. WOOD,
State L. T. L. Secretary.

New Plans for 1903.

IN the line of our two new plans for the L. T. L. work of 1903 we have received the following items:

By invitation of the pastor and the Christian Endeavor committee of St. Peter's M. E. church of Reading Pa., took charge of the Sunday evening C. E. service. Fifty graduates wearing white ribbons were present, seven of whom took part. The pastor was so pleased that he invited the Seniors to speak to the regular evening congregation in the church. The L. T. L. leader writes: "I wish you could have heard our boys and girls talk that night. The pastor expressed his intention to have a Legion in his church. A lovely young woman came forward at the close of service and said she desired to be a Legioner at once. I really believe we are as never before grasping the idea of making the most of our opportunities."

Mrs. Sophia Harvey, one of Maine's faithful L. T. L. workers, during her winter's sojourn at Boydton Institute, Virginia, has organized and maintained a Legion of 119 members. Rev. Mr. Scott, in charge of an orphanage in that vicinity, who has aided Mrs. Harvey, will continue the work in her absence. Mrs. Harvey has also organized a Legion in connection with an orphanage in North Carolina.

Arizona.

WE have been greatly cheered of late by letters from the state president, Mrs. La Chance, from the territorial superintendent of work among Indians, Miss E. R. Shannon, and from the leader of the Phoenix Legion, Miss C. G. Gilchrist, all showing much interest and activity in L. T. L. lines. The Phoenix L. T. L. has been wise enough to secure competent service at a fair compensation. Miss Shannon is designated as a "host in herself," being a trained mission worker who has special facilities for reaching the Indian schools. Three Legions have already organized in the Phoenix Indian and Industrial School. Miss Shannon writes: I think THE YOUNG CRUSADER, which is certainly a bright, attractive paper, would help to arouse interest and enthusiasm, more, perhaps, than anything else."

Here, dear Seniors, is an opportunity for you to help in the Indian L. T. L. work in Arizona and to help our official organ as well. Report anything done in this direction to Mrs. K. T. A. Straw, 306 Salisbury street, Lafayette, Ind., director of our L. T. L. Extension Fund.

Scripture Cake.

THE "Green Mountain White Ribbon Cook Book," published by the W. C. T. U. of Vermont contains the following recipe for making Scripture Cake:

We suggest that the Senior girls prepare this cake for an L. T. L. social and the Senior boys make many typewritten copies of the recipe. These copies and the cake itself should be on sale for the benefit of the Legion, the recipe with the Scripture texts having been read aloud to introduce the sale.

RECIPE.

4 cups of 1 Kings 4:22, 1 cup of Judges 5:25 (last clause), 2 cups of Jeremiah 6:20 (sugar), 2 cups of 1 Samuel 30:12 (raisins), 2 cups of Nahum 3:12, 1 tablespoonful of Numbers 17:8, 1 large tablespoonful 1 Sam. 14:25, season to taste of 2 Chron. 9:9, 6 of Jeremiah 17:11, a pinch of Leviticus 2:13, one-half cup of Genesis 24:20, 2 teaspoonfuls of Amos 4:5 (baking powder). Follow Solomon's advice for making good boys, Prov. 23:14, and you will have a good cake.

Introduction of L. T. L. County Presidents—Continued.

Response of Homer S. Kent, Delaware Co.

I FEEL very much like the man who was told that he was to give an address at a meeting the next day. He went home that evening and worked hard all night getting out his speech. No one but the Lord and himself knew what the speech was. But now he said: "No one but the Lord knows what I want to say."

That is my case exactly, but at the same time there is one word which I might add with heart-felt sincerity. That is, I feel we are gathered together in this Convention in God's name and in the cause of humanity. I feel that such a large body of strong, earnest and enthusiastic young workers is bound to reap its long-labored-for harvest in the near future. I, for one, am proud to be in the midst of such a gathering, and a co-worker in the grandest cause to which man could consecrate his life.

Response of Chas. B. Humphreville, Lancaster Co.

I feel grateful, indeed, in having the pleasure of being introduced to this Convention in behalf of Lancaster county. I am happy to-night because since I have been here I have learned of the rapid increase of this grand reform throughout our dear state of Pennsylvania. I am glad that today more young voices than ever before are singing: "Saloons must go." And each voice, at once pathetic and prophetic, is sending into the future a melody which will awake reverberating echoes in the nurseries of the homes that are yet to be. The outlook for the temperance cause was never better than it is to-day. I believe, as I never before have believed, that the star of hope in the temperance reform hangs over the Loyal Temperance Legions, and that if we save the boys and girls of today we shall have saved the nation tomorrow.

Dear co-workers, let us not muse too long over the achievements of the past. It has occurred to me that some of us are given too much, perhaps, to looking backward. I am coming rapidly to the conclusion that today is vastly more important than yesterday. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds has said: "The good of ancient times let other state; I think it lucky I was born so late."

Today, behold! the world's grand portals
Swing wide to let her legions in;
The earth is trod by fair immortals,
Whose victories but just begin.

Let us, then, go forth today and fight this evil; let us strike till the last rum foe expires, and may each Loyal Legioner adopt this as his or her motto:

I am but one, but I am one.
I cannot do everything,
But I can do something.
What I can do, I ought to do,
And what I ought to do,
By the grace of God,
I will do.

Response of Caroline B. Kirk, Luzerne Co.

In looking back over the past year I think I may truthfully call it a year of discipline, for with floods and blizzards and smallpox and the strike it has been a hard, discouraging year to work. But I feel sure that if we have accepted these in the right spirit they will be of great benefit to us and make us less liable to become easily discouraged and to magnify the mole hills into mountains. But we have had our bright spots as well as our dark ones. We have seen some of our Legions, when they were unable to do anything more, hold together, ready to march forward to battle when permission was given them. We have seen some that were not allowed to hold any meetings go on with their department work. We have seen one of our Legions send out its members to other places, where they organized other Legions. In one place where our former county superintendents, our state president and our general secretary had all tried and failed to effect an organization, this Legion went to work and they were not discouraged when, on coming to organize, they found only a handful of children, but organized these and kept hold of them and worked on and prayed, until now they report a Senior Legion of over sixty members. So, you see, we have had our bright places, and I feel sure we could have had many more if we had been faithful in answering duty's call. We are so prone to answer "I can't," forgetting that we are never asked to do anything that we are not given the strength to do. So, dear Legioners, let us hereafter, when we hear the call, answer, "I can," and so make Emerson's words true when he says:

So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man;
When Duty whispers low, "Thou must,"
The youth replies, "I can."

—From Pennsylvania State Report.

(To be continued.)

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, April 16, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Gambrinus Product.

TOLEDO, Ohio, a city not devoid of bibulous attractions, has received an impetus in the wrong direction. The Gambrinus Brewing Company, recently organized, has bought out the old Mauser Company, so says The Toledo Times, and is about to establish in different parts of the city saloons which are to handle the Gambrinus product exclusively.

The news item which chronicles this bit of history does not state in detail the superior qualities of the "product" which attempts to compete with the output of other brewing industries. It is doubtful even if the attractive label upon the outside of the bottles which are to adorn the windows of these new centers, will give more authentic information. One is less concerned as to the nature of the product within these same bottles—which can only vary in the per cent of alcohol contained—than to learn the difference in the human repositories for which it is designed, which are, in truth, the bona fide product of the Gambrinus Company.

Does the new company propose to foist upon this suffering country a more hilarious form of inebriety, a more lurid delirium, brutal disregard of family responsibilities, or repulsive physical disfigurement? Or does it guarantee that its output contains no seeds of theft, robbery, murder or outrage against decency? Does it promise to keep the feet of its victims steady as they reel down the street at midnight on their homeward way, or to insure to them steadier hands when the next day they try to do a day's work? Is it pledged to have in it no germs of disease, physical or moral? Does it give assurance to the wives of those who drink at its bar freedom from heartbreak, or to their children exemption from shame, violence and poverty? Will it, when taken in quantities large or small, make better fathers, brothers, sons, lovers or citizens? These are questions which the public should force the Gambrinus Brewing Company, and every kindred enterprise, to honestly answer before it permits the scattering of the company's agencies through the business and residence districts of its cities.

There is peculiar significance in the fact that among the officers of the new company is a police commissioner of Toledo. This gentleman must know whereof he speaks when, as one of the promoters of this product, he advertises it to the thirsty world.

The newspapers and the criminal records have long made us familiar with the fact that an enormously large proportion of lawlessness and crime against private property and person is planned in the saloons of the large cities. There is a tradition among English-speaking people that the police system of this country was inaugurated and is sustained for the purpose of protecting law-abiding citizens and their defenseless families. Under this delusion taxpayers every year give a very generous amount towards the support of this system, in order that after the labor of the day they may lie down in their own homes in safety and security, with the certainty that on the streets of the city, patrol these paid guardians of people and property.

On how very frail a foundation this confidence now rests, one realizes when brought face to face with a fact like the foregoing—a police commissioner publishing himself as a prominent officer of an enterprise directly antagonistic to the duties of his civic office. What must be the character of protection which is supervised and controlled by men who are striving day and night to win the custom and gratify the appetites of the very class against which they are paid to protect citizens? Witness the arrest and conviction of a Chicago patrolman upon the charge of robbery.

Desperate, indeed, are the extremists of our great cities when forced to resort to a criminal-producing class for protection against outlawry and criminality.

A Suggested Investment.

CERTAIN Christian leaders in Philadelphia have issued a call to Sunday-school superintendents and members of churches urging that they arouse themselves, and, adding unto their other virtues a lively interest in affairs municipal, hasten straightway to the license court of their city to enter a protest against the granting and renewal of licenses for saloons in the districts where they live. The call reads:

"It is confidently believed that if all our churches and Sunday-school organizations will send their representatives into court to personally protest against the establishment of these saloons . . . it will have the effect of inducing the court to take favorable action in the matter."

Unless human nature in Philadelphia averages somewhat higher than in other parts of the world, it is probable that many of those to whom this call is addressed will imagine themselves too busily occupied with their personal affairs to heed it. They will be quite blind to the fact that they are letting slip away an investment which cannot fail to yield excellent profits.

If Christian citizens would make a reasonable outlay of time, influence and money in an effort to abolish the liquor curse in their own cities, no one doubts—the saloonkeeper least of all—that they could control the situation. Looking at the question from a selfish point of view, what would such an investment profit them? Their cities, freed from saloons and other centers of corruption, would become more attractive, and property would increase in value. Relieved of the expense of maintaining asylums, jails and poorhouses filled with victims of the liquor business, a lower rate of taxation would prevail.

But Christian men are not looking for investments which shall yield only a dollars-and-cents dividend. There would be other returns immeasurably greater. Restored home-life, a safe, hopeful childhood, recovered self-respect in the breast of many a man, a revival of ambition, a nobler grade of manhood, and a better brand of citizenship—all these might be counted upon as certain dividends on such an investment.

Never was there a time more opportune for the investment-seeking Christian man to put into a somewhat unpopular enterprise the sterling qualities of his Christian manhood, and "make society a safe place for saved souls."

A Case of Insomnia.

THE grand jury and assistant state's attorney have recently turned the X-ray of their astuteness and wisdom upon the all-night saloons of Chicago, and announce, as the result of their investigation, that they believe these places to be the breeding places for crime. They emphatically suggest the necessity for a rigid enforcement of the ordinance for the closing of saloons at midnight. Citizens generally do not feel any inclination to argue the question with the grand jury and state's attorney. The uninterrupted serial of nocturnal crimes published in the daily papers furnish convincing corroboration of their statements.

Perhaps no city in the land has its maladies more frequently diagnosed by social, political and moral physicians than Chicago. Of the various specifics and nostrums offered as cure-alls, the majority only illustrate the wise word of Thoreau: "There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil, to one who is striking at the root." The decision of the grand jury and assistant state's attorney seems to be that Chicago is suffering from a bad case of insomnia, that from that insomnia have developed serious difficulties, diseases civic and political, that the insomnia, being cured, the city will recover its health. For this little disturbance of sleeplessness they prescribe an opiate, a quietus, as it were, to be administered by the chief of police and his staff, in the way of a rigid enforcement on the midnight closing ordinance.

The suggestion offered is an excellent one, but it is utterly inadequate to meet the needs of the case. Insomnia is a symptom, a warning to the man who suffers from it that he must hasten to his physician and learn what disease is tampering with his nervous system and take immediate and vigorous measures to stop the course of that disease. Likewise civic insomnia is but a phase of a deep-seated disease with which the municipality of Chicago is sorely afflicted, and as a result of which a fever of crime and lawlessness exists in that city. Not until the chief disease—the liquor traffic, with all of its attendant legalized evils—is eradicated from the municipal system, will there be hope of permanent recovery.

Women in the Industrial World.

MR. CARROLL D. WRIGHT, United States Labor Commissioner, says that his investigations lead him to believe that no loss of respect towards woman results from the co-employment of the sexes, "and as to moral conditions among women wage earners," he declares further, "they are as high as among any other class of women and certainly better than among some."

Mr. Wright is of the opinion that women are as well paid as men when the employment is the same and the quality of the work furnished is equal. He gives four reasons why most women receive smaller pay than men, the inference being, of course, that the quality of work is inferior. First, she comes into the industrial system of today as an entirely new factor; second, she holds a lower standard of industrial demands, caused to some extent by a lower standard of life in both its physical and mental features; third, inefficient equipment, due not to incapacity of mind or lack of skill, but to the thought that permanency of work will be interrupted by matrimony, also to the fact that she lacks so far the influence which comes from association and combination; fourth, she is not a political factor in society.

Mr. Wright admits that the industrial freedom of woman will tend to decrease temporarily the marriage rate, but he is not at all alarmed thereat. "As woman has power given her to support herself, she will be less inclined to seek the marriage relation simply for the purpose of securing what may seem to be home and protection." Alas, that by reason of drink it is so often only a "seeming." One of the chief advantages of women as wage earners is that they do not, as a rule, spend their earnings for drink and tobacco; they are not profitable patrons of the liquor dive and gambling den. And we think it speaks well for womankind that in the general craze for money-getting, which is so marked a feature of the present age—and women are engaged in over 200 gainful ocupations—so small a proportion of the sex is found in the liquor business.

All Honor to Kansas.

THE great state of Kansas marches at the head of the column. Kansas has refused to follow, in discreditable surrender, the example of the two recreant New England states, Vermont and New Hampshire.

The recent local elections in Kansas resulted in sweeping victories for "law and order," especially in the enforcement of prohibition. In the capital of the state, Topeka, the candidate for mayor, Mr. Bergundthal, was elected by a majority of over 2,000. The popular vote there amounts to a revolution. As the "Topeka Daily Capital" states, the election "leaves no doubt of the sentiment of Topeka on the issue of clearing out the joints and gambling places and other iniquitous dives that have disgraced the community."

The new council is said to be in full accord with the new mayor. Being elected as a "business man," it is plain that the dominant citizenship there "means business" in the very best sense of the term.

It is admitted that this splendid result of the Kansas elections was largely due to the woman vote. The women turned out in full force as brave and good women do when they come to "sense the situation" and see an opportunity to gain a great victory for home-protection.

While the most conspicuous fight against liquor was in Topeka, other cities had sharp contests along the same lines, as Concordia, Salina, Hutchinson and other important towns. The people, it is said, were disgusted with the way the whisky outlaws had been running things. But more than that, they had come to be disgusted with their own civic shiftlessness in so long permitting such a condition of things to exist. When the civic conscience among a people in almost any community gets to be really awakened, and men and women are moved to work together, surprisingly gracious and beneficent changes are possible.

Those who, watching the recent somersaults in Vermont and New Hampshire, have made haste to declare that "Prohibition is dead," may as well revise their judgments. The proposition of prohibition as one of the legitimate and essential conditions for the due protection of homes and of the larger communities from the curse of the liquor traffic, has too much reason on its side to be always ignored or disregarded. It is very significant that in the one city of Topeka, the women gave over 2,500 votes in favor of the "dry" law-and-order verdict.

Let every white ribbon wave a salute in honor of Kansas!

⚜

President Honors Rest Cottage. On the occasion of President Roosevelt's recent visit to Evanston, the home side of Rest Cottage was decorated by Miss Gordon in the university colors, in memory of Miss Willard's prominent connection with the Northwestern University. Headquarters side was profusely decorated with the National colors. The handsome flag, donated some time ago and described in THE UNION SIGNAL, hung between two large trees, and the small flags, crossed over the doorway, were tied with a large white-ribbon bow. Rest Cottage, being on the same street with the university, was on the line of march. Mr. J. C. Shaffer, of the Presidential Reception Committee, who will be remembered as the donor of Miss Willard's bust to the Northwestern University, was in the carriage with the President and pointed out Rest Cottage. The President quickly rose, lifted his hat and bowed. It is interesting to remember in this connection that when Mr. Roosevelt was making his remarkable record as police commissioner in New York City, Miss Willard, being greatly impressed with his force of character and his patriotism, publicly stated that she would like to see him President of the United States.

⚜

TO be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love, and to work, and to play, and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions, but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations, rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors—these are little guide-posts on the foot-path to peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

Experience Corner

DEAR COMRADES:—You ask, "Give us an article on the proper treatment of the druggist who sells whisky unlawfully, when we cannot get men to swear to the facts."

If it were wise to give here a full answer to this question, it still were not possible, as the statutes of the various states and the ordinances of the cities vary greatly on this as on other subjects. In any case, a "bureau of information" and a self-constituted protective society are of slow growth, and when our neighbors' boys are falling prey to the respectable drug stores, patience is nearly impossible. A trustworthy and careful counselor who knows your laws and cares enough for his home city to work faithfully without a retainer, is sometimes obtainable. Meantime, study your own laws.

I know a case where it took at least ten years to bring an offending dealer to justice, but at last the mills of the gods ground him fine!

Another questioner says: "A prolific writer for an interesting magazine, the mouthpiece of a most helpful national league, says, 'If the temperance people would let the saloons alone for a while and see that cheap, clean public baths were provided for large cities, it would be a sensible change of effort.' Please, Mother Experience, do you think so?"

In common with most people who have a cause, I am liable to prejudge statements made by wholesale which do not agree with my theories. So I asked the opinion of a calm, elderly gentleman given to thought on public questions.

He did not answer for a few moments; then he said, slowly: "Every movement for bettering the condition of the poor, and, still more, the respectable class, that only by constant struggle keeps from being poor, has my sympathy, and, what is more, all the help I can give. But"—he stopped short—"but so near as eyes can discern that have grown dim looking for better things, there are some four million men, above twenty-one years of age, in the church membership of this country who have not been identified with anything known as temperance. It might seem in better taste to suggest that some of them enlist in the laudable work of social betterment."

Then a smile came over his face, a kindly smile.

We talked together—my old friend and I—of Glasgow, where he had spent some time; Glasgow, that great model license city, with its municipal tramways and ferries and free concerts and lectures and business courses and penny baths; Glasgow, satisfied with doing every possible thing for its workingmen except to close its seventeen hundred licensed grog-holes; Glasgow, with its procession of drunken men and women and its annual average of twelve hundred wives assaulted by their legal lords and masters, their drunken husbands.

I took down my Revised Version and read to myself some notes that always lie between the leaves. The spirit of it isn't confined to the Revised; its in the old-time translation, too, and the notes would lie there just as contentedly.

"When your good is evil spoken of, your taste offended, your advice disregarded, your opinion ridiculed, and you take it all in patient, loving silence—that is victory."

Comrades, shall we have such victory?

MOTHER EXPERIENCE.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

Holy Spirit, Joy divine,
Cheer this saddened heart of mine;
Bid my troubled thoughts be still;
With thy peace my spirit fill.
—Andrew Reed.

***

I commend my soul into the hands of God, my Creator, hoping and assuredly believing, through the merits of Jesus Christ, my Saviour, to be made partaker of life everlasting.—Shakespeare.

***

We are farthest away from God when we cannot perceive him in our fellow-beings. The mirror of human nature is sadly blurred; but in the meanest and wickedest there are tokens of divine childhood, occasional flashes of the Father's image through innumerable distortions. It is for us to show a clear reflection of his life in our own lives before we judge others.—Lucy Larcom.

***

The Holy Supper is kept indeed,
In whatso we share with another's need—
Not what we give, but what we share—
For the gift without the giver is bare;
Who gives himself, with his alms feeds thee—
Himself, his hungering neighbor and me.
—Lowell.

***

We believe that true religion speaks in actions more than in words, and manifests itself chiefly in the common temper of life—in giving up the passions to God's authority, in inflexible uprightness and truth, in active and modest charity, in candid judgment and in patience under trials and difficulties.—Channing.

***

Men's monuments, grown old, forget their names
They should eternize, but the place
Where shining souls have passed imbibes a grace
Beyond mere earth; some sweetness of their fames
Leaves in the soil its unextinguished trace,
Pungent, pathetic, sad, with nobler aims,
That penetrates our lives and heightens them or shames.
—James Russell Lowell.

***

Self-denial is to take from self and give to Christ, who gave himself for us. It must not be merely of the *super*abundance which we possess, but of the abundance which we usually consume upon self. To be Christ-like, it must be self-depriving. Prompted by love, not of self, but of him. Thus it becomes the highest self-culture and brings to us the sweetest enjoyment of soul, the joy of doing for the dearest object of our affections and having a share in his conquest of the world.—Rev. M. J. Ballantyne.

***

What fragrance of the softening earth is this?
'Tis nature, waking 'neath the sun's warm kiss,
And here's a blade of grass, fresh sprung and green,
And there's a budding twig—the first I've seen.
My heart, look up! The blessed Spring is near—
The Spring, the Resurrection of the year,
Is near! Is here—for there's a bluebird's note
Purling and gurgling from his tawny throat.

Thank God for the return of this sweet spring,
For the new life that throbs in everything.
It tells me that the Winter meant not death,
'Twas nature resting—nature taking breath.
My sorrow chilled me like the snow and frost,
I doubted God, but now my doubts are lost.
After the storm and chill and waiting long,
Shall come the time of birds and flowers and song.
—M. D. Babcock.

***

What a vast proportion of our lives is spent in anxious and useless forebodings concerning the future—either our own or those of our dear ones. Present joys, present blessings slip by and we miss half their flavor, and all for want of faith in Him who provides for the tiniest insect in the sunbeam. Oh, when shall we learn the sweet trust in God that our little children tell us every day by their confiding faith in us? We, who are so mutable, so faulty, so irritable, so unjust; and He, who is so watchful, so pitiful, so loving, so forgiving? Why cannot we, slipping our hand into His each day, walk trustingly over that day's appointed path, thorny or flowery, crooked or straight, knowing that evening will bring us sleep, peace and home?—Phillips Brooks.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS: I hope many of you are going to the World's Convention at Geneva, June 9-11. If you have not sent for a circular setting forth the trips that are offered in connection with the journey, you should write to Mrs. M. B. Horning, Evanston, Illinois, for one. It is time now that the bookings for the steamer were sent in to her, as berths will be held only until a certain date, after which the company will dispose of them to other parties. The side trips offered are most interesting and instructive and I am sure that the prices are as low as any one could obtain for the same kind of accommodations and including as much, and at the time of year when the rush of travel is on. The party sails from New York May 16.

Some time ago we offered free literature to the unions on the subject of anti-polygamy. There is such a demand for it that it has been found necessary to make some limitations. We still stand ready to furnish small quantities of literature for the information of the unions free, but will be obliged to charge $2 per thousand (which is less than cost) for leaflets to be distributed in larger quantities. Please bear this in mind when making your orders, and as far as possible inclose stamps for the small quantities.

Dr. Elliott is now speaking in Pennsylvania and has dates far ahead into the summer. Mrs. Weed is in Iowa for this month and will attend a number of Presbyterian synodical meetings. In May, she will speak in Missouri, Texas and Indian Territory and in July will give one week at Bay View, Michigan, on the invitation of Mrs. Stoddard who has charge of the W. C. T. U. work at the summer assembly there.

In order to crystallize public sentiment on the question of Mr. Smoot's eligibility to a seat in the United States Senate and on the question of an amendment to the Constitution forbidding polygamy, two resolutions have been formulated and our special speakers, and others as well, are asked to present them to the audiences which they address. They will please take a vote on each separately and make the following memorandum: Name of town in which the meeting is held, name of the state, name of the presiding officer of the meeting and the number voting. Please send these items to me plainly written. The following are the resolutions:

Resolved, That we earnestly petition the fifty-eighth Congress to submit an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to the legislatures of the several States, defining marriage to be monogamic and making polygamy and polygamous cohabitation, under whatever guise or pretense, a crime against the United States, punishable by severe penalties.

Resolved, That we earnestly request the United States to investigate the charges made against Apostle Reed Smoot, of the Mormon church. If it be found that he is a polygamist, we ask that he be expelled from the Senate on account of unlawful practices. If it be found that the Mormon church claims and teaches supreme authority, divinely sanctioned, to control its members in civil as well as religious affairs, we ask that he be expelled as one giving his highest allegiance to a government other than the Republic of the United States of America and therefore wholly ineligible to a seat in the highest legislative body of the Republic.

If it is found necessary to have general petition work done, we think it will not be necessary to begin that before next September, when forms will be suggested. In the meantime, it is hoped that the unions will fully inform themselves on the subject and disseminate as much knowledge as possible to the public at large. You understand, of course, that the fact that Mr. Smoot was allowed to take the oath at the beginning of the extra session of Congress does not close his case, as protests will undoubtedly be considered by the fifty-eighth Congress.

Some of the United States officials are bitterly opposed to the women inspectors who were appointed some time ago to meet incoming ships at New York and assist unprotected women and girls. The outcome is not sure. Mrs. Ellis proposes to accompany the inspectors as soon as she can and see just how the work is done. She will report to the President upon his return from his western trip and the matter of their retention will then probably be decided. Our women, acquainted with the conditions, believe the women inspectors can advise and protect women much better than men can, and that if the opposition of one or two officials can be overcome, these inspectors will, in time, be recognized to be as essential as police matrons are nowadays. Even stronger objections were urged against them at the beginning than are now urged against the women inspectors.

Yours cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

With the Treasurer.

OUR Willard Memorial fund still continues to come in. Many unions on account of bad weather were prevented from holding their commemorative meeting early, but are now arranging for a successful meeting these beautiful spring days. We shall expect to hear from a large number during this and next month.

The treasurers of California, Maine, Iowa, Illinois, Virginia, Alabama, Rhode Island, West Virginia and Colorado have sent in since last report large sums that had been sent by locals to their treasuries. We appreciate these very prompt remittances.

Memorial receipts are as follows, $2.00 except as noted:

LOUISIANA: Lake Charles.

FLORIDA: Winter Park.

NORTH CAROLINA: Black Mountain, $1.00.

CALIFORNIA: Palo Alto, Pomona, Woodbridge, Auburn, Nevada County, Lathrop, Chico, Benicia, Fairfield, Suisun, Florin, Atlanta, Morro, Mendocino, Linden, Sonora, San Leandro, Alameda, Healdsburg, Plymouth Y, Pleasant Valley Y, Oakland $2.20, San Luis Obispo $2.85, Eureka $5.00.

ILLINOIS: Princeton, Morrison, Franklin Grove, Greenville, Neponset, Savoy, Assumption, Englewood, Oak Park, West Side Chicago, Evanston, North Side, Reiley Evanston, Carrollton, Arkinson, Aurora, Waukegan, Dixon, Roanoke, Odell, Cornell, Forrest, Ringwood, Alton, North Henderson, Olney, Hopewell, Jacksonville, Du Quoin, Marissa, Springfield, Moweaqua, Danville, Monmouth, Pulaski Y, Ravenswood Y, Medora $1.20, Centralia $1.50, New Windsor $1.65, Belleville $1.00.

RHODE ISLAND: Ashton, Carolina Anna Gordon, Clarks Mills, Cumberland, Block Island, Unruh, A Friend $1.25.

MICHIGAN: Lamont, Rockford, Bay City $1.00, Owosso, Sault Ste. Marie, Marion.

NEW YORK: Black River, Schuyler Falls.

OREGON: Albany.

MAINE: Buckfield, Houlton, Belfast, Island Falls, Appleton, Searsmont, West Paris, Southwest Harbor, Southwest Harbor Y, Mars Hill, Kittery, Cumberland Mills, Enfield, Bangor, Dexter, Orono, Winterport, East Vassalboro.

OHIO: Van Wert, Lockland, Camden, Miamisburg.

TEXAS: Stephensville.

GEORGIA: Union Point, Talapoosa.

SOUTH CAROLINA: Paxville, New Brookland, Leesville Y, Newberry.

KENTUCKY: Mt. Sterling.

IOWA: Hartley $1, Montour, Amity, Marion, Toledo $1, Strawberry Point, State Center, Oelwein, Little Sim $1.25, Guthrie Center, Herper, Waterloo, Shenandoah, Edgemont, Des Moines (Temple Union), Des Moines (Willard), Clearfield, Aurora, Corning, Ashton $2.56, Dunlap, Clay, Mt. Vernon, Storm Lake, Gladbrook, Onawa, Goldfield.

MISSOURI: Rockport, Meadville.

MASSACHUSETTS: Plymouth, Orange.

DELAWARE: Marshalltown.

OKLAHOMA: Birmingham, Tuscaloosa, New Decatur, Guntersville, Fort Payne $4.45.

WEST VIRGINIA: Ganley Bridge, Buckhannon, Moundsville, Huntington, Spencer, Williamstown.

VIRGINIA: Woodville, Riverview, South Boston, Berkley, Winchester, Atlantic City, Onley, Reedy, Portsmouth, Richmond (Central), Richmond (East End), Mary L. Welles, Roberts Memorial, Stephen City, Warrenton, Lincoln, Brucetown, Volunteer Y, Clara Parrish Y, Reliance Y, Bowling Green $1.

COLORADO: Ouray, Greeley, Ft. Collins, Loveland.

KANSAS: Eskridge.

Iowa, Louisiana, Illinois, Virginia, Ohio, Tennessee No. 2 and California have sent in dues.

HELEN M. BARKER.

The Perfection

of a pure, rich, unsweetened condensed milk is Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream. It is always available for every use to which raw milk or cream is devoted and is far superior to the average quality of either. Prepared by Borden's Condensed Milk Co.

Superintendents.

Work Among Railway Employes.

DEAR COMRADES: After weeks of illness, I am again at my desk to send you a word of greeting. Our Railway department was much upon my heart during the shut-in days. I have an earnest desire that more states take up this important line of W. C. T. U. work. I do not think the women realize the very great number of people that could be influenced through this department, which includes not only the railway men in every branch, but also the policemen, postmen, firemen, street car men and their families.

The reports of last year were a disappointment to me, coming from so few states and being so meagre. I know much more work was done than came to me in reports. I am hoping for better things this year, and as system will better enable you to answer the questions on the blanks I have sent you for annual report, may I suggest that you keep by you pencil and blank book in which to jot down all work done.

If there are any superintendents that have not heard from me this year, it is because I have not known of you, and will be glad to hear from you at once. I have sent personal letter, plan of work, blank for report, literature, etc., to all of whom I have name and address. Will the president of the states not having a superintendent of railway work please appoint one and send me name and address?

Will superintendents that have not observed a railway Sunday this year so far as possible observe the first Sunday in May or if not convenient that day a Sunday near that date, requesting pastors to have a sermon especially appropriate, with the railway Psalm 121 read as one of the lessons, and have mention of the work made in the Sunday school? Whenever possible, as well as on flower mission day, take fruit and flowers tied with white ribbon and text card in which is railway motto, to sick and disabled railway men in hospitals and homes.

The way-car or caboose being the home of many employes, their equipment is urged. This consists of a rack of literature kept full of good reading and rack with gospel hymns and Bible, upon the fly leaf of which write the pledge and scripture texts and mark throughout comforting passages to be quickly found in case of accident.

Much helpful social and religious influence can be given women employed at stations, offices and restaurants.

Try and interest the railway women, for they have it in their power to aid much in our work.

Do not forget to pray especially for this department Tuesdays at the noon hour, and do not neglect to bring the Railway work before conventions, public meetings and summer schools, trying to arouse more interest.

Any new and bright suggestions or literature helpful for this department will be thankfully received and passed on.

There is much need! Let us be up and doing.

Hoping to hear from each state, I am
Yours to serve,
EVALYN N. GRAHAM

The St. Paul, Baltimore, Md.

WISE HUSBAND

Suggested a Food Cure.

All of the medical skill in the world is powerless to cure certain diseases unless the patient is put upon pure, scientific food. Then the disease seems to cure itself in many cases, proving that nature was demanding proper food to build a healthy body from.

In this simple way the use of Grape-Nuts in place of bad food has worked many cures when medical skill has been exhausted. A lady of Plainfield, N. J., who had been an invalid for over 10 years, says: "I have been treated by eminent physicians of New York, Brooklyn and Newark, besides taking innumerable proprietary remedies of a cathartic nature to regulate the bowels.

"My last physician advised a sanitarium but my husband, who had been reading one of your articles, said, 'Not until we have tried the boasted virtues of Grape-Nuts.' So we got some and I have now used Grape-Nuts for 8 months. When I began its use I weighed 85 pounds, now I weigh 105½; my stomach has grown strong and normal, my bowels are so regular that I have thrown cathartic physic to the dogs, the vertigo has left me and my whole system has gained vigor and tone. I can now take a 25-mile ride on my bicycle and enjoy it.

"I am convinced that the chief cause of my ill health was improper food that neither digested nor nourished. Since I have been fed right I feel right." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

1/2 At One Half the Cost

Lion Coffee

has better strength and flavor than many so-called "fancy" brands.

Bulk coffee at the same price is not to be compared with Lion in quality.

In 1 lb. air tight, sealed packages.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

A GRAND INVENTION!

Famous Puritan Water Still. Over 72,000 already sold. Placed over the kitchen stove, it purifies the foulest water. Removes every impurity. Furnishes delicious distilled Pure Water. Beats filters. Saves lives and Dr. bills. Prevents Typhoid Malaria, other fevers, sickness. Only safe water for children. Cures disease. Write for Booklet and testimonials free. Agents Wanted—Men and Women—Big Wages.

Harrison Mfg. Co., 14 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Leaflets Just Issued

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law. Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Control System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89,
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
.....CHICAGO.

Non Alcoholic Medication.

I

IN the month of January of this year an Ohio paper contained an advertisement of Peruna with the following statement: "Peruna has among its friends many of the leading temperance workers in this country who give it unstinted praise, and do not hesitate to endorse it by the use of the most extravagant language."

Although this advertisement does not say definitely that Peruna is a non-alcoholic medicine it certainly seems to be so worded as to try to convey that impression. Yet in that very same month of January, 1903, a chemist of the Massachusetts Board of Health analyzed Peruna by request of the writer and found 23.46 per cent, by weight, of alcohol in it. If the statement of the advertisement that many of the leading temperance workers of this country are friends of this medicine is any more correct than the claim to be free from alcohol, then it is time these "leading workers" gave a little study to the subject of concealed alcohol. There are no W. C. T. U. leaders found endorsing patent medicines, for they are too well informed, and have too much self-respect for any such procedure.

Other medicines examined this year by the Massachusetts Board of Health are Vinol, 15.33 per cent alcohol; Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 16.77; Swamp-Root, 5.87. Orangeine was found to contain acetanilid, caffeine and sodium bicarbonate. Dr. Abbott, secretary of this board of health, says: "Acetanilid should be taken with much caution lest its frequent use degenerate into a confirmed habit. It is a narcotic somewhat like morphia, sulphonal, etc., in its effects." Dr. Kellogg says it depresses the heart's action, and death has resulted from its use in some cases, doubtless because of some peculiarities in the patient. Such a drug is quite unfitted for self-prescription.

"White-Ribbon Remedy" was examined last year by request of the W. C. T. U. of Massachusetts, and was found to be composed of milk sugar and ammonium chloride, and was reported as being as likely to cure drunkenness as would a blast of east wind.

In the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal of March 12, Dr. Charles Harrington, of Harvard Medical School, gives analyses of several proprietary foods for the sick, all of which contained considerable quantities of alcohol. Professor Harrington's attention was called to these foods by the fact that an invalid who was faithfully following the directions accompanying one of them was more or less constantly in a state of marked intoxication, for which condition no cause could be assigned until suspicion was directed to the food, which proved, upon analysis, to contain a fairly large percentage of alcohol. This suggested the advisability of obtaining specimens of other preparations for investigation. The analyses made were not exhaustive, the determination having been restricted to the percentage of alcohol, total solids and mineral matter. The following is the report as given:

LIQUID PEPTONOIDS.—"Beef, milk and gluten, perfectly digested" is said to contain the albuminoid principles of beef, milk and wheat. "In cases of feeble digestion and wasting diseases," its effects are said to be "immediate and pronounced."

The maximum amount recommended for an adult will yield less than an ounce of nutriment and the alcoholic equivalent of 3.50 oz. of whisky per day.

Analysis shows 23.03 per cent by volume of alcohol, 14.19 per cent of total solids, and 0.17 per cent of mineral matter.

PANOPEPTON.—This is said to contain "the nutritive constituents of beef and wheat in a soluble and freely absorbable form." "A nourishing, restorative, stimulant, liquid food of incomparable value for the nutrition of the sick."

It yields 17.99 per cent of solid matter (including 0.97 per cent of mineral matter) and 18.95 per cent by volume of alcohol.

HEMAPEPTONE.—This is said to be a preparation of "albumose-peptone, the end product of digestion of albumin and hematin, a true organic iron."

Analysis: Alcohol by volume, 10.60 per cent; total solids, 19.54 per cent; mineral matter, 0.37 per cent.

NUTRITIVE LIQUID PEPTONE.—This is said to be "a valuable combination containing the nutritive constituents of beef and malt, predigested and ready for assimilation," and to possess "the properties of a gentle and refreshing stimulant." The analysis shows: Alcohol by volume, 14.81 per cent; total solids, 15.20 per cent; mineral matter, 0.69 per cent.

HEMABOLOIDS.—The nutriment in hemaboloids is said to be "partially digested and vitalized by treatment with nuclein, rich in iron and phosphorus-producing elements." It is said to enrich the blood, to increase weight and the number of red blood cells, and to enhance nerve action.

The maximum dose recommended yields about a quarter of an ounce of nutriment, and the alcoholic equivalent of about an ounce and a half of whisky daily.

Analysis shows 6.36 per cent of total solids about half as much as is contained in milk of fair quality) and 15.81 per cent by volume of alcohol. The mineral matter, which is largely iron, amounts to 0.62 per cent.

TONIC BEEF.—Tonic Beef is said to contain "the nutritive constituents of beef, wheat and fresh eggs in a soluble, predigested and hence readily absorbable form." Adults are advised to take from half to one tablespoonful every four hours and at bedtime; infants and children should be given from ten drops to a teaspoonful, according to age.

A tablespoonful every four hours will yield to the consumer in the course of a day about a half ounce of nutriment and the alcoholic equivalent of an ounce of whisky, for analysis shows 15.58 per cent by volume of alcohol and 18.16 per cent by weight of residue, including 1.04 per cent of mineral matter.

MULFORD'S PREDIGESTED BEEF.—"A concentrated predigested food containing the entire nutritive value of beef in a completely digested form, ready for immediate absorption into the system."

Analysis shows 19.72 per cent by volume of alcohol, 10.39 per cent by weight of total solids, which yield 0.20 per cent of mineral matter.

The maximum administration recommended, that is, two tablespoonfuls every two hours, disregarding the pro viso "or as needed," would yield daily about 6 oz. of whisky.

Some other foods examined wer found to be non-alcoholic, but their nutritive value was very slight in comparison with their cost.

When will people learn that health is not to be found by pouring nauseous compounds into the system, or by resorting to "foods" that stand for months upon drug-store shelves? Health is the normal condition of mankind, and can be maintained, or with many regained, by careful avoidance of dangerous drugs, by eating no more than is necessary to satisfy hunger, having the diet nutritious, with free use of fruits and unfermented fruit juices, plenty of sleep and out-door exercise, and a mind at peace with God and fellow men.

MARTHA M. ALLEN.

Syracuse, N. Y.

Special General Assembly Train to Los Angeles.

The Passenger Department of the Chicago & North-Western Railway announces that a special train has been arranged for account the General Presbyterian Assembly at Los Angeles, to leave Chicago 10.30 P. M., Wednesday, May 13th, with through Pullman sleeping cars to Los Angeles without change from Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis—Pullman standard and Pullman tourist sleeping cars from Chicago without change.

The route is over the only double track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River, through the typical western prairie country of Northern Illinois and Iowa, and via Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Leadville, Glenwood Springs, Salt Lake City and Sacramento to Los Angeles. The Special will stop a few hours for sight-seeing at Denver, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Sacramento, spending the Sabbath at Salt Lake.

Only $50 round-trip from Chicago, with correspondingly low rates from other points. For full particulars address W B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Fat Folks

BEFORE—267 lbs. AFTER—180 lbs.

Mrs. E. Williams, 55 Chatham St., Rochester, N. Y., lost 87 pounds, 8 in. bust, 10 in. waist, 20 in. in abdominal measure, on a 6 months' course of the Dr. Snyder Obesity Treatment.

DR. SNYDER guarantees his treatment to be perfectly harmless in every particular. No starving, no detention from business, no wrinkles or discomfort. A 40-page booklet, telling all about it, free. Call or write to-day.

O. W. F. SNYDER, M. D.,
21 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.
or 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS, 39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

HOME ENTERTAINMENT SOCIETY

You Can Have Any Columbia Edison or Victor Talking Machine

WITHOUT ONE CENT OF COST

Except the records. Write

B. S. NOBLE, Mgr., 237 Broadway, N. Y.

SOME BOYS AND GIRLS. WHAT THEY FOUND AND WHAT THEY LOST IN THE GREAT CITY, is thrillingly told in "WHAT WILL YOU DO ABOUT IT?" a book of startling facts by C. W. ARNOLD. Don't leave home 'til you read it! Paper covers, 25 cents prepaid.

Agents Wanted SAFEGUARD PUB. CO., St. Paul, Minn

Every Local W. C. T. U.

Whether newly organized or many years in the work, should possess and study

Do Everything,

By Frances E. Willard.

An invaluable hand book for ALL WHITE RIBBONERS Containing full information of the work in all departments

Price, 35 Cents

AND

The Helping Hand

By Caroline B. Buell

Which tells HOW to organize, and assists ORGANIZED unions to conduct their meetings in the most orderly manner . . . . . .

Price, 10 Cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

CHICAGO

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

World's Convention Trip.

THE official party is slowly being increased. New names are constantly being added to the list, but I fear that, as was the case in 1900, some will make up their minds too late, and can not go with the friends and on the steamer they prefer. To obviate this, make your decision soon. The booking fees are returned by the steamship company, if they are notified in time to dispose of the berth. There is very little risk to run in engaging your passage at this time.

The option on some of our rooms will have expired, or they will be engaged before this reaches you, but I hope to still have unfilled rooms for those late in deciding. I can not promise this, but I am doing my best to hold them. Our rooms are in the very center of the ship, convenient to the dining room on one side, and the rooms of the stewardess and bath rooms on the other side. Travel, even to the poor sailors, on these boats is luxurious. Every appointment for comfort and pleasure is afforded.

Every mail brings requests for the circulars, and much interest is manifested in the trip and the two conventions. A young college girl from the Baltimore Woman's College goes with our party as her mother wanted her in safe and pleasant companionship. We have other young ladies booked for our trips. Miss Sarah Munroe Hall, the Maine musical director, is one and Miss Isabel Stickney, who made the Rest Cottage flag, is another. A promise of music and young life in crossing is advantageous. Who will be the next to join the party?

MINNIE BARKER HORNING.

Evanston, Ill.

Don't You Think It

Worth a Postal

To Get Well?

When you write that postal, I will gladly send my help.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I do that for every sick one who writes me, and I have for twelve years. I have found that the sick are honest, and I have proved that I can cure nearly all.

Only one patient in each forty decides that the test has failed. The others pay gladly—pay because they are cured.

There are 39 chances in 40 that I can cure you, and I alone am the loser if I can't. Let me try.

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to strengthen weak inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that power which alone operates the vital organs. I treat a weak organ as I would a weak engine, by giving it the power to act. My way always succeeds save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. And most of these chronic diseases cannot be cured without it.

You'll know this when you read my book.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Mrs. R. H. Robertson won a Matron's medal in a contest at Du Quoin, Ill.

The Lathrop union, of Milwaukee, will ask the school board to allow the introduction of the penny savings banks, into the schools of that city.

The union at Ulsterville, New York, had a UNION SIGNAL parlor meeting and secured ten subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Regular Sunday afternoon services are held in their hall by the W. C. T. U. of Elizabeth, N. J. Good speaking and music are always presented.

Mrs. Effie Lambert, New York's new Y secretary, is in the field almost constantly and is wonderfully successful in organizing new unions and enrolling new members.

The Aurora, Neb., union has words of appreciation to say for the work of Rev. Chas. M. Shepherd, of Hebron, who has recently given them two fine lectures.

La Farge, Wis., union is rejoicing in a victory over the legalized saloon. They thank Mrs. Florence D. Richards for the influence her address made for right.

The W. C. T. U. of Summit, N. J., presented the Summit fire department with a 100-gallon coffee urn, mounted on wheels, for their use at fires. This to lessen the drinking of stimulants.

It is quite the thing in Illinois to present Miss Willard's picture to the public schools. Pinckneyville, Robinson and Oblong unions are the latest to fulfill this pleasant duty.

Carrie Lee Carter, National organizer, commenced work in Tennessee for six weeks, on April 3rd. Sixteen paid members were added to the Dyersburg, Tenn., W. C. T. U. during Miss Carter's meetings there, April 5 and 6.

Mrs. Lucia S. Rising, first vice president of the Senior L. T. L. of New York state, is in the field and a long list of new Legions is the result. Her greatest difficulty is in securing leaders for both junior and senior work.

The home of Mrs. E. B. Ingalls of St. Louis was recently opened for a stereopticon lecture for the benefit of the local W. C. T. U. Many prominent members of that city and East St. Louis were present.

Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, president of Iowa W. C. T. U., commences in May to make a systematic tour of the unions all over the state that are new or weak. She will also attend Institutes.

It is reported that Governor Bailey, governor of Kansas, has decided to grant the wishes of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and use water instead of wine in christening the battle ship named after his state.

Appreciative words are given to Miss Lillian M. Phelps of St. Catherines, Ontario, who has been speaking in Lackawanna county, Pa. New members and new interest attend her meetings.

If more unions would have each year regularly a "Due Tea," dues would be more systematically collected. Marshall, Mich., follows this plan. Gives a good supper and program, to both of which gentlemen are invited.

The Gettysburg, Pa., union engaged Rev. G. H. Vibbert, of Massachusetts, for a series of lectures. A local paper says, "Never has the cause of temperance and the evils of strong drink been more plainly set forth."

Miss Emma Alexander, of Brooklyn, N. Y., UNION SIGNAL reporter, and state superintendent of Work among Seamen, has returned from Florida, greatly improved in health. Miss Alexander arranged for a musical service at the Military prison at Governor's Island for Easter Sunday.

The Western Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota, union holds most successful department meetings, and thimble bees, has observed Willard memorial day, and has usually a goodly number of outsiders present who are being won to the cause.

Thirty-one new members were recently received by the Superior, Neb., union. A reception was given for them, and Mrs. Dora V. Wheelock, state president, conducted the service of receiving into membership, which was simple but impressive.

The unions of Buffalo, N. Y., carry on a flourishing mission. Niagara union conducts the sewing school. All the unions hold meetings there, and do a great amount of religious and charitable work. The Y's help also with donations.

A union of sixty-four members, fifty-one active and thirteen honorary, was organized at Memphis, Tenn., by Miss Belle Kearney. Miss Kearney will spend the next three months in work in Pennsylvania. Her address will be 812 N. 20th St., Philadelphia.

The awakening in Milwaukee county, Wis., has brought about a new union of seventeen members in Wauwatosa, and two more will soon be organized in West Allis and North Greenfield. Mrs. Nelle G. Burger is their next National worker.

Little Miss Hazel Cowly of Columbus, O., one of the Cradle Roll members has been appointed superintendent of white ribbon work of the Columbus union, her pretty little duty being to see that each member is kept supplied with a white ribbon bow. Miss Hazel is five years old.

Oshkosh, Wis., union is noted for its white-ribbon teas. At a recent one, ten little girls carrying American flags, recited and sang. At the top of each flag was a large white letter, all spelling the word temperance. This number of the program was very effective.

The convention of Washington county, Ohio, W. C. T. U. showed in the reports an immense amount of work accomplished during the year. Twenty yards of pledge cards, signed by the children of Newport, were draped from the chandeliers to the chancel and back to the windows, the effect being very beautiful.

The union at Ventura, Cal., observed Neal Dow day with an interesting program. A dish social was held later, at which each member brought one plate and one cup and saucer, as a donation to the union. Refreshments to go with the dishes were furnished by the union.

Madison, Winnebago and Boone counties, Ill., Institutes were well attended. The state president was present at each, and organized the two latter counties, Madison county already being organized. Boone county correspondent said of Miss Brehm: "The air, like the leader of the Institute, the state president, was crisp, clear and bracing." The first evening was given to a discussion, "What will you do with the saloon?" participated in by the pastors of the place, and was of unusual interest.

The Eighth Ward Minneapolis union held a cookery social in March. About ten varieties of food were served, one lady serving one dish and selling recipes for it, the cooking having been done at home except that of the cereal drinks. The demonstration was in charge of the leader of the study in Domestic Science, which has proven helpful and interesting. The union is steadily working for a large average attendance for the year. Three new members were added at the last meeting; attendance thirty-five.

Promoted.

Gone to be "Forever with the Lord." Mrs. Sarah Ann Sullivan, of Gansevoort, N. Y., went away March 31. She was an earnest Christian, and for several years was a most devoted member of the Gansevoort union.

The W. C. T. U. of Cadiz, Ohio, desires to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of one of its most devoted members, Mrs. Lide McCormick. The union has lost a cheerful, willing and untiring worker, one who was always interested in whatever pertained to the cause of temperance. Her counsel, her presence and her prayers will be sorely missed.

Sarah C. Brooks, of Beecher City, Ill., a faithful W. C. T. U. worker, passed into the upper kingdom, March 23. She has stood without faltering, filled with the W. C. T. U. spirit all the years of the organization. The last work she did was to take subscriptions for THE UNION SIGNAL. Her husband and six children, her church and W. C. T. U. co-workers, mourn her loss, and ask "who can fill the place she has left vacant."

The sympathy of white ribboners will be extended to the Boston union, which suffers the loss of its president, Mrs. Isabel A. McIntyre. A memorial service was held at Park street church, at which the state president and others spoke. Resolutions were adopted expressing recognition of Mrs. McIntyre's gentle and gracious personality, her labor of love, her rare devotion to duty, her wise and efficient leadership, and her unwavering loyalty to truth and to the principles of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

QUIT AND EAT.

Some Coffee Tales.

Show a woman an easy, comfortable and healthful way to improve her complexion and she is naturally interested.

Coffee is the one greatest enemy of fair women, for in the most of cases it directly affects the stomach, producing slight, and sometimes great congestion of the liver and therefore causing the bile to be absorbed into the system instead of going its natural way. The result is a sallow, muddy skin and a train of diseases of the different organs of the body which, in all too many cases, develop into chronic diseases.

A lady, speaking of how coffee affected her, says: "I was very fond of coffee, but while drinking it was under the care of the doctor most of the time for liver trouble, and was compelled to take blue mass a great deal of the time. My complexion was bad and I had a pain in my side steadily, probably in the liver.

"When I concluded to quit coffee and take Postum Food Coffee I had it made carefully and from the very first cup we liked the taste of it better than any of the old coffee.

"In a short time the pain left my side and my friends began to comment on the change in my complexion and general looks. I have never seen anything equal to the good I got from making this change.

"A young lawyer in Philadelphia named ——, whose life was almost a burden from indigestion and its train of evils, quit coffee some months ago and began on Postum Food Coffee. He quickly recovered and is now well, strong and cheerful and naturally loud in his praises of Postum.

"Another friend, an old gentleman of seventy, named ——, who for years suffered all one could suffer and live, from dyspepsia, and who sometimes for weeks could eat no bread or solid food, only a little weak gruel or milk, quit coffee upon my recommendation and took up Postum. He began to get better at once. Now he can eat rich pastry or whatever he likes and is perfectly well."

Names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Local Union.

Program.

Music, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought." Page 93 White Ribbon Hymnal.
Bible Reading, "The protecting care of God." Matthew II., 13-23.
Prayer.
Roll call. Responses by members on topic "Watch-care."
Reading report of last meeting.
Report of Corresponding Secretary.
Unfinished business.
New business.
Five minutes recess.
Song, "How Firm a Foundation." Page 85 White Ribbon Hymnal.
Selected Reading, "Madame Willard on training children."
Poem, "A Place For the Boys."
Reading, "Is the young man safe?"
Music, "Where is my wandering boy tonight?"

⚜

Madame Willard on Training Children.

I HAVE been asked to write some of the thoughts suggested by my experience in training my own children. We lived in Oberlin, Ohio, when my children were in their infancy. There were mothers' meetings at stated times; I felt my utter inefficiency to train these young immortals; I was almost always present at the meetings. I hoped they would tell me just what to do, so that, having the approved formula or program, I might make no mistake. But new conditions were constantly arising, and in my despair I said to a wise friend, "I don't learn anything from these meetings. I don't know what to do." He said, "They are making an impression upon you all the time." It gave me a little comfort to think that perhaps down deeper than my consciousness I was gaining a gleam of light.

And now, first of all, I would insist, teach your children to be truthful; by all the incentives that occur to your prayerful thought, keep their love and confidence so that they will be open to you as to the day. Then I would recommend the do-everything method, according to the varying needs of your priceless charge. If its nerves are startled, quiet it the best way you can. Don't put it in a dark room and let it cry itself to sleep. It would be more motherly to hang it to the limb of a tree, like an Indian baby, where it could see the light and feel the gentle motion of the breeze. Don't regard it as a mere animal that needs only to be fed and clothed. It needs sympathy very early; it can smile back your love when only a few weeks old. Never punish a child when it can think you are in anger, or about to take its life. It will be so frightened as to lose all self control. You may think it obstinacy when it is a frenzy inspired by the fear of one in whose power it is utterly helpless.

Mothers should try to keep their health, so as to be bright, agreeable company for the older children, and to be patient with the little ones. I know this is easier said than done, especially if the mother is sick or overborne with care; but the attempt, if partially unsuccessful, will not fail of its reward. The habit of unselfishness and kindness cannot be too early impressed. The mother should be in spirit and manner, or should aim to be, such as she desires the child to be. I would not recommend over indulgence, but genuine tenderness and love can hardly go to an extreme, especially in the early helpless years. If complications arise between the children do not let them accumulate. Don't let them lie awake all night dreading a punishment in the morning. Settle them at once upon their own merits without referring them to any umpire but yourself.

When they are old enough to commence study do not be indifferent to the trials they meet with in the effort to solve the, to them, difficult problems, but do them for them often, yourself; don't be so fearful about weakening their self-reliance as to defeat your desire for their high achievement by allowing them to be discouraged in the outset. Should a child show a strong bias toward any laudable line of life that promises self support, and easy independence, I would encourage it. Try to cultivate a tender conscience, a delicate sensitiveness to right and wrong. I would place the acquisition of character infinitely before that of wealth, desirable as is a moderate share of the latter. Wealth ends with life, character is immortal, toward the perfection of which all our efforts should tend. I must not forget my pet idea to be more careful to praise children for doing well, than to chide them for doing ill.

When the children are young and in the mother's care more directly, there may be a feeling of comparative safety, but when they blossom into young men and women, and begin to assume personal responsibility, it is the hour of doom, that threatens to make or mar all her handiwork. Who is wise enough to counsel then? Silence seems safest, but silence would be treason. The mother must have the heart of her loved ones in her keeping in this hour of destiny; no one can be consulted with such safety as the mother, and she will need the electric light of Deity to guide her in this supreme emergency.

Who can arrest the flying hours? What issues hang upon the decision of the moment? She can find refuge only in Him who has said, "If ye ask anything in my name I will do it." Here she may anchor in a sublime faith that the young, inexperienced and adventurous feet may, through infinite riches of grace, be led into paths of safety, usefulness and to a lasting peace.

⚜

Is The Young Man Safe?

By Rev. O W. Scott.

"THERE'S a young man at the front door to see you," said servant Jane at my study door. "Show him into the parlor," I replied. "He won't come in. He says he will just see you at the door."

As I reached the front entrance, I was surprised and pleased to see a young man, of another congregation. He had recently married and his wife was a clergyman's daughter. I urged him to enter. This he did, hesitatingly, as if he "had something on his mind."

Hardly seated, he began the conversation by saying, "Have you got a temperance pledge?" I assured him that I could easily provide one, "but—not for yourself?" "Yes," he answered, "for myself." I was speechless, and waited for further explanations. He continued, "Though this is a temperance town, and no saloons exist, yet I find I have an appetite for drink, and am indulging it. I have come to you for help, and I want to sign the pledge, as an aid in overcoming this habit." The pledge was procured and he signed it, and after some kindly counsel I bade him farewell.

I was perplexed, almost stupified over this revelation. Presumably not three persons in the community knew what he had just revealed to me. I doubted if his young wife knew it; surely not her parents, or probably the marriage would never have taken place.

I began to inquire of myself, "If this young man drinks, who of our other young men don't drink? Who, of the young men, are really safe?" May there not be other young men, who are secretly and moderately (as yet) indulging in strong drink, and we regarding them total abstainers?

The churches, the W. C. T. U., the Sunday schools, the Y. M. C. A. and the various young people's and secret temperance societies are working in many ways for the young men of the Republic, and still there are thousands who are not reached by any agency.

What more can be done? In reply, can we not all, of whatever "temperance faith," join in the unique movement, recently organized, and known as the "Twentieth Century World-Wide Temperance Crusade," wherein 5,000,000 of pledge signers are to be secured, and more if possible?

Here is an opportunity (in a general temperance canvass) to approach every one, without appearing to single out any individual, and so give no offense.

Let us look up the young men, the coming voters, in and out of the church. They are not safe, the Republic is not safe, unless those who approach the ballot box are pledged to a life of sobriety.

Lunenburg, Mass.

⚜

A Place For The Boys.

OUR boys must walk somewhere; and what if their feet,
Sent out of our houses, sent into the street,
Should step round the corner and pause at the door
Where other boys' feet have passed often before?
Should pass through the gateway of glittering light,
Where jokes that are merry and songs that are bright
Ring out a warm welcome with flattering voice,
And temptingly say: "Here's a place for the boys,"
Ah, what if they should? What if your boy or mine
Should cross o'er the threshold which marks out the line
'Twixt virtue and vice, 'twixt pureness and sin,
And leave all his innocent boyhood within?
Oh, what if they should—because you and I,
While the days and the months and the years hurry by,
Are too busy with cares and with life's fleeting joys
To make round our hearthstone a place for the boys?
There's a place for the boys. They find it somewhere:
And if our own homes are too daintily fair
For the touch of their fingers, the tread of their feet,
They'll find it, and find it, alas! in the street,
Mid the gildings of sin and the glitter of vice,
And with heartaches and longings we pay a dear price
For the getting of that which our lifetime employs,
If we fail to provide a place for the boys.—Anon.

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

Ferry's Seeds
Seeds the Kind that Leads cost more—yield more. sold by all dealers.
1903 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.
D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J.L.Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR
MAN AND BEAST.
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
MANUFACTURED BY
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,
84-90 Beekman Street, NEW YORK.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.
Minneapolis and St. Paul
Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.
A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

1-3 Actual Size
90c for a WATCH

stem wind, nickel plated, 30-hour movement. ONE YEAR'S GUARANTEE. Here's a chance to buy a good time-keeper for less than one dollar. Now boys, you all want a watch, here it is, postage prepaid.
FINDLEY-DAVIES CO.
Dept. 5. 184 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

W. L. DOUGLAS 7 per cent STOCK
SAFEST INVESTMENT IN AMERICA.
Less than $200,000 of the issue of $1,000,000 Preferred 7 per cent Stock of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., of Brockton, Mass., Remains for Sale in Lots of One Share or More. If you want Some of this Gilt-edge Stock You Must Act Quickly. Stock pays 7 per cent Annual Dividends, Payable Semi-Annually.
SHARES are FULL PAID and NON-ASSESSABLE
Sold at Par ($100.00) One Hundred Dollars Each
Send for Prospectus and Make all Remittances Payable to the order of
J. LEWIS RICE, - - 45 Milk St., BOSTON.

Books Used in the

L. T. L. DIPLOMA AND SEAL COURSES.

When ordering for the Sunday School or L. T. L. Libraries make selections from them.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."
Anna A. Gordon.
Price, - - - - - $2.00
Postpaid.

Danesbury House. Price, $1.00.
Life of John B. Gough. Price, $1.50.
Reminiscences of Neal Dow. Price, $2.50.
Foundation Rock. By Sarah M. DeLine, price, $1.25.
Straight Shots at Young Men. By Washington Gladden, price, 35 cents.
Noble Lives and Noble Deeds. By Edward Horton, price, 50 cents.
Freshman and Senior. By L. Burton Wright, price, $1.50.
Up From Slavery. By Booker T. Washington, price, $1.50.
Pussy Meow and Her Friends. By M. Louise Patterson, price, 70 cents.
Beautiful Joe. By Marshall Saunders, price, 30 cents.
Strike at Shanes. Price, 30 cents.
Loveliness. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, price, $1.00.
Bird Life. By Frank M. Chapman, price, $2.00.
Every Day Birds. By Bradford Torrey, price, $1.20.
In the Days of Audubon. By Hezekiah Butterworth, price, $1.50.

Nineteen Beautiful Years.

By Frances E. Willard.
Price, 60 Cents.

How the Other Half Lives. By Jacob Riis, price, $1.25.
Mervale Eastman, Socialist. By Albion Tourgee, price, $1.50.
St. Rockwell's Little Brother. By Mrs. H. A. Cheever, price, $1.50.
The Fall of the Staincliffes. By Alfred Colbeck, price, 35 cents.
Life of Mrs. S. M. I. Henry. By Mrs. Mary Rossiter, price, $1.50.
A Singular Life. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, price, 50 cents.
Black Rock. By Ralph Connor, price, 25c.
Christian Citizenship. By Carlos Martyn, price, 75 cents.
Abraham Lincoln. By Joseph Choate, price, 35 cents.
Protection of Native Races Against Intoxicants and Opium. By W. F. Craft, price, 75 cents.
Mr. Lex. By Catherine Waugh McCulloch, price, 35 cents.
Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine. By Martha M. Allen, price, $1.25

Temperance Helps For Primary Teachers.

By L. Mabel Freese.
Price, 50 Cents.

All Books sent postpaid upon receipt of price.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Signal Notes

The Michigan Anti-Saloon League is planning to have 100,000 or more citizens petition the legislature for the passage of the Holmes bill. Blank petitions are being sent to 2,000 congregations in the state.

Warren Featherbone, of Three Oaks, Mich., set a noble example for temperance when he himself took out the two saloon licenses voted in his town, paying $1,000 for the same, and closed the saloons.

The founder of Lyons, Neb., Waldo Lyons, saw to it that no property within the corporation limits can be used for saloon purposes, by stipulating in every deed that if intoxicating liquors were ever sold upon the premises the property should revert to the original owner.

At a recent meeting of the Semi-Teetotal Pledge Association in England the secretary was able to report a large accession of individual applications for pledge forms amounting to some 15,000. From Birmingham an application was read asking for 1,200 forms for one factory alone.

The anti-cigaret measure introduced by Mrs. Coulter in the Utah legislature has been signed by the governor and is now law. It provides a fine of $5 or five days' imprisonment for any person under eighteen years of age who has in his possession any cigaret, cigar, tobacco or opium.

Mrs. Maude Ballington Booth's prison work has met with exceptional success. The cost per year, including the three homes in New York, Iowa and Illinois, is about $20,000. More than 3,000 men have gone through these homes and not five per cent have returned to prison. She has personally raised the money to carry on her work.

The Speedwell County Home Society for convalescent and abandoned children held its first annual meeting in New York City. The reports were encouraging and showed efficient work. The object of the society is to provide homes in private families in the country for convalescent and abandoned children from the babies' wards of the hospitals and from the tenement districts of New York.

Miss Carrie Styer of Kokomo, Ind., was discharged from her position in a store because she headed a band of slummers among the saloons. After dismissal she canvassed the town with remonstrances and has already put thirteen saloons out of business for two years. She aims to close every drinking place in town. The churches and Civic Federation will support her in her efforts.

A solicitor for a Kansas City Distillery met with a cold reception in Hoyt, Kans. Many prominent citizens met him and advised him to leave town. They even accompanied him to the train to see that he went. "We don't wait for the women to take the initiative in such things, as," said one of the men, "the people don't want that sort of thing around, and we don't propose to have it."

The temperance people of England and the Paris Anti-Alcoholic League welcome the suggestion of Dr. Maurice Springer that a coffee drinking people lose all appetite for alcoholic drinks. He thinks coffee is the best cure for alcoholism. He reinforces his claim by reference to those countries where coffee is a general beverage and contends that in them drunkenness is comparatively rare.

Instructions positively forbidding the use of cigarets by those employed in the passenger service of the New York division of the Reading Railroad have been issued by the company. Dismissal from the employ of the road is the penalty for failure to obey the mandate. "It is not safe to trust the lives of passengers in the hands of men who smoke cigarets," is the only explanation given.

The working men in Sweden are forming unions for the purpose of abstaining from the use of liquor for a year and are to contribute 15 cents a month to a fund, to be divided equally at the end of the year among those who have kept the pledge. Though it is true that the Swedish working men are doing this in retaliation for the imposition by the riksdag of what they consider an excessive and unjust tax on such spirits, as they claim are usually consumed by their class, yet it would seem that the idea of self-remuneration, as it were, for total abstinence for a year is a good idea.

So hopeful is the feeling among ministers that a great evangelistic movement would be welcomed in Salt Lake City, Utah, that there is talk of building a temporary tabernacle or building, to cost some $8,000 or $10,000, located in the central part of that city, and hold the meetings two or three months, beginning early in the fall. The movement will be purely evangelistic, not antagonistic to the Mormons, and absolutely non-sectarian. One of the noted evangelists of the East will be invited and the belief is general among the ministers that the good that will grow out of such a series of meetings would be incalculable.

To judge from the alarm among milliners, the efforts of the Audubon societies for the protection of birds are at last having some appreciable effect. Unless the trade arouses itself, says the current number of "The Millinery Trade Review," it will find itself debarred from the selling of anything and everything in the shape of bird plumage or fancy feathers next season. The craze for enacting laws against the use of bird plumage as millinery trimming is spreading to all the states and territories of the Union, when even made birds, constructed of goose feathers, glass eyes, wooden bills, buckram and cotton, will be pounced upon by "intelligent" game wardens as "song birds" sold contrary to law.

The Bartenders' and Saloonkeepers' Total Abstinence Society of Chicago has been organized. William H. Dorgan is president and treasurer, and there are one hundred charter members. The objects of the society are: "To promote temperate habits among bartenders; to set a good example to customers; to protect the cash register and the stock, and to elevate the calling." President Dorgan, who has been connected with the liquor business in Chicago for upward of thirty years, is eloquent over the organization. Bartenders and employers, too, should be total abstainers. "If a man behind the bar drinks with one man he must drink with all," said he. "He must be either a total abstainer or ultimately become a drunkard."

Wabash Excursions.

Boston, Mass, National Educational Association, July 6-10. Rate, one fare, plus two dollars, for the round trip.
Detroit, Mich., Epworth League, July 16-19. Rate, one fare for the round trip.
Write for illustrated folders, with maps and full information regarding these excursions.
F. A. Palmer, 311 Marquette Bldg., Chicago.

What a fine thing soap washing is for the makers of linens, cottons and the like! How it keeps their business! Clothes used up quickly; others must be bought. Pearline washes so that clothes last longer. Instead of rubbing the garment away by main strength PEARLINE harmlessly soaks out the dirt. Think of the saving to clothes in a year! 693

PEARLINE means Economy

"Buffalo Bill" is a strict abstainer, and this, says the Sunday Companion, is doubtless the secret of his untiring energy, in spite of the severe strain of the excitement which he has passed through. "I've got six hundred men here," said Colonel Cody recently in London, "and I abstain for the sake of example. They're not ashamed to keep off drink if I do; and I believe in the force of example, for I don't mind saying that very many years ago I remember finding a temperance lecture of mine falling rather flat in the morning because I had not set a good example the night before. Drink can be done without," continued the Colonel. "In Sheridan's hardest campaign against the Indians the troops took no alcohol at all with them, and it was found they could stand the rigors of the winter better than when they had it."

The summer schedule of The Moody Bible Institute will run May to September (inclusive). Courses are arranged to meet the needs not only of regular students, but also of pastors, evangelists, returned missionaries and other Christian workers, as well as laymen and women, such as college students and school teachers on vacation, who can devote only a limited time to Bible study. During May Dr. Len. G. Broughton, of Atlanta, pastor of Tabernacle Baptist Church, and director of the Atlanta Bible Conference, will deliver lectures on practical themes. Mrs. S. D. Gordon, of Oberlin, Ohio, will give quiet talks on "Power," and also a second series on "Prayer." Prof. Rhys R. Lloyd, of Evanston, Ill., will lecture on "The Epistle to the Romans." During the remaining months Rev. R. A. Torrey and Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., of Boston, and other Bible teachers will be the leading lecturers. Full information can be secured by sending stamped envelope to A. P. Fitt, 80 Institute place, Chicago.

Cooking Contest

Right in the Family Kitchens.

The ladies have a champion interested in the batterment of family cooks.

$7,500.00 in cash has been donated by C. W. Post, Chairman of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., to be distributed between now and July next in 735 cash prizes to stimulate family cooks to better service.

Less burned and greasy meat and potatoes; less soggy biscuits, cake, etc., and better coffee, Postum and tea is the motto.

The girls are to compete in the preparation of good, everyday dishes and in general cookery. Probably Grape-Nuts and Postum Coffee will come in for some attention incidentally, but the tests will be conducted under the daily direction of the housewife and 735 cooks will win varying cash prizes from $200.00 down to $5.00; no one is required to pay anything whatever to enter this contest and each winner will receive a large certificate or diploma with the big Postum seal in gilt, a badge of distinction much to be sought after. Particulars can be had by addressing Cookery Dept. No. 482, of Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

Publishers' Notes.

The Mormon Menace.

"I had the pleasure of reading Bishop Fallows book on Mormonism, in the manuscript. It begins with the history of the Smith family and is more fascinating than fiction and more alarming than war. If you want Mormon history in brief, there's the place to get it. If your want Mormon doctrine quoted direct from their own writings by an unimpeachable writer, there's the place to get it. Every word of this intensely interesting book can be read in three hours."

James D. Fry.

Price 25 cents, postpaid.

Confessions of a Woman Minister.

The Rev. Emma E. Bailey has reduced the price of her book, "Happy Day or The Confessions of a Woman Minister," to all readers of the Union Signal to $1.25 and hopes for a renewed sale among the white ribbon hosts. It pleads in behalf of the home, the Christian church, the school and state. It is an excellent book for the family and should be in every library.

The April Young Crusader.

Our young people and their elders as well, will be delighted with Kate Lunden-Sunderlin's description of an Easter in Scandinavia, as told in the April Crusader. There are, besides special stories and verses, an Easter chalk-talk by Miss Wintringer. In fact, from its beautiful cover throughout its well-filled pages, is scattered the glad spirit of Eastertime.

Among the features of the regular departments of the magazine are an illustrated account of the colored L. T. L., at Boydtown, Va., bright Anti-Cigaret pages with recitation, cartoon and picture-story; the article, "Not a Failure," announced last month; and a new Picture-Story for the little ones, with publication of Prize Awards.

Subscription price 25 cents per year. Copies for distribution, $2 per hundred.

April Responsive Readings.

In the responsive reading for April Mrs. Emma W. Shores, National Superintendent of the Department, presents Work Among the Lumbermen, giving a brief history of its organization and growth, the diversity of its work, a strong and characteristic appeal for its cordial support.

This work will commend itself wherever it is known.

Mrs. Shores well says:

"We have long ceased to ask the question, 'Do men read the literature sent them?' for hundreds of letters are sent each year to the Superintendent, expressing their appreciation. Let me impress upon you, in closing, that God will bless every effort put forth in 'His Name.'"

Price, 50c per hundred.

New Prohibition Ammunition

"The Prohibitory Law: Facts," by Lillian M. N. Stevens, President of the W. C. T. U., is replete with evidences attesting the value of prohibition, notable decisions of the Supreme Court favoring prohibition, testimonies of Maine governors for the past forty years, and the prosperity of North Dakota under prohibition law. Incontrovertible proof is shown regarding the saving power of prohibition to the nation.

Another valuable leaflet by the same author is "The Dispensary or State Control System of Managing the Liquor Traffic." Abundant data are given to show the failure of the dispensary as a temperance measure and the wrong resulting from an effort to compromise with evil.

Price: per package of ten, 10 cents; per fifty, 50 cents; per hundred, 75 cents.

The Helping Hand.

"The Helping Hand, or the A B C of Organizing a W. C. T. U., by Caroline B. Buell, is a genuine coworker with women not acquainted with W. C. T. U. methods. Everything is told that one would wish to know in organizing unions, conducting unions, public meetings, etc.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

A New Club Rate.

We take pleasure in announcing that hereafter a club rate of $1.25 each in clubs of ten will be granted our patrons. Either new names or renewals will be received in these clubs but to secure the reduction the club must consist of ten names. Every union that has not at least a club of ten subscribers to the Union Signal should commence at once to secure one.

The special rate of One Dollar is made only to clergymen, reading rooms and public libraries.

Do Everything.

"Do Everything," by Frances E. Willard, a handbook for all white-ribboners, gives a history of temperance work, with invaluable directions for leading a public meeting, carrying on a local union, conducting a convention, organizing a W. C. T. U., with forms of pledge and petitions, and "the summing up of the whole matter." Workers cannot afford to do without this practical helper for all occasions along temperance lines. Price 35 cents.

"The Doom of King Alcohol."

"The Doom of King Alcohol," by Mrs. Clara B. Drake, is a poetical drama in three acts, suitable to be given in a parlor or hall. While it is gracefully written and effectively planned, it is also a strong lesson for temperance, and is especially adapted for the use of a local union. Perhaps nothing is more difficult to secure than material for a good evening's program, but in "The Doom of King Alcohol" this need is fully supplied. The curtain rises with Tellus (the earth) mourning over the desecration of her children, the spirits of the field—Wheat, Barley, Rye, Corn, Hops, Grapes, Apples and Peaches—by King Alcohol.

In the second act King Alcohol and his minions—License, Avarice, Appetite and others—are in the throne room, and listen to the appeals of the Spirits of the fields. License speaks for the King, refusing their requests. The Angel of Prohibition enters and hurls King Alcohol from his throne. The last act shows Tellus again. Around her are the spirits of the fruits and grains rejoicing. Over the ruins of King Alcohol's palace stands the Angel of Prohibition ready for flight.

Those desiring material for an evening's entertainment will be delighted with this little drama. Send for a copy. The price is 10 cents.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Assn.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8912—Blouse Eton with or without Capes.
12 to 16 years.

8927—Dress.
2 to 8 years.

8945—Shirt Waist.
32 to 46 in. bust.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, Chicago, Ill.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

The Mormon Menace

By SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D., LL.D.
AND
HELEN FALLOWS, A.M.

Containing most conclusive and convincing evidence on the Mormon question.

Price, postpaid, 25 cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

THE Y. W. C. T. U. MANUAL

By Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Containing page of errata,
By MRS. CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT
which brings it up to date, at the
SPECIAL PRICE OF

15 Cents Postpaid.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

Portrait of

GEN. NEAL DOW

FOR FRAMING.
SIZE 11 x 14.

Price, Postpaid, 15 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N,
CHICAGO.

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department
Union Signal
184 La Salle Street
CHICAGO

A New Club Rate
for
The Union Signal

Yearly Subscriptions,
in Clubs of Ten
or more,

Either new names or renewal,
at the special price of $1.25

each.

Regular Subscription Price, $1.50 per year.
Special Rate to Clergymen, Reading Rooms and Public Libraries, $1.00.

A club from every union is most earnestly solicited.

The Union Signal
CHICAGO, ILL.

The Hair That Can't Come Out
The Hair That Feeds On

Cranitonic

Hair Food

For the Hair and the Lack of Hair
The Food that Does the Hair Good

Stops Hair Falling
Makes Hair Grow
Cures Dandruff
Allays Scalp Irritation
Free from Greasy Sediment
The Modern Hair Dressing

Free Hair Food Sent by Mail

FREE HAIR FOOD

To Enable the Public to Observe its Absolute Purity and Learn of its Possibilities, and what it has done for others, a Trial Bottle of CRANITONIC HAIR FOOD and a book entitled HAIR EDUCATION containing beautiful illustrations in six colors, will be sent FREE, by mail, postpaid, to all who send name and complete address to

CRANITONIC
HAIR FOOD CO.
526 West Broadway New York

FREE MICROSCOPICAL EXAMINATION

All persons who have any trouble with their Hair and Scalp, and are alarmed or worried because they have used or done the wrong thing, and do not know what to do, are recommended to call on or write our Medical Department, conducted by Hair and Scalp Specialists—the most skilful doctors in their specialty in the World. Send a few hairs pulled from the head or a sample from the daily combings, for microscopical examination and our Medical Department will Diagnose your case and send you a full Report by mail, absolutely free.

Address as above.

Sold by all Dealers for One Dollar the Bottle.

Cranitonic Hair Food

Makes Each Hair Shine.
The Dressing That Gives
Bloom and Youth to the Tresses.

A NEW LIFE-SAVING FOOD.

The Most Valuable Blood-Making, Tissue-Building, Strength-Producing Product Known to Medical Science.

A Vitalized Pre-Natal Aliment of Surpassing Excellence and a Powerful Aid to Nursing Mothers, Weak Children, and All Who Are Sick.

Ozomulsion is the new medicated food.

It is a scientific combination of cod liver oil, guaiacol, glycerine, and the hypophosphites of lime and soda, vitalized with ozone.

The properties of its ingredients are:—

Cod liver oil—blood-making, tissue-building, nourishing, sustaining.

Guaiacol — antiseptic, germ-destroying, cough-appeasing, catarrh-curing.

Glycerine—soothing, healing, softening.

Lime and soda — bone-building, teeth-growing.

Ozone — vitalizing, exhilarating, germ-resisting, cleansing.

Compound of substances that nourish and sustain, the use of Ozomulsion means buoyant health.

Always uniform in quality, it is speedily digested and assimilated.

Rich in cell-building material, it quickens the process of cell-life.

It builds up tissue gradually, naturally, physiologically.

It arrests the morbid changes in nerve-centres, and supplies to the system the greatest power of endurance.

It is germ-resisting, germ-destroying.

It stimulates the secretions of the stomach and enables them to kill the germs of disease before they can reach the blood.

An Ozomulsion-taking person need have no fear of germ diseases.

It is only those whose systems have been weakened by careless methods of living that germs can successfully attack.

Ozomulsion maintains health and strength at their proper pitch and keeps the body in condition to repel microbic action.

It is essential to health because it prevents disease.

To successfully combat and cure all wasting diseases three great essentials are necessary:—

First—An Appetizer to Stimulate the desire for food.

Second—A Tonic to Promote the functions of the digestive organs and correct gastric disturbances.

Third—A Food to Increase the quantity of flesh and to add to the strength.

Ozomulsion, while essentially a Flesh-producer and Up-builder, also contains properties that increase the appetite, stimulate the action of the salivary glands and the flow of the gastric and pancreatic juices.

This means proper digestion, perfect assimilation, and good, solid flesh.

To the wasting consumptive Ozomulsion will prove a benefactor and a blessing.

It will stimulate digestion.

Diminish the cough and expectoration.

Prevent the softening and disintegration of pulmonary tissue.

Check the exhausting night sweats.

Arrest emaciation and bring back flesh and strength to the depleted system.

The value of Ozomulsion as a prenatal aliment and for nursing mothers, and weak, puny children cannot be estimated.

To the expectant mother it is invaluable. It lays the foundation for a generous supply of prenatal food. Rich in those elements that maintain a perfect nutrition, it produces a healthy growth of the vascular and nervous systems.

For nursing mothers it is most important. Its great nourishing qualities provide the proper supply of food on which the baby must depend for growth and strength, while its lime and soda make good bone and teeth material.

As an up-builder of weak, sickly children, it has no equal. Its powerful sustaining properties render it incomparably superior to all other foods. No fear of weak-boned or "rickety" children when Ozomulsion is used.

For the weak, the worn-out, and the weary, and all who realize that their vital powers are waning, Ozomulsion will prove a most palatable, wholesome, and uplifting food; while those in health and strength will find its germ-resisting properties a bulwark against the inroads and ravages of disease.

Although but recently introduced, the record Ozomulsion has already made proves it to be the most powerful weapon for combating and curing all wasting diseases that the physician has at his command to-day.

Don't confound Ozomulsion with the ordinary cod liver oils of commerce. It is specifically different. It is not only palatable, but deliciously agreeable to the taste and entirely free from the nauseating, fishy flavor of the common cod liver oil. It is also non-fermentive and non-acid making.

Dear Reader, perhaps you may think our statements regarding Ozomulsion too extravagant.

For this very reason we invite you to put our assertions to a test in your own household.

Send us your name and address and permit us to mail you a bottle free, so that you may learn its possibilities.

We know if you will simply give it a trial it will measure up to your fullest expectations.

FREE BOTTLE BY MAIL

We will send free by mail, prepaid, to every one interested a Trial Bottle of Ozomulsion. Write, giving complete address—street and number—by Postal Card or Letter, to

OZOMULSION FOOD COMPANY,
98 Pine St., New York.

SPECIAL NOTE.—Please mention reading this in THE UNION SIGNAL when writing for Free Bottle of Ozomulsion, The Food That Does So Much Good.

Ozomulsion is never sold in Bulk, but has been adopted and prescribed by many leading Practitioners, General Consultants, and Specialists in their hospital and private practice, and dispensed by druggists ONLY, in Extra Large Bottles, Weighing Over Two Pounds, for one Dollar.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 17. Issued Weekly.

CHICAGO, APRIL 23, 1903.

Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

VICTORIA THEATRE, GENEVA, SWITZERLAND.

This beautiful auditorium has been secured for the sessions of the World's W. C. T. U. Convention June 9-11, 1903, over which Lady Henry Somerset is expected to preside.

CONTENTS

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS.....2, 3

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:

Y's at the World's Convention — Utilize Home Talent--Physical Culture in Japan--Gleanings 4

CONTRIBUTED:

Geneva and Round About. By Susanna M. D. Fry — Hints for the Trip Abroad. By Minnie Barker Horning — My Outlook. By Florence Bronson Tucker..... 5

Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home.. 6

CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:

Pussy Willow—Grandmother's Pansies—Worth While—Youthful Wisdom — Good Tidings—Puzzlers' Packet..... 7

EDITORIAL:

The Saloon Power in Politics — "Having Eyes, See Ye Not?" — The Meaning of Election Day — A Notable Transfer..... 8

Personal Leadership — Toward the Sun-Rising. 9

EVANGELISTIC ECHOES..... 9

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS..... 10

W. C. T. U. NOTES..... 11

THE LOCAL UNION..... 12

ABOUT WOMEN..... 13

HOW ONE MOTHER TAUGHT ART..... 14

MOTHER AND HOME..... 15

SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES..... 16

Successful Institutes in Colorado

W. C. T. U. Leaders Assist in No License Campaign.

Esther A. Gaymon, Correspondent

DENVER, Colo., April 20.—Institute work is being "boomed" in Colorado. Our vice-president, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, and Y Secretary, Miss Rose Davison, have been over the state during the past few weeks, holding institutes and meeting with splendid success. Some idea of the difficulties attending the work here, compared with work in the more thickly settled eastern states, will be realized when you know that 536 miles were traveled to hold four institutes. Many new members were added to the ranks and four new Y's organized. All the expenses were met by the collections and a small admission charged for the second evening session, and quite a neat little sum turned over to the state treasurer.

The interest created among outsiders, also the excellent attendance at all of the institute sessions, has far exceeded anything that had been hoped for. Everywhere the newspapers were most kind, reporting the meetings at length.

A two-day institute is held at each place. Anti-Narcotics and Non-Alcoholic Medication are given the most prominent places on the program, with several exhaustive papers on the work of each of these departments. Other subjects are also considered and the first evening is devoted to "Colorado Laws," in charge of Mrs. Hungerford, who is also our state superintendent of Legislation and law enforcement.

The second evening Miss Davison gives a reading dapted from Elizabeth Stuart Phelps' novel, "A Singular Life," which adds greatly to the popularity of the institute, Miss Davison being an elocutionist of rare merit.

The meetings held at Longmont were influential in carrying the town for no-license. The issue at the recent spring election was the licensing of drug stores, and no doubt Mrs. Hungerford's earnest plea to women voters turned the scale and the temperance element won. The only fear the whisky people had was that the women would turn out and vote. The ministers of the town assisted in making these meetings a success and a part of the expense was taken out of the campaign fund, which would indicate how high the services of our institute workers are rated.

At Rocky Ford a fight against the saloons was being carried on by the W. C. T. U. of the town, which resulted in a no-license victory a few days later. Here again the ministers were prominent factors in the success of the institute.

At Idaho Springs the event had been very well advertised and a successful meeting was the outcome. The floral decorations and music were especially noteworthy, and the demonstration of Senior and Junior L. T. L. work was probably the finest ever given in the state.

The deference shown for Mrs. Hungerford's opinion on all legal questions, especially by the men of the audiences, was one of the institute features not to be forgotten.

During the winter some very helpful institutes have been held by the Eighth district W. C. T. U., which is composed chiefly of the fifteen or sixteen unions of Denver. This month they will hold an all day evangelistic meeting at a suburban church, by special invitation of the pastor. The first colored union in Denver has lately been organized and Mrs. M. A. Reichenbach, district president, with the able assistance of her co-workers, is advancing the work everywhere in the Eighth district.

Several reform bills were passed during the recent state legislature, one of the most important being that concerning and defining criminal assault and fixing the age of consent. Another prevents either husband or wife from disposing of the homestead without the signature of the other, and still another makes it the duty of the sheriffs to enforce the laws against wrongs to children. A bill was also passed for the protection of birds' nests, eggs, etc.; one establishing and maintaining traveling libraries, and an appropriation was made for the bureau of the Humane Society.

Current Events.

Judge D. D. Dykeman will give a $50,000 hospital to Logansport, Ind., as a memorial to his wife.

Illinois senate passes a bill providing for the examination, registration, and licensing of trained nurses.

Ambassadors of Italy, Germany, Austria and Russia urge the sultan of Turkey to check uprising of Albanians.

A $250,000 gift by Andrew Carnegie to the Mechanics and Tradesmen's Institute of New York, is announced.

Party of German agriculturists to make tour of United States to study methods of farming and stock raising.

Minister Conger reports from Peking the suppression of an attempt to reorganize the Boxer movement in the district of Yutien.

Move for national nonunion plan is given start at Indianapolis by incorporation of American Association of Independent Mechanics.

A million dollars lost in a great fire in the oil tract on Spindle Top, Texas. Twenty companies said to be bankrupted thereby.

The house of representatives of the Michigan legislature has agreed to a bill giving women representation on boards of control of state institutions.

Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter of Kentucky, authority for statement that Senator Fairbanks of Indiana has announced himself a candidate for the presidency.

A terrific hurricane strikes Berlin and many persons are injured, while the damage to property is great. All parts of Germany suffer from storms, and heavy snowfalls occur at some points.

The will of Mrs. Fannie S. Wilder, of St. Paul, Minn., probated April 17, devotes a fortune of $4,000,000 to the worthy poor of that city. A large sum is set apart for the maintainance of the Amherst H. Wilder Charity, already established. A day nursery is to be added to this institution, and a sum of $2,500 annually set apart for its maintenance, such nursery to be for the care of children during the day while the mothers are at work. For the establishment of new free public baths $20,000 is to be used and an annual maintenance fund is provided.

The Irish landlords and the Irish tenants have united in asking parliament to pass the Wyndham land bill as amended by the Dublin convention. John Redmond, representing the Irish Nationalists, made the following statement at the close of the convention: "If all goes well, the result will be the absolute end of the land war in Ireland, the union of all classes and creeds in this country, with the inevitable result of the concession, almost immediately, certainly within the lifetime of the present generation, of a system of national self-government."

Purity Work in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock Holds a Series of Successful Meetings.

Special Correspondence.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April 16.—An earnest week of work has recently closed in Hampden county. Our National superintendent of Purity, Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, came to us for March 29 to April 6, and during that time did an amount of seed-sowing that we believe with God's blessing will yield a rich harvest in more thoughtful work in homes and schools and local unions.

MRS. HELEN L. BULLOCK.

During the eight days she spoke to fourteen different audiences, and every time on Purity, although we know she was well fitted to discuss any phase of the temperance question. In Springfield, Holyoke, Westfield, Palmer and Ludlow she spoke to interested audiences of teachers and mothers, who showed their appreciation by their earnest questions and generous orders for literature recommended. The superintendents of schools in the first three places, Dr. Balliet of Springfield, Mr. Nash of Holyoke, and Mr. Holmes of Westfield, were very much interested in the matter, and welcomed a speaker, helping to get the teachers together.

At Holyoke the teachers were so enthusiastic that they sent word by telephone the evening after her talk at 4:15 p. m., to arrange for her return at their own expense two days later, to speak to mothers and teachers. Inside of thirty-six hours they sent out 500 mimeograph letters to mothers and teachers and gathered an audience of 225, all thoroughly interested.

The first Sunday Mrs. Bullock spoke at the Y. M. C. A. meeting in the afternoon at Holyoke, and secured a number of signers to the White Cross pledge. For the next Sunday the Y. W. C. A. of Springfield planned a mass meeting for young women to be held in a hall, and distributed through the young people's societies, their own girls and in stores and shops nearly a thousand tickets by way of invitation, besides giving press notices. Mrs. Bullock spoke from the subject, "Consider the Lilies," and held the closest attention of her audience. In a most delicate and tactful, yet plain and forcible manner she treated of subjects that are of the greatest importance to our young people. Many showed their interest by coming forward at the close to get the White Shield pledge or to ask some question.

Both Sunday evenings Mrs. Bullock spoke to mixed audiences on purity from the subject, "Let There Be Light." At Springfield she gained six active and five honorary members for the local unions. Her last meeting seemed quite a triumph and a special answer to prayer. At Ludlow the mill-owners do much for their employes, having two buildings for library, reading-rooms, classes in physical culture and basket ball, cooking and literature. She was invited to speak to mothers in the afternoon and girls in the evening.

The mill girls are largely French Canadians and Scotch, and leave school young to go to work. The meeting was a grand success, and many of the girls took away with them the White Shield pledge.

During February there had come to the county superintendent of Purity information of bad conditions existing in the public schools. At the county convention she spoke ten minutes on "Three Things Every Union Can Do for Purity," and this little speech, with the Lord's blessing, brought about the wave of sentiment for purity that swept Hampden county.

A Challenge From Illinois.

The Prairie State Claims the Oldest White Ribboner.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 20.—Illinois has perhaps the oldest white-ribboner now living, Mrs. Roxana Rice, who was on her last birthday, October 4, 1902, ninety-two years young. Her intellect and memory are said to be clear and bright, and she has vivid memories of the early days of our organization and work and possesses in a marked degree the crusade spirit of consecration and devotion.

MISS MARIE BREHM.

The institute work is moving forward with fine success. Miss Quinby, of Ohio, and our Miss Kennedy will finish their section April 1st, having made a fine record and reported many new unions. Miss Ensign, also of Ohio, will commence April 23 with Erie, Tazewell county. Miss Brehm is constantly in the field, with fine results, so far as reported. Equality has contributed to the institute work the largest amount of any union in the state. With a membership of thirty, and no help from the county, they turned over to the institute leader more than $28.

It now looks very much as if our state legislature would adjourn without taking action on some of the bills in which we are interested. This will no doubt relieve the politicians from the fear of church and temperance people on the one side and the liquor men on the other. Members have been hearing from their constituencies on both sides. God Himself only knows the result.

A Reception in Honor of Mrs. Thacher.

Soldiers of Unions at Forts Du Pont and Delaware Well Represented.

Lila Wilson Aron, Correspondent.

WYOMING, Del., April 20.—St. Paul's Y, of Wilmington, recently gave a delightful reception in honor of Mrs. Thacher, who has worked so faithfully in New Castle county the past season. She now sees as the fruits of her labor a new union, composed of soldier boys, who also received a share of the honors at the reception. About twenty pledged soldier boys of Fort Delaware were also present. The reception was held in the W. C. T. U. headquarters in Wilmington, the room being decorated with flags and bunting, the paper napkins having flags in the corners. In the way of entertainment they had a guessing contest of the flags of the nations, giving as a prize a mounted picture of Mrs. Thacher. One of the soldier boys, Mr. John D. Taylor, of Fort Dupont, won the picture. About ninety-five were present.

The new union of forty-two members at Fort Du Pont has rented and is fitting up a "Rest Room" at Delaware City. Each of the unions near by are sending them articles with which to furnish it, as well as reading matter. Mrs. Donnell, New Castle county president, for whom the new union is named, attended the reception, and is collecting money and articles of furnishing. She already has money to buy a rug, lamp and other things.

March 20 the St. Paul's Y commemorated the birthday of Gen. Neal Dow. The program was made especially interesting by the president, Miss Rietta Emerson, giving some personal reminiscences of the city of Portland and home of Neal Dow, as seen while attending the National convention.

During four days' work in New Castle county Mrs. Thacher gained twenty-one active and eight honorary members for the W. C. T. U.

Raids and Seizures in Iowa.

Montour and St. Anthony Unions Crusading.

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

Volga, Ia., April 18.—Mrs. Lora Bennett, president of the Fourteenth district, is one of our most devoted and successful workers. In her own home city of Marshalltown, white-ribboners have been taking active part in a strong fight for a clean city government. Here are some of the victories recently won by her active followers: Montour W. C. T. U. has suppressed illegal sales of liquor by druggists. St. Anthony union has been instrumental in closing a joint. The women and ministers visited the joint, accompanied by an officer. Bottles and cases of intoxicants were seized and destroyed. The keeper fled rather than stand trial. But at the request of these resolute workers, he signed a written contract, under oath before the mayor, never again to sell, give away or handle intoxicating liquors in our state. St. Anthony union was also the means of the removal of a gambling wheel from a restaurant.

Mrs. Lora A. Bennett.

Miss Gretel A. Lowe, reader of "Who Killed Joe's Baby?" by Charles A. Sheldon, and other selections, is giving a month's work in Mrs. Bennett's district.

Centreville union, organized a short time ago with seventy-five members, has now an enrolled membership of one hundred and sixty, and has cheered the heart of the state superintendent of the Sabbath Observance department by writing for supplies and for instructions in regard to pushing this much neglected branch.

Council Bluffs white-ribboners caused the arrest of Chicago actors and actresses, fifteen in all, representing the Younger brothers and their desperate confederates, at the close of their performance on a recent Sunday evening. All gave bond before Justice Ouren to appear in court on charge of having violated the Sunday law. I have not learned the outcome, but the penalty for violating our Sunday law is contemptibly small. Great credit is due the secretary of the union, Miss Bertha Johnson, and other members for this brave action in defense of the sanctity of the Sabbath.

Dr. A. J. Wheeler, of New York, who has given to the state of Iowa nearly two years of service, has greatly strengthened the cause of temperance and purity wherever he has been.

Rev. A. J. Wheeler.

His plan of work is unique, and even the poorer unions are enabled to secure his services. He has reported more new members during the past year than any worker in the state, although all have done well. One of the encouraging features of his work is the fact that every union where he has visited is eager for his return.

He shares the profits with the union, so that over six hundred dollars have come to the local treasurers through his generosity. He has consented to remain in the state for at least a year longer.

On the evening of April 3 the Des Moines federation of unions held a farewell meeting with our state superintendent of Work Among Foreign-Born People, Mrs. Anna E. Halvorson. Mrs. Halvorson is soon to remove to her old home near Ossian.

National Workers in Louisiana.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

Baldwin, La., April 12.—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, National recording secretary, lectured at Shreveport. The union was strengthened by the addition of nine new members, and $10 were collected to help on the work. A portion of the town was flooded at Columbia, and after filling her engagement at Monroe, Mrs. Hoffman left the state.

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman.

On account of the flood and her own illness, Mrs. Callie Howe, National organizer, was unable to reach some of the appointments made for her by the president of the Fourth district, Mrs. Mae E. Davis. She visited these towns: Noble, Zwolle, Loring and Florien, in the Fourth district. Although the people addressed in the four towns only numbered three hundred, the aggregate collection was $47.65. She held meetings at Hornbeck, Orange, Bon Ami and De Ridder, in the Third district. Mrs. Howe delivered nine lectures and held five day meetings. Sixty signed the pledge. Thirteen active members and eight honorary members were secured. Mrs. Howe has returned home for needed rest.

The mid-year executive meeting was held in New Orleans. For the first time in several years all the state officers were present. This was considered a criterion of the awakened interest in the W. C. T. U.

A Victory For Good Government.

Special Correspondence.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 20.—Let it go on record that for once Christian citizens appreciated and worked hard for the re-election of a good mayor. Notwithstanding the combined forces of Democrats and Socialists, who voted on the same ticket, Mayor Webb was re-elected mayor of Battle Creek by a majority of 700.

The saloon element left no stone unturned to defeat him, and at the outset said "he was snowed under," but they were mistaken, and no organization rejoices more than the W. C. T. U. In his speech, at the first meeting of council since his re-election, the mayor said: "I will work for the best interests of the people. I will not allow any slot machines. Gamblers had better seek some honest means of making a living and druggists must either pay saloon licenses or quit selling liquor in back rooms, etc. All these places will be closely watched and law breakers will be punished to the full extent of the law."

Defeated But Not Discouraged.

Elections Lost But the Work Goes On.

Medora D. Nickell, Correspondent.

Beatrice, Neb., April 13.—Shall we also report defeat? The recent election was the knell to so many hopes. If the temperance forces were free to use—from the conscience standpoint—the same methods as the liquor people—but that is not to be thought of. Just how far the accusations of illegal voting and the use of large sums of purchase money are deserved it would be impossible to say. The results: saloons, saloons, everywhere, save in the towns already won to prohibition — these are what we have to deal with.

Mrs. Florence Lake.

Many towns, notably Fairbury and Beatrice, made a big struggle for prohibition. All the usual plans for creating sentiment and conviction were used, but were not sufficient. The very unfortunate devotement of the license money to the support of the public schools was made a strong weapon for the defense of the saloon. Nebraska would do well to annul that law.

It is good to drop this thought of defeat, and speak instead of the steady forwarding of the Master's kingdom by our state superintendent of the Evangelistic department, Mrs. Florence Lake, of Republican City. Not only has Mrs. Lake enlisted the close sympathy and assistance of the local superintendents, but she has answered many calls, particularly from churches for help in revival meetings, where her faith and works have received the great reward, and many have been redeemed through her instrumentality. Mrs. Lake's addresses are clear expositions of the Master's love and sacrifice and power to save to the uttermost.

A recent evangelistic number of our state paper contained papers which might easily rank with the best sermons, some from Mrs. Lake's pen, others from officers and workers in the state. The influence of such a paper, going into every W. C. T. U. home and read by many who are not avowedly temperance people, is incalculable. Personal labor and the distribution of good literature are two answers to the question, "How shall we reach the masses?"

Work In West Washington.

State Officers and National Workers in the Field.

Margaret B. Platt, Correspondent.

Columbia, Wash., April 13.—Mrs. Munns and I spent several weeks at Olympia during the session of the legislature, in the interest of reform measures, especially an anti-cigaret bill forbidding entirely the little pest in our state. We had the support of the people of the state but the agent for the tobacco trust was on the ground continuously and succeeded in keeping the bill from coming to a vote. I feel sure it would have passed had it ever got to a vote. It was far easier to manage a few men and by their connivance keep it from coming up, than it was to get it defeated in open fight.

Mrs. Margaret B, Platt.

Miss Hollister is making a two months' tour of our state, with good reports from counties already visited.

The state officers are always at work. We have much work planned ahead. Our state convention will be held in Whatcom, Sept. 25 to 29. The president and corresponding secretary expect to visit Whatcom county in May for a tour of the county. We are also expecting to hold a diamond medal contest in May. We have a great many medal contests. Our L. T. L. work is looking up, and in fact our entire work seems to be in pretty good shape and growing.

Our National organizer, Mrs. Mattie N. Graves, spent a week working in King county and organized a new union at Issauah. She is to go shortly to Chehalis county for another week or ten days.

A large number of our unions have held memorial service in remembrance of Miss Willard, and in every instance unusually interesting and successful meetings have been reported.

New Jersey L. T. L. In Council

Anna G. Harris, Correspondent.

New Brunswick, N. J., April 20.—The L. T. L. conference of New Jersey was the guest of the Passaic W. C. T. U. April 9. It invited us to its new home, recently builded, and furnished us our luncheon at the noon hour. The building is known as the Frances E. Willard Hall. About seventy-five were in attendance during the morning and afternoon sessions.

The program was varied and interesting. We had with us two of our state officers, Mrs. Emma Bourne, president, who talked to us of the rank and file of 1920, and Mrs. Isabella Demarest, corresponding secretary, who told us what wonderfully good secretaries and treasurers the unions would have in 1920, all owing to the training given in the L. T. L.'s of today. Other helpful subjects were: "How Can Unions and Legions Be Mutually Helpful?" Crusade Against Brandy Drops," "The Rights of County L. T. L. Secretaries," and "Encouragements of L. T. L. Secretaries."

Rev. C. W. Burns, former state president of the Pennsylvania L. T. L., gave a stirring address in the evening.

Prohibition Victory On The Coast.

Santa Ana, California, Votes No License by Big Majority.

Santa Ana, Cal., April 14:—Prohibition for the city of Santa Ana—the county seat of Orange county—carried yesterday by a majority of 257 votes. Three city councilmen were elected who are all right—two of them are named Wright—and these, with the two who hold over, give a council in favor of prohibition. Our seven saloons must now go out of business.

The women worked hard at the polls all day, directing the sentiment that had been aroused by a series of meetings held before the election, addressed by prominent temperance speakers. The local clergymen, representatives of the Anti-Saloon League and W. C. T. U., as well as individual workers, united in the effort that has culminated so satisfactorily.

Give Us More "High Minded Men."

Bunker Hill, Ind., April 13.—Winston Smith was granted a saloon license by the Miami county commissioners, but has met an obstacle unique in its application. When Smith appeared before Town Clerk D. A. McDowell with the necessary $150 license fee McDowell refused to issue the document. McDowell is a Prohibitionist and opposed to saloons. That was a week ago, and Clerk McDowell remains steadfast in refusing to issue the license. In an interview he said:

"For seventeen years I have been a Prohibitionist, a moral man, a Christian and a minister of the gospel. To have my name attached to a license framed and hung up in a saloon for exhibition would give the lie to everything I have said and done in behalf of temperance. I will never sign it. I can resign, but will not issue the license."

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

Y's at the World's Convention.

By Clara Parrish-Wright.

MRS. BARNES and the writer in conference have decided that, inasmuch as the World's Convention program covers a period of three days only, it will scarcely be possible for the Young Woman's Branch to have a whole evening during the session. They are not to be left out, however, arrangements having been made for a mass meeting of the young people at another place and time—probably Sunday afternoon. This meeting will be presided over by one of our number and representatives of the various countries will speak. It is also decided that one or two young women shall represent us on Platform Night, being introduced as distinctively Y workers.

The following is an outline of the mass meeting program, subject to corrections and additions:

Organ Voluntary.
Devotions.
Music.
Greetings.
Address in French, by Miss Swankie-Cameron, England.
Vocal Solo, Miss Sarah Munroe Hall, U. S. A.
Address, Miss Christine Tinling, England.
Music.
Introduction of young women from all countries represented.
Music.
Presentation of Banner.
Vocal Solo, Miss Hall.
Our General's Message, Lady Henry Somerset.
Benediction.

It is a matter of deep regret to me that no American girl's name appears as speaker, but Miss Hall is the only one who has positively informed me of her intention to be present. I hope this may be corrected. The conferences will be in charge of Miss Swankie Cameron, Assistant World's Y Secretary.

Utilize Home Talent.

MY DEAR STATE SECRETARIES: Some of you have been doing good work in the matter of inducing local W. C. T. U. leaders to organize the girls, if I may judge from the letters that come to my desk. Here is one from Mrs. Pittman of Arkansas:

"My Dear Mrs. Wright: I want to organize a Y tomorrow afternoon and I am going to ask you to send me at least twenty-five Year Books. I know the girls will gladly buy them.

"How I enjoy the Y page of THE UNION SIGNAL. I am a mother of grown-up sons and daughters, but every department of our blessed work is as interesting as when I first began."

Do you not wish we might receive a thousand such letters this year? When we remember the expenses of travel and realize how difficult it is to send the worker into some parts of our country, for financial reasons, and then see the very small cost of enlisting the girls when the subject is taken up by local workers of the W. C. T. U., I for one cannot help feeling that it is one of the methods we should push. How many of you agree with me? How many of you have made any effort along this line? I like the plan of Miss Anna E. Chase, of Northern California, who has offered a banner to the county president who organizes the greatest number of Y's during the year. Indeed I cannot think of any effort to stimulate the interest of W. C. T. U. leaders in our behalf that has pleased me quite so much. Wise indeed is the county president who sees in this the perpetuity of W. C. T. U. work.

Of course, if you can get into the field, yourself, that is the ideal; but, when you cannot and are not able to send someone in your place, the next best thing is to appeal to the mother hearts of the local union. If you can afford to send with your request a copy of the Y Manual, the Year Book, Responsive Reading for June, 1901, etc., do so, but if you cannot do even this tell them just where they are to be had and the prices, and some of them will order for themselves as Mrs. Pittman has done. This method, as a means of reaching a larger number of young women, has been on my heart and I hope it will appeal strongly to you.

Mrs. Pauline W. Holme, of Baltimore, who was the first to suggest the graduation or promotion of Y's into W's, is very anxious that an accurate record shall be kept of all such promotions. She says: "I have just been reading your letter about dues in the last UNION SIGNAL. It will be no trouble to ascertain the exact number of Y's in Baltimore, because our city treasurer always makes a separate record of each local union, but our promotions prevent the full idea of the gain made through our Y Branch. I have been wondering whether there could not be devised a plan whereby each year we could ascertain the number of the new recruits and the number promoted. Those two facts would represent the growth and power through the Y's, and would mean more to the future than a long list of old members gathered through all the years of the Y organization. If it were possible to secure these data from the beginning of the Twentieth Century and keep a record—so many promoted to the rank of the W's, so many new recruits added—in a very few years we would roll up a most interesting record. Don't you believe you can think out some plan for the recording of strength added to the W. C. T. U. proper, through the promotion made by the Y's and the new growth brought into the Y Branch, that will deserve banners as well as the old way?"

If you see the force of her theory as clearly as I do we will adopt this plan another year, and give either the banner or the bannerette to the state that makes the largest showing along these lines.

With ever increasing loyalty and devotion,

I am faithfully yours,

Paris, Ill. CLARA PARRISH WRIGHT

Physical Culture in Japan.

FROM a private letter written by Miss Kara Smart to Miss Gordon, we are privileged to quote some paragraphs which it may surprise Miss Smart to see in THE UNION SIGNAL, but which Miss Gordon rightly thinks are of such unique interest that they should be shared by our white-ribbon constituency.

Miss Smart writes from Tokyo, under date of February 9: "Last Saturday evening I addressed about 200 of Tokyo's higher class ladies at the regular meeting of the Woman's Hygiene and Sanitary Association. My subject was, 'The House We Live In.' My address was preceded by that of an elderly physician (Japanese) on 'The Nurse in the Home.' The room was so very cold, notwithstanding the united effort of two stoves, that the audience was simply frozen out by the time the gentleman finished his address. I studied the audience carefully and knew that they could never listen to what I had to say in any comfort and the chances were that they would all take cold before I got half-way through, for my forty-minute address would take a good hour and one-half, if not longer, with an interpreter.

"I turned to the interpreter and asked him if it would do to warm them up with physical culture exercises. He said: 'No! I would not advise you to try it!' It was so manifest in his tone that he did not approve of it that I refrained from further mention of it, but I mentally resolved to warm up that audience in some way before I began to talk.

"When I was announced I went forward, placed my paper on the table and then facing them told them what I was going to talk about, adding that I thought the first thing to do was to get more comfortable and I knew that they were all too cold to listen to what I had to say, but that if they would do as we often did in America I could show them how to get warm. Then I told them what I wanted them to do and showed them how. My interpreter groaned under his breath, but there was nothing for it but to translate what I had said and to follow my example and he did it beautifully.

"We got them on their feet and moving up and down on their toes, and they seemed to enjoy it. Then he said in an undertone: 'You have gone far enough!' I didn't think so, and proceeded to have them swing their arms. They followed me finely, but my interpreter was in consternation that I should have the audacity to ask those high-toned ladies to go through such performances. They didn't mind it, however, and they looked much warmer whether they felt so or not, and listened most attentively to what I had to say until the close of the address.

"Then they took us upstairs to a foreign reception room which had a warm fire, and served refreshments. Here I met many of the ladies personally, and a number of them promised to call. They asked me for my whole address for their society journal. Later I learned that they have over sixteen hundred members, in five local societies in different parts of the empire, representing the better class of Japanese women, and my address will reach the great majority of them. Four other city papers had reporters there, and three of the men were stenographers, so it looks as if my written words would go much farther than the spoken ones.

"When I reached home, and told how I had warmed the ladies up, my host and hostess held their breath in astonishment, and wondered that they did what I asked of them. Such an unheard of thing for such dignity to descend to, and I began to wonder if I had not made an awful mistake, although I couldn't see for the life of me why a society that was making the study of the body a specialty could not condescend, if it might be called that, to protect that body from taking cold.

"This afternoon two of the ladies have called on me and informed me that the society had decided to make me an honorary member and they presented me with its badge, a beautiful gold chrysanthemum pendant pin, similar to the one worn by officers, as the members wear one of silver. One of these ladies, whose husband is a member of the legislature, I believe, and who is very wealthy, told me that she was planning to entertain me and some of her friends in truly Japanese style and that she is going to give a big dinner in my honor just as soon as I get back from Osaka! Now that doesn't look as though those dear women were shocked out of a year's growth, does it?"

Gleanings.

The Massachusetts Y conference will be held at Attleboro, in May.

The Kansas "Our Messenger," for April, is one of the very finest numbers yet issued.

Miss Rose A. Davison, of Colorado, reports another enthusiastic Y at Rocky Ford.

Baltimore City Y's will hold a conference April 23. Colonel Bain will speak at the night meeting.

The Willard Y Settlement, Boston, will begin holding a rummage sale April 23 and continue it one week.

Equality, Ill., has a new Y organized by Mrs. Nellie E. Maltby, an enthusiastic member of the local union.

Next to the youngest society, the Hazlet Y of Baltimore, and the W nearest them, will entertain the city quarterly meeting May 28.

Miss Swankie-Cameron has been speaking on the new licensing act in England. The local press in places visited comment most favorably upon her addresses.

Miss Emma E. Page, West Washington, is a most loyal supporter of the Young Woman's Branch. On a recent Mercy lecture trip she organized a promising Y at Spokane.

West Washington has offered a prize for the best display at the department parade during the coming state convention and Miss Ansorge hopes to capture it for the Y's.

A unique temperance society has recently been formed among the young people of Bruner Academy, Antioch, La., by Prof. J. W. Bruner. It is called the Temperance Benevolent society.

Mrs. Nelle G. Burger reports a new Y at Verona, Mo. This intrepid worker starts east this month on a six or seven months' campaign, which includes a tour of some of the provinces.

The great California University, located at Berkely, is to have a Somerset Y soon, with the wife of one of the college professors as leader. So writes Mrs. Rhodes, the county president.

Mrs. Pauline W. Holme, president Baltimore City Union of Unions, says our first "graduate," the Ella Dougherty W. C. T. U., has taken its place as one of the very prosperous W. C. T. U.'s of the city.

The Dexter (Mo.) Y's have begun a new year of activity. The night before Miss Carter left them for her southern trip they held a most excellent public meeting and took a collection for the World's work.

The Roseville Y, of Newark, N. J., has organized a junior Y called the Mary E. Frome. Mrs. F. was a former county president and it was mainly through her efforts that the Roseville Y was formed some years ago.

Miss Florence Hammond, state secretary, organized the West Baltimore Y, April 3. Nearly all the officers are students of the State Normal school. They made one of their honoraries superintendent of Press work.

Still another new Y in Maine, at Bar Harbor. It looks as though our National resident's state would head the list of progressives this year. Maine leaders have a faculty for bringing particularly talented young women into the work.

North Carolina undoubtedly stands at the head in College Y work. This is due to the consecration and executive ability of Miss Mary Lynch. April 10 she held a state conference of the colleges, the first on record. A full report will be given later.

Miss Florence Hammond has done one of the greatest things for the society that has been accomplished by any Y, by the writing of one letter. Not long ago she wrote Dr. Cowan, of "The Christian Endeavor World," and asked if the life of Frances Willard could not be made a regular C. E. topic. He replied that it was too late for 1904, but that he himself would propose it for 1905.

GENEVA AND ROUND ABOUT

By Susanna M. D. Fry.

JUST now the words, "Geneva" and "Switzerland" have a peculiar charm for white ribboners. Large numbers from the countries which form the World's W. C. T. U. are expecting soon to view the beautiful and historic city which lies at the end of Lake Geneva and on the waters of the blue Rhone.

Geneva, the capital of one of the smallest cantons of Switzerland, is one of the richest and most populous cities of the Republic. White ribboners of the official party from the United States will be entertained at Hotel Belle Vue, and the meetings of the great convention will be held in Victoria Hall, a beautiful structure with every appointment needed for a large convention.

Geneva is of great interest, not only because of the grand and picturesque scenery with which it is surrounded and because of its intellectual and social importance, but because from it have emanated those religious and civic principles which, since the sixteenth century, have shaken Europe to its foundations.

Of the notables of the past who have lived there, we think of austere and tyrannical John Calvin, who, expelled from France on account of his religious tenets, sought refuge in Geneva and exercised almost unlimited sway in the affairs of both church and state until the day of his death, in 1540; of Rousseau, French philosopher, writer, and advocate of principles conducive neither to the happiness nor the betterment of mankind; of Gibbon, the historian, and his "Decline and Fall of Rome," written not far away; of Voltaire, who said of the little canton, "When I shake my wig, I powder the whole Republic;" of Necker, minister to Louis XIV.,

CASTLE OF CHILLON.

and of his still more notable daughter, Madame de Stael, whose chateau may be seen by a short excursion to Coppet, where she held court while in banishment from Paris by Napoleon. We think, too, of Byron whose "Castle of Chillon" can easily be found,—though the famous captive is non est, as, indeed, he always was—and, if one cares, she can see the house where Byron wrote the first two cantos of "Childe Harold."

As for views, there are plenty of them, and as magnificent as the Alps can make them. Majestic, snow-capped Mont Blanc and the Jura Mountains will supply both grandeur and picturesqueness. Of course there are theaters, museums, national monuments, bridges, art galleries, an old cathedral, the Hotel de Ville, a botanic garden, historic spots, etc., but perhaps to those who have not had an opportunity to see the peculiarities of a Greek church, the Russian church with its glittering domes will be as interesting, inside and out, as any other one building.

Ah, but the shops! They must not be forgotten. The watches, the jewelry, the carved wood, the music-boxes are far-famed. Go between the acts of the convention and be tempted to buy—there is no virtue without resistance of temptation.

The visitor can find an English church, if she wishes, and cafes which serve beer with all the French and German names imaginable, but it is safe to suppose that total abstinence will not be appreciated or understood in the latter, and one may possibly hear the exclamation, "Come, see a woman who says she never drank a glass of beer in her entire life!"

HINTS FOR THE TRIP ABROAD

By Minnie Barker Horning.

WHAT to carry and what not to cumber oneself with is a question to the novice in foreign travel. If a trunk for use on the ocean is taken, it must be a steamer trunk, not more than three feet long and twelve inches deep, so that it may be kept under the berth. Larger articles of baggage are stored in the hold. A small handbag for toilet articles is necessary and a shawl strap is needed for carrying steamer rug and heavy bath robe. For continental travel, a large roll, called a "carry-all," is by far the best article of luggage. It is light, can be made large or small, according to the traveler's needs, and is easily packed and unpacked. Such a carry-all may be purchased in London, New York or Chicago for about $2.50.

Suit cases are often suggested for continental travel, but their weight makes them undesirable. While one can engage a porter for a small sum (not more than ten cents) at all stations abroad, still there are times when one must carry his own luggage.

For steamer chair use, a warm blanket-shawl or steamer rug, large enough to completely envelope one, is a necessity. A small cretonne or gingham covered pillow should also be taken. The air pillows are easily carried, and are superseding those made of down or feathers.

The clothing to be worn on shipboard, should, first of all, be warm. Heavy winter underwear is necessary besides a flannel dress waist and short skirt, stout boots, close cap, hood or fascinator, and a golf cape or ulster. For the land journey a good traveling suit is desirable. This may be worn until the steamer is well out at sea, and then a costume none too good for salt water spots should be donned. The stylish traveling suit will not be needed again until one prepares to leave the ship at the journey's end. This suit, with pretty shirt waists, will be appropriate for continental travel and for the day sessions of the Convention. For the receptions and evening sessions, a light-weight silk, voile or net dress, or light silk waist and dark skirt will be quite suitable. Carry as little clothing as possible, as laundry work is done on short notice.

Seats at the table are assigned by the second steward, and one's first duty should be to make application to him for desirable location. It is wise for women traveling alone to send in written application before the time of sailing. In such cases seat reservation will be found in the stateroom upon one's arrival on board.

Steamer chairs, which are rented for $1, are placed by the deck steward, and the position once assigned is held during the voyage. It is best to choose the sunny side of the deck, which is the right hand side of the ship going from New York to London and the left side returning. This selection should be made upon boarding the ship.

The salt water baths are extremely beneficial. If promptly arranged for with the bedroom steward, a bath may be had at a stated hour each morning.

It is usual at the end of the voyage to fee the stewards. The table and bedroom stewards expect from $2 to $2.50 each, the deck steward and others according to the service rendered.

One should not fail to take a medicine case, stocked with simple remedies, such as aconite, camphor, peppermint, etc.

Regarding sea-sickness, there are remedies, and remedies, but the best preventive is to go on board in good physical condition. In case of delicate health the invigorating salt air will be of the greatest benefit and even seasickness is often attended with the best results. At all events, the pleasures awaiting one on the other side are well worth the braving of old Neptune.

The best form in which to carry money is the American express traveler's checques. These are issued in denominations of ten dollars, twenty dollars and upwards. Across the face of each checque is printed the exact amount of foreign money to be paid in each foreign country. These checques are cashed everywhere, and are as good as currency. The book of checques costs fifty cents for each $100. The first need on landing will be some small change in English money. The purser on the steamer will exchange money for its foreign equivalent. Later it is interesting to compute in shillings and pence, francs and sous, marks and pfennigs, kronens and hellers.

Although there are numerous other hints that might be added, the foregoing are the main essentials.

My Outlook.

By Florence Bronson Tucker.

ALL day, close-prisoned in my sickroom chair,
I watch intently, with untiring eyes,
The human figures that make haste to pass
Athwart my outlook, where, as through a glass,
I get my peep at the world's thoroughfare.
My mimic stage, against whose sides arise
Tall wings of brick and stone, sedate and cold.
Nor scarcely dare I turn aside my head
Lest I might lose some vibrant touch of life,
As when a strong man, freshly from the strife
Beyond, exultant comes; or, bent and old,
A woman passes mourning for her dead.
Forgetting self, I gaze, lest I should miss
Some tender scene of sorrow or of joy
Born of a soul grief-laden, or a whistling boy,
Or the sweet promise of a lover's kiss,
Until the kindly daylight slowly dies
And dark shuts out the vision from mine eyes.
So, too, at last, athwart our little space
Of Life, Death draws the curtain of earth's night,
Leaving us helpless till the morning light
Reveals to us God's purpose face to face.

Springfield, Mass.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter VIII.

A FEW days later Dr. Mann was stopped by the vicar on his way up the straggling village street.

"You are the very man I was coming to see. I'm in a bit of a difficulty, and am wondering whether I dare ask Mrs. Langley to help me out."

A curious look of foreboding flitted momentarily across the doctor's face, but found no expression in his cordial response.

"I can answer, at any rate, for Mrs. Langley's goodwill. What is the difficulty? He had turned with the vicar, and was slowly sauntering back towards his own house.

"Well, it's this. You know that I am hoping shortly to get married?"

The doctor nodded.

"To a lady considerably older than yourself, with gray hair and spectacles. Pitsmoor rings with our speculations concerning your motive."

"I knew how it would be," said Mr. Boyd, resignedly. "That is her aunt, an excellent lady, who has kept house for Mr. Glyn since his wife's death many years ago. She came over to see me on personal business. Miss Smith met us together in Milborough a week ago. Well, this lady, Miss Glyn, was to have brought over the two girls—my future wife and her sister—for the day. Marsden is sending some of the furniture over on approval, and the selection of the furniture with which one has to live is a grave responsibility."

"It is," agreed the doctor, grimly; "but unfortunately I have never succeeded in convincing Mrs. Langley of the fact. On what day was this arrangement to come off?"

"To-morrow; and at the last moment it appears that Mr. Glyn finds his sister's presence at home indispensable. No one ever presumes to act in opposition to Mr. Glyn; so unless we can hit on some expedient, the girls will have to bear their disappointment as best they may. Now, I was wondering—"

Dr. Mann was wondering too, but he quickly came to the conclusion that there was no help for it.

"Let's go in and consult Mrs. Langley. I have no doubt that she will be delighted to have them as her guests for the day."

"And if to-morrow is not convenient—" began Mr. Boyd, eagerly.

"I know of no reason why it should not be to-morrow; but at any rate, come in and see what Mrs. Langley says."

Mrs. Langley listened to the vicar's story very graciously, and declared herself delighted to be able to render him so pleasant a service; but when Mr. Boyd had gratefully departed to wire the news of the promised invitation to the disappointed girls, she looked at her brother and laughed, as if in enjoyment of some joke.

"My poor Bob! Are we never to find an absolutely safe retreat?" she asked, in tones of mock commiseration.

Dr. Mann turned away impatiently, but at the door he turned again and paused.

"I have little doubt that all will go well—this time; but you will remember what my custom is. If you insist on taking any course of which I disapprove, and harm comes of it, I move on without loss of time."

The door closed behind him as he uttered the last word, but the smile that lingered upon Mrs. Langley's lips boded ill for his peace of mind. Pitsmoor had grown more interesting of late, and just now she had no particular desire to "move on," but it was very likely that she might settle her little score with Bob some other time. That, however, was a private matter between herself and Bob. She had no intention of allowing it to deprive her of the pleasure of playing the part of chaperon to two unsophisticated and grateful girls.

To Mary and Rose Glyn the next day was one of unalloyed enjoyment. They succumbed at once to the spell of their hostess's fascination; and partly from gratified vanity and partly from real pleasure in the rare luxury of giving pleasure, Mrs. Langley exerted herself to the utmost to give them both a delightful holiday. Remembering that the main business of the day would also be its chief pleasure, she entered heartily into the momentous questions of the choice and disposition of furniture, and in spite of Dr. Mann's disparaging remark, gave really valuable advice and help; then, when the business of the day was satisfactorily concluded, she overruled Miss Glyn's discreet plans for an early return home, and insisted upon carrying out her own program.

"Mr. Brotherton is coming to dinner at six o'clock, and, poor man, you could not have the heart to disappoint him. I don't suppose that he has dined out except in a humdrum way, with such old folk as Bob and me, since he came to this barren land. Then after dinner we'll have a little music and a little chat," with a fleeting glance divided between the vicar and Mary Glyn; "and after that Mr. Boyd shall see you as far on your way home as he thinks fit."

This modest program was carried out with great success. After long, monotonous months of hard work and little recreation, Hugh's handsome face lighted up with pleasure when he entered Mrs. Langley's drawing-room. The hostess was charmingly dressed, and the prettily coiled hair and dainty muslins of the two girls were a positive refreshment to eyes long tortured by the ragged fringe and crude colors dear to the heart of a Pitsmoor lass. Both Mary and Rose Glyn had fresh, sweet faces, but Hugh decided at a glance that the younger girl was the prettier. Also that in the matter of beauty, neither could bear comparison with Mrs. Langley. Still there was something decidedly attractive in Miss Rose Glyn's frank friendliness, and he was additionally drawn to her by the latent fun in her clear blue eyes. It was the fun of good health and youthful spirits, and seemed to have little in common with that occasional diablerie which broke through the habitual sadness of Mrs. Langley's face.

He was doing his best, not without success, to draw out the fun, when a sudden ebullition of Mrs. Langley's more subtle mischief amazed and disquieted him. While the neat parlormaid was offering aerated waters, her progress round the table was suddenly interrupted by her mistress.

"Bob, will you send for some wine? We mustn't force our teetotal principles and practices upon our guests."

Had a bomb dropped at her feet, the maid could scarcely have looked more startled, a sensation that was manifestly shared by Hugh; but the doctor turned to the young strangers with a smile.

"If I am not greatly mistaken, either of our guests would drop from sheer exhaustion before she would wound the consciences of the weaker brethren!" he said, inquiringly.

While the two girls were eagerly assuring their hostess of their preference for lemonade, Hugh was eying the doctor steadily. If this was not a tacit claim to the holding of total abstinence principles, he should like to know what was.

Meeting his eye, the doctor winked with calm effrontery, and a few minutes later Hugh caught a swift exchange of looks between the two ends of the table that puzzled him still more. On either side it was but a flash of defiance on the one hand, of quiet triumph on the other. Obviously there was something concerning his host and hostess that the curate had still to learn.

He did not allow the problem to mar his enjoyment of a pleasant evening. Presently, in the drawing-room, Mrs. Langley proposed some music and producing some songs, was charmed to find that Miss Rose Glyn and Mr. Brotherton were accustomed to singing the same duets. Their voices, as she soon discovered, were "absolutely made to go together," and, to their evident satisfaction, she kept them singing, either together or singly, while the young vicar and Miss Glyn talked softly on the other side of the room. Dr. Mann, who had been called away to the surgery, was scarcely missed, but he returned in time to hear Mrs. Langley saying, in a hesitating, deprecating way, that she scarcely knew whether she dared venture to ask Mr. Brotherton to try just one song with her.

As the notes of the prelude rippled out, the doctor turned his back upon the piano and scowled, but in another moment a hush fell upon the room. Even the lovers turned to listen. Rose Glyn's sweet, pure notes had blended prettily with Hugh's, but the singing of this duet was an entirely different thing. Mrs. Langley favored love songs of the melancholy kind, and in this particular ditty her beautiful voice thrilled with passion and with power. For the first time, as it seemed to Hugh, the pathetic sadness of her face found articulate expression, and quickly caught and carried away by her mood, he answered passion with passion, and power with power. It was not thus that he had sung with Rose. As the last impassioned notes had died away, Mrs. Langley rose from the pianoforte, receiving the acknowledgments of her guests lightly as she turned away. Hugh could not so easily throw off the emotion she had stirred, and falling back, he stood for a moment silently by Rose's side. When he came to himself, the girl was speaking enthusiastically. "I have been taking up all the time, but indeed I had no idea that you and Mrs. Langley could sing like that," she was saying.

"I? Oh, my part in it was not worth mentioning. It was Mrs. Langley who did it all," said the young man, honestly enough.

His eyes were still following the graceful form of his hostess round the room when Miss Glyn rose from her blissful corner, and with Mr. Boyd, approached the lady of the house.

"Oh! must you really go? How quickly the time has flown! I must—I really must have one more duet. I always save it for the last. There is time; there really is. You won't refuse?"

She turned from Rose to Hugh appealingly, while her brother looked on with a sardonic smile.

The delicate color crept into the girl's cheeks, but she took the proffered sheet with a questioning glance at Hugh. It was a devotional song, simple and sincere, but Hugh secretly revolted from the thought of singing it tonight. However, there was no help for it, and silently arranging the accompaniment for Mrs. Langley, he stood prepared to turn the leaves.

Dr. Mann was drumming irritably on the arm of his chair, but at the end of the first verse he ceased, and turned a somewhat malicious smile upon the accompanist. This time there was no display, on either side, of passion or of power. Putting her shy sense of inferiority resolutely aside, Rose sang the simple and inspiring words out of the fulness of a simple and sincere heart, and the emotional Hugh, every ready to catch the contagion of a mood, sang as simply and sincerely as the girl herself. This time he was not carried away. On the contrary, with every word that came with such heartfelt meaning from his lips his aspirations were falling back to their accustomed place. It was under no glamour of bewitchment, but in the honest consciousness of a pure and ennobling influence, that he looked gravely into the girl's shy eyes as together their voices died away.

"Bravo! bravo! She has scored higher than Madam, after all," thought Dr. Mann, well pleased at the girl's unconscious triumph.

Hugh assisted in escorting the sisters to the railway station, thereby considerably improving his acquaintance with Rose. He learned that she and "Mary" were the only survivors of a family of seven, and that Rose looked forward with delight to long and frequent visits to the vicarage. Hugh, for her amusement, drew highly colored pictures of "the sort of thing that the vicar's wife will have to go through," and especially he delighted Rose with his account of the temperance meeting, and his entire enjoyment of the joke against himself involved in the tale.

"Dr. Mann seems to be very strong upon the point of total abstinence," said Rose, still smiling.

"Mann is not an abstainer," said Hugh, gravely.

"He is not? Why, I have been thinking how particularly enthusiastic he must be! Whom, then, did he mean by the weaker brethren?"

"Presumably he meant Mrs. Langley, Mr. Boyd, and me—especially me," said Hugh, dryly.

Rose laughed.

"That was scarcely fair in Dr. Mann, but you can bear it. I would not say as much for Chris; but you are strong in your convictions, at any rate."

"And is not the vicar?"

She laughed a little.

"You see, Chris has always such fatally clear perceptions of all there is to be said for the other side of a question."

"We have observed that trait of his character," said Hugh, as dryly as before. "What is your own standpoint with regard to this particular question?"

She glanced at him as if amused, but not displeased, at the directness of his method.

"You may be shocked to hear that neither Mary nor I are absolute abstainers. I don't think we have ever thought about it," she said, honestly.

"You will have to think about it if you spend much of your time here," said Hugh, so grimly that they both laughed.

He thought about it himself all the long, grimy way back from the station. What could possibly be the meaning of Mann's contradictory behavior? It would almost appear that in public he desired to pose as an abstainer, while having a private understanding to the contrary with his personal friends. Mrs. Langley's matter-of-course demand for wine for her guests was scarcely in accord with the vehemence of her declared convictions; but why should Mann have concerned himself to elude the necessity of acceding to her request, and why should he so evidently have gloried in his success? Hugh felt pretty sure that at the present moment he was consoling himself in his study for his self-imposed abstinence at the dinner table.

"For a fellow who has himself well in hand, I know of no greater solace for the petty ills and worries of this life than a glass of something hot with a pipe." It was remarkable how constantly those words recurred to the sorely-bestead curate's mind. "A fellow who has himself well in hand": such a fellow, in short, as Hugh believed himself to be. True, there was a factor in his case of which the doctor knew nothing; but when due allowance had been made for that, and when all had been said in condemnation of the doctor's dubious principles and practices, there still remained something attractive in the picture of a man strong enough to walk into—yes, through—the fire of temptation without being burned.

So lost was Hugh in thought that he passed at least half a dozen sensitive parishioners without returning a single saluation. It was Enoch who brought him up at last, with some stern question on a point of parochial discipline, and having subtly disposed of the old man's scruples, he gave up, for the present, the consideration of problems, and went his way, cheerfully humming the air that he had sung with Rose.

(To be continued.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

Children's Cozy Corner

PUSSY WILLOW.

Pussy Willow wakened
From her winter nap,
For the frolic spring breezes
On her door would tap.

"It is chilly weather
Though the sun feels good;
I will wrap up warmly;
Wear my sunny hood."

Mistress Pussy Willow
Opened wide her door;
Never had the sunshine
Seemed so bright before.

Never had the brooklet
Seemed so full of cheer;
"Good morning, Pussy Willow,
Welcome to you, dear!"

Never guest was quainter—
Pussy came to town
In a hood of silver gray
And a coat of brown.

happy little children
Cried with laugh and shout,
"Spring is coming, coming,
Pussy Willow's out."

—Kate L. Brown.

Grandmother's Pansies.

By Clara E. Miner.

GRANDMOTHER had just one "hobby," and that was pansies. How she loved them, and how they brightened up her room in the Old People's Home, where she lived! She called them her children and would often tell her friends pretty little stories about each face that lifted itself so simply and confidingly up to hers.

This year she had planted her pansies earlier than usual, and they were growing nicely in her window-box, where she could watch and tend them lovingly.

As the days began to grow longer grandmother seemed anxious to get her plants into the ground outdoors, "so they can grow faster," she said to Miss Reynolds, the kind matron, who felt that it was a little early for the delicate flowers to battle with the sharp March winds. But the dear old lady was allowed to have her way, and Miss Reynolds even assisted her in the transplanting. Then grandmother went back to her window, and with a look of pride and satisfaction sat down and lovingly watched her pet plants.

Soon Guy Rayburn and his chum, Robert Owen, came along on their way to school.

"One of the old women has just put those plants into the ground," said Guy, stopping and looking at the pansy bed. "I saw her stooping over when I was way up the street. Let's pull the things up and see her get mad. My grandmother gets mad awful easy, and it's lots of fun to see her."

"You're as mean as you can be even to think of such a thing," said Robert, indignantly; "and if you do that, it's 'quits' with us, old man. Please don't, Guy."

But Guy went straight over to the pansy bed and began his cruel work, looking up at the window every time he pulled up a pansy "to see the old lady get mad," he said.

Grandmother raised her window, and with a feeble voice and a distressed look called out: "Please don't hurt the plants, boys; I've just put them out this very morning, and they'll have some pretty blossoms by and by."

Guy paid no attention to her, but kept right on, and when he had pulled up the last plant he called out, "Now you can plant them over again if you want to, granny."

"I'll thrash you!" cried Robert, angrily, as he strode past Guy and up the broad steps of the Old People's Home.

"Please, ma'am," said Robert as Miss Reynolds opened the door in response to his sharp ring," "here's some money for that old lady to buy some more flowers with. Guy didn't think what an awful thing he was doing when he pulled hers up or he'd never have done it, I know."

Easter seemed to come much earlier than usual this year. Only a few brave crocuses were lifting their heads above the ground, and but once in a great while could you hear the merry chirp of a bluebird or a robin who had braved the rough winds of spring. But the sunlight was everywhere, and it penetrated every nook and corner of dear grandmother's room and made her pale face look more radiant than ever as she lay patiently waiting for her awakening into a new and fuller Eastertime.

One day the bell at the old people's home gave a clear, quick ring. When Miss Reynolds opened the door she was confronted by two boys, one of whom immediately handed her a box, saying:

"This is for the old lady whose pansies I pulled up. My grandmother liked pansies, too, but she's dead now."

When told, "Our grandmoter also has left us," great tears rolled down Guy's cheeks, and Robert said: "May we plant the pansies out here by the side of the steps where she had hers? Half of them are from Guy and half are from me."

So grandmother's pansies did bloom, after all, in just the place she had intended they should. And now every year large beds of pansies—"grandmother's pansies," they are always called—lift their bright-faced blossoms to the passerby and tell the story of three lives; and the glory of the one overshadows and purifies the other two.

Evanston, Ill.

Worth While.

IT is thinking the pure thought,
Each moment, each hour,
That fills our lives with Strength and Power.

It is speaking the kind word
To all we meet,
That makes our lives both
True and sweet.

It is doing the good deed
All the way along,
That makes our lives grow
Noble and strong.

—Phebe Conover.

Youthful Wisdom.

Little four-year-old Harry was not feeling well, and his father suggested that he might be taking the chicken-pox, then prevalent. Harry went to bed laughing at the idea, but early next morning he came down stairs looking very serious, and said, "You're right, papa, it is the chicken-pox; I found a feather in the bed."

Good Tidings.

A POOR little street girl was taken sick one Christmas and carried to the hospital. While there she heard the story of Jesus coming into the world to save us. It was all new to her, but very precious. She could appreciate such a wonderful Savior, and the knowledge made her very happy as she lay upon her little cot. One day the nurse came round at the usual hour, and "Little Broomstick" (that was her street name) held her by the hand, and whispered:

"I'm havin' real good times here—ever such good times! S'pose I'll have to go 'way from here just as soon as I get well; but I'll take the good time along—some of it, anyhow. Did you know about Jesus bein' born?"

"Yes," replied the nurse; "I know. Sh-sh-sh! Don't talk any more."

"You did? I thought you looked as if you didn't, and I was going to tell you."

"Why, how did I look?" asked the nurse, forgetting her own order in her curiosity.

"Oh, just like most o' folks—kind o' glum. I shouldn't think you'd ever look glum if you knowed about Jesus being born."—Faith and Works.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1.—Charade.

The model scholar loves his FIRST,
It is his silent friend;
The NEXT is to allow, permit,
Or 'tis to rent or lend.

The WHOLE is just a little FIRST,
Sometimes to advertise,
Sometimes a gift for holidays,
Sometimes a dainty prize.

ETHYL.

2.—Numerical.

Composed of 8 letters.
5, 1, 2, is humor.
4, 3, 7, 8 is part of a building.
6 is one of the vowels.
The whole were the last words of Washington.

3.—*Decapitations.

1. Behead an animal, and leave a small part of his head.
2. Behead a fowl, and leave a garden tool.
3. Behead a bird, and leave a young man.
4. Behead a bird, and leave a vessel.
5. Behead part of a bird, and leave a letter of the alphabet, formerly so called. W. W.

4.—Word Square.

1. To note the time.
2. The first month of the Jewish year.
3. A novice.
4. Dark. C. A. A.

Answers to Puzzles of April 2.

1. Sweet-heart.
2. Last.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, April 23, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Saloon Power in Politics.

AN American humorist once said that it is easier to be a harmless dove than a wise serpent. The explanation of the deteriorating and degrading of political science into a game of grab may be found in this truth. While the better class of citizens have been cultivating the virtue of "harmlessness," the liquor men have given themselves unreservedly and with unflagging energy to a subtle and effective worldly "wisdom."

Liquor interests speak with a profound and overwhelming eloquence to the politicians of the country. Note the length, breadth and thickness of the liquor industry in New Jersey, where during the last fiscal year there were produced 2,453,178 barrels of fermented liquors, or an average of a barrel and a quarter for every man, woman and child. These two million barrels, representing a large number of dollars and an innumerable host of voters, are arguments that go straight to the hearts of the politicians.

While the harmless citizen has gone quietly upon his way, making little or no effort to add to his voting power, at times even subtracting himself from the political problem by failing to cast his ballot, through carelessness or listlessness, the saloon man has magnified himself in a political sense, has duplicated, quadruplicated himself over and over again in the interests of his favorite candidate by impressing upon his companions and customers the necessities of the hour.

There is still a third class of men with whom the politician must reckon—those poor, miserable, ciphers of humanity who haunt the dramshop and who count for nothing except at election time, and then count for worse than nothing. These individuals are as wax in the hands of dealers in strong drink, and they see in a ballot only the means of procuring a free glass of beer or whisky. Every man of these three classes has that most potent stimulus to effort, a selfish purpose, which prompts him to make politics his business.

Thus the saloon and liquor interests are a fixed and known quantity in the political problem which every candidate takes into account.

An incident is related of a woman, in Bridgeton, N. J., who upon her deathbed exacted a promise from her husband, a member of the city council, never to vote for licensing a saloon. The man, who had been elected by a "wet" ticket, in order to keep his solemn pledge, frankly stated the situation, and then resigned. As a result, the "wets" were unable to carry through their measures.

Every woman may well ponder the suggestion contained in this incident. Although women are unable to add themselves numerically to the voting power and secure the abolition of the liquor traffic, in how large a measure is it given to them, by their influence, to change certain minus quantities of citizenship into real factors or to raise to a higher power of efficiency these insignificant numerals which have heretofore counted for little from a political standpoint.

Truly the time is not far distant when the politician will find himself compelled, in all moral reforms at least, to recognize and satisfactorily answer the oft-repeated question propounded by the women of our land, "How much do you count us for?"

"Having Eyes, See Ye Not?"

A CHICAGO clergyman has had a revelation. It relates to public gambling. That through which political magic has been concealed from the city's executive and chief of police, according to their own repeated confessions, has been discovered by this minister in one short tour of investigation. He found cards prominently displayed advertising poker in brilliantly lighted saloons. At many places he was urgently and openly solicited to join in the games. At others a casual inquiry secured information as to their whereabouts. Without a guide he easily gained entrance to these places, where he found gambling in full blast and beheld other sights too pitiable to relate. In every instance he noted the proximity of a guardian of the peace, but apparently unconscious that anything save an orderly, legitimate business was being conducted.

Impressed by the sad plight of these near-sighted policemen, this minister sounds a call for help. The call is timely. It behooves the citizens of Chicago and cities similarly infested to look into this visual defect of their police forces and seek an explanation and remedy.

There is every evidence to fear that this optical infirmity is not confined to the police force of Chicago, but that it is widely prevalent. Keenness of moral vision carries with it great responsibilities, as likewise does keenness of civic vision. An ocular demonstration of the kind exhibited by the Chicago divine would be an expensive affair for a policeman, would possibly cost him his job, would undoubtedly cause him to lose many a drink and cigar. Neither could the mayor nor the chief of police afford to "see things" after this fashion, for they must necessarily do it at the expense of votes, perhaps of office. The seer, the man who has the courage to look deeply, with a righteous curiosity, into the corruption of his time, is always the unpopular man of to-day, although he may be the hero of to-morrow. Many a Christian minister cultivates such a vision at the expense of popularity, and not a few citizens veil their eyes cautiously to avoid seeing what might brand them as fanatics, extremists, reformers.

Clearness of vision costs; but, on the other hand, there is a natural law that fixes the penalty for the disuse of a function, and that penalty is degeneration. An analogy holds for city as well as for individual. When Roman citizens averted their eyes and refused to see the excesses and corruption of their beautiful city, then Rome began to lose its appreciation of civic values, its civic sight began to fail, and, like another blind Samson, it compassed its own destruction.

If a sufficient number of reputable men and women would lend to the police force of their cities as penetrating a vision as that displayed by the Chicago clergyman referred to, the tendency would be to convince policemen that the faculty of sight is worth developing, and it might result in the exposing of some interesting municipal skeletons.

No city is so well protected as when sentineled by the vigilance of loyal, faithful citizens.

The Meaning of Election Day.

TIME was when the voters of this country went to the polls in as serious a mood as they approached the sanctuary. They realized that upon them rested the responsibility of electing representatives who should control the destinies of the nation. Election day was a day sacred to county, state and city. Perhaps a vestige of that feeling of reverence is to be found in the ordinance upon our municipal statute books requiring the closing of saloons and forbidding the sale of liquors during the hours of voting, in order that every man may for a few hours rise to his privileges as a citizen and give his best mental powers to the weighty act before him.

The inability of one class of citizens to appreciate the sentiment which gave birth to this restriction is shown by the failure of the saloons to recognize this law. Upon a recent election day in Chicago, according to the press of the city, with the exception of a few saloons in the business district, the ordinance was practically ignored. The majority of the saloonkeepers did not take even the trouble to draw the shades of their establishments, and the front doors stood ajar or opened easily to whoever desired to enter.

Nothing could more clearly and forcibly indicate how utterly alien are liquor interests to the principles of our national life than this open and flagrant violation of a law which makes for the sanctity of election day. Unquestionably there is to be traced a logical sequence between the toleration and encouragement that has been shown to these interests in political life and our own sad failure to realize the lofty civic ideals of the founders of this commonwealth.

To the men out of whose thought these ideals sprang election day was a day of high and holy purposes, involving responsibilities not only to the divine ruler but to generations to come. Election day has come to stand for personal gain, for private pride and lust of power. It is being robbed not only of its sanctity but of its dignity, and the flippant treatment accorded it by the voters of to-day is certain to be followed by the contempt of the citizens of the future.

The passing of election day as a day of high civic ideals would be a national calamity. Nor need it occur if every right-minded ballot-caster shall hasten to the rescue and wrest it from the hands of the vandals who are seeking to prostitute it to their own selfish, shameless purposes.

A Notable Transfer.

A CLEVELAND, Ohio, paper tells of the transfer of a Youngstown saloon, lease, fixtures and good will, for $20,000. The incongruity of the expression "good will" in connection with liquor selling shows how impossible it is to apply the terms of legitimate business to the liquor traffic. The words, being interpreted in all honesty, can mean nothing more nor less than that the vendor agrees to use his influence to secure to his successor an uninterrupted enslavement of the victims of appetite who constituted his business, by encouraging them to continue their wretched course under the auspices of the man to whom he sold.

If the transfer were specifically truthful and published all that was conveyed, the contract of sale would be one of the most impressive temperance documents ever made public.

Twenty thousand dollars is a large investment. Invested in productive farm land, it would purchase many acres, yielding fine harvests from year to year; invested in the interests of science, it would promote the invention of scientific apparatus and contrivances which would lighten the labor of man; invested in the youth of our nation in educational opportunities it would develop new statesmen, reformers, scientists, poets, physicians and great industrial leaders; invested in some of the many needed reforms and beneficiencies of the age, it would send the world speeding on its way towards the millenium.

But these men, thoughtless of time and eternity, prefer to invest their wealth in degraded manhood, to pull down to lower depths of infamy, in order that they may add to that $20,000 a few more ill-gotten, accursed dollars, that they may make what they falsely name "a good living" out of other men's slow, agonizing dying.

Personal Leadership.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JEROME, of New York, said some good things the other day in an after-dinner speech, about reform. He pointed out the necessity for personal leadership of the right sort. "Reform has made the mistake," he declared, "of trusting too much to abstract principles instead of getting down among the people. . . . You have got to have men to back up reform principles who are made leaders by a process of natural selection. You are mistaken if you think that Pat Keenan, an Irishman, could keep the leadership of a district overwhelmingly Hebrew by the mere distribution of offices. He won his leadership by his power and force and the elements of natural leadership in him. The people who to-day follow a Tammany leader who is brutal and corrupt would more willingly follow a man of educated and enlightened ideas if he had the same qualities of leadership as the ruffian leader."

The chief difficulty we see in the way of securing the kind of leaders we all recognize as a necessity, in reforming our cities is that ward politics have been made so disreputable that no man who values his good name wants to have anything to do with them. And wherever the saloon rules this condition will continue.

⚜

Still a Problem in South Carolina. If anyone imagines that the dispensary method of dealing with the liquor problem does away with violations of law he should inform himself concerning the situation in South Carolina. So flagrant is the defiance of the liquor law in Charleston that Governor Heyward has announced there must be "some improvement" even if he has to call out an armed and mounted constabulary to secure it. The governor acknowledges that it is practically impossible to free the city from all the blind tigers, but he proposes to make violators of the law at least fear the law. He does not want, however, to render the law "objectionable" by enforcing it too strenuously. It would appear that a prohibition law is objectionable—to anti-prohibitionists—when partially enforced, while a regulative law is, on the contrary, objectionable when fully and rigidly enforced. Are we to infer that the morals of the people are not injured by the violation of a license law or a dispensary law, but only harmed by the violation of prohibition law? Why do we not hear the cry: "The dispensary law is a failure?"

Cause and Effect. Speaking of England's new liquor law at a great meeting of bishops and priests in Dublin the other day, one of the speakers said that while it might not be possible in the language of cynicism, "to make a man sober by act of parliament," it had been demonstrated to be possible by act of parliament "to make it uncommonly unpleasant for the fellow who got drunk." The next thing in the solution of the liquor problem will be an act of parliament making it still more unpleasant for the man who furnishes the drink for the fellow to get drunk upon.

From a Business Standpoint. Liquor papers are warmly commending the bartenders' total abstinence societies. They tell us that on business principles a bartender should have a clear brain and a steady hand. "His calling partakes of the nature of an exact science." A befuddled bartender, it seems, is as incapable of deciding nice points in drink-mixing as a befuddled railroad employe to carry out orders, or a befuddled soldier to protect his country's flag, or a befuddled legislator to properly represent the interests of his constituency.

When Women Vote. The recently adjourned legislature of the prohibition state of North Dakota raised the age of consent from sixteen to eighteen years. In the woman suffrage state of Colorado the age is also eighteen years. Illinois, anti-prohibition and anti-woman's ballot, fought strenuously against raising the age from ten to twelve years, and is to-day fighting as vigorously to defeat the measure raising it to fourteen years.

Evangelistic Echoes

IN the late summer of 1879 there came a call for work. The points to be visited were fully twenty miles from a railroad station, and I took a stage coach to reach them.

I soon discovered that the driver was under the influence of strong drink, sufficiently balanced to keep moving at a snail's pace, but so unbalanced as to monopolize conversation of a low value. There were three gentlemen passengers and I was the only woman.

A dozen miles on our way and there came a halt. From behind a thicket came a wolf in human form like unto a gray-haired man with a demijohn in hand, who first offered it to the driver, then to the passengers.

Anticipating results on the part of the driver with an added drink, and with no certainty that the passengers would decline the proffered hospitality, I arose at once and appealed to the young man to refrain from further drinking; then turning to the tempter, I pleaded for the men present, for our safety as travelers, that he would take an immediate leave.

He offered no argument save to admonish me that it was no business of mine to interfere with rights which men wished to reserve to themselves.

The driver and a friend beside him satiated themselves, and the coach moved on.

For a half hour the scene was unspeakable. Profanity and vulgarity of the worst form were followed by a dead silence, and then the driver fell headlong across the lap of his friend, who took the reins the remainder of the journey. Little was said, but there was an occasional outburst from the passengers, who up to this moment had entered no protest.

Two days later and another point was to be reached with the same driver, under changed conditions, for he sought the opportunity for making an apology. His confession revealed little of penitence for wrong doing. There was something of shame, but more of fear lest a young woman of his village, at whose home I was to be entertained, should be informed of the happenings of the previous days. Improving the opportunity at hand, I urged him to abandon old associations, bind himself to a total abstinence pledge, and turn to Christ for the new life and for strength to meet its needs.

There was no committal save a promise to read the Bible, a copy of which I gave him, as a pocket companion to take the place of his whisky flask.

The journey ended, and I entered a home to find another blighted life—that of a cultured young woman who had plighted all to this unfortunate young man. The two had been companions in childhood. Strong drink had stolen the heart of one, a small fortune had been squandered, business positions surrendered, manhood wrecked. The other heart was torn and bleeding over hopes so long deferred as to make the heart sick still hoping against all hope for the realization of the happy dreams of the past.

All unconscious of my knowledge of her sorrow, this girl soon came to my room. Her face revealed the story of her anxiety as to whether rumors concerning the stage driver were correct. For wise reasons I evaded her questions in part. She left the room, but returned later with swollen eyes, and in a fresh outburst of grief she told me the story of her sorrow. Comfort and counsel were imparted, but love's yearnings and entreaties on the part of this young woman availed little. Strong drink and old associations prevailed, and one more joined in the march of the millions of young men who stumble and fall over the licensed rumshops of the land.

The young woman went her way, preferring a single life with a single life-sorrow added, rather than to be united to one who promised nought but the multiplied sorrows of a drunkard's wife and a wretched home.

ANNA M. PALMER.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

Eternal life is not a thing that we are to get when we die. It is a thing that we are living now.—Drummond.

***

The know-nothing, the do-nothing and the be-nothing scheme of life can only end in outer darkness and in ineffable distress.—Joseph Parker.

***

A noble and attractive everyday bearing comes of goodness, of sincerity, of refinement, and these are bred in years, not moments.—Bishop T. D. Huntington.

***

When doubts disturb my troubled breast,
And all is dark at night to me,
Here, as on a solid rock, I rest,—
That so it seemeth good to thee.
—Ray Palmer.

***

His commandments grievous are not,
Longer than men think them so;
Though He send me forth, I care not,
Whilst He gives me strength to go.
—Francis Quarles.

***

The true moment at which to call upon one's self to take any new step in virtue is at the fainting-point, when it would be easy to drop all and give all up; when, if you do not, you make yourself a power.—J. F. W. Ware.

***

Sometimes there comes an hour of calm;
Grief turns to blessing, pain to balm;
A Sower that works above my will Still leads me onward, upward still;
And then my heart attains to this—
To thank thee for the things I miss.
T. W. Higginson.

***

Thou settest us each task divine,
We bless that helping hand of Thine,
That strength by Thee bestowed.
Thou minglest in the glorious fight;
Thine own the cause! Thine own the might!
We serve the living God.
—Thomas H. Gill.

***

He only really lives whose interests go beneath the surface, who has gone up into the heights and down into the depths, whose heart beats in unison with the great heart of humanity, who weeps for the world's pain and suffers for its sins, who has tasted the fullness of unselfish love, who has swelled with mighty hopes, who has burned with divine inspiration.—C. J. Perry.

***

God's "ask"
Meaneth all fullness and all grace,
Access in every time and place;
Yet we
To whom this mercy is so free,
This privilege of light to bask
In the full sunshine of His face,
Regard prayer even as a task.
—Anna E. Hamilton

***

Emerson says: "Though ministers of justice and power fail, yet justice and power never fail." That is to say, those who endeavor to interpret justice and power, to define the truth, may fail in their interpretations, err in their definitions; yet justice, power and truth, the eternal trinity of God, fail never. They remain the same yesterday, to-day and forever. Here is strength for many days.—W. D. Little.

***

There are no failures in life. From the point of view of the world, it is true, some of the greatest successes are counted failures. And from the point of view of heaven, some of the greatest failures are called successes. But, strictly speaking, from the point of view of cause and effect, in a world which has eternal justice at the heart of it, there are no failures. We reap as living souls the measure of our sowing. We get what we ask. We are the spiritual offspring of our dream.—Hugh Black.

U. OF M. LIBRARY

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.

Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.

Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.

Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.

Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

With the Treasurer.

WE have received for the Willard Memorial fund, since last report, as follows, $2.00 except as noted.

OREGON: Mrs. Harriet E. Smith. This good sister is up among the Sierras, no union within 100 miles. She is a constant reader of THE UNION SIGNAL, which accounts for her lively interest in the W. C. T. U. work. Creswell, Yoncalla.

MICHIGAN: Oak Grove $1.00, Tecumseh, Lowell, Ovid, Grand Ledge, Harbor Beach, Manistee, St. Louis.

IOWA: Delhi.

TEXAS: Terrell.

OHIO: Bristolville, Toronto, Sharon Center.

NEW YORK: Vestal Center, Brocton, Silver Creek, Gloversville, West Winfield, Patterson, Munnsville, Manchester, Bridgeport, Ellenville, Ellenville Y $1.00, Rondout, Rondout Y $1.00, Shawangunk, Ulsterville Y, Wallkill Y, Wallkill L. T. L. .75, North Granville, Mount Vernon, Port Chester $2.80, New York City Central, Hope, Washington Heights, West Harlem.

WEST VIRGINIA: Hinton.

PENNSYLVANIA: Lewistown $1.00, Waynesburg, East Branch, Mercer County .65, Huntingdon, Darby, West Newton, Dilworthtown, Butler Centre, Sharon, Greenville, Pittsburg (East End), Boyerstown, Newton, Solebury, Doylestown, Pennsville, Wrightstown, Wakefield $1.00, Butler, East Pittston, Warren Central, Harrison Valley, Ulysses, Blairsville, Titusville, Milesburg, Bellefonte, Scottdale $4.00, Mackeyville, Volant.

WISCONSIN: Beloit, Deepwater.

DELAWARE: Wilmington.

MASSACHUSETTS: Maynard.

MAINE: Bolster's Mills, Foxcraft, Warren.

SOUTH CAROLINA: Newberry $5.60.

SOUTH DAKOTA: Hot Springs.

NORTH DAKOTA: Thompson, Hope, Fargo (Scandinavian), Reynolds, Drayton, Forest River, Bethel, Grafton.

INDIAN TERRITORY: Treasurer $18.00.

FLORIDA: Mrs. Mary L. Pennelly.

HAWAII: Honolulu.

LOUISIANA: Morse $2.05.

COLORADO: Denver.

OKLAHOMA: Chandler.

ILLINOIS: Grant Park $15.00.

MISSOURI: Sacville.

NORTH CAROLINA: Kernersville, Kinston, Belhaven, Charlotte, South Greensboro, Elizabeth City, Warrentown, Wilmington.

Dues have come from Florida, North Carolina and Indian Territory. I must again remind my sisters that it is necessary to give full address, including street and number, name of town and especially the state. Sometimes I can get the name of state or town from the envelope, again it is impossible. To-day a receipt sent to a W. C. T. U. woman in Oklahoma City, Ok., came back as no street or number was given and as her letter gave none she must needs wait until I am further instructed. These omissions cause unnecessary delay.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Superintendents.

Scientific Temperance Instruction.

AN article entitled "Our Drink Bill" in the columns of the "New York Commercial Advertiser" of March 25 says: "Since 1880 the use of alcoholic beverages has nearly doubled, having increased from 10.9 gallons per capita to 19.48 gallons, a gain of over 93 per cent."

I am asked how it happens that with twenty years of study of scientific temperance physiology in the public schools, the per capita consumption of alcohol has nearly doubled. Although the question is asked as though it were unanswerable, in point of fact the figures show that the study in question is accomplishing the end for which it was designed, instead of the reverse.

In the first place we have not had twenty years of universal study of scientific temperance physiology in the public schools. It has taken twenty years to secure the passage of the laws requiring the subject to be taught and to get it on a working basis in the schools. The laws requiring the subject have been separate enactments by each state and by the National Congress. The first law was passed in 1882 in a small eastern state, the last one in 1902 in Georgia. It is thus only about ten or eleven years that the study has been so generally pursued throughout the schools of the country as to justify a conclusion as to its results as shown by census reports.

Further statistics quoted in the article published in the "Commercial-Advertiser" from the report of the Internal Revenue Department show that during the eleven years closing with 1902, in which time temperance instruction has been quite generally in the schools of the United States, there has been a total per capita gain in the country in the use of alcoholic liquors of all kinds of only 2.36 gallons. If, therefore, as the "Commercial-Advertiser" says, there has been an increase of 9.39 gallons per capita during the last twenty-two years, it is evident that for the eleven years preceding the time temperance education became general there was a gain of 7.03 gallons per capita. Thus during the eleven years when temperance instruction has been nearly universal, the per capita gain was less than one-third as great as in the preceding period of the same number of years when comparatively little instruction was given along this line.

Something evidently has reduced this gain and it is just to estimate temperance as an important factor in producing this result.

In drawing conclusions from these figures, two other qualifying conditions should be considered. First, the statistics quoted show that there has been a decline in the per capita consumption of spirits of .15 gallons during the last ten years, but they do not show whether the alcohol used in the arts, instead of for beverages purposes, is a part of the sum total of the gallons enumerated as spirits. If it is so included, all spirits used in the arts in the past ten years should be deducted to show what the nation's drink bill really is. Such deduction might still further reduce the per capita decline already noted in the spirits column.

In response to a letter of inquiry from the writer, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington said, October 10, 1899, "Spirits referred to in this office is ethyl alcohol. . . . This office does not show the quantity of spirits used in the arts."

Second, any just estimate of the habits of the American as shown by the increase in the consumption of wine and beer in the United States as reported by the Commercial-Advertiser must take into consideration the fact that the number of users of these beverages is being yearly augmented by an enormous immigration from beer and wine using countries averaging over 400,000 immigrants annually for the past eleven years. This increase would be very serious if as soon as these people arrive our public schools were not teaching their children, with other laws of health, that alcohol in all forms is a hindrance to that improvement in physical and financial conditions for which they have come to this country.

MARY H. HUNT.

23Trull St., Boston, Mass.

Christian Citizenship.

A LARGE proportion of the state unions have responded to my letters in the past four months, since this department was put in my care. I wish I might say this of every state, since my report for the World's W. C. T. U. convention must be in Mrs. Stevenson's hands the first of May. But commendable interest is taken everywhere, as soon as it is understood, and glorious work has been done in some places for several years.

Carlos Martin says this is the latest, largest and most hopeful movement of the times, and adds that its youth explains its lack of literature distinctively helpful. Appended is a list of that now furnished by the W. T. P. A., and of an extended list of helps from other quarters will be given by this "office" in this column next month.

National leaflets No. 87 and No. 65, the last being the indispensable new one from Mrs. Stevens, our President, on "Facts Concerning Prohibition." Also National leaflet No. 52.

Voters' leaflets, 2, 3, 5 and 7.

Department leaflets Nos. 72, 151, 152 and 153, the last being "Christian Citizenship Epigrams." just published. The March Responsive Reading was also on this subject.

The list of suggested books for reading or reference is quite too long for this space. Let it be borne in mind that a year's perusal of the pages of THE UNION SIGNAL is the best possible fitting for this broad department.

Co-operate. Co-operate with churches, clubs, young people's societies and everybody who will listen and read.

I personally answer all personal letters on the department; but the department purse is all too lean to furnish the literature for local unions. Let me help all I can though.

MARY JEWETT-TELFORD.

McMinnville, Tenn.

Non Alcoholic Medication.

THOSE who have written saying they do not care to try for the cash prizes because they are open to everybody, may pluck up courage to enter the contest when they learn that not one entry has yet been made. The question has been asked, "Why put the condition of purchasing the department book?" The answer to that is, "To raise the money for the prizes." Any person already owning a copy should not find it difficult to sell it, or if that failed, nothing better could as easily be secured as a present to a young medical graduate, or to a physician friend.

For the benefit of those not familiar with the prize offers, I will repeat them:

1. For best story showing the evils of the medical use of alcohol, $12.00.
2. For best humorous article, suitable for recitation, showing the evils and absurdities of the use of patent medicines containing alcohol, opium or cocaine or other dangerous drugs, $12.00.
3. For best poem, suitable for recitation, showing the evils of the medical use of alcohol, $10.00.
4. For best oration showing the evils of the medical use of alcohol, including alcoholic patent medicines or fraudulent medicines, $10.00.

CONDITIONS.

Each story, poem, humorous article or oration must contain at least 800 words and not more than 1,400, and must never have appeared in print. All manuscripts must be sent to the undersigned by June 1, 1903, and each must be accompanied by $1.25, for which money a copy of the department book, "Alcohol, a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine," will be sent to the address given by the contestant. Prize winners will be announced in THE UNION SIGNAL. A committee of three judges will decide upon the manuscripts.

Writers are expected to show the danger of the home prescription of alcoholics as well as the professional.

A very convincing pamphlet by Prof. Kassowitz, of Vienna, has been translated by Mrs. Mary G. Stuckenberg. It is entitled "Is Alcohol a Food or a Poison?" This will be found included in the fifteen cent sample package of leaflets, and when read should be loaned or given to physicians. There is enough material in the package to furnish programs for several department meetings. Any bright woman who tries can make an exceedingly interesting meeting from the "Safe Remedies" leaflet alone, by using it as a "quiz." The new leaflets, "Alcohol and Nursing Mothers" and "Give No Alcohol to Children," are specially adapted to Mothers' meetings. There is no subject presented in W. C. T. U. meetings which arouses greater interest than that of the care of loved ones in time of illness. Will not every union which has neglected this important study do something in it before this convention year expires?

Yours for service,

MARTHA M. ALLEN.

348 Delaware street, Syracuse, N. Y.

BUILT OVER.

Food That Rebuilt A Man's Body and Built It Right.

By food alone, with a knowledge of what food to use, disease can be warded off and health maintained, also many even chronic diseases can be cured. It is manifestly best and safest to depend upon food to cure rather than too much drugging.

A case in point will illustrate. A well known man of Reading, Pa., Treas. of a certain club there, says: "I have never written a testimonial letter but I have been using Grape-Nuts about a year and have recovered my health, and feel that I would like to write you about it for the case is extraordinary.

"For five years I was a sufferer from a dreadful condition of the bowels; the trouble was most obscure." Here follows a detailed description and the condition certainly was distressing enough (details can be given by mail).

"Nothing in the way of treatment of drugs benefited me in the least and an operation was seriously considered. In May, 1901, I commenced using Grape-Nuts as a food and with no idea that it would in any way help my condition. In two or three weeks' time I noticed a improvement and there was a steady gain from that time on until now I am practically well. I don't know how to explain the healing value of the food but for some reason, although it has taken nearly a year, I have recovered my health and the change is entirely attributable to Grape-Nuts food, for I long ago quit medicine. I eat only Grape-Nuts for breakfast and luncheon, but at my night dinner I have an assorted meal." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Copper Cures Consumption

New Treatment for Consumption Indorsed by Members of British Tuberculosis Congress--Hope for All, No Matter How Bad Off.

Benefits Congressman Dingley's Son and Cures Hundreds of Others in Their Home—Any One Can Receive FREE Books Which Explain Exhaustively the Cure and Prevention of Consumption.

O. K. BUCKHOUT.

Chairman Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co., (Ltd.) Member of British Tuberculosis Congress; Member International Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Consumptives need not worry about their future any more, as the long-looked-for cure for consumption has at last been found. Write to Mr. O. K. Buckhout, Chairman, 294 Main St., Kalamazoo, Mich., a noted member of the British Tuberculosis Congress and also of the International Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, composed of world-famous men who have made consumption—its cure and prevention—a life study. This cure is something entirely new and is called "Antidotum Tuberculose," or the Copper Cure. It is the only discovery that absolutely kills all tuberculosis germs which cause consumption. As the name of the remedy tells, its chief ingredient is copper, which metal has at last been found to be the deadly enemy of the consumption germ.

You can tell if you have consumption by the coughing and hawking, by continually spitting, especially in the morning, when you raise yellow and black matter, by bleeding from the lungs, night sweats, flat chest, fever, weak voice, peculiar flushed complexion, pain in chest, wasting away of the flesh, etc. Find out how the Copper Cure kills the germs, then builds up the lungs, strengthens the heart, puts flesh on the body and muscles on the bones, until the consumption is all gone and you are again a strong, healthy, robust man or woman.

Don't doubt this, for the very same discovery benefited A. H. Dingley, a son of Congressman Dingley of Dingley Tariff Bill fame.

If you have consumption or fear you are predisposed to it, write to-night to Mr. O. K. Buckhout, Chairman, 294 Main Street, Kalamazoo, Mich., and he will send you illustrated and scholarly books free of charge telling you fully how the Copper Cure will cure you in your own home in a very short time.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

"NEW TRUTHS FOR A NEW AGE" By Rev. JOHN PRESLAND.

CONTENTS.—Why was a New Church inaugurated a hundred years ago?—The Lord's second coming an accomplished fact.—The Inspiration and Interpretation of the Word of God.—The Tri-Une God: How to understand the Divine Trinity without dividing the Divine Unity.—Man a Spiritual Being ruined by Sin—How did the Lord Jesus Christ save Man?—The Resurrection: How and When do the Dead rise?—The Judgment: When, Where and How is Man Judged!—Heaven and Hell—25 Cents. Call or address

EBEN SUGDEN, New Church Book Rooms, 3 West 29th St., New York City. Send for Catalogue

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

THE Y. W. C. T. U. MANUAL

By Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Containing page of errata, By MRS. CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT which brings it up to date, at the SPECIAL PRICE OF 15 Cents Postpaid.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n, CHICAGO.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The W. C. T. U. of High Point, Ia., held an oratorical and musical contest April 10.

Birmingham, Ala., has a new W. C. T. U., organized by the state president, Mrs. Martha L. Spencer.

At Binghamton, N. Y., a new union of fifty members has been organized among the colored people.

Mrs. W. O. Edwards gave a medal contest for colored children at Pinckneyville, Ill. Lizzie Pippin won the medal.

A memorial service, in honor of two promoted members, was held by the Springfield, Mass., union at its last meeting.

The annual convention of Somerset county, Maine, will be held in Madison, May 27 and 28. Mrs .M. D. Ellis will be the speaker.

Louisiana W. C. T. U. voted at the executive committee meeting to send five delegates to the next convention of the Anti-Saloon League.

The Lexington, Ky., union gave a successful court-day dinner recently. The money gained will be used in furthering the local work.

The W. C. T. U. of Erie, Pa., presented a fountain pen to Edwin Selkregg for the best essay on "The Evils of Cigaret Smoking." Second and third prizes were also given.

The presidents of New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts met at Boston recently to plan the interstate institutes to be held this summer.

A gold medal contest will be held at Elgin, Ill., in connection with the Kane county convention, which meets there April 20. Eight contestants will take part in the program.

The Norwich, N. Y., union has opened pleasant headquarters on the second floor of one of the business blocks, the rooms were formally opened by a parlor meeting at which Mrs. Lucia T. Rising spoke.

The W. C. T. U. of Ashland, Wis., held its annual meeting recently. The annual reports of the various departments indicate a great amount of faithful work accomplished during the year.

Miss Christine Tinling's last work in this country during her present visit will be a lecture at Atlantic City, N. J., on Thursday, May 14. She sails with the official party for London May 16.

A reception to the public school teachers is one of the things planned for the future by the union at Plattsmouth, Neb. The members are also making an organized attack on the slot machines.

The Harper union of Colorado Springs makes it a point to entertain the boys of the city occasionally, with an evening program. Boys between six and sixteen are invited and special seats are reserved for them.

Rensselaer and Schenectady counties, New York, united to hold an institute April 14 and 15. Mrs. Nellie B. Hutchinson, state recording secretary, was the leader. The program contained many helpful topics.

Miss Marie C. Brehm passed through Chicago last week, making only a flying visit to state headquarters. She is doing continuous field work which extends from the first of March to the middle of June.

Governor Ferguson, of Oklahoma, presented the medal to the winner of a contest, recently held by the Guthrie union. In his remarks Governor Ferguson expressed his hearty sympathy with the aims and methods of the W. C. T. U.

Miss Belle Kearney related, in her address at Beaver, Pa., her experiences in visiting city slums, where she went in the garb of a Salvation Army soldier. The people at Beaver were charmed with Miss Kearney's lecture and at the close gave her an ovation.

Mrs. L. M. Logan, president of the union at Bellefontaine, Ohio, has moved to Boston. It was to her efforts and enthusiasm that the union was largely indebted for the increase of nearly 100 new members at its membership contest.

The L. T. L. of Delaware county, Pa., held its fourth annual convention at Media, April 4. Reports were given of the work in the local Legions and of the Press, Mercy, Social, Railroad, Flower Mission and Sabbath Observance departments.

A resolution adopted by the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, asking that customers procure their Sunday supply of milk on Saturday night, was endorsed by the Philadelphia W. C. T. U. at its regular monthly meeting. This is a commendable step in the interest of Sabbath observance.

For several years it has been the custom of the Congregational, Methodist and Baptist churches of Willimantic, Conn., to unite in a service conducted by the local W. C. T. U. The service for 1903 was addressed by Mrs. S. S. Fessenden on "The Spirit of the Age." The hour seemed all too short, so much was the audience pleased.

For eight years Mrs. J. L. Jeffers has faithfully served the Third district, of Michigan, as its Press superintendent. Ill health having compelled her to resign the work, the district testified to its appreciation by making her a life member of the state W. C. T. U. The members of the local union presented her, on her sixtieth birthday, with a silver spoon, suitably engraved.

The W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia recently entertained the Young Wage Earners' Club with a unique program, "An Evening with the Birds." Bird songs were sung and whistled and a talk was given by Prof. H. C. Oberholzer on "Birds of the District of Columbia," which was illustrated by numerous specimens, and also by bird notes. Mrs. T. A. Williams is president of the club.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole arraigned high license laws and denounced the evils of the Raines law hotels in a recent address before one of the Brooklyn unions. She said: "Low license ruins our sons and high license ruins our daughters. Girls of respectable families may be seen drinking and smoking with men and boys in our restaurants, drawn thither by the desire to show good fellowship." The move for high license she characterized as political trickery.

Mrs. Ida B. Cole, of Chicago, lecturer for the department of Anti-Narcotics, has been working in Racine, Wis. She visited every public school, talked to the pupils and interested the principals and teachers, organized a city Anti-Cigaret League with representatives from the various schools. At their first monthly rally four hundred boys were in attendance. Mrs. Cole found the Y. M. C. A. willing to help the unions in this work in every way possible.

By the efforts of several white ribboners of Ellensburg, Wash., the nine saloon keepers were arrested for violation of the Sunday closing law. The law breakers plead guilty and after receiving the minimum fine, continued their Sunday sales. Being again arrested three juries, in the face of overwhelming evidence, found them "not guilty." Nothing daunted, the women again secured the arrest of the saloon keepers, this time gaining one conviction. These events have so aroused public sentiment that the saloons are closed on Sunday and a strong Law and Order League has been organized.

Special General Assembly Train to Los Angeles.

The Passenger Department of the Chicago & North-Western Railway announces that a special train has been arranged for account the General Presbyterian Assembly at Los Angeles, to leave Chicago 10.30 P. M., Wednesday, May 13th, with through Pullman sleeping cars to Los Angeles without change from Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis—Pullman standard and Pullman tourist sleeping cars from Chicago without change.

The route is over the only double track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River, through the typical western prairie country of Northern Illinois and Iowa, and via Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Leadville, Glenwood Springs, Salt Lake City and Sacramento to Los Angeles. The Special will stop a few hours for sight-seeing at Denver, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Sacramento, spending the Sabbath at Salt Lake.

Only $50 round-trip from Chicago, with correspondingly low rates from other points. For full particulars address W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

The Strength of the coffee you buy adds to its value in the cup.

Lion Coffee

comes to you fresh and of full strength, always in sealed, air-tight packages. Bulk coffees lose their strength, deteriorate in flavor, and also gather dirt.

Uniformity, freshness and full strength are insured to users of Lion Coffee.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work. J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS, 39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department

Union Signal

184 La Salle Street

CHICAGO

TO INVESTORS.

Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in a few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have Cattle and Sheep on our Ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Mont.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.

CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CONSUMPTION

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

The Local Union.

Program.

Music, "Our Beacon Hymn," White Ribbon Hymnal, page 121.

Responsive Reading, "Service," prepared by Mrs. J. K. Barney, page 166, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Prayer.

Song, "Service," page 117 White Ribbon Hymnal.

Roll-call, Responses on "Service."

Secretary's reports.

Business old and new.

Recess.

Singing, "Work, for the night is coming."

Symposium (informal). Subject, "Why I entered the Union, what I consider its most important work, and why."

Reading, "It is Well."

Singing, "It is well with my soul." Gospel Hymns.

Adjournment.

It Is Well.

"IT is well with the child," it is well!
O, mother, look up through your tears,
And see through the clouds that hang darkly above you
The face of One who doth pity and love you—
He speaks, and the sunlight appears.

Yes, sister, "It is well." Can you not see
A smile of rest and peace upon her face?
Death takes our darling Elsie from our arms,
And as she lies within his cold embrace,
A wondrous beauty, such as angels wear,
Makes her appear to us divinely fair.

Ah, yes, my sister, she is beautiful.
The silken lashes, resting on her cheek,
The smile that seems to hover round her lips
Would tell us, could those lips a language speak,
To mourn not for the dead, who pass away
Before temptation leadeth them astray.

How sweetly now she sleeps amid the flowers
That loving hands have placed around her head.
Mourn not for her, my sister—pity me,
And for the living let your tears be shed.
Your child is safe, her sufferings are o'er,
While mine, a wanderer, comes to me no more.

My child, my prodigal—'twere better far
To see him lying still in death's embrace
Than know I never more shall kiss his brow
Or gaze with mother's pride upon his face.
O, that his soul at last, so stained with sin,
May find the way of peace and enter in!

When but a sinless babe, I saw him lie
So near, so very near the gates of death,
I hovered o'er his form in agony
And bent my ear to catch his fleeting breath,
Then humbly knelt and cried aloud to heaven
That God might spare the child that He had given.

O, foolish prayer! I little knew the pain
Its answer brought to me in after years.
I could not see the future's awful page,
All marred, and blotted by a mother's tears;
I little dreamed my boy, so pure and fair,
Could ever fall within temptation's snare;

That he would ever dare to speak to me
Proud words of insolence, whose poisoned dart
Destroyed all peace and happiness, and brought Despair and anguish to my stricken heart;
That I should hear him scoff in cool disdain
And take the holy name of God in vain.

But he is gone, and I am left alone,
And years have flown since last I saw his face.
Alas! his youthful hands were stained with crime,
His honor tarnished, and his name disgraced;
But still I pray for him. A mother's love
Can never die—its source is from above.

Still, still, I listen for my darling's step,
And tremble when the tempest, fierce and wild,
Howls like an angry demon round our home,
Lest it should harm my lost and erring child,
Who may, perchance, be lying, sad and lone,
A friendless wanderer, unloved, unknown.

My child! My child! I call for him at night,
And dream he is at home with me again,
And think I hear the music of his voice,
Then waken to a sense of loss and pain.
O, this suspense is terrible to bear!
If I could see him lying calmly there

In dreamless slumber, such as death can bring,
With white hands folded on his lifeless breast,—
Like yonder lovely girl, so sweet and pure,
Whose angel face expresses peace and rest,—
Then I could be resigned, and meekly say:
"The Lord hath given, and He hath taken away!"

"It is well with the child, it is well!"
Bear her gently away from our sight—
She hath gone to the Home where the weary rest,
That beautiful Home in the land of the blest
Where dwelleth the angels of light.

The Prodigal's Soliloquy.

And so the morning dawns—that fearful morn
In which your judge hath said that I must die!
His words are ringing still within my ears:
"You, Stanley Lee, from out your cell must go
Unto the place of execution, where
You shall be hanged till life shall be no more.
And now may God have mercy on your soul!"

They say I killed a man—I cannot tell—
I know they gave me wine that maddened me
And set my brain on fire. Alas! alas!
I was an outcast from my mother's home;
I brought disgrace upon her sacred name.
And broke her loving heart, then basely fled,
Determined she should never know my fate.

Ah, soon with evil passions unrestrained,
With faith in none, not even God Himself,
I quickly ran my course, and here I am
Condemned to die. They tell me there is blood
Upon my hands. Look, warden, can you see?

Ah, 'tis not so—they are so thin and white.
My mother would not know me now: the cheeks
Her lips have kissed are wasted by disease.
Ha Ha! Consumption is my dearest friend,
For it will cheat the gallows of its prey!

And yet, may Heaven help me! How my soul
Shrinks back appalled; for oh, 'tis terrible
To go alone into the the outer dark,
With no one near to speak a word of hope;
To go alone—alone—and unforgiven!

O solemn night of death! I feel the dew
Upon my throbbing brow, and I can hear
The sound of rushing waters. Mother, come,
And let me look within your loving eyes
And take the hand that used to brush the curls
So gently, oh, so gently from my brow,
When I, O God! when I was innocent!

The hour has come. I thought they tolled the bell,
But—yet—I do not hear its solemn sound.
Ah, list!—but, no,—'tis music soft and sweet
Such music as I used to hear at home,
When on the sacred Sabbath morn there came
The joyous chime of church-bells on the air.
The chaplain, did you say? He need not come.
Why should he care for such a wretch as I?
He has a noble face that I could love,
and such a pitying smile upon his lips.
I catch the words, "My brother, Christ is here!"
What, here, within a felon's gloomy cell?
You mock me, sir. Alas, it cannot be!

You do not know how much I loathe myself.
Too vile to live, and yet afraid to die.
If I had listened to my mother's prayer
And shunned the deathly poison in the cup,
I'm sure you never would have seen the the stain
Of blood upon my hands. She must not know
Her darling came to this, for she would die.

Come closer; do you think that He will hear
A trembling sinner when he prays to Him

And cries aloud for mercy? O, forgive—
Forgive my many sins! Now take my hands
And fold them just as mother did and say
My evening prayer. It is the only one
I can remember now, for night has come
And I must go to sleep: "I pray the Lord
My soul to take This I ask for Jesus' sake."

Have I been dreaming? I am sure I heard
My mother's gentle voice, and on my lips
I felt her loving kiss, and once again
I was her happy hearted boy. I thought
My little Cousin Elsie played with me
Among the flowers near our childhood's home.

I know I saw her sweet young face again.
'Tis bending o'er me now, and yet it seems
Much older grown. A look of holy peace
Such as the angels wear is on her brow.
O, no, alas! it is not all a dream:
She tells me how my mother weeps for me,
How, day and night, her prayers ascend to heaven.

O mother, mother! Can it be too late?
Such earnest prayers, methinks, must answered be.
O Elsie, take my hand and lead me home!
I'll see her once again, and she will know
That I am sorry for the pain I caused.
And I will humbly ask on bended knee
That I may be forgiven, for Jesus' sake!
God bless you, sir! The light has come at last!
The angels sing for joy—yes—"It is well!"

DR. SHOOP'S
Rheumatic Cure
Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

MEAL TIME DRINKS
Should Be Selected to Suit the Health As Well As the Taste.

When the coffee toper, ill from coffee drinking, finally leaves off coffee the battle is only half won. Most people require some hot drink at meal time and they also need the rebuilding agent to build up what coffee has destroyed. Postum is the rebuilder, the other half of the battle.

Some people stop coffee and drink hot water, but find this is a thin, unpalatable diet, with no rebuilding properties. It is much easier to break away from coffee by serving strong, hot, well boiled Postum in its place. A prominent wholesale grocer of Faribault, Minn., says: "For a long time I was nervous and could not digest my food. I went to a doctor, who prescribed a tonic and told me to leave off coffee and drink hot water.

"I did so for a time and got some relief but did not get entirely well so I lost patience and said: 'Oh, well, coffee isn't the cause of my troubles, and went back to drinking it. I became worse than ever. Then Postum was prescribed. It was not made right at first and for two mornings I could hardly drink it.

"Then I had it boiled full fifteen minutes and used good cream and I had a most charming beverage.

"I fairly got fat on the food drink and my friends asked me what had happened I was so well. I was set right and cured when Postum was made right.

"I know other men here who use Postum, among others the Cashier of the Security Bank and a well known clergyman.

"My firm sells a lot of Postum and I am certainly at your service for Postum cured me of stomach trouble." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A New and Beautiful Line of Sunday School Cards

Appropriate for use in Loyal Temperance Legions as well as Sunday Schools

Exquisite and Artistic in Every Detail

Redeeming Grace
36 tickets; 10 cents per package.

The Twenty-third Psalm
100 text tickets; 15 cts, per package,

Answers to Prayer
Packages of 10 cards each; size, 4x2¾

In His Steps
Price 10 cents per package.

Day Unto Day
Books of Bible on back of card.

Hope in God
Lord's Prayer on back of card.

The Glory of Israel
Commandments on back of card.

Good Works
Twenty-third Psalm on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 4½x3¾. Price per package, 15 cents.

Christ the Mediator
Commandments on back of card.

The Power of God
The One-hundredth Psalm on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 5¼x4. Price per package, 20 cents.

The Throne of Grace
The Beatitudes on back of card.

God Our Refuge
Lord's Prayer on back of card.

Union with God
Commandments on back of card.

God the Judge
Commandments on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 6x4⅜. Price per package, 25 cts.

Perseverance in Well Doing
Commandments on back of card.

Living Unto Righteousness
The Beatitudes on back of card.

Justice Commanded
Lord's Prayer on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 6⅝x5. Price per package, 30 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

About Women.

A new star, belonging to the class known as Algol, has been discovered by Madam Coraski of Moscow.

Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, auditor of the books of the National W. C. T. U. treasurer, has been elected treasurer of the West Side Woman's Club of Chicago.

Miss Adelaide Baylor, who has just succeeded to the position of superintendent of schools of Wabash, Ind., is the only woman superintendent in the state.

Several prominent New York women, including Mrs. Isabella Davis of the King's Daughters, have organized the Woman's Auxiliary of the Oppenheimer Institute to aid in its treatment for alcoholism and drug addictions.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe has just become a great grandmother through the birth of a child to Mrs. Henry Marion Hall of East Orange, N. J. Mr. Hall is a son of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall of Plainfield.

Margaret E. Maltby, Ph. D., has been appointed adjunct professor of physics in Barnard College. Although the college is solely for women, Dr. Maltby is the only woman professor and is the second ever appointed by the trustees.

The Woman's Health Protective Association of Galveston, Texas, is beautifying the city by the setting out of trees and shrubs wherever they will be ornamental. Tree cuttings are given to all who will promise to plant them.

Miss Ruth Ewing of Chicago is carrying on a crusade against brutal teamsters. She co-operates with the Humane Society and goes into court and testifies against the men she has arrested. She has succeeded in all her prosecutions.

Miss Kate Gordon of Oshkosh, Wis., a graduate of the University of Chicago, has been notified she is winner of the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ competitive contest prize, a year's free tuition in any European school the winner may select.

Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer of the School for Deaconesses of Chicago, has written a novel entitled "Mary North," which deals with the moral dangers to which shop girls are often subjected. The book is intended as a warning to young women and to their mothers.

Miss Mary E. Pretty of Philadelphia has been appointed typewriter and stenographer in the patent office at Washington. She has made the extraordinary record of writing 17,500 words in six and one-half hours. It is believed that no one has ever exceeded this speed.

Baroness Bertha Von Suttner, author of "Lay Down Your Arms," who is known sometimes as the Harriet Beecher Stowe of Germany, is soon to make an extended visit to the United States. She will give a series of lectures in the interest of universal peace, the cause of which she has pleaded during her whole life.

The Woman's Club has petitioned the board of education for permission to open a kitchen in the high school at Englewood, Ill. The plan is to furnish warm, well-cooked luncheons at a moderate cost in the school building. There are 1,500 students, and as many of them come from a distance it is thought that there will be a large demand for the lunches.

Jennie Nicholson Browne had an average of 92¾ in the Maryland State Board examination in medicine. This was the highest mark received by any woman. She is medical examiner of the Baltimore city board of charities, professor of psychology at the Woman's Medical College and medical examiner at large for the Woman's Catholic Benevolent Legion.

Miss Elsie Reasoner of New York has been appointed eastern press representative of the St. Louis Exposition in place of the late Julian Ralph. She was Mr. Ralph's assistant. She was for two years Paris correspondent of the "London Globe." She attended the coronation of Queen Wilhelmina as a correspondent, was press representative of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha and of the Paris Exposition.

Miss Bessie Johnson, the popular society woman and daughter of Mayor Johnson of Cleveland, Ohio, has been commissioned as an official mother in the Juvenile Court. The appointment was at her own request after several days' visiting at the court and listening to the stories of poverty and want told by the children brought there by the police.

The women students of the University of Chicago have joined the Consumers' League in its fight against child labor. The Woman's Union of the university has joined the Chicago section of the league and voted to send a delegate to the Exhibition Committee of the Municipal Art Exhibit. All factories that employ child labor are placed on the blacklist and no member of the union will use any of the products of the blacklisted firms.

Paris has a newly formed "syndicate of kitchen maids," whose object is to restore to woman her rights in the kitchen, from which she is being driven by men cooks and waiters in restaurants and hotels. The syndicate asserts that experienced women cooks cannot get places and that women who want to fit themselves for the place of chef are unable to find opportunity. It has, therefore, petitioned Paris hotelkeepers to consent to employ regularly a certain proportion of "apprentice girl cooks" in their kitchens.

⚜

Little four-year-old Mabel, coming into the room one day and finding the baby with the end of a door key in his mouth, exclaimed: "Baby, take that key right out of your mouth, or the first thing you know you will have the lockjaw."—Glasgow Evening Times.

"Children," said the father, facing the ordeal manfully, "this is your new mamma."

"Was that the best you could do, papa?" asked the youngest, casting a critical eye on the new member of the family.

"O my friends, there are some spectacles that a person never forgets!" said an orator recently after giving a rapid description of a terrible accident he had witnessed.

"I'd like to know where they sell them," remarked a stout, elderly lady on the outskirts of the crowd.—Tit Bits.

About Your Vacation.

Little journeys to lake resorts and mountain homes will be more popular this summer than ever. Many have already arranged their summer tours via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway and many more are going to do likewise. Booklets that will help you to plan your vacation trip have just been published, and will be sent on receipt of postage, as follows:

"Colorado-California," six cents.
"In Lakeland" and "Summer Homes," six cents.
"Lakes Okoboji and Spirit Lake," four cents.

F. A. Miller, Gen. Pass. Ag't, Chicago.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Copyright, 1901 by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
Manufactured by THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS, 84-90 Beekman Street, New York.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

Temperance Helps
FOR Primary Teachers

By L. MABEL FREESE.

Introduction by Mary S. Snow.

A HAND BOOK FOR EDUCATORS AND MOTHERS.

Replete with Suggestions, Outlines and Temperance Information.

Cloth Bound, Price 50 Cents.

"It answers the question often implied: 'How can we teach children temperance without dwelling on vice?' There is no book that mothers and teachers will find more helpful in instructing young children along the lines of health and temperance."

"The stories and poems charm children who can read them for themselves."

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOC'N,
184 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE DOOM OF KING ALCOHOL

By Mrs. Clara Drake.

A DELIGHTFUL DRAMA FOR AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

Young People's Societies

Will find this especially adapted to their work.

Price, 10 cents.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

Books Used in the

L. T. L. DIPLOMA AND SEAL COURSES.

When ordering for the Sunday School or L. T. L. Libraries make selections from them.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."
Anna A. Gordon.
Price, - - - - - - $2.00
Postpaid.

Danesbury House. Price, $1.00.
Life of John B. Gough. Price, $1.50.
Reminiscences of Neal Dow. Price, $2.50.
Foundation Rock. By Sarah M. DeLine, price, $1.25.
Straight Shots at Young Men. By Washington Gladden, price, 35 cents.
Noble Lives and Noble Deeds. By Edward Horton, price, 50 cents.
Freshman and Senior. By L. Burton Wright, price, $1.50.
Up From Slavery. By Booker T. Washington, price, $1.50.
Pussy Meow and Her Friends. By M. Louise Patterson, price, 70 cents.
Beautiful Joe. By Marshall Saunders, price, 30 cents.
Strike at Shanes. Price, 30 cents.
Loveliness. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, price, $1.00.
Bird Life. By Frank M. Chapman, price, $2.00.
Every Day Birds. By Bradford Torrey, price, $1.20.
In the Days of Audubon. By Hezekiah Butterworth, price, $1.50.

Nineteen Beautiful Years.

By Frances E. Willard.
Price, 60 Cents.

How the Other Half Lives. By Jacob Riis, price, $1.25.
Mervale Eastman, Socialist. By Albion Tourgee, price, $1.50.
St. Rockwell's Little Brother. By Mrs. H. A. Cheever, price, $1.50.
The Fall of the Staincliffes. By Alfred Colbeck, price, 35 cents.
Life of Mrs. S. M. I. Henry. By Mrs. Mary Rossiter, price, $1.50.
A Singular Life. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, price, 50 cents.
Black Rock. By Ralph Connor, price, 25c.
Christian Citizenship. By Carlos Martyn, price, 75 cents.
Abraham Lincoln. By Joseph Choate, price, 35 cents.
Protection of Native Races Against Intoxicants and Opium. By W. F. Craft, price, 75 cents.
Mr. Lex. By Catherine Waugh McCulloch, price, 35 cents.
Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine. By Martha M. Allen, price, $1.25

Temperance Helps For Primary Teachers.

By L. Mabel Freese.
Price, 50 Cents.

All Books sent postpaid upon receipt of price.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

How One Mother Taught Art

A Story of the Picture Branch.

By Ida B. Cole.

SHE was a woman of ordinary ability, with ordinary children and an ordinary income, but she had resolved to get the extraordinary out of life. To her a good picture was like a strain of sweet music—one of the joys of life for which to be truly thankful.

But all pictures are not good. She had seen a young girl's room decorated with cigaret pictures and wondered if an innocent miss could look on such things daily and retain her purity of thought; she wondered as to the morals of a young man who would give such pictures to his girl friends. All pictures are not helpful. She had seen homes filled with pictures evidently chosen with no thought but to fill space. She remembered her grandmother's parlor in New England, on whose walls hung the silver coffin plates and preserved funeral wreaths in the centre of which was placed the poetical obituary, all very solemn in their deep frames. She used to tip-toe about in that wonderful room with its shiny haircloth chairs, looking at the wall decorations and feeling that life must be largely made up of funerals. When she grew older she said to her mother, "Please let's have pictures that make us feel nice."

In her own home she still desired that every picture should count for the most in inspiration or restfulness or beauty; she believed that the early years of a child are the most impressionable; that its mind is a kind of memory box which must be filled with something, and that it can hold a good deal of knowledge without making its owner a prig.

She decided that pictures should be a greater power in the education of her children. She was wondering how to accomplish it all, when a little leaflet was put into her hand.

"That blessed W. C. T. U.!" she exclaimed, as she put the leaflet aside; "I don't see how any mother brings up her children without it; it has now started a Picture Branch. Some mother has solved my problem, and now she wants to teach me how to do it."

The children cut pictures from magazines, advertising circulars and papers, until an unmutilated periodical was a curiosity in that home. Pictures were bought for a cent or a half-cent and mounts for a few cents a dozen, or they used the outside covers of advertising leaflets for mounts. The little daughters arranged these tastefully on the walls of their room.

A guest who occupied an adjoining room was greatly interested.

"My dear," she said to the mother, when she came down to breakfast, "I've learned more about art and artists this morning than I ever knew. Those girls played 'Guess' for half an hour, much to my delight. Inez said she was thinking of a picture that the artist wouldn't show when he was painting it, but when it was done they carried it to the church with a great procession. Sarah guessed it quickly with, 'Oh, that's easy; that's Cimabue's Madonna.' Then it was Sarah's turn, and her guess was laughable. She described "a lady who had a lot of children, and she bragged over another lady who didn't have any, and that lady got angry, and her husband killed all the other lady's children but one, and they made a statue of the one left."

"I was enlightened when Inez guessed Niobe and her daughter. The naivete of those children, referring to a goddess as the 'other lady!' When Inez gave 'a cute little wooden man with a glass eye and a nail in it,' I covered my head with a coverlet so they wouldn't hear me laugh. What did they mean?"

"They must have meant the Village Chief," replied the mother; "you know that is one of the early portrait statues of Egypt. It was made of wood, and its eyeballs were of white quartz, in the centre of which was a bit of crystal with a shining nail behind it to give it a realistic effect."

"You are a genius of a mother," declared the visitor.

"Not a bit of it; it's just what the W. C. T. U. will do for every home if mothers will let it."

Hoffman's pictures of our Saviour, the Madonnas and various pictures of the child Christ, and the cuts from the Sunday-school quarterlies, brought the Divine Shepherd very near to the childish hearts and made biblical persons and lands something more than mere names.

Literature, history and travel were made easy and attractive. How interested they were in the boy Landseer, who loved dogs and when he became a man painted them. "The Angelus" and "The Gleaners" meant something to them as they talked about how Millet had seen his own mother work in the fields like that, and the child minds received a sympathetic touch for struggling humanity which will develop as they grow. How they loved Millet's old grandmother who used to say in the morning, "Wake up, little Francois; the birds are already singing the praises of the good God!" As they followed the artist towards his triumphs they got many glimpses of French peasant life.

One of the most interesting phases of the work of the Picture Branch in this home was the Art Exhibition. Only the family were invited, to be sure, but they had a "really, truly catalogue," which contained some original spelling. This Exhibition took place in the girls' cosy little room. On the walls, arranged in art-gallery fashion, were many of the masterpieces of the world, none of which had cost over two cents. There were Raphaels, Da Vincis, Titians, Rembrandts and Murillos, numbered and classified with the help of a Perry catalogue. I doubt if any millionaire ever enjoyed his costly art treasures more than did these two little girls their modest collection, and in years to come they will more fully appreciate their early familiarity with some of the best things in the world of art.

With the real W. C. T. U. spirit the mother concluded that other children needed this help and laid the plan before the local union, which not only succeeded in removing objectionable advertising pictures from the stores, but enlisted the school teachers in the Picture Branch. Not only Miss Willard's face and that of other noted people looked down from the school room walls, but a new interest was added to the search for knowledge.

"Ladies," said the superintendent of schools, "I wish every mother in this town could be interested in this branch of your union, for it is surely one of the ways leading to the culture spoken of by Paul: 'Whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, . . . think on these things.'"

Chicago.

$13½ to St. Paul and Back,

April 21 and 28 via Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. Tickets good to return for 21 days. Leave Union Station, Chicago, 9:00 A.M., 6:30 P.M., or 10:30 P.M. Tickets, 95 Adams Street.

A Fight Against Odds

BY KATE ANDERSON

The thrilling anti-cigarette story which has been running through our columns as a serial, will shortly be issued in Book form, illustrated

Price, $1.00

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago

If You Desire

Authentic Information

...READ...

The Mormon Menace

BY
SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D., LL.D.
AND
HELEN FALLOWS, A.M.

Most Conclusive and Convincing

Price, postpaid, 25 cents

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year ..... $ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address 1.00
100 of this issue ..... .50

Subject for April Reading,

Work Among Lumbermen.

By Mrs. E. W. Shores.
National Superintendent of the Department of Work Among Lumbermen.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Leaflets Just Issued

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law.
Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Control System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 10, 10 cents; per 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89,
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
.....CHICAGO.

A New Club Rate
for
The Union Signal

Yearly Subscriptions,
in

Clubs of Ten
or more,

Either new names or renewal,
at the special price of

$1.25
each.

Regular Subscription Price, $1.50 per year.
Special Rate to Clergymen, Reading Rooms and Public Libraries, $1.00.

A club from every union is most earnestly solicited.

The Union Signal
CHICAGO, ILL.

Mother and Home.

By Caroline R. Humphrey.

A BISHOP of the Greek church was arguing with a Christian missionary, when the latter ventured to refer to the bad argument of his own life. The bishop, angrily flinging down his catechism, said: "There is my creed; it has no flaw from first to last, but with my life you have nothing to do." And we of the W. C. T. U. earnestly desire that there should be no disparity between our lives and our creed.

Home is our kingdom. We may touch life outside in many ways, but if any calls for service must be declined they should not be the duties of the home. For woman to devote her whole life and strength to the cares of the household and the desires and comforts of husband and children would only render them selfish and exacting and would prevent her from rising to the possibilities of true womanhood. There are homes and organizations in her community that need her presence, her culture and her influence.

It should be the aim of the mother to impress the habit of happiness upon her children. Every permanent state of mind is largely the effect of habit, and just as we can perform an action so continuously that it becomes habitual, so we can encourage conditions of the mind until they, too, come to be habits of thinking and even of feeling.

The atmosphere which the parents create in the home by example becomes the rule for the children. Some one has wisely said: "Children are household mirrors in which our own graces or faults are reflected." True home-building depends not entirely upon the mother; the father, too, has his share of the responsibility, and should be a blessing to the home. If he treats his wife with that kindly courtesy which is her due and which she so much craves, the children will pay her the same deference, and will revere the father the more.

The mother's first thought should be to instill into the mind of her child love and reverence for "God and Home and Native Land." The child should be taught that alcohol weakens the nerves, breaks down tissue and unfits the brain for rigorous work.

When our Lord sent his disciples out to preach, one of his instructions was: "Into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, 'Peace be to this house.'" Peace is more than a salutation falling from the Master's lips; it is a divine benediction as well. Peace, too, is a fruit of grace, which includes all that is sweetest and most divine in Christian culture. Let us learn to bear and forbear, avoiding altercations about trifles, for disputation begets a chronic "touchiness." Politeness compels a conciliatory manner, an open-minded hospitality, which will be most effective if our object be to influence.

If good manners are expected of children they must be treated courteously. They should be taught that consideration for others underlies genuine courtesy. A mother, noticing the marked improvement in the manners of her little son, said: "Willie, does your teacher teach you politeness in school?" "Oh, no," he replied. "She just walks around and is polite."

To talk of children in their presence makes them self-conscious and robs them of their greatest charm. It used to be the custom for children to say, "Yes, ma'am," and "No, sir," to their elders, but that is now considered to belong to the courtesy due from servants (never from equals), and well-bred children say "Yes, mother," "No, grandpa." The tone of polite deference must underlie the simple "Yes" or "No" when accompanied by the names of the person addressed.

Never correct a child before guests; it is as annoying to the visitor as it is to the child, making him awkward and self-conscious, if nothing more. The time is ill-chosen for child-training.

Any possible conflict or clash of wills between parent and child should be anticipated in time and the child tactfully withdrawn.

Children should be early instructed in behavior at table. It is well to remember the maxim of Confucius: "Eat at your own table as you would eat at the table of a king." Let the conversation be cheery and bright and instructive. People should never be criticised adversely in the presence of children. In fact, it is now a well-substantiated and accepted canon of good breeding that only pleasant things are to be said of any one. An ill-natured criticism is a social blunder as well as a moral one. "Though we speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, it profiteth us nothing"—in good society. Daniel Webster said, after a visit to England: "The rule of politeness there is to be quiet, act naturally, take no airs, and make no bustle. This perfect breeding has cost a great deal of drill." We cannot go amiss if we adopt this rule in our own country. At the root of fine manners, however, lies the eternal principles of kindness and thoughtfulness.

Cultivate a pleasant, genial facial expression, remembering always that care, worry and anxiety only deepen the wrinkles and hasten old age. Spend some time in self-culture if you would keep the love and esteem of the young. Be careful in your attire, so that the picture of mother and wife in the home may be an attractive one.

Nothing so cheapens a married woman and her husband in the eyes of the world as for the wife to complain of her husband to an outsider or a husband to confide anything derogatory of his wife to another. A wife in the confessional, who had been complaining to the priest of her husband had a severe penance appointed her. "You have confessed your husband's sins and must therefore do his penance," was the priest's explanation.

The art of living with others requires the cultivation of a judicious blindness, and the art of living happily entails self-sacrifice.

The good book says, "Use hospitality one toward another without grudging," and the famous Madam Recamier said that she always found that two words sufficed to make her guests feel welcome. Upon their arrival she exclaimed "At last!" and when they took leave she said "Already?"

There should be a dignified demeanor between mistress and maid, yet there is no reason why they should not be the best of friends.

The prosaic arts of housekeeping are far more important factors of home happiness than many people without experience imagine. Ruskin talks to young women of the etymology of the name wife. "What do you think the beautiful word 'wife' comes from?" he asks. "It means weaver. You must be house-wives or house-moths—remember that. In the deep sense, you must weave men's fortunes and embroider them, or feed upon them and bring them to decay. Wherever a true wife comes home is always around her. The stars may be the canopy over her head, the glow-worm in the night's cold grass be the fire at her feet, but home is where she is, and for a noble woman it stretches far around her—better than houses ceiled with cedar or painted with vermilion, shedding their quiet light for those who else were homeless."

"A man can build a mansion
And furnish it throughout;
A man can build a palace
With lofty walls and stout;
A man can build a temple
With high and spacious dome;
But no man in the world can build
That precious thing called Home.

So 'tis a happy faculty
Of women far and wide
To turn a cot or palace
Into something else beside,
Where brothers, sons and husbands, tired,
With willing footsteps come—
A place of rest, where love abounds
A perfect Kingdom, Home."

Wabash Excursions.

Boston, Mass, National Educational Association, July 6-10. Rate, one fare, plus two dollars, for the round trip.

Detroit, Mich., Epworth League, July 16-19. Rate, one fare for the round trip.

Write for illustrated folders, with maps and full information regarding these excursions.

F. A. Palmer, 311 Marquette Bldg., Chicago.

Every Local W. C. T. U.

Whether newly organized or many years in the w rk, should possess and study

Do Everything,

By Frances E. Willard.

An invaluable hand book for ALL WHITE RIBBONERS Containing full information of the work in all departments

Price, 35 Cents

AND

The Helping Hand

By Caroline B. Buell

Which tells HOW to organize, and assists ORGANIZED unions to conduct their meetings in the most orderly manner . . . . . .

Price, 10 Cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

PROGRAMS for an Evening's Entertainment

At the White Queen's Court.
Mrs. Edna Moore Gunnison-Hawley.
Price, 10 Cents.

The Doom of King Alcohol.
Mrs. Clara B. Drake.
Price, 10 Cents.

The Milkmaid's Convention.
Mrs. Laura J. Rittenhouse.
Price, 5 Cents.

An Anti-Cigarette Program.
Mrs. Ida Cole.
Price, 5 Cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

Signal Notes.

A crusade for the enforcement of the law which prohibits the sale of cigarets to children under sixteen years is the work of the Business Men's Association of Germantown, Pa.

Rollin, Kan., a village on the Santa Fe between Chanute and Shaw, is to be the home of a colony of the Church of God. Five thousand dollars is being subscribed in stock and a village without liquor or tobacco is to be made.

The People's Tavern Company, an organization now being formed in Toronto, Can., is applying for incorporation. The object of the company is to furnish places of temperate entertainment. The capital will be $100,000.

The Kentucky state prohibition convention is called to meet in Louisville May 5. The convention will be in the nature of a mass meeting, every voting prohibitionist will be a delegate and every W. C. T. U. member will be a fraternal delegate.

The faculty of the University of Wisconsin has recently employed detectives to learn whether the Madison saloon and gambling ordinances are enforced. Finding they are not a committee visited the council and called attention to the violation.

The Wells-Fargo Express Company has established a pension system affecting every branch of the service and every locality. All employes over sixty years of age who have been in the service for twenty years or more will be pensioned. The action is retroactive, dating from January 1.

The Margaret J. Bennett Home in Baltimore, Md., was recently opened by an informal reception and dedication. The home was the gift of Mrs. Bennett, who left a bequest for the purpose. It is a home for self-supporting girls; the age limit is fixed from fourteen to forty. No girl or woman earning over $6 per week will be received.

Thomas Copeland, a thirteen-year-old boy of Philadelphia, Pa., met a tragic death a few days ago, caused, according to the police, through his own carelessness. While peering into an empty oil tank a spark fell from the cigaret he was smoking. The pent-up fumes of benzine ignited and a terrific roar and burst of flame followed. The boy was blown forty feet and instantly killed.

The young people's societies of different denominations in Chicago are helping what is called "The Scripture Text Movement." This work consists in placing bible verses in the street cars, of which there are about 1,000 elevated and 22,000 surface in the city. These cars run day and night and carry nearly two million passengers daily. Mr. John H. Hunter, assistant superintendent of the Moody Bible Institute, is the treasurer of the movement.

A petition signed by fifty voters has been filed with the town clerk asking that the Revs. C. M. Starkweather and Thomas W. Norton, Methodist ministers, be appointed police officers for the villages of Milton and Milton Junction, Wis. Both were prominent in the fight against licenses, which resulted in a victory for the no-license party. They will be appointed, as it is believed they will enforce the law and end violations of the liquor regulations.

The trustees of Northwestern University have requested President James to make them a formal report upon the desirability of shortening the college course from four to two years. Harvard has led the way by cutting the college course to three years. Columbia proposes to cut the course to two years. Chicago has taken the first step in the same direction by granting a certificate for the completion of the first two years' work, and in trying to combine the college and the professional school courses in such a way as to eliminate the college.

Take a Trip

Over the Nickel Plate Road and be convinced of its superior train service. Solid through daily express trains between Chicago, Ft. Wayne, Findlay, Fostoria, Erie, Buffalo, New York City and Boston. American Club Meals, ranging in price from 35c. to $1.00, served in Nickel Plate dining-cars; also service a la carte. Rates always the lowest. No excess fare charged on any train on the Nickel Plate Road. Chicago depot, Harrison St. and Fifth Ave. City Ticket Offices, 111 Adams St. and Auditorium Annex. John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., Room 298, Chicago. 'Phone Central 2057.

Publishers' Notes.

This issue of The Union Signal closes the subscriptions of our special ten weeks' subscribers, and sincerely do we trust that the paper has become so indispensable to you and your household that your subscription for the year is all ready to forward.

Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers.

Because of your identification with the W. C. T. U., because The Union Signal is the official organ of this great organization, and because it is distinctively a paper for the household, should your name ever be upon our lists.

To any sending us a subscription at the full subscription rate, $1.50, will be granted a selection of the following premiums:

The new book, "The Mormon Menace," by Samuel Fallows, D. D. LL. D., and Helen Fallows, A. M., containing most conclusive and convincing evidence. Dealing with Mormon doctrines quoted direct from their writings by unimpeachable writers of national reputation:

A set of stamped linen of the newest designs on special satin finished cambric.

A choice selection of high grade flower seeds containing five packages of a fine assortment, or any one of the books as advertised on page 16.

We desire to do all in our power to accommodate our subscribers, and should it be inconvenient to forward the subscription price at once we shall be glad to receive your order, mailing the paper regularly, and wait your pleasure for the remittance, believing you could name a date within three months when same could be forwarded.

10-Weeks Subscribers.

"'Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers' is just what its name implies. The book is the product of actual schoolroom work. The author has been a teacher in the Bangor public schools for some years and has followed the plan of teaching temperance as laid down in her book with much success. The Bangor school board has unanimously adopted the book and has put it in the hands of every primary and fourth grade teacher in the city. I think it will be a great help to teachers who are often at a loss for material for lessons on temperance and narcotics.

Charles E. Tilton,
School Supt. Bangor, Maine."

The Mormon Menace.

"I had the pleasure of reading Bishop Fallows book on Mormonism, in the manuscript. It begins with the history of the Smith family and is more fascinating than fiction and more alarming than war. If you want Mormon history in brief, there's the place to get it. If your want Mormon doctrine quoted direct from their own writings by an unimpeachable writer, there's the place to get it. Every word of this intensely interesting book can be read in three hours."

James D. Fry.

Price 25 cents, postpaid.

Do Everything.

"Do Everything," by Frances E. Willard, a handbook for all white-ribboners, gives a history of temperance work, with invaluable directions for leading a public meeting, carrying on a local union, conducting a convention, organizing a W. C. T. U., with forms of pledge and petitions, and "the summing up of the whole matter." Workers cannot afford to do without this practical helper for all occasions along temperance lines. Price 35 cents.

A New Club Rate.

We take pleasure in announcing that hereafter a club rate of $1.25 each in clubs of ten will be granted our patrons. Either new names or renewals will be received in these clubs but to secure the reduction the club must consist of ten names. Every union that has not at least a club of ten subscribers to the Union Signal should commence at once to secure one.

The special rate of One Dollar is made only to clergymen, reading rooms and public libraries.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Assn.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

SEND NO MONEY! This exquisite Cuckoo Designed Clock is made in the Black Forest of Germany; the front is dark walnut, handsomely and deeply hand carved by German and Swiss peasants. The hands and numbers on the dial are imitation ivory; it is an excellent timekeeper and with proper treatment will last a lifetime; it is 5x7½ inches, with weight and pendulum. This beautiful imported clock or your choice of twenty useful and handsome articles, consisting of Jewelry, Dolls, Air Guns, Silverware, etc., absolutely FREE. Don't send any money, just your name and address, and we will send you, postpaid, 24 BEAUTIFUL HIGH ART PHOTO BUTTONS, assorted subjects, perfect reproductions of some of the most celebrated paintings by Raphael, Hoffman, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Landseer, Reubens, etc. Sell these beautiful art buttons at only 5 cents each; send us the $1.20 collected and we will promptly send you the handsome Swiss carved clock or any premium you may select from our list, which we send you with your order. Remember, we trust you. Write to-day for the photo buttons; your success is certain, as they sell at sight. Ladies, Boys and Girls, write to-day. Sunbeam Photo Studio, 1534 Third Ave., New York.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8941—Box Plaited Dress. 2 to 8 years.

8204—Sacque Apron 2 to 14 years.

8920—French Dress. 2 to 10 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, Chicago, Ill.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....,

Waist measure..... ....., Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... ..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... ..... State.....

Until June 1st

YOU MAY SECURE THE UNION SIGNAL AND YOUR CHOICE OF ONE OF THIS LIST OF VALUABLE BOOKS FOR THE REGULAR SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50.

DAVID DOUGLAS AND HIS WIFE By Mrs. O. W. Scott. A striking temperance story telling of the work and methods of a clergyman and his family.

A SINGULAR LIFE By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. A vivid portrayal in the author's inimitable style of a life "singular" only in its devotion to the work of the Master among the lowly folk of a sea coast town.

BLACK ROCK By Ralph Connor. A tale of the Selkirks and a story so interesting that to begin it means to complete the reading before laying the book aside.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS By Frances E. Willard. A sweet and tender record of the beautiful life of "sister Mary."

HOW TO WIN By Frances E. Willard. A book for girls and one which no girl can read without having higher ideals.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

These books are all CLOTH BOUND and the offer is extended to OLD SUBSCRIBERS as well as NEW

All Orders Must Reach Us Not Later Than MAY 15th

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 18. Issued Weekly.

CHICAGO, APRIL 30, 1903

Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

SHIP'S COMPANY—U. S. S. PURITAN.

Several of These Boys Signed Mrs. Thacher's Pledge. See Article on Page 5.

CONTENTS

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS.....2, 3

CONTRIBUTED:

The National Legislative League. By Jane A. Stewart—The Blue Ribbon Movement in Scandinavia. By Mrs. A. J. Gordon—"Fighting Sam." By M. A. Davidson 4

Afloat and Ashore. Temperance Work Among Soldiers and Sailors. By Ella M. Thacher—Alcohol Not a Food. By Cordelia A. Greene, M. D..... 5

Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home.. 6

CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:

Childhood's Temperance May Queen. For May Day Festival. By Anna A. Gordon—A Twilight Story for Girls—Who Is He?—An Animated Stone—Puzzlers' Packet..... 7

EDITORIAL:

What Does Christian Civilization Bring to the "Weaker People"?—The Real Danger—A Revision of the Decalogue—Two Definitions of "An Anarchist"..... 8

Science and Alchohol—Toward the Sun Rising. 9

EXPERIENCE CORNER..... 9

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS..... 10

W. C. T. U. NOTES..... 11

THE LOCAL UNION..... 12

ABOUT WOMEN..... 13

OLD RUM DAYS IN MAINE..... 15

SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES..... 16

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

The Anti-Alcohol Congress.

Brilliant Meeting of Students of the Drink Problem—Total Abstainers in the Majority.

BREMEN, Germany, April 19.—The International Anti-Alcohol Congress that meets biennially on the continent, has closed its ninth session. It has been in the matter of attendance and well known persons present the most remarkable of all sessions of the congress. This body of 1,400 delegates, notable in science and in the service of humanity as university professors, or for their hereditary rank, have come here from fifteen different nations on two hemispheres.

Questions of religion and politics were wisely ruled out of such a varied assemblage. The subjects discussed were the teachings of science concerning a moderate use of alcohol, and the effect of its use on every phase of human progress. Two schools of thought were represented, the moderates, who called themselves the "Temperate School," and the total abstainers, who are called the "Abstinence School."

By common consent the congress passed no resolutions, but the applause for the testimony of science and experience on behalf of total abstinence showed the moderates to be in the minority.

The statement of Dr. August Forel, one of the foremost authorities in the world on brain and nerve diseases, that neither science nor experience furnishes evidence to justify calling alcohol a food, called out prolonged acclamations. The papers read by notable members of the congress during these six days will fill two or three volumes and will soon be printed for wide distribution.

The paper on "Alcohol and Art," by Prof. Berens, director of the German School of Art, at Dusseldorf, was a classic. He said that alcohol, by dulling the spiritual aspirations essential to the greatest work, is an enemy of the highest attainment in art.

A paper on "Scientific Temperance Education in the Public Schools in the United States," by Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, led to a discussion in which twenty speakers took part, and nearly every one of them commended the extension of the American method for the prevention of intemperance.

In compliment to the United States Mrs. Hunt presided at Saturday's session of the congress.

BREMEN, April 21.—Among the great results of the International Anti-Alcohol Congress just concluded in this city is the amalgamation of all workmen's abstainers' societies in Germany under the leadership of a brilliant and popular member of the reichstag—Herr Stoermer of Hamburg. Speaking to a press correspondent to-day Herr Stoermer, who is a social-democrat, said: "Excessive drinking among the masses in general and among workers in particular is the most serious bar to the emancipation of the lower classes.

UNDERMINES MENTAL CAPACITY.

"It undermines the mental capacities and energies of those who would otherwise be capable of attaining efficiency and culture. While it continues, the aims of social democracy—the destruction of social barriers and the equalization of the burdens and joys of civilization—will not advance an inch.

"Hence we seek to free workmen from the fatal drawback of alcoholism and prepare them both in body and mind for the stress of life. The purposes of the new union launched with so much enthusiasm are educational. It will distribute literature dealing exhaustively with the liquor evil and promote personal efforts to elevate the working classes of Germany."

In the opinion of the delegates the convention just closed achieved more practical results than any that have gone before. In Vienna two years ago, when it was proposed to hold the next meeting in Germany, the proposal met with strong opposition on the ground that the beer-loving Teutons would injure the work by unsympathetic comment. Happily the Germans adopted quite a contrary attitude.

Current Events.

Sir Oliver Mowat, lieutenant governor of Ontario, Canada, died April 19. He was 83 years old.

British royal commission to the St. Louis exposition is gazetted. Prince of Wales heads the list.

Professor Charles R. Van Hise, noted geologist, elected president of University of Wisconsin.

One hundred cases of typhoid fever may necessitate the closing of Leland Stanford University, California.

French government begins measures for expulsion of religious orders refused authorization and still remaining in the country.

Andrew Carnegie gives $600,000 towards the endowment of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of Alabama.

John Earl, St. Louis showman, fined $1,000 and sentenced to prison for beating children whom he tried to train as acrobats.

Draper medal for most important advances in astronomy in last two years is awarded to George E. Hale, director of Yerkes Observatory.

President Roosevelt has decided to direct a thorough investigation into the affairs of the American National Red Cross society.

Site for McKinley Memorial college selected at Jasper, Steuben county, N. Y.; 800 acres will be operated on plan of Tuskegee, Ala., institute.

Alfred Dreyfus, French officer convicted of treason, appeals to Minister of War Andre to reopen his case as the supreme head of military justice.

Queen Wilhelmina, through her envoy to this country, has accepted Andrew Carnegie's gift of $1,500,000 for the building of a Temple of Peace at the Hague.

Two hundred and thirty-five Mormon missionaries will be expelled by the German government, because polygamy is not excluded from their teachings. They will appeal to Emperor William.

The famine in Kwang Si province, China, is killing tens of thousands of persons. Women are selling themselves into slavery to escape starvation. The American consul at Canton has inaugurated a relief fund.

In its official report of the distress in northern Sweden, the central relief committee, of Stockholm, says the funds at the disposal of the committee are sufficient, provided the growth of the pasturage is not retarded.

One hundredth anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase celebrated April 30 at St. Louis with dedicatory ceremonies of World's Fair. President Roosevelt, ex-President Cleveland, foreign envoys and other notables participate.

Demand made by Russian government that Manchurian sovereignty be ceded by China and other nations excluded; evacuation to be stopped till treaty is signed. Joint protest is planned by United States, England and Japan; would abrogate open door principle.

The German reichstag has passed a bill forbidding the use of phosphorus in the manufacture of matches after Jan. 1, 1908. In discussing the bill the secretary of the interior declared that the law was based on scientific proof of the ruinous effect of phosphorus vapors on the human bone system.

Indiana Mid-Year Executive.

Liberal Endowment for Hadley Industrial School—Prohibitory Campaign Outlined.

Mrs. Hattie Wright Brand, Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 27.—The mid-year executive meeting was held at Franklin, April 16 and 17. Not a discouraging note was sounded, and a spirit of harmony and hopefulness prevailed. We have just received $5,000 endowment fund for our Hadley Industrial School, through the sale of the "Cox Farm." Within a short time we expect to receive $1,500 cash from another source. The latter will enable us to meet all outstanding bills and make some needed repairs.

Probably the most important action of the committee was the decision to begin a campaign for statutory prohibition. There was a general feeling that the cause, and existing laws and conditions in the state demand more aggressive work for the accomplishment of our purpose, which is the overthrow of the liquor traffic. A plan of action was mapped out and will be carefully executed, extending over a period of years if necessary. A national liquor paper, published in our capital city, recently published an article warning the liquor interests in regard to the activity of the Indiana W. C. T. U. They will need more space for such articles.

Miss Ina Coggeshall, of Marion, Ind., was chosen to represent our state in the grand diamond medal contest at the National Convention.

Mrs. Frances Beauchamp attended our meeting and spoke for us Thursday night. She also gave a helpful talk on Friday afternoon. From Franklin she went to Bloomington and Bedford.

How the Medal Contest Helps a Union.

Special Correspondence.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 27.—A very successful silver medal contest was held by the Warren Ave. W. C. T. U. on April 21. Three young women and three young men composed the class.

MISS MARGERY WILLIAMS.

The medal was awarded to Miss Margery Williams, who gave "Sebastian Mannering's Dream" in so earnest and finished a manner as to cause her friends to desire to hear from her again in the elocutionery world. Miss Mamie Kanold, who stood second, was the youngest contestant.

A large audience was present and the interest awakened by this contest has given new life to the union.

The Work in Australia.

Preparations for Annual Convention.—Special Interest in Scientific Temperance and Purity Work.

Catherine A. Hopkins, Correspondent.

VICTORIA, Australia, March 15:—The Australian convention is now the chief topic of interest to white ribboners in our great commonwealth. Victorian officers being the entertainers, are well advanced with program and all the details of a well thought out and, we trust, successful rally. We are glad to note that preparatory prayer is being made all through the land, realizing the truth of Christ's words, "Without Me, ye can do nothing." We are anticipating a time of great inspiration and ask the prayers of our comrades in other lands. April 27 to May 4 are the dates fixed.

February 17, World's Missionary day, has been very generally observed by our state, a large number of special meetings being reported and pledges gained and new members added.

Mrs. J. Thomson, superintendent of Juvenile work, and Miss Anketell have recently been welcomed home after a very pleasant trip to England and America.

The Australian W. C. T. U. scientific examination results have just been published. Victoria heads the list with ninety-two prizes out of a total of 187, the remainder going to the other states. This work seems to be growing in power and interest among the young people.

We are shortly to have the presence of Mr. R. W. Bligh, secretary of the Australian White Cross League. The unions are busy arranging meetings for this gentleman when this important work will be brought prominently before the boys and men of our towns and cities.

Prahran has just inaugurated a branch of the Frances Willard Club for Girls. A large room has been granted free by the City Council and the devoted president, Mrs. Hobbs, and her workers, have spent a great deal of time and labor on having it thoroughly renovated and beautifully furnished. In direct answer to prayer many gifts have come in.

A special meeting for praise and thanksgiving was held on the 4th inst. and we shall doubtless see as the result that the club will prove a great blessing and uplift to the working girls of the city.

Semi-Annual Convention of Rhode Island.

Annual Temperance Day Established by the School Board of Woonsocket.

Mary E. Olney, Correspondent.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 27.—The recent semi-annual state W. C. T. U. convention in Rhode Island, was one of the best that has been held in years. The program throughout was interesting and helpful, and the sessions were well attended. A pleasing feature of the afternoon was a gold medal contest, in which all of the young ladies who participated did themselves credit. Although the medal was awarded to a contestant from Woonsocket, others deserved honorable mention. The noontide Bible reading, "The Treasures of Darkness," by Mrs. J. K. Barney, was of deep spiritual significance and was highly appreciated by the audience, as was also her afternoon address, "Ruts and How to Get Out of Them."

In conducting the thank-offering service, Mrs. A. M. Paine, the state superintendent of Proportionate and Systematic Giving, asked various persons to speak upon special causes for gratitute; thus one gave reasons for personal thankfulness, another expressed pleasure at the work accomplished by the W. C. T. Unions of the state. Mrs. Mary A. Babcock forcibly presented causes for gratitude in the National Union, reminding all of the many reform measures that have passed in the United States Congress. She lead the convention to see that as an organization the temperance forces have far more than oftimes is realized to be grateful for. Mrs. J. K. Barney took the still broader field of causes for thankfulness in the World's Union.

The corresponding secretary's report was most encouraging, as it showed new plans devised as well as the ordinary lines of work faithfully carried on. Much had been undertaken in legislative work. Along educational lines the unions of Providence had united with other temperance societies, to place temperance cards in twenty-five electric cars for one year. They supplied all of the public schools of the city, as well as one public library, with the "School Physiology Journal," and Providence union offered prizes of five dollars each to several grammar schools for the best essay on the "Effects of Alcohol on the Human System."

In the city of Woonsocket the W and Y united in sending a committee to confer with the school board, and asking that a day be set apart as temperance day, which should be observed in the public schools just as Lincoln's or Washington's birthday or any other special day is observed. The proposition met with favor and at once the school board appointed March 20 (Neal Dow's birthday) as temperance day. It is believed that it was observed in some suitable manner by every school of the city. Pastors and temperance workers were invited to speak in different places, and in high schools the pupils wrote essays on Frances Willard and Neal Dow, and read them before the school.

New Laws Passed by the Texas Legislature.

Mrs. Mattie R. Turner, Correspondent.

Terrell, Tex., April 15.—Mrs. Stoddard, state president, who has spent the past three and a half months at Austin watching over our interests, sends to the "Texas White Ribbon" the following resumé of reform legislation accomplished by our Texas solons:

MRS. HELEN M. STODDARD.

"The regular session of the legislature has adjourned and results are far greater than we hoped. Let us count the laws, one by one, and lift our voices in thanksgiving for what the Lord has done:

"'Blind Tiger' law, which stops up all the loopholes in the old law, and makes it possible to strictly enforce the prohibition law. If the officers half try the law can be of avail. This bill was introduced by Senator Harper and had a strong following in the legislature.

"The 'Cocaine Bill' passed. It was amended some, but is a good law and cannot but reduce the appalling use of dangerous drugs in our state. For years we have been agitating this measure, and this year Dr. Tabor, the state health officer, recommended it to the legislature, and assisted by your many petitions it is now the law of the land.

"I know you are greatly rejoicing over the Anti-Pool law. We did not directly aid the passage of this splendid legislation, but we can join in the hallelujah of thanksgiving in the good it will do and the amount of evil that will be covered because of it.

"No more horse racing at fairs, or anywhere else in Texas!

"The Habitual Drunkard Bill greatly strengthens the law protecting this class of tempted ones. Protects them against themselves in a measure.

"The birds and the children are protected. The birds against being killed and the children against laboring in factories, etc.

"Last, but not by any means least, is the killing of the 'Willacy Bill.' On the last day, at the last hour, this bill appeared as an amendment to the 'Wholesale Druggist Bill,' and although in so unlooked-for a place, the members recognized it at once, and such a quiver of excitement as passed over that body has not been felt or seen before this session.

"There was a great deal of cheering as the victories came, but there was intense feeling everywhere present. We had believed it to have been smothered days before, but it was hard to kill. The brewer, the attorneys, the strong liquor lobby still lingered at the capital, showing that they still had hope for their measure.

"This is the only time there has been a really decisive issue in the legislature. Upon all other questions, while there have been differences, there was still no intense feeling, but so soon as the attempt was made to trick this measure in by an amendment not germane, the suppressed feeling was everywhere seen and felt.

"Not only did the infamous bill meet defeat, but it carried with it the Wholesale Druggist Bill. There was a division of opinion as to the workings of this last bill had it become a law, but it went down however it would have worked.

"Short Stops" From Oregon.

Achsa M. Morris, Correspondent.

Newburg, Ore., April 27.—Mrs. Harford organized a Y at Lafayette, with fifteen new members.

The president of Union county says there is a growing L. T. L. at Union, also a Y. The Meneleys and Prof. and Mrs. Lough are expected there soon.

Lakeview, one hundred miles from any other union, and one hundred seventy-five miles from a railroad, is doing good work.

The Booth-Kelley Lumber company, of Coberg, has opened a free reading-room. Literature sent for it will be gladly received and placed in a prominent place.

Our state president left the morning of April 13 for Medford and other southern Oregon points. She expects to work in northern California for a short time only, although invited to remain there indefinitely.

Milton has a flourishing reading-room.

Elgin is doing good work.

Progress in Virginia.

Membership Contests Tell in Payment of National Dues.

Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, Correspondent.

Lincoln, Va., April 27.—The work in Virginia is moving forward encouragingly. Our treasurer has forwarded dues to the National treasurer for a larger number of members than ever before at this time in the year. This has been made possible partly by the membership contests that have been successfully held in many places.

MRS. M. H. MUSE.

The Roanoke union gained sixty-eight members in its month's contest. Of this number Mrs. H. Muse secured twenty-five more than were gained by any other one member. They have now begun another contest. Belona, a new Y, wrote me that one side secured forty-three and the other thirty-seven in its contest.

Chincoteague is making a regular campaign against the saloon, looking forward to a local option election.

Danville, one of the strongholds of the liquor power, has just voted "dry." April 9 Loudoun county also voted out the saloon.

Portsmouth is being stirred as never before on the temperance question. The local union has been faithfully at work for years and is now seeing some of the fruit of its labor. It is being wonderfully helped by temperance sermons, preached by several ministers of the place.

Lincoln union, the oldest in the state, has recently lost one of its charter members in the death of Mrs. Susan C. Gore.

Massachusetts Mid-Year Executive.

State President Granted Leave of Absence.—Other Workers Going Abroad.

Louise C. Purington, M. D., Correspondent.

Dorchester, Mass., April 27.—The State executive held its mid-year councils at headquarters, April 8 and 9, 1903.

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Among other things voted these were most important: A New England Inter-State Institute to be held, probably, at Old Orchard Beach, Maine; the incorporation of the Frances E. Willard Settlement if deemed best by the Board of Directors; (It is deemed best, and this great work will be in position for endowment, bequests, and special gifts); leave of absence to Katharine Lente Stevenson to attend the world's convention of W. C. T. U. to be held in Geneva in June—this leave to cover three months to meet the numerous engagements offered Mrs. Stevenson in England, and extended to her with words of hearty appreciation. It was also voted that during the month of July the senior vice-president, Mrs. A. F. Rolfe, president Middlesex county, act as adviser in case of need, and Mrs. H. C. Walker to substitute for the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harriot T. Todd, during her vacation. The state president was authorized to invite the World's Convention to hold its next meeting in Boston.

Questions of finance were considered and courage quickened by the arrival of a check, $100, from Henry W. Faxon, the long time friend of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. His letter contained the suggestion that an appeal for the work be sent to the press of the state and this was voted. The example of the Dorchester union, in getting the W. C. T. U. on the weekly offering list of the Second church, was voted as something to be specially emulated.

The Massachusetts comradeship is bereaved in the going home of Mrs. Isabella A. MacIntyre, president of the Boston union, and Mrs. C. H. Cousey of Pepperell union, a widely known and efficient worker.

Fifty thousand subscribers for "Our Message," organ of Massachusetts W. C. T. U.—over 2,000 new ones—is the goal aimed at for 1903.

Springfield is to have the state convention in October.

Two Massachusetts' representatives are, at this writing, in attendance upon the Bremen Anti-Alcoholic congress, Mary H. Hunt and Mary G. Stuckenberg. These with at least a half dozen others, President Stevenson, Mrs. D. R. Pevear, state treasurer; Mrs. A. W. Harrington, president of Worcester county, south; Mrs. H. C. Pearson, Mrs. Ella W. Keith and Mrs. E. J. Heard, are booked for the World's Convention at Geneva.

The Outlook in West Virginia.

National Workers in the Field.—State L. T. L. Secretary Plans a Legion in Every Union

Mrs. V. E. Mohler, Correspondent.

St. Albans, W. Va., April 21.—West Virginia is to have Miss Quinby, of Ohio, for a month's work in May. She will train contestants and organize unions where practicable. Miss Quinby will be accompanied by Miss Poe, our state treasurer, who will study methods for the purpose of becoming a state organizer and Medal Contest trainer. Mrs. Maude L. Greene has also been engaged for some work during the spring. Notwithstanding poor health Mrs. Morrow, our state president, is as usual doing the work of two women in her efforts to introduce our cause in all parts of the state. This, owing to the inacessibility of so many sections, is a very great undertaking and will require much time and work.

MRS. LENNA YOST.

Our unions have been especially active in petitioning for the Hepburn bill and, through the request of our state president, prominent members of the legislature sent telegrams to Senator Elkins in its behalf. A resolution urging the support of the bill was passed by the legislature. Hon. S. H. Bowman, of the house of delegates of the West Virginia legislature, a young man of sturdy integrity and great promise, introduced and secured the passage of a bill regulating the C. O. D. liquor business in our own state. A copy of the bill is to be found in the issue of The Union Signal for February 12.

Mrs. Lenna Yost, of Clarkesburg, the L. T. L. secretary of our state, is a splendid worker in her department. Mrs. Yost has a tower of strength in her husband, who is in entire sympathy with her in all her work. He is also a staunch supporter of the Y. M. C. A. and carries his temperance principles into all his work. Mrs. Yost is most anxious to have a Legion with every union in the state and is urging the work to that end.

Good News From Michigan.

Medal Contests Continue to Win Favor in the Wolverine State.

R. M. Harwood, Correspondent.

Plainwell, Mich., April 27.—Thompsonville, in Benzie county, has been favored with one of the best silver medal contests by five young men, who conferred honor upon themselves and the town. Only one could win a medal, but the merit of all received recognition by the presentation of "a nice book for the head and a pocket-book for the dimes." The class gave their leader a silver and pearl paper-knife. This union has conducted thirteen contests since last December. The town is greatly stirred, and the young people very enthusiastic.

MRS. MARY E. TEATS.

The union at Petoskey held a matron's contest, which was very successful in interest and patronage; also an L. T. I. program in which a class from the public schools, in answer to questions, showed promptness, intelligence, and real interest. The superintendent of the schools gave an address upon what he felt the study was doing for the children. He exhibited some examination papers and called attention to the fact that the requirement of this one study by law was the work of the W. C. T. U. Ten ladies who had visited the schools gave reports; the church was filled and much interest manifested.

Mrs. Mary E. Teats, National evangelist, closed her three month's engagement in Michigan with a week's work in Detroit. She gave ninety-four lectures, organized two unions, one Y and two L. T. L.'s, six hundred twenty-five active and honorary members were added and forty-eight total abstinence and two hundred seven White Cross and White Shield pledges were signed. Most of the new members will prove valuable acquisitions to the unions. Two of the districts and one county have engaged her for two more months in the fall.

Each member of the W. C. T. U. should be in such touch with our work that she can speak with authority for the whole 300,000; and she will be if she reads The Union Signal and her state paper.—The Pacific Ensign.

The National Legislative League.

By Jane A. Stewart.

DESPITE the great advance which women have made in economic, industrial and legal status, there is still vast room for improvement. The recent annual meeting of the National Legislative League at Washington has emphasized this fact. It was shown at this gathering of active workers for the promotion of better legislation for women, that in thirty-five states a married mother still has no right to her own children; in sixteen states a wife has no right to her own earnings outside of the home; in eight states a woman has no right to her own property after marriage; and in seven states there is as yet no law compelling a man to support his wife and family. With the exception of the four free states Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho, there is not one of our commonwealths which does not show on its statute books the most unjust and oppressive discriminations against the wives and mothers in the inheritance of property and against the unmarried woman in the matter of wages.

Delegates from many states attended the meeting, which was presided over by Mrs. Lillian Devereux Blake, of New York City, president and founder of the National Legislative League.

Though only three years old, the league has gained the gratitude of women for what it has done, as well as for the betterment of conditions of women under the law in all parts of the Union. Its single aim is "to obtain for women equality of legal, municipal, and industrial rights through action by the national congress and the state legislatures." Its plan is to unite many women who believe in better conditions for their sex, into a band which shall secure effective co-operation for any legal reform in which all are interested.

In New York last year the league succeeded in having a law passed which removed the last restrictions on the earnings of a married woman, giving her the right to sue for damages on her own behalf. This year in the Empire state the dower rights of women are threatened by a law professedly in the interest of the seekers for divorce, which the league opposes and urges in its stead the reconstruction of the laws of inheritance between husband and wife.

The chief theme before the Washington meeting was the bill introduced in Congress this last winter by Senator Hoar through the efforts of the league, restoring to American women who forfeit their citizenship (such as it is) by marrying foreigners and lose the right, the paternal protection of Uncle Sam wherever they may wander. This movement is considered a very good thing, as otherwise injury has been done to many native born Americans who among other things are debarred from owning property in certain sections of the United States. It was pertinently proposed, too, that the league may well direct its attention to the existing divorce laws, which are in sad need of attention, which men alone are not adequate to handle, and in the formation of which women should have a voice.

Any movement which tends to the promotion of women's status under the law must, necessarily, enlist the attention and interest of enlightened women everywhere. The work of the National Legislative League in this respect has a strong appeal to the sympathetic effort and co-operation of all those who are struggling to secure better conditions for women throughout the United States.

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Blue Ribbon Movement in Scandinavia.

By Mrs. A. J. Gordon.

THIS movement is the offspring of the work done in England by Francis Murphy. The first local society in Sweden was formed in Gothenburg by Miss Beatrice Dixon, with this simple pledge:

"Herewith I pledge myself to abstain from the use of all intoxicating beverages and by all suitable means to work against their use; and as an emblem of this, my serious determination, constantly to wear visibly, this blue ribbon."

From this beginning the work has had a successful career in the four northern countries. The simplicity of the requirements and the absence of ritual and regalia, together with the little "bit of blue" always to be worn as a silent witness to the principles of the wearer, commended the association to the many who are not attracted by the more conspicuous methods of the I. O. G. T.

It must have been with supreme gratitude that Miss Dixon recently addressed the immense audience convened for the Fifth northern temperance meeting of the Blue Ribbon societies of Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland. She has consecrated herself and her fortune to this work since 1883, and is held in loving esteem by her associates. After her address, delivered with most womanly modesty, yet with a winning forcefulness which compels conviction, the chairman, Mr. Beckman, thanked her for himself and then asked the gentlemen in the audience to attest their appreciation of her words and work by a rising vote, which was given with hearty unanimity.

The meetings of this organization were held in Immanuel church. At the opening festival, every seat of the large auditorium was occupied, together with its double rows of galleries. Festoons of bunting and the flags of all nations, waved brilliant welcome. Greeting to the representatives from the northern lands was given by a member of the King's Council, and the principal address was made by the president of the Congress, Mr. Ernst Beckman. Responses followed from temperance workers representing England and other lands.

One of the unique features of public gatherings in Sweden is the chorus singing, and this was most admirably presented at the meeting. A large male choir of Swedes sang their national airs. Over eighty young men and women had come from Norway to attend the conference, and the singing of their distinctive songs was most inspiriting, but when the plaintive minor strains of the national songs of Finland were sung by the sweet trained voices of a choir of young girls in costume, tears filled many eyes. The most famous singer of opera in Stockholm contributed his talent to the occasion, and as his magnificent baritone voice rang out with the patriotic hymn of Sweden, the whole audience rose instinctively and stood until it was finished.

The meetings of the Blue Ribbon society continued for three consecutive days, sessions being held from 9 a. m. until towards midnight, with an excursion to Drothingholm and occasional intervals for refreshments.

The patience and persistence of Swedish audiences is unparalleled elsewhere, No persuasive nine-o'clock bell ever distracts their attention from the speaker, or draws them from the meeting. One explanation may be that the long nights of winter, which begin when the sun sets at about 3 p. m., make the time for the beginning of evening very indefinite, and there is equal uncertainty as to its close; while in summer the sun sets about 9 p. m., and the band of crimson and gold tarries in the western sky until the sun reappears at 2 a. m. Thus the habit of midnight wakefulness is easily formed in these northern latitudes.

The length of the meetings was justified by the many subjects treated in scholarly papers by leading scientific men and educators, followed by free discussion. A few of these subjects were, "The Co-operation of all Temperance Organizations for Aggressive Work;" "How to Reach the Upper Classes and Enlist Them;" "The Medical Aspect of the Temperance Reform," and "Work Among the Young." The "Canteen" (as it would be called in America) was not only discussed but practical measures were adopted through a committee to procure the prohibition of the sale of drinks in the camps, and to do more faithful gospel and temperance work among the hundreds of young men who are conscripted yearly and obliged to give several months to military duty.

Stockholm, Sweden.

"Fighting Sam."

By M. A. Davidson.

HE was a preacher in charge of an extensive country circuit, the center of which was our picturesque village. For generations the little town had maintained an unwritten law that each of its citizens must have a nickname. The merchant was "Dooney," the blacksmith "Billy," and the grocer "Polly." Upon the arrival of the Rev. Samuel Van Croft, he was irreverently referred to as "Sam." Later when his pugilistic qualities had been shown in chastising the young bullies who disturbed his meetings, the prefix was attached, and "fighting Sam" received his new appellation with jolly good-nature, proving himself worthy of the title.

Life in this sequestered place was dull enough, but that some things are worse than monotony was demonstrated when a liquor dealer rented a small storeroom and began the sale of intoxicants. One week, and the peace of years was broken. The pleasant evening hours, wont to be filled with quiet and good cheer, were now hideous with sounds of revelry. Women dared not venture forth after nightfall, even to the weekly prayer meeting, lest some drunken man should reel cursing across their path. Most deplorable of all was the demoralizing effect upon the youth of the community.

But what to do was the question. Stewart, the rum seller, merely laughed in the faces of those who ventured to remonstrate. The town was incorporated, and there on the walls of his saloon was the government license. What were they going to do about it? The evil continued until the peace-loving citizens were in despair. Then it was that the Rev. Samuel Van Croft rose to the occasion.

"I must call on Brother Stewart," he said,

One evening at sunset he walked into the saloon with his Bible under his arm. In answer to his greeting the proprietor inquired if he would have a drink.

"Thank you, no," replied the minister. "I didn't come here for a drink. I came here to tell you that you must take your accursed business out of town before to-morrow's sun sets or take the consequences."

Uttering a volley of oaths, Stewart seized an empty beer bottle, and advanced furiously upon the speaker. The minister calmly laid down his Bible upon a stool and divested himself of his clerical coat, whereupon the undersized saloonkeeper laid down his bottle and retreated behind the bar.

"I d'want to fight a preacher," he growled, "but you get out o' here."

"I'm going to, and so are you," was the parting word.

The next half hour was one of unusual commotion. The minister went from house to house talking earnestly and rapidly. Presently the sexton rang the church bell, then people crossed and recrossed the elm-shaded streets and gathered in groups, speaking in excited but exultant undertones.

In the deepening twilight the minister took his place behind the pulpit, facing an audience of bareheaded women, bare footed children, and men who, returning from the fields, left plows and teams standing in the street, while they stopped at the church to learn the cause of the excitement.

Never had the rugged preacher spoken with greater power than in this impassioned appeal to the hearts of his hearers. Could any law make the evil less an evil? Could a thousand government licenses make the wrong right? How would they reply to the saloonkeeper's taunting question? What were they going to do about it? His voice thundered out through the wide-open door down to the corner where Stewart sat listening and laughing.

"Better go up, fellers," he said merrily, "an' see what Sam's got to say."

They went; and the message they brought back was,

"Sam's in dead earnest; this ain't no laffin' matter."

When the preacher finished his discourse he found his hearers ready for action. The doctor was the first on the list pledging twenty dollars. A young farmer followed with ten dollars, and the sums were doubled and multiplied until within twenty minutes an amount had been paid or pledged which many times covered the money value of the saloon. Few words were spoken, but the stern purpose of all was, "The saloon must go." They were desperate men, ready to take desperate measures.

After a short consultation it was decided that Stewart be given a final warning, and the three potentates, the doctor, the preacher and the blacksmith, were chosen to wait upon him.

Arriving at the saloon they found it dark and deserted, and striking a match they saw only a vacant room. Broken bottles, scattered cards, an empty box and an overturned stool were all that remained to tell of the hasty flight.

"Fighting Sam" was long ago transferred to other fields, but he will always be remembered in a quaint little town where it is well and widely known that no saloons need apply.

Chicago.

THE DINGHY'S CREW.—U. S. S. PURITAN.

A GUN'S CREW AT DRILL.—U. S. S. PURITAN. Photographed by Cheyne, Hampton, Va.
Three of these lads are pledge signers.

AFLOAT AND ASHORE

TEMPERANCE WORK AMONG SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

By Ella M. Thacher

SPLENDID temperance work is being done in the National Soldiers' Home of Virginia. Through the efforts of Chaplain and Mrs. Bradley more than four hundred men of the Hampton camp have signed the pledge. Under the training of these good leaders, the old war-scarred veterans are exerting a mighty influence throughout the camp, and conditions are rapidly changing for the better. At the annual meeting, which it was my pleasure to attend during a recent visit to the Thacher unions, Mrs. Bradley was re-elected president of the union. Two handsome cut-glass pieces were given to her by the old soldiers. Chaplain Bradley was presented with "The Strenuous Life," by President Roosevelt, and the writer was remembered with an immense bouquet of beautiful flowers, which was promptly expressed to her soldier husband.

Newport News was next visited, where the Sailors' Rest was the great attraction. This place has been opened through the untiring labor of Chaplain R. E. Steele, once a chaplain in the navy. More than one hundred "tars" from the United States steamships Lancaster and Puritan attended the meeting at which I spoke. About thirty signed the pledge. It was a sight long to be remembered when Mrs. Bradley, Chaplain Steele, Mr. J. Steele, one of our C. T. U. soldiers, trained by Mrs. Bradley, and about twenty jackies sat down to a luncheon of tea and sweets. I think many a day had passed since these young boys had been given a cup of tea poured by a woman's hand, and their enjoyment seemed unbounded. It was after this luncheon that the meeting was held. The "boys" sang with a will, Chaplain Steele presiding at the piano. All voices were raised in praise of home, mother, country, God—the room fairly resounding in praise.

Next came our meeting. The room had been prepared for the regular Saturday evening entertainment given by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of the Episcopal church. A young woman sang, and how I coveted her for our own blessed W. C. T. U. work. After a recitation by another young woman, there was singing by the merchant marine "boys," stokers, oilers, etc. Friends of the cause gave short addresses, and again the jackies lifted their voices in song.

After making a short address, I asked the young woman singer to give us our "All Round the World the Ribbon White is Twined," all to join in the chorus. This was done with such a will and with such lusty cheers that the thought came, "These good people know more than they did about our glorious white ribbon work."

I went homeward to the "camp," rejoicing that God had again deemed me worthy to be a co-worker with Him, and praising His name that other good workers were raised to champion the cause of the sailor.

One whole day was given in the camp to the bi-county convention of the W. C. T. U., the soldier unions entertaining the guests. A memorable sight was that of coffee poured and passed by the veterans of the civil war, who wore our white ribbon.

I found the county union well officered by the state superintendent of Soldiers and Sailors' department, and the women were faithful, true and glad that God had called them into this glorious work.

Another day was given to the Rest, where a Frances E. Willard room is furnished with four white enameled beds and other necessary articles.

The W. C. T. U. workers in the two unions at Newport News have one Saturday night in the month for their entertainment, and can at any time use their personal influence for our cause. These good women, under their efficient superintendent of Soldiers and Sailors, have been doing a noble work, and they are very enthusiastic over the fact that all the temperance work has been put into their hands.

Do you notice in the picture of the crew on the Puritan that they are mostly "boys?" If you could see the crew of the Lancaster, you would find that these, too, have young, boyish faces. When I tell you that I saw four of them, so intoxicated that they could not walk, taken upstairs and put into our room, with Frances E. Willard's name on the door, you will say with me, "Here is the practical part of the work of dear Miss Willard; here is the work she trained us to do." I cannot but believe that her heavenly spirit will overshadow that room, and that many an erring boy will come out of it purified, to lead a better life. We need pictures and attractive little articles to put in this room to make it a pride and a joy to the white-ribbon host. Chaplain R. E. Steele will be glad to acknowledge anything sent to him.

One laddie, whose face is before you, was intoxicated when he signed the pledge. He told me that his uncle was a priest and that he had been well trained. It would break his mother's heart, he said, if she knew that he drank. When I looked at his boyish face—a lad not over eighteen—I said, "God pity the nation that does not care for its boys." O my sisters, your hearts would ache could you but see the sights that so often met my eyes. O mother, with your loved ones, your boys, the pride of your heart, the light of your eyes, when you kneel by their bedside at night to ask God's blessing upon your boy; when you put the kiss upon your boy's brow, think of other homes, where other mother's have not this comfort,—think of these boys so tempted, and pray for them.

I must not forget to tell you that another room has been taken and paid for by the good veterans of the camp, the Ella M. Thatcher union of the National Soldiers' Home. Mrs. Bradley had planned for it some time ago. She said that the seed cast upon the waters is returning after a few days.

Thus closed the trip at the Camp and the Rest. I hope soon to tell you of the work in Delaware among the Fort Du Pont and Fort Delaware boys in which work the white ribboners of Delaware had the largest share.

Florence, N. J.

Alcohol Not a Food.

By Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

ALCOHOLICS have been termed by some scientists "fuel-food." Alcohol is a fuel, which, to a limited extent, is readily oxidized in the animal body; but it kindles a fire so fierce that it soon burns out the fine temper of the vasso-motor brain centers and the delicate mechanism of thought, will, conscience and self-regulative power.

Alcohol is not a food. A pure food must be a builder of the structures of the animal body and a sustainer of the nervous and physical energies. It must have, under equal wear and tear, the same uniform building and staying power throughout the life. No scientist ever has claimed that alcohol is a builder of tissue. The fact that increased quantities of alcoholics are demanded to meet the below-par nerve fag that inevitably follows even their most guarded, continued use, is proof that they do not sustain the vital forces. Alcoholics spur, whip, lash, but do not hold at par life's central recuperative forces.

Castile, N. Y.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter IX.

SHORTLY after the visit of the two girls, the vicarage was invaded by an army of work people, before whom Hugh retired into lodgings. He and the vicar had lived together on excellent terms; but on the whole, he rejoiced in the change. In his own rooms he was master, and, within due bounds, could be as irregular in his habits as he pleased. Besides, he had at last definitely resolved on making an experiment. If Mann's arguments were sound, as he manifestly believed them to be, it was certain that Hugh had not yet reached the highest point of self-control. Of course, there was grandad to be taken into account; but poor old grandad had wilfully sunk himself to the level of a sot. For himself Hugh had a very different end in view; when at last, with the eyes of his mind firmly fixed on that end, and with singular precautions, he provided himself with the appropriate means, and proceeded to experiment. Fortunately, as he told himself, he had never actually signed a pledge; so there was no taint of broken faith in the course that he had determined to pursue. Unfortunately, for many reasons, secrecy was absolutely necessary. However deeply he might, and of course he did, regret that necessity, it was obviously inadvisable at this point to acquaint Mr. Boyd, Enoch & Co., or even Dr. Mann, with the fact that he was bringing the principles and practice of his lifetime to the test. By and by, if results convinced him— as he actually began to hope might be the case—that Mann was right, he would, of course, frankly declare his change of mind; but not yet. Meantime, his experiments in no wise lessened the guilt of the odd dozen who recognized no law of self-restraint.

The experiment was continued perseveringly for some few weeks, and then for some reason best known to the experimenter, was precipitately abandoned. After a night of despair, in the dewy freshness of an autumn morning, Hugh dashed what remained of the—well, not of the first, nor even of the second bottle, into the stream that merrily ran through the quiet wood beyond the village, and leaning against the tree that stood almost at the water's edge, hid his face in his hands. Verily, he had got what he wanted. He had wanted to know—and he knew.

The next few weeks were memorable in the history of Pitsmoor. In the exasperated words of Enoch Light, Mr. Boyd went "dodderin' on, more bamboozlin' than ever;" but as if to make it up to the rely tried parish, the curate developed an ardent and self-sacrificing devotion to duty which could hardly have been surpassed. The parish echoed with reports of his visitations, in season and out of season. Tummas Windle, Billy Sellers and the rest of the odd dozen were fairly driven from the mission-room to the comparative safety of the parish church. Bet Colson invested a rare shilling in the purchase of a new lock for her door. Miss Smith sat petrified into silence under a stern rebuke of her "censorious and self-righteous spirit," and Enoch and his friends made a rapturous renunciation.

"I never see'd it to be wrong before, God knows I never did," said Enoch, heroically. "Man and boy, I've smoked my pipe o' bacca regular for more'n fifty year, and never seen it to be wrong. It's powerful hard on human nature to feel called to break through a habit o' fifty and more years, but t' pipe have got go, friends. It mun go!"

There was no conscious heroism in this stern determination. His eyes being once opened, renunciation became a matter of duty, neither more nor less, and equally as a matter of course, his friends followed his lead. Very sorrowful were some of the old faces as the "gaffers" leaned, pipeless and disconsolate, against the fence; but no voice was raised in protest or complaint. This new renunciation was the direct outcome of the fact that Hugh had been experiencing some trouble with himself of late. In the course of an hour's rigorous self-examination he had determined that the use of tobacco was unnecessary, if not sinful. Straightway he had given it up, and on the following Sunday had followed up this act of self-sacrifice by an impressive denunciation of the smoker from the mission-room pulpit. After some days of conflict, half a dozen more pipes had been sorrowfully confiscated, and the odd dozen, lounging comfortably at street corners, puffed their short pipes, and, conscious outcasts though they were, understood something of the law of compensation.

"Sakes alive! I was near-hand givin' in to him that last time he was here, and where would I ha' been now without my bit o' bacca! It's a mercy as the Lord made me so hard-hearted," murmured Tummas, fervently, as he filled his pipe.

Yet the peace of genuine self-surrender was on Enoch's face, and the reprobate Tummas noted it with secret envy.

Heart-stirring accounts of the curate and his doings passed from tongue to tongue in those days. More than one could testify to the fact that not once, but many times, had Hugh visited the nearest public-house, with the result that the publican, not daring to meet him face to face, had fled ignominiously through a back window at sight of his accuser entering the open door. From a safe distance even the odd dozen looked on admiringly, and were proud to tell of the scathing words that in unwary moments had fallen to their own lot. The mission-room was crowded at every service to the doors, and the open-air meetings inaugurated by Hugh were attended, with but few exceptions, by the entire population. Dr. Mann, it was true, held aloof, but what else, asked the right-minded, would any one have expected of Mann? When he heard, professionally, of Enoch's sacrifice, his only comment was: "Well, well; one is inclined to hope that some enthusiast will deal similarly with that young man when he is seventy and asthmatic."

"No one won't never need to do it, doctor," wheezed Enoch, staunchly. "Mr. Brotherton gived up his own bacca afore ever he put it to us as it was our duty to give up ourn."

"Very likely, but three-and-twenty gives up easily, and sometimes as easily takes back again," said the doctor, dryly.

"I've faith to believe that Mr. Brotherton isn't one o' that sort," said Enoch, as staunchly as before; "and even if he were, it's still for us elders to be settin' a good example, once our eyes is opened."

"Right you are, old boy," said the doctor, cheerily; and for once he refrained from smoking his evening cigar ostentatiously past the open-air meeting. But he caught the tenor of Hugh's exhortations as he passed, and smiled.

So far the curate had made no attempt to "tackle" him on the subject of his pipe. Neither had he, for some time, called on Mrs. Langley at the hour of afternoon tea. Still, he had been telling himself every day that he must go some time, and when at last he was announced he was welcomed in a more than usually softened mood.

"I really had begun to think that your interest was confined to the poor sheep of the flock— the poor in this world's goods, I mean. If you knew all, you would be convinced that some of us need help and exhortation as sorely as the poorest of them all," said the lady, half seriously. "Why have you stayed away?"

"I suppose because I am too young a man, and too conceited, to enjoy the suspicion that you have been laughing at me," said Hugh, giving a reason as unexpected to himself and to his hearer as it was untrue.

"Laughing at you? When have I laughed at you?"

"Well, at my temperance principles."

"Indeed, I never did!" exclaimed Mrs. Langley, vehemently; "I have nothing but admiration for your principles."

But Hugh was looking at her steadily.

"And you were pleased to amuse yourself by pretending to share them to the same bigoted degree?"

Mrs. Langley flashed a startled look of inquiry into his face.

"Pretending? What pretence was there about it? I am an abstainer, Mr. Brotherton," she said, haughtily.

Hugh began to wish that some other excuse for his non-appearance had occurred to him.

"Indeed," he said, earnestly, "I never doubted it; but after what you had said, it did surprise me to hear you asking for wine for the guests at your own table."

Hugh was a sincere and very aggressive teetotaller just now.

Mrs. Langley colored, then she laughed a little.

"That was only to tease Bob; he does get so mad with me," she said, frankly. "Rest assured, Mr. Brotherton, that personally I am the strictest of abstainers, however inconsistently I may behave. Still I am many things that I ought not to be, and I hear of you going hither and thither among the black sheep of the flock. Why did you not come before to denounce me for my sins?"

Hugh smiled as he shook his head.

"I dare venture to counsel these simple old souls, but you—that would be quite another thing."

"Mr. Brotherton! What are you saying? Do you question the simplicity of my soul?" she asked him, gayly.

For a moment their eyes met.

"I really don't know how to answer you," said the young man, laughing.

Behind the laugh there was genuine perplexity, and his hostess saw it. She laughed in return, as she held out her hand for his cup.

"You are nothing if not frank, Mr. Brotherton, and I like you the better for it."

Hugh was conscious that, whether or not he thought her simple, he found her very charming; and as if to reassure him, she dropped her superficial manner and let him into some of the inner recesses of her mind. Beneath that gay and flippant exterior were aspirations as real and pure—he felt sure of it, God forgive him—as his own.

"Ah, Mr. Brotherton, it is easy to tell people to be good, but whatever you may say, you know—you must know—how hard it is to be so."

"Is it?"

Hugh was smilingly on the point of deprecating the assertion, but Mrs. Langley was unmistakably sincere, and something in the depths of his own heart answered to the trouble in her beautiful eyes.

"Don't I know it! God help me!" he said, vehemently.

For one brief moment they looked at each other, self-condemned and self-confessed. Then the woman rallied.

"How terribly tragic we are! As if all the world had not realized that it was hard, ages and ages before we were born, but—but—" and her mood changed again, "you have helped me more by owning your own difficulty in turning precept into practice than by any number of the platitudes you were on the point of offering me. You are as honest as you are good, and I think that you will make a great man, Mr. Brotherton!"

Hugh groaned within himself, and prayed miserably that, in the mercy of God, it might yet be so.

It was perhaps a fortnight after this that an untoward incident occurred. Late one night, when the doctor had donned his slippers, and was enjoying the prospect of a quiet hour before turning in, his man came to his sanctum.

"It's Mrs. Foote, sir," he said, deprecatingly, "and I was to say as she wanted to see you most particular."

"Hang Mrs. Foote! What's the matter with her?" asked the doctor, crossly.

"I couldn't say, sir. She won't take no denial. She seems put about, and she says it's most particular."

"All right! Show her in."

Mrs. Foote, who was one of the doctor's favorites, appeared in a state of evident perturbation, but being a prudent woman, she forebore to enter upon her business until the door had closed upon Jenkins.

"It's Mr. Brotherton, sir. I don't know what ails him. He don't know I've come for you, but I thought if you would be so good as to look in—if it's not taking too much upon myself—for he's that queer—"

"You want me to turn out tonight to see Brotherton? Upon my word, Mrs. Foote, you have a conscience! What on earth should I see him for?"

"That's what I couldn't tell you, sir. If it had been poor Foote, I should have thought nothing about it—God forgive me if I ever misjudged him—but being Mr. Brotherton, I'm frightened that he's got a fever on him, sir."

"Brotherton? Nonsense, my good woman. I met Brotherton in Milborough this afternoon."

"Like enough you did, sir, for he has been out all day. He must have come in just after I stepped out, for when I came back I heard someone lumbering about like overhead. I creeps up the stairs in a fright, thinkin' of burglars, and as soon as I sees Mr. Brotherton, looking and talkin' so, I just turns the key in the lock and comes off to you."

The doctor, as he listened, was preparing to accompany her home.

"You didn't think he was drunk, did you?" he asked, chuckling over his shoe-lace.

The reply was unexpected.

"Well, sir, with it bein' Mr. Brotherton, I did not; but if it had happened to have been my late 'usband—God forgive me—I should just have given him a clout on the ear and taken no more notice till mornin'," said Mrs. Foote, candidly. "Poor Foote; I doubt, after all, that I may sometimes have misjudged him."

"I've no doubt that it served him right. That's what comes of giving your wife cause to think ill of you," said the doctor, consolingly, as they left the house.

He went straight upstairs to Hugh's room, and stayed so long that it was nearly midnight when he returned to Mrs. Foote's kitchen, wearing his most professional air. The early sounds of altercation that had succeeded his entrance into Hugh's room had long since passed into silence.

"You are quite right. There is considerable cerebral disturbance, but no particular cause for anxiety. At any rate, he's all right for the present. I've sent him to sleep, and he had better not be disturbed till morning. I'll look in early, but I quite expect that the attack will pass off without further mischief. Been overdoing it lately, I expect. Young brains won't stand all that their owners try to put upon them, Mrs. Foote."

"No, indeed, sir," agreed Mrs. Foote, over-awed by the doctor's professional manner and relieved by the knowledge it implied.

"Well, let's hope that he'll take Nature's hint. And I say, Mrs. Foote, some good-natured fool thought to mend matters by forcing a spoonful or so of whisky down his throat. You smelt it, no doubt? Couldn't have done a worse thing, as it happened, and we know what Mr. Brotherton himself would think. However, being a little light-headed, he knows nothing about it. In my opinion, there is no reason why he or anyone else ever should know."

He watched the face of the woman who had been chosen as the curate's landlady on the strength of her character for discretion, and noted an absence of suspicion that was in itself a guarantee for the safety of Hugh's reputation.

(Continued on page 14.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

Children's Cozy Corner

Childhood's Temperance May Queen

For May Day Festival.

By Anna A. Gordon.

'TIS the day when fairies come
Out of nook and mossy dell,
And we hear the merry hum
Of their voices as they tell
Where the violet finds its blue,
And the buttercup its gold,
How the pink arbutus buds
Learn their petals to unfold.

'Tis the day they crown their Queen,
Gentle, gracious Queen of May,
And the cunning little sprites
Flit around us all the day.
Like the fairies we have come
On this merry First of May,
And the Queen whom we would crown
We will love and will obey.

Temperance is the May Queen fair,
We would loving homage pay;
Flow'rets fresh upon her brow
Little hands will place today.
Ne'er was Queen so lovely crowned,
Radiant in her robe of white;
Well may childhood wreathe her brow
With the purest blossoms bright.

Bow thy beauteous head, fair Queen,
That a grateful little child
On thy noble brow may place
Flow'rets pure and undefiled;
Like the lives we hope to live,
Free from blight or sin or shame,
While we proudly serve our Queen,
Guarding well her future fame.

Well may mothers bless our Queen,
Tempted boyhood sing her praise,
Well may one and all rejoice
On this happy day of days.
So, good Queen, accept the trust
We have placed in thee to-day;
Evermore thy name shall be
Childhood's Temperance Queen of May.

—Marching Songs.

A Twilight Story for Girls.

OUTSIDE it was raining heavily. Inside—well, inside the weather was threatening, to say the least. One of the nurses going to the linen-room with an armful of fresh towels shook her head sympathetically at another who was just going into the ward.

"I pity ourselves today," she said.

"I know—it will be so hard to keep the children bright," the other answered. A nurse was taking temperatures and marking the charts that hung at the head of each white bed. She stopped a moment and looked down at one especially listless face pressed soberly against the pillow.

"Don't you want some of the scrap books to look over, Jennie?" she asked.

Jennie's weak voice was utterly disinterested. "No," she answered. The nurse's voice kept its brightness in spite of her discouragement. "Then, don't you want me to bring you one of the puzzles? You could play with it nicely there."

"No, I don't want any," Jennie answered wearily.

A hand pulled at the nurse's skirt, and she turned quickly. The thin, pain-sharpened face of the girl in the next bed smiled at her cheerfully.

"Don't bother about Jennie. I guess I can make her do something," she said in a low voice.

The nurse bent over her with a swift, caressing touch. "Thank you, little assistant," she said tenderly.

She went on about her work, but it did not seem so hard or so hopeless any more.

Maggie lay thinking for a few minutes. In the room outside, where the patients' clothes were kept in a case full of big pigeon-holes, was one bundle shabbier than the others; this was Maggie's. In one of the beds were some queer, cruel-looking weights that mean suffering far greater than most of the little invalids there could imagine, and they were Maggie's, too. Perhaps, in all the long roomful, she had the fewest things to make her glad, but what of that? God teaches us how to make our happiness if we will; God and Maggie together made hers.

She opened her eyes when the sharpest pain had passed, and called across to the next bed, "Jennie!"

"What is it?" Jennie asked listlessly.

"Jennie, let's 'see things'; we haven't for ever so long. You wanted to the other day, you know."

"Well," Jennie answered doubtfully, "you'll have to begin, though."

"Oh, yes, I'll begin. Well, then, I see some great red roses just as soft and dark as velvet; and they feel all cool when you touch them and they smell—my, don't they smell sweet?"

"I know something prettier than that," Jennie answered. "It's vi'lets—a lady gave me some once. They ain't anything like 'em, velvet nor nothin' else. I 'most cried when they withered. That's prettier than yours, Maggie Dulin!"

"But I see somethin' else," Maggie went on. "It's a great green place, and the grass is all nice and thick under your feet, and it's full of the beautiful-lest flowers—yellow and white, and all colors, and there ain't no sign up to keep off the grass—you kin jest lay and roll in it all day long. And there's birds in the trees, and you never heard nothin' sing like them; and you kin see the sky, jest miles of it, and you kin most taste the air, it's so sweet."

Round the ward word sped quickly, "Maggie's seein' things!" Children who could walk went over to her corner; wheel-chairs rolled there; from some of the cots eager patients sent messages to her, and waited for hers back again. The dull day was forgotten, and the long room was crowded with visions. Flowers bloomed there, and birds sang, and happy girls went to parties or cherished wonderful dolls. The gladness of the world was theirs, as God meant it to be, and all because one girl knew how to keep fresh in her life every bit of beauty she had seen.

The doctor smiled as he went his rounds. "She's as good medicine as the sunshine," he said.

"Poor little thing," the nurse answered, with a loving glance toward the corner.

The doctor corrected her. "It's the heart that makes one rich or poor—rich little think," he said.—Mabel Nelson Thurston.

Who Is He?

WHO'S this little boy I see
Standing up in front of me?
Mother calls him "precious one,"
Father calls him "darling son,"
Grandma says he's her "delight,"
Grandpa says he's "out of sight."
He is auntie's "little beau,"
All his friends they love him so.
Oh! but he has winning ways—
May he keep them all his days!
If he tries real hard he can,
And grow to be a noble man.

—Selected.

An Animated Stone.

THE tortoise is a great sleeper, and that characteristic yields the London Spectator a funny story of one which was a domestic pet in a country house. As his time for hibernating drew nigh, he selected a quiet corner in the dimly-lighted coal cellar, and there composed himself to sleep. A new cook was appointed soon after. She knew not tortoises. In a few months, with the lapse of time, the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. Entering that department, the lady of the house found the cook gazing in awestruck wonder, and exclaiming, as with unsteady hand she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone that I've broken the coal wi' a' winter!"

"Rhode Island," said the little girl, "is celebrated for being the only one in the United States that is the smallest."

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1.—*Charade.

Never was an ailing dolly
With more skill and kindness nursed,
For our little Henrietta
Truly is a model FIRST.

When the doll goes out in winter,
If in sunshine or in storm,
Then she wears a cloak and SECOND
Wrapped about her passive form.

For, you see, our Henrietta
Thinks prevention more than cure;
Ah! she is a live example
Of the WHOLE in miniature.

HYL.

2.—Removals.

1. Remove the first and last letter of insufficient, and leave a leaning to one side.
2. Remove the first and last letter of superior in nicety, and leave dainty desserts.
3. Remove the first and last letter of an edged tool, and leave nothing.

The removed letters form something with which grammarians have to do.

3.—Transpositions.

1.
The naughty little boy was made to —— a lively tune
When he was —— because he stole a schoolmate's lunch at noon.

2.
The player's rosy cheeks —— to ghastly ashen hue,
When 'neath the —— a tiny mouse came suddenly to view.

3.
In utter —— the artist threw his brushes all aside,
Though people —— his artist skill, he was not satisfied.

4.
Although the cattle at the ranch had —— so far away.
The faithful collie —— then back again at close of day.

Hidden California Towns—Award.

In the Prize Puzzle of California towns, the following are found concealed:

San Francisco, Cisco, Lowrey, Sur, Madeline, Los Angeles, Acton, Fortuna, Eby, Adin, Toluca, Caspar, Isabella, Bell, May, Ordina, Day, Independence, Mayfield, Forest, Amedee, Fowler, Iceland, Acorn, Wheatland, Ross. Ramona, Wash, Pasadena, Samoa, Arbucle, Riverside, Alameda, Agnew, Ager, Erie, Sacramento, Livermore, Kent, Standish, Calistoga, Orange, Norwalk, Selma, Madera, Treka, Eureka, Sonora, Sisson, Modesto, Sheridan, Dana, America, Hite, Oakland, Chino, Ono, Newman, Newcastle, Corning, Cloverdale, Pomona, Shasta.

Prize for best list of names answering the conditions is awarded to Mrs. Peter, Greenwood Ave., Chicago.

Answers to Puzzles, April 9.

1.—Jackson.

2.—1. Balsam. 2. Pansy. 3. Rose. 4. Daisy. 5. Aster.

3.—Time, mite, item, emit.

4.—1. Spruce. 2. Cherry (cheery). 3. Pear (pair). 4. Weeping Willow. 5. Pine. 6. Plum (plumb). 7. Aspen. 8. Ash.

5.—1. Crook, rook. 2. Crow, row. 3. Scull, cull. 4. Sort, ort. 5. Part, art. 6. Shalt, halt. 7. Stop, top. 8. Height, eight. 9. Seven, even.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND. The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON. NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, April 30, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

What Does Christian Civilization Bring to the "Weaker People?"

In 1896 there were twenty-six saloons in Hawaii; there are now four hundred.—American Weekly.

THIS statement brings to a quickened conscience and to a heart devoted to the uplifting of humanity by deliverance from the miseries and destructive effects of the drink habit, a torrent of regret and humiliation. Since the occupation of Manila by United States forces, saloons have increased there in equal proportion.

Of all the dominant religions of the earth, none permit the use of alcoholic beverages except the Christian. We pride ourselves upon carrying schools with the flag and the life-destroying gun.

Why should the missionary, the Bible, and whisky or beer be co-partners in the civilizing and Christianizing of a people less advanced than ourselves in mental culture, enterprise, and social refinement? It cannot be claimed that the saloon or the beverage that intoxicates represents the Christianity of Christ Jesus, or the cultivation and ideals of more intelligent and educated people.

A genuine Christianity is primarily responsible to exemplify the higher moral status of those who claim to be Christian. A civilization that carries in one hand a gospel of love and in the other an instrument of destruction to mind and body cannot prove a safeguard and an uplifting agency to a weaker people because it is strong in the mighty resources of physical power and wealth.

A system of religion, or a civilization that has not conquered the spirit that recklessly seeks dollars regardless of the destruction wrought by the use of, and traffic in, alcoholic beverages, needs first to find how to redeem itself and to overcome its own imperfections before seeking to conquer and civilize and redeem a weaker people.

Our sociology needs to be vitalized by the spirit of the New Commandment and the Golden Rule and our civilization to be based upon the supreme value and needs of human souls before we can rightly claim to be a Christian civilization. If that stage of growth is ever reached, it will ultimately abolish the saloon and the drink habit.

The Real Danger.

MEN do not start out to become drunkards. Such a thought, to the average man, would be revolting. To enter the low dwelling of vice would not at first appeal to him, but in the so-called "respectable" places art is exhausted in veiling vice, and the pathway is rose-strewn, the cruel thorns all hidden. These gaudy resorts, with their alluring luxury, have few apparent terrors, and many men of good repute—aye, and women, too—enter those screened doors without loss of caste in the society in which they move. So insidious is the evil that the danger becomes imminent before fear is finally aroused.

Here often is taken the first step to ruin; here is the fatal power of the drink-habit established. Later, as the men lose their sense of shame, they seek the lower groggeries where vice no longer conceals her face and skulks in hidden corners, but comes forth to flaunt herself in the light. These places that foster crime are now the goal of distraught dreams. No longer welcomed in the "high-toned" saloons, the poor wretch sinks, step by step, into the basest dissipation of the lower strata. No longer ashamed, he here forges, link by link, the cruel chain that fetters him to a degraded life.

Nearly every abhorent crime of which we read has its beginning in drink. The criminal, if he confesses, says, "I went to a good many saloons and took a good many drinks to brace myself up for the deed." Drink is the initial effort to deeds of vice. A demon takes possession of the soul to destroy it. Men would rarely, in cold blood, do their most dastardly deeds. They must first be primed with liquid fire in order to make themselves cruel, relentless, destructive, no longer men with God-given souls.

If these large, "respectable" saloons could be suppressed, the smaller ones would wither away like Jonah's gourd, unable to thrive without the closed-out victims of the great saloon. The giant palaces are the sowers of evil seeds that the lesser ones cultivate to the final harvest. They are a gigantic menace because they are placed in commanding positions where they attract the city's throngs and where the groggery would not for a moment be tolerated.

Not until these haughty places are stigmatized by public opinion and driven from their stronghold, may we hope for any degree of security. Let our ordinances strike at the very citadel of the danger, then will the outposts be easily taken. So long as our aims are turned principally against the lesser evil, so long shall we gain only a half-hearted victory.

A Revision of the Decalogue.

A NEBRASKA editor, hard pressed for an argument in favor of high license, has taken upon himself the responsibility of revising the decalogue and adapting it to what he deems present-day needs. His version of the sixth commandment, commonly known as "Thou shalt not kill," seems to read something after this fashion:

"When thou takest life thou shalt do it decently; shalt secure for thy purpose only finest unadulterated poisons; thou shalt make of the destroying process a fine art, and so conduct it that thou canst secure the sanction of the law upon thy effort."

After devoting many words to a statement of the advantages and disadvantages of the two methods of destruction—the illegal joint and the licensed saloon—the following remarkable argument is advanced in favor of high license:

"If a man is killed by drinking joint whisky the widow cannot recover a cent of damages; but if he drinks himself to death in saloons the widow may easily recover enough money to make her comfortable."

The idea of commercializing a revolting evil has ceased to be novel, yet rarely does one see its grossness so badly stated. The extreme limit has been reached when society tolerates the advertisement of this long-drawn-out tragedy as a "good bargain," when it permits it to be published to the world as a species of life insurance, quite legitimate and reliable because legalized, by which a widow may hope to recover damages for her husband's destruction. Who would dare to attempt to measure with a sordid plummet of dollars and cents a bereaved wife's anguish or suggest that any amount of ill-gotten gains of the liquor dealer could render "comfortable" the soul of her whose loss is for time and eternity. Even the mercenary-minded advocate of high license must admit there are things that will not be commercialized, that are not to be estimated by values known upon Wall street nor compensated by any damages which can be assessed by earthly courts. What recompense shall be offered for a lost soul? What remuneration shall be given for a mutilated character?

Quoting again from this singular logician: "We cannot understand," he says, "why good people vote against high license when they must know that the joint is inevitable if the saloon is driven out."

"Inevitable" is a large word, too large by far to be handled with safety by an intellect of the caliber of the Nebraska editor's. If society, however, were obliged to choose—as it most emphatically is not—between the cheap, vulgar joint, with its adulterated whisky served slyly in noisome cellar, and the licensed saloon, attractively equipped, the choice would be for the joint. If crime and vice were branded as such—so unmistakable that the most guileless might recognize them—their seductive powers would be minimized. That which most seriously threatens society to-day, as ever, is the evil whose true nature is obscured by a veneer of respectability and decency.

Two Definitions of an Anarchist.

IF anyone is curious to know the unique quality of the patriotism of the liquor dealer, let him read a recent article in "The Wine and Spirit News," the Columbus organ of the liquor league. In this article the editor gleefully comments upon the fact that the towns in which the Beal law is supposed to be operative are dry only in name, and he openly exults in the violation of the law by the saloon men. No class of citizens are more pronounced in their denunciation of any ill-regulated attempt to interfere with their business than are the liquor men nor more quick to apply the title of "anarchist" to such offender. In fact, such condemnation, phrased in no mild terms, is to be found in the same issue of this liquor organ. The distinction, fine to the point of invisibility, made between the two classes of lawbreakers, is not apparent to the ordinary intellect. The man who ignores a prohibitory law by selling liquor on the sly is as truly an anarchist as a man who destroys property in a more ostentatious manner. Well it is that liquor dealers have put themselves upon record for what they are.

These men are a law unto themselves. Their own avaricious desires are their real constitution. Their ungovernable passions and selfish interests are the only statutes which they recognize. They do not observe the first principles of true patriotism, which seeks the good of all above individual benefit, which sacrifices personal inclination in order that the welfare of the nation may be subserved. On the contrary, they are willing to lay upon the altar of their greed the health, the happiness, the laws, the wealth and the character of the nation. Not only is it a part of their business to incapacitate or destroy each year a larger number of men than any war in which this country has been involved, but their places of business, by the encouragement they give to indulgence in illegal drinking, are training schools for transgressors of the law.

When have the liquor enterprises shown proof that they have anything of value to give to the nation? When the country is in danger and a call comes for patriots, can the saloon supply specimens of physical manhood which shall be able to endure exposure, danger and privation? When labor difficulties disturb the peace and safety of the community, does the saloon furnish any solution of the vexatious question or tend to ease the strained situation? Is it not often necessary, at such times, for the law to interfere and close the dramshops in order that the situation may not be rendered more serious by excessive indulgence of the strikers? In the crises of our national life, when there is needed a great leader, a man of brawn and brain, strong and resourceful, who thinks for a moment of seeking for such a one in the saloons?

The territory of these United States is ample to accommodate the thrifty and pregressive men and women of other nations who shall desire to transfer their allegiance to our government, but there is no room for an element that not only has nothing of value to add, but is inimical to the fundamental principles of our national life.

Science and Alcohol.

THE International Anti-Alcohol Congress, held at Bremen, Germany, last week, marks a distinct advancement in the attitude of scientists on the much discussed "Alcohol a Food" question. Dr. Forel, whose learning qualifies him to speak with authority, stated positively that alcohol has no food value whatever, while its deteriorating effect on the human organism was set forth by Dr. Legrain, of Paris, in an able paper on "Alcoholism and Tuberculosis." Dr. Legrain stated unequivocally that alcohol not only predisposes the human system to tuberculosis, but also prevents the cure of that disease, therefore a triumph over alcohol means a triumph over tuberculosis, the so-called "white plague," of this country.

Gratifying as these corroborative statements are to those who wage a ceaseless war upon the evils that threaten both physical and moral destruction to the human race, we take special interest in the comments thereon by those who do not usually stand with us for the abolition of the drink evil. The following editorial in the columns of a Chicago daily paper which gave generous space to Professor Atwater and his theories, is significant:

"After all, however, the question does not deserve half the attention that has been given to it. In point of fact it is a side issue of small importance. For if it be admitted that alcohol has a food value it certainly will be conceded that many other substances are greatly to be preferred as foods—substances which impart nourishment without entailing any of the deleterious effects of alcohol.

"That is to say, there are many foods, both solid and liquid, which are far more valuable than alcohol and which do not carry with them the possibility of sorrow, suffering and disgrace.

"Indeed, even the stimulant value of alcohol is no longer generally conceded by the medical profession. In the language of a well-known Chicago physician, 'There is nothing that alcohol will do as a stimulant and tonic that strychnine will not do twice as well and without any of the evil results which follow the use of alcohol. No man need delude himself with the notion that he needs whisky as a medicine.

"'Alcohol, therefore, must be relegated to the class of substances which man uses at his peril. It has no quality which is not found in other substances which are innocuous.'"

Our Temperance Literature. We are continually cheered by reports of good work done in the field by friends of the cause who realize that our strongest ally is the printed page. Clubs for THE UNION SIGNAL are receiving constant attention on the part of local unions, and "The Young Crusader" grows in favor by the good offices of its faithful adherents in the ranks of the L. T. L. A recent departure that deserves emulation was the securing of a club of fifty subscribers in the Advent Sunday school at Mendota, Ill., by Miss Frances Wintrode.

A "W. C. T. U. Day" in Churches. Dr. John Merritte Driver, successor of Dr. Thomas in the pulpit of The People's Church, of Chicago, has announced for his subject on Sunday, May 17, "Lucy Webb Hayes and Her Times—Our Second Martha Washington." Dr. Driver is meeting with great success in his method of dealing with the current topics of reform, and a "W. C. T. U. Day" may by reason of his example, become one of the regular features of church programs.

Experience Corner

WHITE RIBBON FRIENDS: This question of finance is an ever recurring one and I am asked to deal with one phase of it.

THE LORD'S MONEY.—"Do you think it wrong to use in our Temperance Union a part of the tenth I put aside for the Lord's week?"

Do you know any organization more distinctively Christian in its aims than the Woman's Christian Temperance Union?

Do you know one in which definite results are greater?

Should you be in it, if it were not positively Christian?

Your question may belong to Miss Greenwood, or to Miss Pugh, but I want to answer it, and I am glad you sent it. I have known others who seemed doubtful how to divide "the Lord's money," since they count cooking oysters for the new church furnishings as part of their religious work and all that of the W. C. T. U. secular.

I may be allowed to declare, here and now, that whenever the white ribbon host comes to fully realize that this is God's very work, and puts into it the enthusiasm that ought to go into every bit of it, the dollars will not be lacking. Why, dear hearts, "enthusiasm," I am told, means "boiling hot." If we are at that pitch of heat for Christ and His little ones, there is no dubious questioning about its being secular.

I am a missionary woman, head, hands and heart. The state society to which I belong now averages, per member, two dollars and thirty-four cents a year, aside from the literature we buy on the subject. Our dues are not half that amount. Very few "entertainments" are given for this fund, either; we just measure up to all we can do. That little band of women—only one in six of the women in our churches—positively believe it is God's work and are ready to sacrifice in order to be allowed to help.

Instead of one in six—a pitiful enough proportion—only one in two hundred women who profess Christ wear the white ribbon. Surely we "honor God with our substance" in helping take this greatest obstacle in Christendom out of the path for the coming of the day of the Lord. It is Christian work.

"GIFTS DIFFERING." A working correspondent writes: "Don't you truly think, sub rosa, it may be, that folks ask you things they ought to know themselves? I'm sure if women only realized what they lose in growth by not using their own brains, officers and editors would not be troubled with so many tiresome and foolish questions."

Not every person has the native ability of this questioner. But questions show interest, and interest grows by what it feeds on. Not only the justification, but one glory of the W. C. T. U. is the wonderful development it gives to the woman in the local union who didn't know she knew anything and who used to be sure she couldn't do anything. Give her a lift, good friend! She may outdo you, some day.

SUPERINTENDENTS: I was thinking how many of us have to be superintendents, local, district, state or National, in order to make the departments go round. Why, each identical woman of us in the organization would need to carry off a superintendency or two. So I was glad when this concise description of us, from an "ideal" herself, came in my way:

"The ideal superintendent has the faculty of inspiring others with enthusiasm to do the work of her department.

She has initiative, finding new work for her department or a new way of doing old work.

She is alert, watching for facts and incidents that will be helpful, and improving every opportunity to use the press in the interest of her specialty.

She is methodical, answering letters promptly, keeping a record of all work done, money received and used, names and addresses of all superintendents under her and outsiders who may be pressed into service. She immediately notifies the general officers and her superior superintendent of any change in her address.

She does not require any union to carry out all her plans, never scolds her women, never shows disappointment or discouragement.

She never says her department is the most important, but any one hearing her talk about it is convinced it is.

She does not undervalue the work of any department, but understands the scope and purpose of each, and is ready to 'lend a hand.' The successful specialist must be familiar with general work.

She who possesses these qualifications and is imbued with the true oneness of all the departments and an intense desire to accomplish as much as possible for God and humanity, is an ideal superintendent."

MOTHER EXPERIENCE.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

Prayer is a breath of fresh air—much else of course, but certainly this. It is inspiration on a hilltop for new toiling on the plain.—Selected.

***

All events but carry out
The Father's perfect plan,
Which we throughout Eternity
With reverence shall scan.
—Charlotte Murray.

***

The affections are richer than money making, and the truth-seeking capacities and the richest affections are those which bind us consciously to the Infinite. Every kind of life is essentially superficial that does not bring the human heart nearer to the Infinite Presence and Love.—Thomas Starr King.

***

There are laws of the inner life as well as laws of outward nature, and these Jesus seems always striving to set forth. He saw—what a moment's reflection must make clear to us all—that, as human society is constituted, the great natural tie that holds us is the need of each other.—Selected.

***

Religion should be the bread of life, which cometh down from the high heaven of our most consecrated purpose and our most passionate desire. And when it is this, it shall be not for our own hunger only, but we shall pass it on, "like bread at sacrament," to others who are hungering for God.—John White Chadwick.

***

Father, I scarcely dare to pray,
Too clear I see now it is done,
That I have wasted half my day,
And left my work but just begun.
Too clear I see that things I thought
Were right or harmless, were a sin.
Too clear I see that I have sought
Unconscious selfish aims to win;
Too clear I see that I have hurt
The souls I might have helped to save;
That I have slothful been, inert,
Deaf to the calls thy leaders gave.
In outskirts of thy kingdom vast,
Father, the humblest spot give me;
Let me the lowliest task thou hast—
Let me, repentant, work for thee.
—Helen Hunt's Last Prayer.

***

Do not scrutinize so closely whether you are doing much or little, ill or well, so long as what you do is not sinful, and that you are heartily seeking to do everything for God. Try as far as you can to do everything well, but when it is done do not think about it; try rather to think of what is to be done next. Go on simply in the Lord's way, and do not torment yourself. We ought to hate our faults, but with a quiet, calm hatred, not pettishly and anxiously. We must learn to look patiently at them, and win through them the grace of self-abnegation and humility. Be constant and courageous, and rejoice that He has given you the will to be wholly His.—St. Francis de Sales.

***

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee." Psa. 55 : 22.

Child of my love, Lean Hard,
And let Me feel the presence of thy care,
I know thy burden, child, I shaped it;
Poised it in Mine own hand; made no proportion
In its weight to thine unaided strength
For even as I laid it on, I said,
"I shall be near, and while she leans on Me,
This burden shall be Mine, not hers:
So shall I keep my child within the circling arms
Of my own love." Here lay it down, nor fear
To impose it on a shoulder which upholds
The government of worlds. Yet closer come;
Thou art not near enough. I would embrace thy care
So I might feel my child reposing on my breast,
Thou lovest Me? I knew it. Doubt not then:
But, loving Me, Lean Hard.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, M

Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.

Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.

Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.

Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS: Oct. 5 and 6, 1904, have been accepted by the National W. C. T. U. for our days at the World's Fair, St. Louis, Missouri. Those who attended the Congresses held in connection with the Buffalo Exposition and the one at Charleston, S. C., will have no doubt about the value of such meetings in connection with a World's Fair. It is too early to say anything about the program for these days, but the dates can be borne in mind in making your arrangements for a visit to the St. Louis Fair next year. Mrs. Ingalls has also secured Oct. 7 for Anti-Cigaret Day. Somewhere during the three days the Loyal Temperance Legion is to have a demonstration. Of course St. Louis thinks it will far surpass Chicago in its Exposition and if it does, there will be all the greater profit and pleasure for the visitors.

In the midst of Mrs. Stevens' multiplicity of duties, she has found time to write another leaflet called "Resubmission: Shall the Maine Prohibitory Law be Resubmitted?" This is gotten up especially for her own women, but in looking it over I am sure the W. T. P. A. ought to keep it on sale, as it not only deals with present conditions in Maine, but gives a short, running history of the state since the first prohibitory law was enacted in 1851,—just the information that is often inquired for. In this connection I am reminded to say that I have prepared a leaflet on the duties of W. C. T. U. secretaries, which will soon be published by the W. T. P. A. I was prompted to do this on account of the many requests for information to be given to new local, as well as state secretaries.

For some months I treasured the anticipation of making one of the number attending the World's W. C. T. U. convention. It is now definitely settled that I shall "remain by the stuff" during the summer. Miss Slack writes that there is promise of the largest international representation ever had at a World's convention. Great preparations are being made in Geneva and while the delegates from the many different countries are recounting their wars and victories, we who stay at home will be making history for the future, so let no one think the World's convention can possibly be an excuse for a slackening in the work.

By the way, I believe I have solved the question of why so many requests come to National Headquarters for literature. Many women address their letters simply to the W. C. T. U., The Temple, Chicago. All such are remailed to us without opening and if they are orders for literature have to be returned. Now, sisters, please bear this in mind, and if you want your letters to reach the publishing house, address the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle street, Chicago, and not the W. C. T. U.

Suffer one other word of exhortation. Today I have three letters asking for aid in preparing articles for unions or to be used in debates. In one case the party will scarcely receive my reply, sent out by return mail, before the date named for her exercises; and in the other two cases the time is too short to be able to order literature and have it reach the parties in time. I speak of these because more frequently than otherwise there is not sufficent time to aid the writer after the letter is received. Please give me time and I will gladly help you all I can.

Yours cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

Superintendents.

Fairs and Open Air Meetings.

A CALL TO ACTION.

THE work of this department should follow closely the faithful work of the organizers, lecturers, and evangelists. Through the winter they have conducted institutes, addressed audiences in churches, homes, etc., at all of which places the people were interested enough to come and hear them.

What of the large class of people who never come to our meetings? How shall we reach them? There is only one way —go to them. They are found at the great open air meetings, when thousands assemble at the reunions and other gatherings.

Can we conscientiously allow such an opportunity to pass unimproved? Shall we be blameless if we fail to send a note of warning to a class of people, unconscious of the dangers which threaten the home? Shall we continue to send our best speakers to address the interested few, and neglect the indifferent who are to be found at the great gatherings, and who need light on our aims and principles?

If every state had a working superintendent the masses could be interested, membership would be increased, and more means would be forthcoming to carry on the work. I commend the zeal and energy of the Texas W. C. T. U. in rebuilding on the state fair grounds at Dallas. The Kansas W. C. T. U. will have a fine permanent building on the Ottawa Chautauqua grounds this year. We ought to have more permanent buildings on fair and Chautauqua grounds, as they are a constant reminder of the W. C. T. U. Spend less on floats that are used for only an hour, and concentrate your means on permanent structures. Again I urge securing honorary members. We need their influence and votes.

Some superintendents are now perfecting plans, and will compete for one or more of the four prizes offered by your superintendent. Increased membership is the watchword of this department; all awards will be based on the number of members secured, by using department cards, which, when filled, should be returned to me.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into His harvest."

All inquiries will be answered gladly.

MRS. H. T. GUILD.
902 W. Broadway, Sedalia, Mo.

The Old Camper

has for forty-five years had one article in his supply—Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. It gives to soldiers, sailors, hunters, campers and miners a daily comfort, "like the old home." Delicious in coffee, tea, and chocolate.

Unfermented Wine at Sacrament.

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY?

IF a person should say to you, "If I am given alcoholic wine in the Lord's house, at His table, it can not be wrong for me to take it in my own home, or in other homes for the sake of communion with friends," would you reply "It is right there but wrong everywhere else"?

We claim that one of the best total abstinence lessons is learned at the church altar, where the pure "fruit of the vine" is used, without the taint of alcoholic death. The child at its first communion is taught the lesson that Christ does not offer to His friends as a memorial that which has caused and will cause in all ages, untold misery to His "little ones."

The W. C. T. U. has labored hard to establish scientific temperance instruction in our public schools. It is well, and we rejoice that our children are being taught the evil effects of alcohol on the human body; but is it well to nullify that teaching by religious observances? A mature mind might well be puzzled at the inconsistency of a representative of Christ offering us in the most sacred manner that which the public school teaches us is injurious. We repeat, the most effective total abstinence lesson can be taught at God's altar. What will the churches that stil offer their communicants alcoholic win do with the "whoso offendeth"? Matt 18:6.

Our work in the department of Unfermented Wine at the Sacrament is but partially done. While some denominations are wholly using unfermented wine, others are only partially doing so. Still others legislate for only ten or twelve per cent of alcohol in the wine, claiming that it is not wine without the alcohol. They ignore the fact that Christ did not use the word wine but "fruit of the vine," thereby designating the fresh product of life, not the decayed product of death found in alcohol. Thousands of foreigners are coming to this country constantly, in some instances, like the Arnish in Ohio, peopling whole counties. These people use alcohol in their church services, and need to be "taught the way of the Lord more perfectly."

I am glad of the demand for department literature, and I urge the sisters, holding the responsible position of state president, to consider the importance of this department as a foundation stone, and see to it that state superintendents are appointed.

"The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of strongholds."

H. E. HOLLINGSHEAD.
66 Burt St., Cleveland, O.

Promoted.

February 4, 1903, our friend and sister, Mrs. Hannah Dresser, of Freeport, Maine, entered into rest. "God's kingdom is within, and some have sought and found."

Ross C. Zehner, of Dallas, Texas, met a tragic death April 10, 1903, while on a hunting trip in eastern Texas. In some unknown way his gun was discharged and before a physician could reach him he passed away. Ross was a young man of great promise, the son of Mrs. A. C. Zehner, state evangelist of Texas. The many friends in Missouri, Kansas and Texas will sorrow with the grief-stricken parents.

World's W. C. T. U.

Convention in India.

ANOTHER convention season is over! Truly we can say continually "Let God be magnified!"

Punjab, our youngest division, began social purity work and the proposed Willard Memorial Home (for inebriates) had a prominent place in program of business sessions. Simla was reported as having just started a union. Eight departments had superintendents appointed. Fifty pledges taken at the public meeting. All through, the Lord manifested Himself.

CENTRAL PROVINCES: Convention gathered in Jabalpur, close by India's beautiful Marble Rocks. New departments of work were taken up, and special plans made to reach our military friends. The National Superintendent Soldiers' and Seamen's Mission was present.

UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA AND OUDH (formerly Northwest Provinces) with members full of love and good works, met under the leadership of Mrs. Hoskins, who is divisional president here, as well as National president of India.

BOMBAY DIVISIONAL assembled next, in time to talk over the approaching National Convention (biennial) it had kindly invited to Poona.

BENGAL and MADRAS met simultaneously, many miles apart. The former, ever bright and aggressive, welcomed new faces and received back former workers. Mr. Maurice Gregory, representing societies for Abolition of State Regulation of Vice, addressed them, and they also listened to words from the Rev. A. E. Summers, secretary Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, outcome of effort of former W. C. T. U. workers. The latter (Madras Division) enjoyed having its seventh annual convention at Hyderabad, and was entertained with warm hospitality indeed. Reports, especially that of Loyal Temperance Legions, were encouraging. The Rescue Home, Bangalore, began with a fifty-rupee note and promise of house rent for six months; but faith in God abounded, and lives have been rescued from sin. A medal contest, besides other public meetings, a picturesque drive to the W. C. T. U. coffee rooms, Secunderabad, where one sister union entertained us, make pleasant memories.

The Eighth National Convention met in Poona Feb. 12-16. Mrs. C. L. R. Hoskins, National president, in the chair. Devotional exercises and usual business, reports, etc., interspersed with papers—"The Training of our Children," "Temperance in the Home," "W. C. T. U. Work in connection with the Y. W. C. A." and "Some thoughts on the Lord's Portion." Mr. Maurice Gregory, while touring in another part of the country, sent a printed address (since put into tract form) and a kind donation—several copies of his "Christian Family Life." Immodest pictures and indecent literature were discussed. A committee was empowered to open the Willard Memorial Home (for inebriates) at once.

A chart talk by Mrs. A. I. Birkett, M. D., National corresponding secretary, made a deep impression at the public meeting. The convention helped in several church services, etc. The representative character of the reception was marked. Plague raged as perhaps never before but did "not come nigh" us. Praise the Lord!

H. E. DUNHILL,
National Organizer, W. C. T. U.
12 S. Parade, Bangalore.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

A W. C. T. U. has been organized at Camden, Tenn.

The Calhoun county, Mich., W. C. T. U. held a two days' institute at Sanoma.

The Omaha W. C. T. U. is endeavoring to secure the closing of the city theaters on Sunday.

Over one hundred delegates attended the county convention in Monrovia, Cal. The sessions were very interesting.

Mrs. M. L. Herndon, president of Smith county, Texas, is now in Europe and will remain to attend the World's convention.

The W. C. T. U. of Berkley, Md., has secured a local option election for May 26. The sentiment seems to be in favor or no saloons.

Mrs. Hebinger was awarded the prize at the matron's medal contest in connection with the Bay county, Michigan, convention.

The Rochester, N. Y., unions held their quarterly rally recently. Mrs. Effie Lambert, state Y secretary, was present and spoke.

The Bushnell, Ill., union held an interesting parlor meeting with Mrs. Eli Williams. Each one present gave an item on current events.

The W. C. T. U. and the Sabbath Association united in Philadelphia, Pa., for a week of prayer for the better observance of the Sabbath.

Miss Helen Hood, editor of "The Watch-Tower," spoke on scientific temperance instruction before the Evanston (Ill.) W. C. T. U. recently.

Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, National organizer, will be the speaker at the Waukesha county, Wisconsin, convention which meets in Milwaukee, May 5 and 6.

Clark county, Ill., holds its institute in Marshall. Mrs. Anna Simmons, National organizer, and Miss Kathryn Sawyer, state Y secretary, will be the leaders.

A reception to the W. C. T. U. and its friends, of Joliet, Ill., was given by Mrs. Mersinger, of that city. A good program was presented and refreshments were served.

Mrs. M. W. Newton, National organizer, is conducting a local option campaign in Gloucester county, Virginia. It is expected the county will go "dry" by a good majority.

The Houston, Texas, union arranged a week's series of meetings for Mrs. Nannie Curtis, state organizer. Mrs. Curtis recently organized a union of thirty members at Gonzales.

Whiteside county, Illinois, held its institute at Erie, April 23 and 24. There were many interesting topics discussed. Miss Frances Ensign, of Ohio, National organizer, was in attendance.

The union of North East, Pa., gave a fountain pen and a dollar in money for the two best essays on the cigaret habit. Only boys under sixteen who were pupils in the public schools, were allowed to compete.

Judge Mann has been invited to address the East End union of Richmond, Va. He is commended for his zealous efforts in behalf of the temperance cause and his fidelity to the highest interests of society.

The Easter services of the union at Elizabeth, N. J., were led by Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, National superintendent of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days, who made an earnest and interesting address.

Mrs. Abbie B. Church, state evangelist, was in Preston, Minn., for a week recently. Her work was very successful and an advance step was gained by the opening of the Norwegian Lutheran church for an evening service.

The inter-county convention of Racine and Kenosha counties, Wisconsin, met in Racine last week. Mrs. Mary Upham, state president, and Miss Marie Brehm, president of Illinois, were present. About seventy-five delegates were in attendance.

Miss Marie Brehm, state president, was the principal speaker at the Iroquois county, Illinois, institute, at Watseka, April 13-15. The closing event of the institute was a silver medal contest. Miss Besse Shrimplin, of Effner, won the medal.

Mrs. Mary E. Teats, National evangelist, has just closed a three-months' lecture tour in Michigan. Her work added 625 new members and honoraries. Mrs. Teats now goes to Nebraska, but returns to Michigan in September for two months of work.

Union public meetings are arranged every month or two by the Ritzville, Washington, union. The meetings alternate among the various churches. A matron's contest was so successful that another will be held with contestants from among the silver haired workers.

The Y organized at Lamar, Mo., in December last with nine members, had in three months a membership of thirty-one, nine of whom were young men. The honoraries take as much interest and as active a part as the girls, all helping in the program for Memorial day.

J. B. Rayner will spend the month of May in Rusk county, Texas, delivering temperance lectures, prohibition speeches and organizing the negroes against intemperance and the saloons. He desires all papers and letters sent to him at Henderson, Rusk county, Texas.

The spring meeting of Bucks county, Pa., was held at Newhope. The anti-cigaret law recently enacted by the state was indorsed and temperance teaching urged in the Sunday-schools. Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, National superintendent of Legislation, was in attendance.

The Lucy Hayes W. C. T. U., of Minneapolis, Minn., holds a medal contest each month at the Volunteers of America hall. The meetings of the union are held at the home of the treasurer, who is the owner of a fine parrot. Polly seems to know when the temperance women are there, and in a very sedate way says, 'Hurrah for Prohibition!" "Saloons must go!"

During the last twelve years three hundred and seventy-five medal contests have been conducted by the union at Springfield, Ill. The five hundred young people who have participated have all been drilled by Mrs. Eva Munson Smith, an indefatigable worker. Since last September there have been forty-nine contests.

Mrs. E. C. Welton, one of the Nebraska organizers, recently spent several days with the union at Chadron in that state. She held a number of meetings, at one of them giving a talk on domestic science, illustrated by a demonstration in cake frosting and candy making. The stereopticon entertainment the last evening was much enjoyed.

One of the principal events of the annual meeting of the Fifth district, Mich., W. C. T. U. will be the grand gold medal contest, in which eight contestants will take part. Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, state president, is the president of this district, which is composed of Kent, Allegan, Ionia and Ottawa counties. Miss Marie Brehm, president of Illinois, will be in attendance at the convention.

The W. C. T. U. of Montreal, Canada, has protested against the proposed regulation of disorderly houses. Mayor Cochrane informed the delegation that he considered the moral view and the medical view of such matters impossible of reconciliation. He assured them he would use his influence to have the objectionable clause struck out, hoping that religious people would find a better means to check the evil.

A correspondent at Oil City, Pa., sends the following note: "Miss Belle Kearney gave her popular lecture, 'Who Is Responsible?' for the Oil City W. C. T. U. April 16. She was greeted with a large audience. We had her again the 19th, and she spoke Sunday morning to a full house in the United Presbyterian church. The climax was reached in the evening, when she spoke in the Trinity M. E. church to about twelve hundred people; subject, 'Why Are the Wheels Clogged?' She added forty-two members to our union."

In response to the offer by the local W. C. T. U. of a framed picture of Miss Willard, for the best written essay giving Miss Willard's life history, the pupils of the grammar and primary rooms, of the Watsontown, Pa., schools presented over sixty carefully prepared papers. The writers, who were all less than fifteen years of age, had carefully read "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard" and all other material which the members of the local union could furnish them. Another picture will be offered to the High school next term.

Teacher—Can you tell where the Mississippi river rises, Johnnie?

Johnnie—Along its entire length ma'am.

Milton, in his "Paradise Lost," his "Samson Agonistes," his "Sonnetts," and particularly his "Comus," shows his appreciation of the strictest temperance, and his life corresponded with his doctrine. He rarely used any intoxicating liquors. These words of his are ever memorable: "Who can be ignorant that, if the importation of wine and the use of all strong drinks were forbid, it would both rid the possibility of committing that odious vice, and men might afterwards live happily and healthfully without the use of these intoxicating liquors?"

While You Wait

Thousands Write Me And Get Well.

Why do you stay sick while an offer like this is waiting?

Why not try to get well?

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

If my way succeeds, think what it means to be well. If I fail, simply say so, and the treatment is free.

Remember two things. First, I know what this remedy will do, and the offer proves my faith in it. Second, it is apparent that I usually succeed, else the offer would ruin me. For your own sake, let me convince you.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves, which alone operate the vital organs. I have spent my life in learning how to do it. A weak organ means weak nerve power. It is like a weak engine that needs more steam. To doctor the organ is useless; what it needs is power to act. My Restorative alone brings back that power, and in most of these diseases no other way can cure.

My book will tell you why.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed)
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Special General Assembly Train to Los Angeles.

The Passenger Department of the Chicago & North-Western Railway announces that a special train has been arranged for account the General Presbyterian Assembly at Los Angeles, to leave Chica o 10.30 P. M., Wednesday, May 13th, with through Pullman sleeping cars to Los Angeles without change from Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis—Pullman standard and Pullman tourist sleeping cars from Chicago without change.

The route is over the only double track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River, through the typical western prairie country of Northern Illinois and Iowa, and via Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Leadville, Glenwood Springs, Salt Lake City and Sacramento to Los Angeles. The Special will stop a few hours for sight-seeing at Denver, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Sacramento, spending the Sabbath at Salt Lake.

Only $50 round-trip from Chicago, with correspondingly low rates from other points. For full particulars address W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED BY..

THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS, 84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.

"NEW TRUTHS FOR A NEW AGE" By Rev. JOHN PRESLAND. CONTENTS.—Why was a New Church inaugurated a hundred years ago?—The Lord's second coming an accomplished fact.—The Inspiration and Interpretation of the Word of God.—The Tri-Une God: How to understand the Divine Trinity without dividing the Divine Unity.—Man a Spiritual Being ruined by Sin—How did the Lord Jesus Christ save Man?—The Resurrection: How and When do the Dead rise?—The Judgment: When, Where and How is Man Judged!—Heaven and Hell—25 Cents. Call or address EBEN SUGDEN, New Church Book Rooms, 3 West 29th St., New York City. Send for Catalogue.

Form Character--Develop Talents of your children during sleep. "Education of Children Through Power of Thought," a 50-page book by Frances Austin Kerr, tells why and how. Concise, logical, of untold value to every parent. 25c postpaid. BOOK & SUPPLY AGENCY, Dept. E, Cynthiana, Ky.

The Flower Mission Number OF THE YOUNG CRUSADER

Is Ready for Distribution.

The number is replete with programs and material for Flower Mission Meetings, also suggestions for the Mercy work.

Price, $2.00 per 100.

Subscription Price, 25c per Year:

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOC'N CHICAGO

The Local Union.

IN response to the request for a ceremony for the reception of members, samples of services that have been used with good effect have been received from Akron, Colo., Lake Placid, N. Y., and Harvard, Neb. All of them are interesting and could be used with good effect.

Perhaps the one best suited to the purpose comes from Mrs. Alice C. Brown, president of Florida W. C. T. U. It is composed almost entirely of the words of Frances E. Willard, and will probably be largely used among our unions desiring such an exercise. It is given here in complete form, the quotation marks showing Miss Willard's words.

This editor advises, however, a good rehearsal with it, before it is given to new members.

Order for the Reception of Members Into the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

HYMN.

SCRIPTURE READING: I Cor. 1:20—31.

PRAYER.

SONG.

PRESIDENT: Before we proceed to business or listen to reports, our new members will be formally received that they may take part with us.

The first vice-president, Mrs. —— ——, will please present the candidates for membership by name, after which the union will rise and stand while we repeat our pledge.

PLEDGE: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider,* and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

PRESIDENT: We, Christian women of ———, conscious of the great evils and dangers of intemperance, believe it to be our duty to unite our efforts for its extinction, and for the entire prohibition of the liquor traffic. That we may the more successfully prosecute this work, we have banded ourselves together into a Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

We welcome these dear sisters, who have come to join us in this sacred cause, and ask them to wear the white ribbon as the badge of loyalty, and to lift up their hearts with us to God at the noontide hour of prayer that He will protect our homes, that His beauty may be upon us, and that He will establish the work of our hands.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT: Our gifted Miss Willard said: "Alone we can do little. Separated, we are the units of weakness but aggregated we become batteries of power. The fingers of the hand can do little alone, but correlated into a fist they become formidable. The plank borne here and there by the sport of the waves is an image of imbeciliiy; but frame a thousand planks of oak into a hull, put in your engine with its heart of fire, fit out your ship, and it shall cross at a right angle those same waves to the port it has purposed to attain. We want all those like minded with us who would put down the saloon, exalt the home, redeem manhood, and uplift womankind to join hands with us for organized work," assuring them of a hearty welcome and of the truth, which we have tried and proved, that "the joy of life is doing good according to a plan."

SUPT. EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT: Welcome to this sisterhood which "believes that holy women of God speak as they are moved by the Holy Spirit today, even as they did in ancient time when Miriam sang, Deborah ruled, and Anna prophesied. The crusade fire was fed by heavenly inspirations; the Spirit of God brooded in the air and men felt His presence as they walked the streets. The church bell called, "Come," and thousands of degraded men were welcomed within its hospitable walls; they followed the praying bands from the saloons to the altars of God. With such an origin and history the white ribbon movement is, in the widest sense, a new birth of Christian womanhood into home and foreign missionary work."

SUPT. OF PURITY: Welcome. "We do not for one moment admit that women have been at heart indifferent to the shame and sorrow of such women as the department of Purity is helping to a better life. Let no one say we have not cared—rather let it be said, we have not dared." But now our watch word is "a white life for two," because both nature and Christianity have prescribed one code of morals for men and women, and we must help our world to adopt this standard.

SUPT. SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION: Welcome sisters. You have come to help change our system of education so "that the course of study for every pupil, from the kindergarten toddler to the high school graduate, shall be grounded where God grounds our very being—on natural law;" until pupils shall be taught "the laws of health first of all, since their physical being is the firm base of the whole pyramid of character;" until the alcohol and nicotine poisons and unwholesome food, unnatural dress, bad ventilation and ill-proportioned exercise are banished, and everybody shall be indeed a temple of the Holy Spirit.

PRESIDENT: Let every member now rise, and we will repeat together, "Welcome, sisters, come and work with us for God and Home and every land."

PRAYER: Evangelistic Superintendent.

SONG: "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

*State and local unions can insert "as a beverage" if they wish.

$19.00 To Boston and Return $19.00

With membership fee of $2.00 added, account of annual meeting of National Educational Association. Tickets will be on sale via the Nickel Plate Road July 2d to 5th, inclusive, good returning from July 8th to 12th, inclusive, without being deposited with Joint Agent. Additional limit to return not later than September 1st can be obtained by depositing return portion of ticket with Joint Agent and payment of 50 cents for execution. Superior train service and excellent dining-car meals, on American Club Plan, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00; also a la carte service. Write John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., room 298, Chicago, for time of departure of trains from Chicago and other detailed information.

Memorial Service.

TO the local union too often is given the sad privilege of assisting in the last service for a loved sister.

The Harvard Neb., union sends an appropriate service which will doubtless help some other union.

PRESIDENT: (at head of casket, on the right) In our affliction let us hear the words of Holy Writ:

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

"Like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him."

"Behold, I show you a mystery. We shall all sleep, but we shall all be changed, for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

VICE PRESIDENT: (standing at the left of President) "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us, and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it."

PRESIDENT: "I heard a voice from Heaven saying: 'Write, blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth.'"

MEMBERS: (standing in semi-circle) "Yea saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

PRESIDENT: "Thine eyes shall see the King in His beauty, and thou shalt be secure because there is hope."

SECRETARY: (standing at foot of casket and facing President) "Therefore our hearts shall be glad for them; our flesh also shall rest in hope."

PRESIDENT: "And the sun shall not smite them by day, nor the moon by night, for there shall be no night there."

TREASURER: (at the right of Secretary) "And they shall see His face and His name shall be in their foreheads."

PRESIDENT: Into light and rest, out of labor and trials, our sister of the white ribbon has gone. Her name will stand upon the records of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union as a reminder that we, too, shall soon be called from labor to reward. Let us close up the broken place in our ranks with a more tender love for each other, and a more earnest service for humanity; for the days are taking us all as on wings to the end, and we, too, must part, even as our sister is separated from us.

(Members pass around depositing floral offerings.)

Choir sings, "One sweetly solemn thought."

How to Increase the Interest of Members.

WHILE the membership contest is always of absorbing interest, and is a great aid in gaining new members, there are other plans for contests that help to keep unions wide awake and intent on advancement. The union that does not move forward is apt to fall back, and this contest given us by Lafayette, Ind., must impel the members onward.

The membership is divided into two sides by choosing up as for a spelling match. An umpire should be appointed who will be on neither side. She must be present at each meeting, and keep in a book containing the names of the two sides, their respective credits, giving each member the credit due her at each meeting. As new members come in they will be chosen by the side whose turn it is to choose.

The following are the points and credits:

Points.	Credits.
1. Being present at regular meeting	1
2. Response to Roll Call	1
3. Taking part in discussion	1
4. Visiting a sick or new member	1
5. Bringing a visitor to meeting	5
6. Taking THE UNION SIGNAL	10
7. Taking "The Young Crusader"	10
8. Paying Dues	10
9. Obtaining a regular or an honorary member	10
10. Wearing white ribbon at meetings	5

At the close of the contest the winners are entertained at the expense of the losing side. A time limit is fixed by the union when the contest begins.

We would advise adding to the above, ten credits for taking the state paper, in states where it is not sent to every member, as is the case in Indiana.

Original plans and methods are welcomed by every local union. Entertainments, socials, parlor and public meetings are constantly being held, and wherever one is of unique interest, of original makeup, of unusual style THE UNION SIGNAL would like it to help other unions.

Please send to

"The Local Union,"
THE UNION SIGNAL,
184 La Salle St.,
Chicago.

How to Kill a Union.

Attend only occasionally.

Never make preparation.

Never pray for its success.

Talk to outsiders of how little it accomplishes.

Give as reason for non-attendance, "They do not do enough."

Encourage jealousy toward the helpful ones.

If you cannot manage the whole, refuse to countenance any of its undertakings.

Give dues only and not yourself.—Exchange.

Too Hard

Soap-washing is too much for any woman. Ask a good doctor what he thinks of it—long stooping over the washtub, breathing dirty steam and working as you have to work. How much easier, pleasanter, healthier PEARLINE washing is! It is science applied to cleaning of clothes. Doesn't the saving of work and money appeal to you?

PEARLINE 694
is real economy

Grape Juice as a Preventive of Typhoid.

THE constant research and discoveries of bacteriologists are not only arming us against disease germs but are gradually divesting all forms of bacteria of many of their terrors.

A few weeks ago Dr. Ferguson, a London bacteriologist, announced the results of extended experiments with lemon juice as a destroyer of typhoid bacilli. As a result of numerous tests Dr. Ferguson declared his belief that a few drops of lemon juice in a glass of water would suffice to destroy or render harmless the typhoid germs already taken into the human system. The announcement was promptly followed by experiments in this country, notably in the laboratory of the department of public health in this city, and the deductions of Dr. Ferguson were amply sustained.

It appears, however, that lemon juice is not the only substance that will check the germination of typhoid microbes and deprive them of all vitality. Experiments in the New York bacteriological laboratory, as well as in the laboratory of our own department of public health, have demonstrated that unfermented grape juice is even more efficacious than lemon juice in destroying the vitality and checking the growth of typhoid germs, while its use is not attended with any of the dangers that are incident to the continued drinking of lemon juice.

That lemon juice is harmful to some stomachs when taken continuously, is well known to physicians. Not every stomach can receive the acid of the lemon, even though greatly diluted, without injury or discomfort. Pure grape juice, however, is not only harmless but highly nutritious. Its use at meal time is invariably attended with beneficial results, it being very rich in nutrient, blood-making elements. It is worthy of note, however, that the bacteriologists lay great stress upon the purity and clearness of the juice, claiming that adulterations or dilutions tend to render it ineffective as a destroyer of typhus germs.

If future experiments tend to more fully confirm the correctness of this theory in regard to the juice of the grape it offers a most agreeable and nourishing preventive of the most deaded of all germ diseases.—"The Chicago Tribune."

About Your Vacation.

Little journeys to lake resorts and mountain homes will be more popular this summer than ever. Many have already arranged their summer tours via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway and many more are going to do likewise. Booklets that will help you to plan your vacation trip have just been published, and will be sent on receipt of postage, as follows:

"Colorado-California," six cents.

"In Lakeland" and "Summer Homes," six cents.

"Lakes Okoboji and Spirit Lake," four cents.

F. A. MILLER, Gen. Pass. Ag't, Chicago.

Books Used in the

L. T. L. DIPLOMA AND SEAL COURSES.

When ordering for the Sunday School or L. T. L. Libraries make selections from these.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."
Anna A. Gordon.
Price, - - - - - $2.00
Postpaid.

Danesbury House. Price, $1.00.
Life of John B. Gough. Price, $1.50.
Reminiscences of Neal Dow. Price, $2.50.
Foundation Rock. By Sarah M. DeLine, price, $1.25.
Straight Shots at Young Men. By Washington Gladden, price, 35 cents.
Noble Lives and Noble Deeds. By Edward Horton, price, 50 cents.
Freshman and Senior. By L. Burton Wright, price, $1.50.
Up From Slavery. By Booker T. Washington, price, $1.50.
Pussy Meow and Her Friends. By M. Louise Patterson, price, 70 cents.
Beautiful Joe. By Marshall Saunders, price, 30 cents.
Strike at Shanes. Price, 30 cents.
Loveliness. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, price, $1.00.
Bird Life. By Frank M. Chapman, price, $2.00.
Every Day Birds. By Bradford Torrey, price, $1.20.
In the Days of Audubon. By Hezekiah Butterworth, price, $1.50.

Nineteen Beautiful Years.

By Frances E. Willard.
Price, 60 Cents.

How the Other Half Lives. By Jacob Riis, price, $1.25.
Mervale Eastman, Socialist. By Albion Tourgee, price, $1.50.
St. Rockwell's Little Brother. By Mrs. H. A. Cheever, price, $1.50.
The Fall of the Staincliffes. By Alfred Colbeck, price, 35 cents.
Life of Mrs. S. M. I. Henry. By Mrs. Mary Rossiter, price, $1.50.
A Singular Life. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, price, 50 cents.
Black Rock. By Ralph Connor, price, 25c.
Christian Citizenship. By Carlos Martyn, price, 75 cents.
Abraham Lincoln. By Joseph Choate, price, 35 cents.
Protection of Native Races Against Intoxicants and Opium. By W. F. Craft, price, 75 cents.
Mr. Lex. By Catherine Waugh McCulloch, price, 35 cents.
Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine. By Martha M. Allen, price, $1.25

Temperance Helps For Primary Teachers.
By L. Mabel Freese.
Price, 50 Cents.

All Books sent postpaid upon receipt of price.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

ABOUT WOMEN

The directors' meeting of the Mothers' Congress will be held in Detroit May 5-8.

No woman is employed in any capacity in the great banking house of J. P. Morgan.

Mrs. Mae Guthrie Tongier will speak during May under the auspices of the Prohibition state committee of California.

Mrs. Helene Hoppe has been elected president of the women's chorus of the Schwaebischer Saengerbund, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss Rosalie Loew has applied for membership in the exclusive Bar Association of New York. There is but one question as to her eligibility—she is a woman.

The anniversary breakfast of the Prospect Club, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was a brilliant affair. Mrs. Charles M. Dow, president of the New York state federation, was the speaker.

Miss Mary M. Adamson, well known as a writer of children's songs, has been appointed by the government as inspector of kindergarten work in the schools of Cape Colony.

A party of girls from Smith College will explore the Grand Canyon of the Colorado next summer. But two parties have ever passed through the entire length of this canyon.

Miss Carrie E. Jones is said to be the only woman machinist in Chicago. She is an expert at the trade, and gives orders to the hundred men under her concerning the minute details of difficult work.

An association of effort on the part of various women's societies in Massachusetts, is being directed to secure the appointment of a commission to inquire into the needs of the adult blind persons in that state.

No other woman in this country, and possibly in the world, owns so much land as Mrs. King, of Corpus Christi, Texas. Her holdings are not less than 1,300,000 acres and she has about 65,000 cattle grazing on her broad domain.

Mrs. John Gerken will have the largest string of horses of any woman exhibitor at the Boston horse show. Mrs. Gerkin has bred numerous prize winners, which she has developed and educated herself. Last year she won 166 trophies.

The writer of the famous poem beginning "Little drops of water, little grains of sand," Mrs. Julia A. Carney, celebrated her eightieth birthday at Galesburg, Ill., April 20. The poem was written in 1845 while Mrs. Carney was a teacher in the Boston schools.

Miss Taka Nawa, daughter of a well known Japanese editor and entomologist, is herself a successful entomologist. She paints with skill and has assisted her father in photographing the life histories of most of the insects injurious to Japanese agriculture.

Misses Elsie Ward, Enid Yardill, Janet Scudder and Melba Beatrice Wilson, all of New York, have submitted models for the bronze fountain to be placed on the World's Fair grounds, at St. Louis, by the W. C. T. U. women in the Louisiana Purchase states.

Miss Anna Caulfield, one of the best known lecturers on art in America, lectured at the Art Institute in Chicago, April 14. Her talk is illustrated with colored slides, made especially for her from original paintings in the private and public collections in America.

Mrs. I. N. Sanborn, of Pomona, Cal., has been elected a member of the board of education. There was an exciting contest and an exceptionally large vote was polled. This is the first time, in the history of the city, that a woman has been elected to any municipal office.

The Women's Presbyterian Board of Missions of the Northwest has its headquarters in Chicago. It has fourteen states and about 2,500 societies under its care. The society supports 116 missionaries. Its annual meeting was held at the Chicago headquarters, April 21-23.

A recent session of the German medical congress gravely discussed the advisability of opening the profession to women. It was unanimously decided that medicine would suffer in the public esteem if the step was taken. And yet there are many women physicians in Germany.

Dr. Annie G. Lyle, of San Francisco, has been appointed assistant to Dr. Esrech, of the University of Vienna, one of the most noted specialists on the diseases of children. Dr. Lyle has given much attention to the subject and well deserves the high honor conferred upon her.

Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, though in her seventy-eighth year, has just returned to her home at El Mora, N. J., from a journey up the Nile and to the Holy Land. She went in a tourist party of 400, unaccompanied by any of her family, and had not a moment's trouble, even from seasickness.

The Ladies' Helping Hand Association, of New York, closed its thirty-eighth year of work with a feast to its beneficiaries. Two hundred and twenty-five women were entertained, and in order that the mothers might be free from domestic cares, their sixty-eight children were feasted in the kindergarten room.

By the timely warning of Mrs. Margaret Hannigan Emmett, of Bronxville, N. Y., a serious railway accident was averted. With umbrella and lunch basket waving she signalled the train to stop. As it was, ten people were slightly injured by a rear end collision. But for the presence of mind of Mrs. Emmett it is probable a whole car load would have been killed.

The Nebraska Woman Suffrage Association is carrying on an active field campaign. The services of Miss Gail Laughlin, of New York, have been secured for a two months' lecture tour. Miss Laughlin is a graduate of Wellesley, where she received the highest honors. She then took a law course at Cornell. Her keen logic, legal training and powerful oratory have secured for her a high place on the suffrage platform.

Mrs. Rose Fanning, one of the best known women in St. Louis, is dead. Mrs. Fanning had been for forty years a public school teacher and during that time had been absent but nine days from her post of duty. Many men who became prominent received their first instruction from Mrs. Fanning, among them being Sol Smith Russell, the actor, who died a year ago. At the time of her death Mrs. Fanning was principal of the Pestalozzi school, to which position she was appointed in 1874.

The ninth biennial convention of the Young Women's Christian Associations affiliated with the American committee, met at Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 15-19. Of the 275 delegates present five were from the Pacific coast, two from Canada, two from London, England, and three from India. The needs of the work in various foreign fields were eloquently presented. Mrs. Margaret Sangster, of New York, Hon. Emily Kinnaird, and Miss Annie M. Reynolds of London, and Miss Minnie Collins, of Calcutta, India, were among the speakers. The record of the work done in the last two years evidenced the vital need that is being met by the Association. A most comprehensive policy for the coming two years was outlined. Among other things the adequate endowment of each department of the national work and the immediate establishment of a permanent training school for association secretaries is proposed. The demands of the work are now so varied that specialization has become imperative.

Take a Trip

Over the Nickel Plate Road and be convinced of its superior train service. Solid through daily express trains between Chicago, Ft. Wayne, Kindlay, Fostoria, Erie, Buffalo, New York City and Boston. American Club Meals, ranging in price from 35c. to $1.00, served in Nickel Plate dining-cars; also service a la carte. Rates always the lowest. No excess fare charged on any train on the Nickel Plate Road. Chicago depot, Harrison St. and Fifth Ave. City Ticket Offices, 111 Adams St. and Auditorium Annex. John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., Room 298, Chicago. 'Phone Central 2057.

Fat Folks

BEFORE—267 lbs. AFTER—180 lbs.

Mrs. E. Williams, 55 Chatham St., Rochester, N. Y., lost 87 pounds, 8 in. bust, 10 in. waist, 20 in. in abdominal measure, on a 6 months' course of the Dr. Snyder Obesity Treatment.

DR. SNYDER guarantees his treatment to be perfectly harmless in every particular. No starving, no detention from business, no wrinkles or discomfort. A 40-page booklet, telling all about it, free. Call or write to-day.

O. W. F. SNYDER, M. D.,
21 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.
or 156 Fifth Avenue, New York

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Pearl Ring Free

Cut out this ad. and send it with name and address for one to A. R. WEHOSKEY, Providence, R.I.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Every Local W. C. T. U.

Whether newly organized or many years in the work, should possess and study

Do Everything,

By Frances E. Willard.

An invaluable hand book for ALL WHITE RIBBONERS Containing full information of the work in all departments

Price, 35 Cents

AND

The Helping Hand

By Caroline B. Buell

Which tells HOW to organize, and assists ORGANIZED unions to conduct their meetings in the most orderly manner . . . . . .

Price, 10 Cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year ..... $ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address 1.00
100 of this issue ..... .50

Subject for May Reading,

Unfermented Sacramental Wine

By Mrs. Lillian F. Lewis.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.

(Continued from page 6.)

"Poor young man! I wouldn't let on to him nor to anyone living, for ever so. What a shame now, for to go for to do such a thing!" said the good woman, heartily. "Then you don't think it's anything serious, sir?"

"Oh, no, I think not! He'll probably be all right in the morning. Good night!"

He called in the morning early enough to find Hugh still in bed with a racking headache. He looked ill and miserable, but the doctor went through the ceremonies of examining his pulse and tongue without directly meeting his eye.

"A little too quick; yes. The tongue? Thank you. Rather furred. That will do. What the devil have you been doing to get yourself into this state, eh?"

Mrs. Foote had closed the door upon them, and with the last words he fixed his eyes suddenly and sharply upon Hugh. To his relief the young man met his look in a frank, if shamefaced way.

"I was drunk. Of course, you know that," he said, in a low voice.

"Well, yes, of course I do. How in the name of goodness—your goodness—did it happen?" He spoke roughly, but, all the same, he was pleased at being so frankly met.

Hugh's pallor suddenly changed into a deep crimson, but he met the keen eyes steadily still.

"I was with some friends, and they must have played me a trick," he exclaimed, readily. 'They gave me something. I thought it was all right, but when I got outside—" He hid his face in his hands, and burst into tears.

The keen look on Dr. Mann's face gave place to one of amusement, almost bordering on contempt.

"They didn't content themselves with giving you a little, anyway. Come, don't be a fool! Perhaps there is no great harm done. What I can't understand is your getting into that state without knowing what the stuff was.

He spoke with contempt, but without suspicion, as Hugh instantly realized.

"I see now that I was a fool," he said, dejectedly; "but it wasn't till I got outside—" He stopped again in confusion and distress.

"I see. Do you think you were noticed? How did you get home?"

Hugh mastered himself with difficulty.

"No one saw me. It was a dark night, and I kept away from the lights. When I reached the village I waited until Mrs. Foote was likely to be out, and managed to get in and upstairs without being seen. After that I seemed somehow to get worse, and I suppose I made a row. And now—now"—with another outburst—"it's all up with me."

"Rubbish!" said Dr. Mann, testily. "It seems to me that you've had most uncommon luck. Your friends, whoever they were, played you a most rascally trick, and how you could be such a fool as not to find it out in time passes my comprehension; but beyond that, I don't see that you have been to blame, and I may say that I am heartily glad of it. I should have been sorry had I been compelled to think otherwise. Now, let me ask you this: Will your conscience compel you to go and blaze this affair all over the parish?"

A ray of hope seemed to dawn upon the unfortunate curate's face.

"If you really think that it isn't necessary"—he began, hesitatingly.

"Necessary? Of course it isn't necessary, unless you think it incumbent upon you to turn an unfortunate accident into a precious piece of scandal."

"I am bound, of course, to tell Mr. Boyd?" suggested Hugh, tentatively.

"As you please. I shouldn't. It seems to me that the fewer taken into your confidence with regard to the success of a disgraceful joke of that kind the better. Mrs. Foote fully understands that you were seized with sudden illness in town, and that some officious fool administered whisky—a spoonful or so, mind you; just enough, in fact, to scent your breath. The rest was delirium, the result of cerebral excitement, caused by overwork," added the doctor, pointedly.

Hugh colored violently but said nothing.

"In my opinion," pursued the doctor, carelessly, "you had better let me tell Boyd as much, and no more."

Hugh hesitated.

"You think that would be right?"

"Why not? You have explained the incident in a manner perfectly satisfactory to me, and I counsel you not to turn a mere incident into a parochial scandal. Please yourself, of course; but I credit you with sufficient common sense to hold your tongue. You are not likely to be caught a second time in the same way. Indeed, if you are so easily overcome, you probably do well to abstain."

Hugh hesitated still, but the doctor saw him ready to yield, and clinched the matter.

"Come, get up, man! Go for a good long walk, and forget all about it."

"That I shall never do!" groaned Hugh. "How could I ever again speak at a temperance meeting?"

"With much more insight than before, I should imagine," said the doctor, with a laugh, as he arose from his seat on the bed.

Somehow, he liked the young fellow all the better for the accident that had befallen him, and felt positively anxious to save him any unnecessary humiliation. He was glad, if secretly surprised, to have had so little difficulty in persuading him to keep his own counsel. Boyd was probably of sufficiently liberal mind to regard the incident (judiciously represented) in a common sense light, but it would be rash to assume as much of anyone else in the place. It was well for the inebriated curate that he had been shrewd enough to elude observation. For the rest, the doctor was distinctly of opinion that what little humiliation he had already suffered would do him good. With rough kindliness he again bade Hugh go about his business and think no more about it.

"For the sake of appearance," he added, "I'll look in again tonight. Come; pluck up a spirit, and don't look so miserable, man!"

He went downstairs smiling, with a little secret relish of the joke, and with never a suspicion that the ingenious young curate had steadily lied to him. With characteristic caution he went at once to Mr. Boyd, who heard with sympathetic concern of the indisposition that had attacked his curate in town, and was quietly amused at the doctor's account of the young man's consternation on discovering the nature of the remedy applied.

"He's awfully cut up about it. Don't mention it to him unless he speaks of it of his own accord, will you?"

"Oh, I shan't mention it," said Mr. Boyd, still smiling; "and I don't much think that he will."

He was right. Hugh made no mention of the matter to his vicar. In point of fact, his most emphatic comment on the subject was addressed to his own reflection in the glass. It took the form of a hearty curse, followed up, after a scowling pause, by:

"I hope you quite understand what your precious experiments have brought you to—you liar! Grandad in the making; that's about what you are," he added, shudderingly, after another pause. "My God! to think that I, Hugh Brotherton, should have come to this!"

The immediate result of this ebullition of self-contempt was the scathing sermon on the ultimate fate of hypocrites and liars that spread mutual distrust throughout the parish.

"He've 'a found some of 'em out, sure enough," said Enoch, with gloomy satisfaction. But even he would have liked to know "for sartin" on which particular individuals Mr. Brotherton had his eye.

"Let's hope that they knows well enough in their own minds, for he dealt with 'em faithfully," he said, giving up his fruitless speculations with a reluctant sigh.

Meantime, after a period of despair, Hugh pulled himself together, attacked his work with renewed vigor and endeared himself more and more to the members of his flock.

On no one was the effect of his earnest ministry more marked than on Mrs. Langley. The doctor observed the fact with a grim mixture of amusement and disdain.

"It's all right, so far," he said, grudgingly; "but for goodness' sake, Ethel, don't go and make a fool either of yourself or of him."

"I shall of myself if I don't take care. I'm really gone on that boy," she said, defiantly; "but not in the way you mean. Don't be so silly, Bob. How horrid you are!"

"Then take care to let him understand that it isn't in that way, that's all," said her brother, pointedly. "If he wasn't young and impressionable, I shouldn't be altogether sorry to see you developing an interest in somebody or something good."

"Oh, I have my better moments," said the lady, lightly; "but you always were a little hard upon me, Bob."

(To be continued.)

The Nickel Plate Road

is the short line to the East and the service equal to the best. You will save time and money by traveling over this line. It has three through daily express trains, with through vestibuled sleeping-cars, and American Club Meals, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00, are served in Nickel Plate dining-cars; also a la carte service. Try a trip over the Nickel Plate Road and you will find the service equal to any between Chicago and the East.

Chicago depot: Harrison St. and Fifth Ave. City Ticket Offices: 111 Adams St. and Auditorium Annex. John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., Room 298, Chicago. Phone Central 2057.

Resolutions Adopted at Meeting of the American Association for the Study of Inebriety, Held in Boston, Mass., December 18, 1902.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this association that the indiscriminate sale and use of patent medicines and so-called "cures" for the alcohol and opium habits are not infrequently the cause of the formation as well as the continuance of these habits.

Therefore be it resolved, That this association memorialize the proper authorities not to issue any patent or proprietary right to any one desiring said patent or right for any remedy or medicine or "cure" or any compound whatever containing alcohol, opium, or other narcotic drug in which there is danger of habituation from its use.

Resolved, That all proprietary or patent medicines for which a patent is issued have a label on which are distinctly printed the ingredients of said preparation; said label being placed or affixed to the bottle, box, or wrapper in which said preparation is dispensed; and furthermore, that a heavy penalty of fine or imprisonment, or both, be imposed upon any one who may manufacture, prepare, buy, or sell, or have for sale in stock, all such preparations not duly patented and labeled under conditions specified.

Resolved, That we reaffirm and indorse a resolution passed at a meeting of this society held March 23, 1893, in reference to the licensing and proper inspection of all institutions for the care and treatment of inebriates, morphia habitues, or other form of narcomania.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the medical and secular press.*

*Note—These resolutions were read by Dr. Crothers, seconded by Dr. Rodbaugh, and unanimously carried by vote of the association.

Opportunities for Heroism at Any Time.

A number of years ago Frances E. Willard made a temperance address in Boston. During her stay in the city, a young man happened to call upon Wendell Phillips, who entertained him until late in the night telling of the old abolitionist days, and showing him relics of their struggle. As the young man arose to depart, he said to Mr. Phillips:

"Mr. Phillips, I think if I had lived in your time I would have been heroic, too."

Mr. Phillips, who had gone to the door with his caller, pointed to the saloons down the street, and his voice was keen with indignation.

"Young man," he said, "you are living in my time, and in God's time. Did you hear Frances Willard last night? Be assured that no man could have been heroic then who is not heroic now. Good night."—The Temperance Cause.

Exert your talents and distinguish yourself, and don't think of retiring from the world until the world will be sorry that you retire. I hate a fellow whom pride, or cowardice, or laziness, drives into a corner, and who does nothing when he is there but sit and growl. Let him come out as I do, and bark.—Dr. S. Johnson.

If You Desire

Authentic Information

...READ...

The Mormon Menace

BY

SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D., LL.D.

AND

HELEN FALLOWS, A.M.

Most Conclusive and Convincing

Price, postpaid, 25 cents

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION

CHICAGO.

Temperance Helps FOR Primary Teachers

By L. MABEL FREESE.

Introduction by Mary S. Snow.

A HAND BOOK FOR EDUCATORS AND MOTHERS.

Replete with Suggestions, Outlines and Temperance Information.

Cloth Bound, Price 50 Cents.

"It answers the question often implied: 'How can we teach children temperance without dwelling on vice?' There is no book that mothers and teachers will find more helpful in instructing young children along the lines of health and temperance."

"The stories and poems charm children who can read them for themselves."

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOC'N,

184 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Among the Latest Leaflets

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law. Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Control System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 99.
Duties of W. C. T. U. Secretaries.
Susanna M. D. Fry.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 134.
How to make Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School Helpful and Interesting.
Mrs. Clare E. Beede.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 182.
A Study in L. T. L. Methods.
Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

Department Leaflet, No. 192.
What Makes a Good Soldier.
Lord Roberts.

Department Leaflet, No. 222.
How School Savings Banks are Run.
Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 242.
How to Win.
Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
.....CHICAGO.

Old Rum Days in Maine.

(The following article which appeared in the Bangor "Record" during the recent resubmission campaign in Maine contains some very interesting figures.)

NOW, while the air in Maine is full of excited talk about rum and whiskey, prohibition, resubmission and high license, and the greatest of all liquor wars is in full swing, there comes from Orrington, on the Penobscot River a few miles below Bangor, an echo of the good old rum-and-molasses days, coupled with the positive assertion that prohibition has been a blessing to Orrington, if to no other town in the state. This is the statement of H. N. Brooks, a prominent manufacturer in Orrington, who has been studying up past conditions there as revealed by the ancient account books of his great-grandfather. Mr. Brooks says:

"As there is a great deal being said pro and con about prohibition, perhaps you would like to hear what prohibition has done and is doing for the town of Orrington, where I live. Years ago, before there was any railroad from Bangor westward, the traders went to Boston once or twice a year for their goods. There were at that time two stores in this village of Orrington, supplying about 500 people. On their return from Boston the traders would bring among other things several hogsheads of New England and West Indian rum, a number of pipes and barrels of brandy, wine, gin, etc., in all about 1,800 gallons, for a year's supply. I don't know what was the appearance of the town at that time, but it can easily be imagined.

TOWN DRY AS HERRING BONE.

"To-day, and for over fifty years, there has been no place in town for the sale of liquor, and in all Orrington there is scarcely a dilapidated house, unless it may be some rocky, abandoned hillside farm. The people may not be very wealthy, but a large number are well-to-do, and nine-tenths of them live in neat, thrifty-looking places, so that it is a pleasure to drive through the town. This, I think, cannot be truthfully said of any license town. I don't pretend to say that we are all honest, or that there is no one in town who drinks, but a majority—a very much larger majority than if we had an open saloon here, no matter how high the license—do not drink.

"The other day I was looking through an account book of my great-grandfather, who kept a store at Bartlett's Point, in Orrington, and from it I made a copy of part of one man's account, just as it appeared, bad spelling and all. Here it is:

A SAMPLE ACCOUNT.

Thomas Smith, Dr.

		l.	s.	d.
By foot of your account, page 62		56	10	8
Oct., 1806,	2 qts. rum, 4
	1 gal. molasses, 4-2		8	3
	2 qts. rum, 4,
	1 qt. rum, 2,		6
	2 qts. rum, 4,
	3 bush. apples, 12,		16
	2 qts. rum,		4
22	2 qts. rum, 4,
	2 gal. molasses, 8,
	2 qts. rum, 4,		16
	1 lb. shugar,		1	2
	1 yd. Baze, 3-2,
	2 qts. rum, 3-6,		6	8
	2 lbs. nails, 2-1,
	1 yd. cloth, 3-6,		5	7
Nov. 11	For two Wastcort partons and botons and twist,		18
	38 lbs. fish, 7,
	2 qts. rum, 3-9,		10	9
14	1 gal. molasses, 4,
	2 qts. rum, 3-9,		7	9
21	2 qts. rum, 3-9,
	2 oz. indigo, 3,		6	9
	1 bbl. salt, 7-6,
	3 yds. cotton, 7,		14	6
	2 qts. rum, 3-9,
	2 lbs. purkey, 2-1,		5	7
		58	16

"The bill runs on through the book until it amounts to over £100, and in the final casting up it appears that £25 were still due—and, I suppose, still remain due. This will compare favorably with about half the accounts in the book, so it would appear that about one-half the people, taking my great-grandfather's customers as fair examples, used rum freely, while others drank moderately and some not at all. It is said by some that the liquor of those days was purer and better than that which we have now, but from what old people tell me, enough of it would make a man drunk, and I guess they usually drank enough.

INCREASED COMFORTS FOR FAMILY.

"Nowadays in Orrington the cost of this drink and the time lost from 'not being able to see straight' goes to provide increased comforts for the family, improvements on the farm and other good things. We in the country don't want license, high or low. If in the cities there is not enough moral energy to enforce the prohibitory law, is it likely that they would be able to enforce the moral features of the license law? I am not a temperance crank, but I think we had better give our prohibitory law more support, although it is not perfect, than to go back to something worse."

Why Did He Begin?

"Mamma," said little Harry, as he was looking out of the window, "Why does that man stagger through the streets?"

"Because he is drunk."

"But, mamma, why does he not stop drinking?"

"Either because he cannot, or he thinks he cannot."

"Well, then," said the innocent little one, looking into his mother's eyes with all earnestness, "why did he ever begin?"

What a work is here suggested for parents and teachers—to train children in such habits of total abstinence that they will never take the first drink.—Selected.

Very Popular Plan.

The route between Chicago and New York by way of the Lackawanna Railroad is growing in popularity. It takes people through some of the finest scenery in America, over splendid roadbeds, in excellent cars that are noted for their fine riding qualities. The dining-car service is worked on the principle of order what you want and pay for nothing else—a plan that is very popular. You may have your meals as cheap or as expensive as you please. Service is on the European plan. Individual club breakfasts or suppers, calculated to please the most fastidious, are furnished at a minimum cost of 35 cents. Write Geo. A. Cullen, G. W. P. A., 108 Adams St., Chicago, for full information.

God's Whiteness.

Rev. F. B. Meyer tells this little incident, which occurred during his ministry:

"Once, when I was paying parochial calls, I dropped in on a washerwoman who had just got out a line of clothes. I congratulated my friend because they looked so white. So, very much encouraged by her pastor's kind words, she asked him to have a cup of tea, and we sat down. Whilst we were taking the tea, the sky clouded and there was a snow-storm; and, as I came out, the white snow lay everywhere, and I said to her:

"'Your washing does not look quite so clean as it did.'

"'Ah!' she said, 'the washing is right enough; but what can stand against God Almighty's white?'

"So you may think that you are clean, because you have never seen God. When you see God, your holiest day will seem to be imperfect; you will abhor yourself, and repent in dust and ashes, and you will need to say: 'Forgive me my debts as I forgive my debtors.'"—Exchange.

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.
J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS,
39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department

Union Signal

184 La Salle Street

CHICAGO

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

Signal Notes.

Covington, Ky., has a new charter by which the saloons will be abolished.

The Fire and Police boards of Denver, Colo., have closed every gambling house in the city, according to press reports.

The brewers of Ohio, in an effort to stem the rising local option tide, have decided to aid the Sunday-closing laws in the smaller towns.

By the close vote of thirteen to eleven, the board of supervisors declared local option to have carried in Montcalm county, Michigan.

Because of a strong fight by the people of Carpintena, Cal., this will in future be a prohibition town, the only one in Santa Barbara county.

New York is sending Deputy Police Commissioner Ebstein to Germany to study the excise question and learn how to handle the Sunday saloons.

The Maryland Court of Appeals has declared illegal the law passed by the last session of the legislature which provided for local option in certain districts.

Because the saloons of Benwood, W. Va., were closed on Sunday there were no drunken people seen on the streets, and old residents pronounced it the quietest Sunday in years.

State honors and a prize of twenty-five dollars were won by Warren H. Barber, of Ripon, at the annual contest of the Wisconsin Inter-Collegiate Prohibition Association. His subject was "Patriotism and Prohibition."

The first sentence of imprisonment for selling liquors to minors was passed by the Court of Special Sessions, of New York, last month. The judge said: "This traffic must stop. In the future we will take more drastic measures."

Governor Odell, of New York, has signed the bill which prohibits the employment of any child under fourteen years of age in factories, and that no woman, or minor under eighteen years shall work more than ten hours a day.

The new village council of Bear Lake, Mich., has voted unanimously to reject the bonds presented by saloonkeepers applying for license. This was done after an earnest discussion concerning the moral effect of the open saloon.

The Presbytery of Kalamazoo, Mich., at its annual meeting adopted strong resolutions urging the use of unfermented wine at communions, and asking the general assembly to include a temperance department in every Sunday-school paper published by the denomination.

The city authorities of Plattsmouth, Neb., have ordered the saloons closed on Sunday. Now the saloon keepers complain because the druggists are allowed Sunday sales of liquor and an ordinance is to be drafted which will make Plattsmouth strictly dry one day in the week.

The question of barring liquor dealers and saloonkeepers from membership in the Catholic Order of Foresters will be considered at the national convention, which meets in Dubuque, Iowa, next August. Prominent members expect to see the saloonkeepers excluded.

T. W. Reilly, of Chicago, and Julius Pringle, of Clinton, Iowa, attorneys for Mrs. Julia Wyatt, who is suing several liquor dealers in the last named city, were severely assaulted while going from the court house to the hotel. It is thought the three assailants were friends of the liquor dealers.

That the city administration in Topeka, Kan., is to be really a "dry" one is shown by the closing of all the larger "joints." The proprietors usually have friends to warn them when there is danger ahead. The druggists have also taken action and will strictly conform to the law regulating the sale of liquor for medicinal purposes.

The work of supplying cold drinking water to New York tenement dwellers will be extended by the Woman's Municipal League this year. Eight of these fountains were in operation all last summer. That they were appreciated was shown by the crowds of women and children who patiently awaited a chance to get the chilled water and take it to their stifling homes.

Publishers' Notes.

Flower Mission and Mercy Number.

It is with genuine pleasure that we announce the beautiful Flower Mission and Mercy number of THE CRUSADER. It is not only brim full of the glad spirit of these departments, but it presents fresh and interesting material of sufficient variety for a full Flower Mission program. There are recitations, stories, anecdotes, besides reports of the world-wide work and helps and suggestions to superintendents regarding general methods and special day observance. Notable features are: original programs for both Seniors and Junior meetings, and several unique Flower Mission entertainments. Miss Ethel Shrigley tells just how to give a Flower Show, and Wild Flower and Bow-K parties are outlined.

This number of THE CRUSADER should reach every Legion and be scattered throughout both Sunday and day schools. Send in your orders early. Price per hundred, $2.

Anti-Cigaret Helps.

Now that people everywhere are becoming awakened to the evils which follow cigaret smoking, we should push our campaign in this department with redoubled energy. Two effective helps are "An Anti-Cigaret Program," price five cents, and "The Anti-Cigaret Speaker," price ten cents, both prepared by Mrs. Ida B. Cole, associate and lecturer for the Anti-Narcotic department. The "Program," which is to be given by the boys and girls, presents the subject effectively and would make a pleasing entertainment. The numerous recitations mentioned in the program are found in the "Speaker." This book should be in the hands of every mother or teacher, who is called on to furnish "something to speak." The recitations are suited to all grades, are easily memorized and will be welcomed by the children, for whose use the book is prepared.

An Inspiring Booklet.

No more tender tribute to Miss Willard was ever penned than is found in "Frances E. Willard's Message to the Womanhood of the Age," by Rev. Frank M. Bristol, D. D., of Washington, D. C. Having been a pupil of Miss Willard, at the Northwestern University, in Evanston, Dr. Bristol speaks with knowledge of her wonderful life and its value to the world. Place the booklet in the hands of your friends, reserving a copy for your own desk, that her "message" may often inspire you. Only a limited number of copies are left. Price 15 cents.

May Responsive Reading.

In the Responsive Reading for May, the Scriptural authority for, and great importance of, the use of Unfermented Sacramental Wine is effectively presented by Mrs. Lillian Lewis, the New York state superintendent of the department. Mrs. Lewis in a forcible manner brings out the inconsistency of using in one of the most sacred religious rites something which we everywhere else unsparingly condemn. Price 50 cents per 100.

Unanswered Prayer.

The true relation of the child in the home, his rights and the evil effects of hereditary tendencies and impure environment, thrills the heart as one reads "Unanswered Prayer," a book by Mrs. S. M. I. Henry. It answers the question, "Why do so many children of the church go to ruin?" Fathers, as well as mothers, will find in it the arrest of thought so often needed. Cloth bound, price 30 cents.

Do Everything.

"Do Everything," by Frances E. Willard, a handbook for all white-ribboners, gives a history of temperance work, with invaluable directions for leading a public meeting, carrying on a local union, conducting a convention, organizing a W. C. T. U., with forms of pledge and petitions, and "the summing up of the whole matter." Workers cannot afford to do without this practical helper for all occasions along temperance lines. Price 35 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8976—Shirred Waist with Vest.
32 to 40 in. bust.

8985—Shirred Waist.
8705—Skirt.
Waist, 12 to 16 years.
Skirt, 12 to 16 years.

8968—Blouse Costume.
6 to 12 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....,

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Until June 1st

YOU MAY SECURE THE UNION SIGNAL AND YOUR CHOICE OF ONE OF THIS LIST OF VALUABLE BOOKS FOR THE REGULAR SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50.

DAVID DOUGLAS AND HIS WIFE By MRS. O. W. SCOTT. A striking temperance story telling of the work and methods of a clergyman and his family.

A SINGULAR LIFE By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS. A vivid portrayal in the author's inimitable style of a life "singular" only in its devotion to the work of the Master among the lowly folk of a sea coast town.

BLACK ROCK By RALPH CONNOR. A tale of the Selkirks and a story so interesting that to begin it means to complete the reading before laying the book aside.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS By FRANCES E. WILLARD. A sweet and tender record of the beautiful life of "sister Mary."

HOW TO WIN By FRANCES E. WILLARD. A book for girls and one which no girl can read without having higher ideals.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

These books are all CLOTH BOUND and the offer is extended to OLD SUBSCRIBERS as well as NEW

All Orders Must Reach Us Not Later Than JUNE 1st

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO

The UNION SIGNAL

VOL. XXIX. | NO. 19.

CHICAGO, MAY 7, 1903.

MONTHLY
MAGAZINE NUMBER

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2

CONTRIBUTED:

Some Attractions of Japan's Fifth National Industrial Exposition. By Kara G. Smart—Ethical Snap Shots. By Julia F. Deane and Elizabeth Cumings 3

Under the White Ribbon. By Mary Henry-Rossiter 4

Quaint Wells of India. By N. Alma Courtright—Visible Home Making. By Mary Jewett-Telford 5

Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 6

CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:

Mother's Birthday Party—If You Want to be Happy—A Few Word Don'ts—Queer Things—Some Things Animals Teach Us—A Ramble Thro' the Wildwood—Puzzler's Packet 7

EDITORIAL:

A Voiceless Public Sentiment—A Menace to Missions—Death of Bishop Foster 8

Personal Mention—Servants of Christ. By Rev. Frances E. Townsley 9

PRESIDENT'S LETTER 9

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10

W. C. T. U. NOTES 11

HINTS ON HOME NURSING 12

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS 13

PARLIAMENTARY DIFFICULTIES 14

PRACTICAL TALKS WITH HOUSEKEEPERS 15

SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHER'S NOTES 16

Current Events.

Luigi Arditti, the well-known musical conductor, passes away in London.

The Wisconsin senate defeated a woman suffrage bill by a vote of 15 to 12.

Bishop John F. Hurst, of the Methodist church, died May 3 at Washington.

Colored preachers, headed by the Rev. R. C. Ransom, have commenced a crusade against the policy shops of Chicago.

Irving M. Scott, "the man who built the Oregon," leading figure in business and political life of Pacific coast, is dead.

On opening of new Pacific cable on July 4 Postal Telegraph Company will attempt to circle globe with message in forty seconds.

Paul Belloni Du Chaillu, American explorer and author, who won world-wide fame, died at St. Petersburg, aged sixty-seven years.

National Geographical Society will send William J. Peters with the Zeigler polar expedition. He will have charge of all the scientific work.

John D. Rockefeller has sent a check for $10,000 to the officers of the Salvation Army in Cleveland to aid in the erection of a new $90,000 citadel.

United States Supreme Court, by decision in Alabama case, indirectly recognizes power of state to disfranchise negroes by constitutional provisions.

Authorities at Saratoga say there shall be no gambling there this summer, and that effective measures will be taken to counteract Monte Carlo reputation.

Appropriation of $400,000 for St. Louis exposition granted by Chinese empress; elaborate building planned, with exhibit of rare bronzes and porcelains.

Prof. Stephen M. Babcock of University of Wisconsin, has evolved an atomic theory which, if accepted, will prove an explanation of the law of gravitation.

Thirty thousand miners locked out by Reading, Lehigh, and Susquehanna companies because of refusal to work over eight hours on Saturdays; nine hours called for by arbitration decision.

Statistics show that organized labor in Chicago has enjoyed a year of unparalleled prosperity, many new unions having been formed, the membership nearly doubled and wages increased, while the workday has been shortened.

Seismic disturbance in Turtle Mountain, overlooking Frank, a mining town in Alberta, N. W. T., kills eighty-three people. Houses were crushed, mine entrances closed, river choked and general ruin spread in vicinity. Monetary loss will exceed $1,500,000.

Walter Wellman, newspaper correspondent, says State Department is reassured by Russian promises that open door policy will prevail in the far East, and says the United States is not concerned in control of Manchuria, which, it is believed, will remain in Russian hands.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has made the following appointments on the Venezuelan arbitration commissions in accordance with the protocols signed in Washington: For American-Venezuelan commission—Dr. Barge, late governor of Curacao. For Franco-Belgian commission—Dr. Fily, former president of supreme court of the Dutch West Indies. Member of the Dutch commission—Dr. Hellmund, consul of the Netherlands at Caracas.

New York Societies Appeal for the Continuation of Women Inspectors at the Port of New York.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 25.—At the call of Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis a conference of men and women, representing thirty-seven societies, was held in New York City, April 24. The meeting was presided over by Josiah Strong, and Ella A. Boole was the secretary. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted and copies were sent to President Roosevelt, Secretary Shaw, Mr. Sargent, Commissioner of Immigration, and Mr. Williams, at the port of New York:

Whereas, There are grave dangers confronting young women seeking homes on our shores, due to their ofttimes helpless condition because of ignorance of the language and other limitations.

Resolved, That we do hereby express to President Roosevelt our sincere appreciation of his recent action in recommending the appointment of women inspectors at New York harbor in the interest of and for the protection of young women thus exposed.

And Whereas, A comparatively short time has been allowed for a fair trial of the experiment, and during that time instances of help and protection have been of daily occurrence.

And Whereas, The government now considers it necessary to appoint seven matrons, who with the officials at Ellis Island guard the women coming over in the steerage. We believe that the government owes equal protection to the women coming over in the first and second cabin, and such protection as women alone can give.

And Whereas, Section 22 of the new immigration law declares that the Commissioner General of Immigration "shall issue from time to time such instructions, not inconsistent with the law, as he shall deem best calculated for carrying out the provisions of this act, and for protecting the United States and aliens migrating thereto from fraud and loss."

And Whereas, We believe the appointment of women inspectors will aid in "protecting the United States and the alien" who needs protection "from fraud and loss," and will check the coming of evil-disposed persons. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we earnestly urge a continuance of women inspectors at the port in New York and their appointment at other ports, and also urge that, under the general civil service regulations, provision be made for an eligible list of women, from which the women inspectors shall be appointed.

New Unions in Virginia.

Organizing Fund Aided by "Red Letter Day" Contributions—Successful Presenting of Local Work.

Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, Correspondent.

LINCOLN, VA., May 4.—Mrs. M. W. Newton, state organizer, worked in Gloucester county a part of February and since April 3. There never had been a W. C. T. U. speaker in the county before. Mrs. Newton now reports eight unions organized and a county convention April 29.

MRS. E. B. CLEMENT.

Mrs. E. B. Clement, state treasurer, has also been in the field since April 3. She has been strengthening many weak unions, visiting chiefly those that have been recently organized. She reports one new union and is to hold several institutes. Mrs. Clement has been a most efficient treasurer and is a thorough, practical field worker. We find the work of establishing unions to be quite as important as organizing new ones.

The state officers arranged a program for a state "Red Letter Day" and sent to all the unions asking them to observe April 5, by using this program for a public meeting and send the collection for the state organizing fund. Reports show that quite a number of the unions have responded, adding to their membership as well as helping the state work.

Lexington union has established headquarters, the members solicited the business men for contributions to pay the rent, and write that nothing before ever "advertised" their work as this has done.

"Our Peaceful War" in Michigan.

A Good Convention—Local Option Victory.

R. M. Harwood, Correspondent.

PLAINWELL, Mich., May 4.—The Fifth district held a most profitable convention in Grand Rapids, April 22-24. The welcome to the city was most cordially given by the Mayor's secretary, Mr. William Landman. Mrs. M. E. Bodwell gave the greeting in behalf of the federation of unions, and Miss M. J. Bilz the response.

Excellent addresses were made by Miss Mary E. Barbour, of California, and Miss Marie Brehm, of Illinois. There was a grand gold medal contest, the prize being won by Miss Lida Faut, Grand Haven. Our district president, Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, was present with ever-ready counsel, a helpful address and many recommendations; one of these was the establishment of a district life membership with a fee of $5. This was promptly adopted, and her own name recorded as the first life member, Ionia county writing the name of Mrs. J. N. Barbour as the second.

Exceptionally good papers were read and fine recitations and music enlivened the routine work of the convention. The general officers were re-elected. Fifty-two unions reported 1,138 active and 173 honorary members, and twelve L. T. L.'s with 394 members. Ten new unions, of which four are Y's, and seven new L. T. L.'s have been organized. The increase in membership is largely due to the field work of Mrs. Teats and Miss M. J. Bilz. The state convention will be held in Adrian May 26-29.

Van Buren county is rejoicing over the local option victory of April 6. There was 1,400 majority, and, best of all, every township stood by the law, which has been in operation thirteen years. The W. C. T. U. can well feel proud of the part it took in the contest. It was the first to begin the agitation. Miss Bilz, state recording secretary, and Mrs. Calkins, district president, were early in the field and organized five new unions and strengthened the old ones. Their work was ably supplemented by Mrs. Mary E. Teats, National evangelist: Mrs. Andrus, of Detroit, president of the First district, and Mrs. Wilcox, a state field worker. The county president, Mrs. C. E. Hotchkiss, worked incessantly, and all of the unions were quick to respond to every request or suggestion.

Nearly fifty-six addresses were made in the county under the supervision of the W. C. T. U. The county officers issued a call for a special hour of prayer on Sunday, April 5, which met a general response. The Anti-Saloon League did heroic work, giving freely of money, time and talent. Without doubt the press was a powerful factor is securing the victory. All county papers opened their columns to the discussion of the subject. The supplement sent out in every paper the week before election, showing the benefit that prohibition has been to the county, would make an excellent campaign document for work elsewhere.

The local option campaign is not all the work that Van Buren county has been called upon to do the past winter and spring. The county's representative at Lansing is so grossly misrepresenting the county that it has required constant vigilance and much work to prevent the passage of two bills introduced by him aimed directly at the nullification of this prohibitory law. The first was one to license—or tax—the druggists in prohibition counties, claiming that they could be better regulated by it, and some of the temperance people were deceived thereby.

The other bill was to permit the manufacture of wine, cider and other fermented liquors in the county, to use up the surplus fruit crops. In both cases the county president was the first to sound the note of warning and by correspondence and the use of the press has worked hard to prevent their passage. As the unions and temperance men have come quickly to her help it is hoped that the bills will both be killed.

A Successful Convention.

Mrs. Hoffman Still at Work in Louisiana.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, La., April 27.—The decennial convention of the Second district was held at Morgan City, April 15-16. Miss May C. Walker, state president, in the chair.

Mrs. H. C. Pharr, honorary president, was present and ready to co-operate in furthering the work.

Miss Ella McLellan, corresponding secretary, read a fine report. It was a history of the district W. C. T. U. during the past ten years, which gave credit to Mrs. H. C. Pharr for a full share of the success of the past.

Mrs. L. G. Baldwin, recording secretary for ten years, resigned on account of impaired health, and Mrs. A. Storm was elected. Mrs. Brownell was re-elected treasurer and Miss McLellan was also re-elected.

Rev. H. S. Johns, pastor of the M. E. church, south, was most helpful. He gave the use of his church for the meetings, and his wife opened the parsonage for the reception tendered the delegates.

Mrs. N. E. Oliver, of Estherwood, state organizer and corresponding secretary, gave a well received address at night and rendered other valuable service.

A pleasant feature was the attendance to Mr. Edgar Bass and his L. T. L. Miss Walker talked to the children about the mercy work of the W. C. T. U. and taught them the pledge. Miss Walker also gave an address on welcome night.

Mrs. Hoffman's itinerary in Louisiana shows a fair average weekly collection, in spite of the inclement weather. She lectured in the court house and at the state Normal School at Natchitoches. At Mansfield, where formerly there was a Y in the girl's college, she had an opportunity to revive the work.

Successful medal contests have been held at Morse and at Estherwood.

The new union at Ponchatoula has added some new members and four honoraries since it was organized. The members are busy during the day, as this is the strawberry season, and they meet at night. The president, Mrs. Ed. Vinyard, drives a mile and a half to attend the weekly meetings of the W. C. T. U.

A SAKE (NATIVE DRINK) EXHIBIT.

Some Attractions of Japan's Fifth National Industrial Exposition.

By Kara G. Smart.

YEBISU BEER HALL.

A TWENTY or thirty minute ride in a kuruma through streets, narrow and wide, whose sides are literally lined with gayly-colored flags and lanterns, and whose lengths are swarming with human beings, brings you to the grounds of Japan's Hakurankwai (million looks exhibition), located at the extreme southeastern part of Osaka. This city has over a million inhabitants (not 300,000, as stated by me in a recent issue of this paper), and is second in size in the empire, being its commercial metropolis.

As your fleet-footed kurumaya darts from the narrow street opening into the great triangular space in front of the main entrance, the first thing to arrest your gaze is an immense three-arched, evergreen gateway. Its top is surmounted by eight large national flags, while emblazoned in gilt letters on its surface are the Japanese words for "Welcome to Hakurankwai." The main gate is several rods beyond this evergreen arch, and between the two is a huge seven-dragon fountain, resting on the back of a tortoise, the whole surrounded by a circular basin of water.

The next object to attract your attention is the lofty tower of the Murai Tobacco Company, which occupies the centre and most conspicuous part of the Tokyo exhibit, that includes the whole north front of the block on the south side of the triangle. This high tower is fantastic in design and in its striking coloring has a most attractive appearance. On its top is a large observatory from which an unobstructed view of the surrounding country may be obtained. The whole is surmounted by a large blue globe surrounded by a wide red band on which, in white, is painted the tobacco advertisement, emblematic, we suppose, of tobacco's universal rule, and in the minds of its adherents, exalted station, in the world.

The beautiful entrance gate leads directly up the broad, well-graveled main avenue of the grounds, on past the most important group of exhibition buildings, and at the foot of a gradual rise, or low hill, crowned by the white palace of fine arts and a beautiful fountain, you come to one of King Alcohol's many collections of large beer halls, and fanciful exhibits. Here you find Tokyo beer, Osaka beer, Asahi beer, and Sapporo beer vieing with one another in their efforts to attract and capture the passer-by. Several acres are devoted to exhibits of alcoholic drink and tobacco.

The Osaka Beer Brewing Company's beer hall is surmounted by two immense beer bottles gorgeously decorated—a notice to the public that if they cannot get all they want to while here, they can carry plenty of the stuff away with them for future use. Lace curtains at the windows, and the tables and chairs give a foreign air to the place.

A climb up the hill brings his majesty again in evidence in the shape of numerous booths and halls, the most noticeable of which is the Yebisu beer hall. This institution occupies a most prominent place opposite the fine arts building which overlooks the entire grounds, and close to the grand bandstand. Here the exhibit towers upward in the shape of a huge beer cask, sixty feet high and forty-two feet in diameter, its bulging sides unbroken save by a wide door at one side. It is a perfect imitation of a foreign beer keg in shape and color, even to the black hoops which bind it.

A glance inside shows you a skylight top, the sides lined with wide strips of black, bright red and yellow cloth, numerous strings of bright-colored lanterns suspended from top to bottom and a large arc electric light in the centre of all. Pictures of beer factories, etc., adorn the walls, and a gallery half way up on one side furnishes a suitable bandstand. Directly under it is a wide counter, behind which are a dozen or more faucets and shelves of glistening glasses. The floor space is filled with quite large round tables surrounded by chairs, and, when we peeped in, a group of a dozen or more men were indulging themselves in the yellow liquid served by the half dozen obliging attendants.

Add to these larger exhibits innumerable smaller ones, both liquor and tobacco, and you have somewhat of an idea of the rapidity with which man is being sent on his downward career. As we viewed those lofty and imposing structures, noted their prominent positions and the national colors used in their decorations and floating above them, and then looked for evidences of pronounced Christian influence, finding none inside the gates of the White City, we marveled at Japan's lack of judgment and foresight, for her future welfare and permanent progress depends more upon the good influences that are brought to bear upon her national life than upon the aggregate of all these other things.

A most striking contrast is noticed between the beer and tobacco exhibits and the modest, unpretentious buildings—outside the grounds—where the Christian and temperance forces are zealously at work, crippled though they have been for lack of funds and helpers.

The Committee for Christian Work has been most fortunate in securing a fine location for their building, exactly opposite the main entrance and fronting on the triangle, and here from nine to twelve, half-hour religious services are held each day. A large red and white sign on the roof of the building says, "Come and See," and many do come and see, notwithstanding the hundreds of counter attractions. In fact the place is almost always crowded, the audiences for a week having averaged 1,900 people each day, to whom the gospel message has been delivered with power and effect. Many hearts have already responded to the gracious invitation extended to all not only to "Come and See," but to live and do for Him.

Notwithstanding repeated assurances that we were "just six months too late to do anything," and innumerable difficulties, serious and trivial, which have had to be overcome, the representatives of the World, National and local temperance societies, have succeeded in securing a plot of ground, on a wide thoroughfare along a side of the exposition grounds and overlooking the grounds, a short distance from the Gospel Hall.

Here we have planted our standard and set up our tent in the shape of a modest pine and bamboo building, fifteen feet wide, thirty feet long, with twelve-foot posts. By the time this reaches you we shall be carrying on the warfare therein. The interior of the building is to be tastefully decorated with bunting, flags, evergreen, pictures, etc., and the exterior will also be attractive. It will be fitted up as a combined rest and coffee-room; will contain our temperance exhibit; will afford a place to distribute and sell our literature, beside furnishing an opportunity for occasional addresses and magic lantern exhibitions with temperance slides. A group of workers from the respective churches represented in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will have charge for a week at a time during the months of the Exposition, and the world and national representatives will do their part to make our temperance venture a success.

The Christian Work Committee have very generously offered us the use of their audience room from nine to ten each morning and from twelve to two each afternoon, and here temperance addresses will be given daily, in addition to the work done at our own headquarters.

Osaka, Japan.

Ethical Snap Shots.

By Julia F. Deane.

AT Clark street there was a break in the last measure of "Home, Sweet Home," and the passengers turned to the windows to see a little crippled bootblack with kit swung over his shoulders, hobble over the crossing with the help of a crutch.

The other occupants of the coach could but admire the diligence with which the sharp-featured mother cultivated lessons of morality and virtue in the mind of her twelve-year-old son, as they waited for the train to start.

"Jonathan William," she exhorted for the edification of both her son and an interested public, "there is just one sin I cannot tolerate in a boy, and that is lying,—deceit,—falsehood. Mind you, don't you ever let me hear another story like that you told this morning. I tell you, my son, it is a sin that leads to every other vice," and she looked about with a satisfied sense of having done her full duty.

As the conductor passed through the car five minutes later, there was a whispered admonition to Jonathan William to "lie low", and as the boy obediently curled himself into a diminutive ball in the corner of the seat, his mother's generous skirts expanded to cover his long legs from the official's keen eyes.

The crisis safely past, Jonathan William emerged once more a youth of goodly proportions, and looking up into his mother's face with charming naivete, remarked gleefully, "We did him that time, didn't we, Ma?" But Ma answered not a word.

Elgin, Ill.

By Elizabeth Cumings.

TWO grizzled, elderly men sat smoking pipes in a sheltered nook. One was fat, one was lean. Each was dressed in the finest broadcloth, each had acquired the mask-like expression worn by men in constant and often trying relations with the public. In the speech of each were elusive inflections not to be conveyed in type.

"Chicago's been good to ye, Mikey O'Dowd," said the lean man musingly. "It's jist twinty years come Michaelmas we landed wid only our bun'les, and here we be quite aisy in our minds."

"Aye," assented the fat Mike, "quite aisy." Then more warmly, "Chicago's a grand town, but I'm thinkin' it's New York's done weel by you."

"Aye," admitted the lean man; "I kept a place tin years, then I sold out, an' now I'm dirictor in two banks, an' in a dale o' things."

"I kept my place till two years ago." The fat man puffed his lips out regretfully. "Me Paradise was as splindid as man iver put fut in for a drink, all solid mahogany and Frinch glass, but me Katy Ann, the last livin' o' six, insisted she was looked down on in sassiety, so I sold, an' put the money in a brewery. A brewer's good's the best."

"Aye," said the thin man dryly; "There's no finger pintin' at brewers. But, Mikey O'Dowd—sure 'tis the brewers as is back of all the places."

"Aye, they are so," assented the fat man. There was a few moments devoted to vigorous pipe smoking, and he added with conviction, "But 'tis a cold time they'd all have wid me for a customer. I niver touch nothin', not aven beer."

"That's me." The thin man bent forward, and lifting a thin forefinger, gravely beat time as he added with a quavering emphasis that had an odd effect of cantillation, "I was in th' thrade for the money thot's in it, but as for drinkin'—plaze glory, I was niver thot nunchuck! I've allays been a timperance mon!"

Belvidere, Ill.

UNDER THE WHITE RIBBON.

BY MARY HENRY-ROSSITER.

Spring Clothes.

WHEN we see the birds, the animals, the plants, indeed, all nature, coming out so quietly and unobtrusively in the most beautiful and appropriate spring costumes, without the expediture of feverish hours of much needed energy and hardly earned money, we are tempted to wonder if we, intelligent human beings, could not save hours of exertion and money by giving a little more attention to some of nature's methods and by following her fashions, now and then, in preference to those of Paris and New York.

The most casual observation shows us, in the first place, that the fashions of Nature change only with the seasons, and never with the years. In winter Nature takes away their green dresses from trees and shrubs and makes the bark thicker on trunk and branches. She provides a warmer coat for the horse and the dog, but the style of make is still the same. She gives all her great family rougher and hardier garments, but otherwise there is little change. Her children wear their old clothes in the spring until the rubbish of winter has been swept away and wind and rain have made the whole earth fresh and sweet. Then suddenly, some lovely morning, without the slightest fuss or worry, she brings out the most bewildering assortment of beautiful, dainty, new robes, and the entire out-door world gloriously inaugurates the annual spring opening of Madame Nature. But you never find that the styles have changed since last year. The grass still wears a plain princess gown. The shape of the oak-leaf has not been altered. The robin proudly exhibits the same red vest. The crow still wears the conventional black. The leopard has not changed his spots. Nowhere among all the innumerable hosts of animal and vegetable beings clothed by Nature do we find one trying to outshine, or anticipate, or keep up with its neighbor or for any reason whatever endeavoring to change the fashion of dress ordained for it in the beginning by the great Designer of all artistic costumes.

Moreover, the styles of Nature are never grotesque or foolish. As a tailor, she is not only hygienic and sensible, but she has also exquisite taste and tenderness. She dresses the trunks of trees in dark and serviceable colors, because they have to meet the wear and tear of street and forest. She robes the violet, the rose, the lily, in beautiful and delicate colors that their very loveliness and helplessness may protect them and win for them care and love. She gives the polar bear a shaggy coat, but a smooth hide to the elephant. She considers with infinite patience and judgment the need, the circumstances, the disposition, the work of every plant and every animal. And, then, having once found the most suitable and becoming costumes, she certainly behaves as if she considered it a waste of both art and energy to change. The inference for us is not very far to seek. Could any woman have a higher ideal of dress than to be clothed with the beauty, simplicity and healthfulness of the lily of the field or the wild rose by the wayside?

* * *

A strange thing happened a year or two ago in Chicago. In the crowd on State street one woman suddenly assaulted another, tore the hat from her head, pulled it to pieces and tossed the fragments into the air, making her escape before the astonished victim could say a word. The next day, in the same quarter, she attacked another woman who wore a particularly gaudy piece of millinery, and the two closed in desperate combat for the bonnet. They were finally separated, but the assailant led the witnesses and several policemen a lively chase before being captured.

At the police station the woman confessed that gay and bright colors on hats drove her to distraction, that whenever she saw certain styles of headgear she was filled with the mad desire to destroy them.

Of course the law declared she was crazy, and various editors amused themselves at her expense. It was suggested by one that her mind had become unbalanced through trying to solve the problem whether her hat was on straight when the hat tilted at five different angles, while the straighter it was by milliners' rules, the more crooked it looked to her.

"If you build a head-thatch," said the editor, "to look like a scalloped cake-pan which has been hit by lightning from four different directions at once and order a woman to balance it on the northwest corner of her cranium at an angle of forty-three degrees, and the woman keeps trying to discover whether or not it is on straight, her mind will finally give way. It is a fundamental principle of the feminine mind to require that its roof be on straight. But when the roof is nothing but a series of wonderful crooks, how can a woman tell whether it is straight or not? When a hat is designed to represent a gigantic pansy growing out of the left lobe of the wearer's brain, the female observer's efforts to establish an effect of equilibrium will surely be harmful to her mental balance.

"'Kate the bonnet-snatcher,' is only a fore-runner. Male observers have long been of the opinion that deep and constant scrutiny of feminine headgear would sooner or later topple reason from her throne."

Any thinking woman who has ever had the least experience buying hats has a feeling of kinship for the unfortunate "bonnet-snatcher." Who of us has not been afflicted with a strange impulse while watching the procession of hats in a crowded thoroughfare? As head after head passes by, presenting constant diversity of "thatch," yet with two or three general styles prevailing, as you gaze at the amazing varieties and combinations of materials, the feathers and flowers and buckles and quills applied and displayed at every possible angle, as you notice the blinding confusion of colors, green, red, purple, yellow, pink, magenta, black, white, as you observe the sudden twists and indentations, the abrupt projections, elevations, and hollows, as you study for even one casual half hour the average woman's best hat, you do not wonder that one woman went crazy.

The question presents itself, What are women thinking about when they buy hats? Are the "creations" they wear on their heads really an index to their individual characters and tastes? Have they studied their own style, their own preferences, their own requirements, as well as the new models displayed in the milliners' windows? In making any particular purchase have they considered the real end and purpose to be secured by the hat or bonnet? Are they anxious to get something that is as healthful as it is fashionable?

Perhaps you think hygiene does not concern itself with the covering of the head, which cannot be squeezed out of shape by stays, or tilted forward by high heels. But it does.

Did you ever see a woman going along the street with her head fairly bending under the weight of a broad, heavy hat surmounted by from three to five ostrich plumes that pointed in as many different directions? Of course you have, dozens of times. Perhaps you have been that woman. If so, you know how it feels to have this heavy hat lurching suddenly from side to side, twisting your hat pins and pulling your hair, teetering back and forth whenever the wind blows, and constantly jostling your bump of self-esteem. Do you fancy that a woman wearing such a hat can think wholesome thoughts or feel inspiring emotions?

How many times, also, have you seen some delicate woman sallying forth on a cold winter day, in a narrow bonnet quite different from her every-day hat, exposing two or three inches of unaccustomed and tender scalp to December breezes? And then she wonders why she takes cold.

The difficulty is not so much that women have no taste and no sense of propriety, as that they do not exercise it. Many a woman will go straight from admiring some beautiful female figure in art, and buy something that makes her own figure look ridiculous. The thousands of absurd and ugly things sold every year as hats afford convincing evidence of feminine heedlessness and bondage to conventionality.

Possibly the Chicago hat-snatcher had a mortal antipathy to seeing artificial roses, or grapes, or bugs, twisted in among velvet and lace and ribbons. Perhaps her esthetic eye was pained by the sight of a pug nose under a turned-up brim. It may be that her tender heart was grieved over the orphaned babies of the cold, stiff songster perched on the crown of the offending hat.

* * *

At all events, no matter what article of dress we consider, there is almost invariably in modern life far too little connection between the fashions of Nature and the fashions of Madame Grundy, between true beauty and "good style."

Although the birds and the four-footed creatures and the trees and the plants do not wear hats, and hence can not set us fashions in millinery, it is equally true that we might study with the greatest interest and profit their modes of dressing the body.

Their clothes are always made to order. Nature is never guilty of a misfit. Her measurements are accurate, her taste and judgment perfect. The trees look to her in spring for their rustling garments of leaves. The coats of bark she made them many years ago are freshened and repaired for the summer season. Attired by her the oaks, the elms, the maples, all the trees of grove and forest fling their branches to the sunshine and thrill with joy. Their movements are free and unrestricted. Their dresses are not loose in one place and tight in another. No bands or stays restrain the graceful tossing of their boughs. No stiff and heavy interlining drags them down. No narrow shoes crowd and cripple their spreading roots. Every part of their clothing is adjusted to the delicate mechanism of a living form.

Suppose that when the trees were fifteen or sixteen years old, Nature should tighten the bark about their trunks so that the sap could scarcely squeeze through. Their leaves and branches would soon wither and die. But that is not the fashion of Nature.

Nature never makes any changes in the shape or size of the birds and the animals so that the skins she has prepared for them will fit. She carefully takes each measurement and allows for every motion. She gives the dog's muscles room so that he can run and jump and bark. The wings of the bird are left free and light, and the covering of his throat is made soft and flexible so that he can fly and sing with comfort and add to the joy and beauty of the world. True, it is her fashion to adorn him with feathers, but they are his own and are not torn from some other sensitive body to make him gay.

* * *

Carlyle, in his famous "Sartor Resartus," says, "In all speculations, thinkers have tacitly figured man as a clothed animal; whereas he is by nature a naked animal." Most of us, however, who follow the current styles, have gone even further than the philosophers, and figure man—especially woman—as an animal predestined by nature to adapt his body to certain clothes. The question is not "Will the clothes fit him?" but, "Will he fit the clothes?" And if he is so unfortunate as not to fit the kind of clothes popular at the moment, his figure must be altered so that it will fit.

It would be more universally correct to say "her figure," for it is woman, in particular, who is determined to fit the clothes prescribed by fashion. Such is the influence of custom, tradition, and habit that even the most sensible among us still shrink from the idea of having a form comparable in proportions to that of the Venus of Milo or any other celebrated model of physical perfection.

Indeed, we are rather inclined to think that the woman with a large waist is somewhat masculine in appearance. However, according to the standards we are considering—those of Nature viewed as a tailor—it is the woman with a small waist that apes the masculine, for the natural waist of man is triangular, sloping from the shoulder to a point above the hips, while the natural waist of woman should be ovoid, or egg-shaped—not mathematically triangular or mathematically ovoid, but sufficiently so for beautiful comparison. It is the tailor-made girl, and not the healthfully and sensibly dressed maiden, who is really stiff and mannish in appearance.

* * *

The buttons on a man's coat-sleeve, we are told, have descended from the time when the sleeve was made long enough to come down over the hand and protect it. The buttons were placed there so that the sleeve could be fastened back when the wearer wished to drive or to ride horseback. The buttons on the back of the coat are supposed to have served a similar convenience for the skirts of the garment, which were turned back and buttoned during the horseback ride. These buttons are of no use whatever today. The tailor puts them on the coat as a matter of course, because they have always been there. No one ever thinks of them at all, to question either their usefulness or their history. Yet, if a coat should be made without them, a commotion would instantly arise. So it is with a large majority of present fashions, harmless and otherwise. It is time that we gave a permanent vacation to those ancient and respectable sister dictators, Customs and Tradition, and gave that peerless artist, Dame Nature, a chance at our wardrobes.

QUAINT WELLS OF INDIA

By N. Alma Courtright

THE wells of India are all built alike. They have a large, circular, open top, measuring about ten feet in diameter and a substantial curbing four feet in height made of cemented stones, plastered and white-washed. Just outside the walls are upright ladders, the rungs of which are built between posts planted firmly in the ground and rising skyward fifteen or more feet.

A large bore has been made through a beam of the size and shape of a telegraph pole, at about its center. This pole is suspended by thrusting the top ladder rung through the hole. On the heavy end a large stone is securely bound. On the small end a long, thick bamboo pole is affixed—parallel to the ladder, and at right angles to the telegraph pole. A huge kettle, made of narrow strips of copper riveted together, hangs from the bamboo. Lashed to each side of the upright ladder are lighter bamboo rods, which rise some distance above the top rung.

To draw the water, two men (coolies) climb the ladder and tread the telegraph beam—nimbly balancing themselves by curling supple bare feet about the edges. They walk forward to drop the kettle into the well, and then scamper to grasp the tall rods, which are fastened above the ladder sides, and hold on to these until they are safely past the center. Then backward these agile man go until the stone-weighted end raises the dripping bucket.

A third man stands outside the curbing to empty the pail and to force the emptied vessel back for another filling. All three coolies invariably during the entire operation chant a weird melody to the time of the measured movements.

These wells are fed by underground springs, and are built in paddy (rice) fields; cocoanut and plantation (banana) groves, etc., for irrigating purposes, and by the waysides for the convenience of passers-by.

One of these quaint wells is found just outside the fence of the Botanical Garden, at the edge of the broad, red-earthed highway, under shady trees. The Damodar School for Farialis is just across the street. The drinking water for the school children is brought from this particular well; and, between school sessions the children themselves go to slake their thirst in the cool water.

Fancy my astonishment one day to see four men using this well as a bathing pool. Indignantly I called the head master of the school and demanded that he stop these public seekers after cleanliness, I not understanding the Tamil vernacular.

The head master kept an alert eye on my face, and tried to see whether the outward expression and gestures would afford him a clue to my spoken words. He was supposedly acquainted with the English language, yet here, evidently, was an unusual combination of words. He quite clearly understood that these men, who now came before us, had but just emerged from the well. They desired a bath; why not take one? What harm could there be in these coolies taking a plunge in a well so long as said well was not on Brahmin (pertaining to the highest caste) territory?

A TYPICAL INDIAN WELL.

My protestation met with blank ignorance; it was void of all meaning to these wondering natives.

In despair I looked about me for assistance of some sort; I was reluctant to part with my audience until they were duly impressed with the enormity of their offence. My eye caught sight of several long strips of white muslin, which had also been washed in the well, and then spread in the sun to dry.

The head master, who was still keeping a watchful eye on my face, saw me looking at the laundry, and immediately decided that he now understood the sense of my argument. He had suddenly remembered that the English-speaking people commonly dislike seeing the undraped human form divine. He gave a sharp command in Tamil, and presto! the four dark figures sped lithely away; snatched the almost dry muslin, and draped themselves on the way, as they returned with broad smiles, confident of approval.

I forced an appearance of sternness, and once more tried to focus my objections. My point was the fact that from this well came, not only drinking water for our school children, but also for the entire population from the low, native village thereabouts. This much was very clear, but again it threw not the faintest light on my opposition to the use of the well for personal cleanliness.

As I talked, the dazed coolies would occasionally give a smart toss of the head—done by jerking the chin to the right, which throws the top of the head to the left—a peculiarly Indian custom, I believe, of giving assent.

Now and again our group received additions from the stream of passing villagers. They, too, joined in trying to see my point, but after a time I, instead, saw the point—rather the nine points—on the other side presented by a wayfarer, to the effect that here in the East it is the custom to bathe, to wash clothes and to drink from the selfsame well when the tanks or fountains are not near.

While bound to accept the situation with what calmness I could muster, you may rest assured the question of ways and means of performing similar functions on home ground was minutely enquired into at the earliest possible moment.

Madras, India.

VISIBLE HOME MAKING

By Mary Jewett-Telford.

THE atmosphere of a home, that intangible but definite spirit that envelops the whole, making it everything or less than nothing to all within it, is not under consideration in this article. Blessed, indeed, is every member of every family, rich or poor, that lives in the atmosphere of the fields of Eden, within his own home place.

It is a favorable symptom for our domestic and national future, that we have come to a time of partial awakening as to the direct relation between health, happiness, and morals on the one hand, and food, dress, and home-sanitation on the other. Following the lead of the Health department of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, various woman's clubs, summer schools, etc., are studying domestic science. Cooking schools begin to mean something more than cake-making and a dainty white cap. To inaugurate a change from wastefulness to economy, from slovenliness to tidiness, may take a longer time, but it should, it must come.

The young home-maker who cannot cause one penny to do the work of two, who does not delight in simple but easy contrivances to further the health and comfort of those inside her home walls, has lost a keen pleasure out of her life.

Many girls who are unable to make homes from somewhat meager material, grow thriftless, indifferent or hopeless. They cannot make ends meet, or they do not try. At the end of the second married year they neglect to comb their hair, they grow discontented, and make everybody else so. One of them says:

"We spoil everything, and we get discouraged. After awhile we just give up trying."

A little beer introduced into that family often finishes any attempt at doing better. Happy she who has a neighbor or friend to commend honest endeavor and set an example of thrifty contentment.

Not long ago someone made inquiries in one of our large cities among the families of two hundred and forty-four mechanics, simply on the subject of bread. There were wives and children in each family. Five of these mothers knew how to make bread; one did make bread; the others subsisted on that compound with neither soul nor body, ordinary bakers' loaves. Tied up with the staff of life furnished those two hundred and forty-three families, were no end of unsatisfied longings for food; yeast germs clamoring for something to stupefy; chaff, not nutriment.

I am told that in this country girls average eight school years. As a rule, their teachers are women, noble women. But the curriculum is all laid out, and how well do these eight years equip the pupil to make the best of things; to fit out toothsome, wholesome dishes with small outlay; to battle with a smile and a scrub-broom for continual cleanliness; to furnish the bodily necessities that shall help self, husband and children to bring out the best there is in them? Few of them, it must be feared, have a heritage that keeps them happy under misfortune, and their drill does not do it.

If the "gude mon," usually human, though ever so good, frets about the meals or grows glum over them, small wonder. Fretting and glumness are little comfort to the wife, also usually human.

Not in the nature of a revolution, but an evolution, we need to favor the plans that have been proposed by a few leading journals. As thoroughly and continuously as any other branch, let the nature of all foods and the results of mal-nutrition be taught in all schools, wholly or partly supported by public money, this teaching also to include cleanliness and to reach the young in reformatory institutions.

Could any one earthly thing, except the abolishment of the legalized drink shop, help more to make us a people of happy homes, those true safeguards of a nation?

McMinnville, Tenn.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter X.

A FEW months later, somewhat unexpectedly, Mr. Boyd was called away for his wedding and brief honeymoon.

"'It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good,'" he quoted, in his whimsical way to Hugh. "Mr. Glyn is apt to be a little difficult. Twice he had found excellent reason for indefinitely postponing our marriage, and we were wondering what would be the next insuperable obstacle in the way, when there comes a preemptory intimation that the event must be hurried on. His doctor, good man, urgently recommends his wintering abroad. His sister, poor soul, will accompany him, and Rose we shall be only too glad to have here. The thought of leaving Rose at home has been one of our greatest troubles. We little thought that Mr. Glyn's supposed ill-health would one day prove a blessing in disguise."

So Hugh was left in charge for a fortnight, and from the pulpit of the parish church, made as deep an impression upon the congregation as he was wont to make upon the frequenters of the mission-room. Even Dr. Mann abstained from sarcasm, and thought within himself that the curate's little mishap had done a great deal towards abating his priggishness.

There was no parochial demonstration to the vicar's young wife. Pitsmoor did not believe in making a display of feeling until such warmth had been duly earned. So far, as Enoch argued, they knew "next to nowt that was worth knowing about Mr. Boyd, and nowt of any sort about his wife. Who's to say whether we have aright to be glad to see her or no?"

Therefore, when the modest cab from Milborough drew up at the Vicarage gate, there was but a casual group of school children to witness and report the interesting fact. Rose Glyn, who, with the new servants, arrived a day or two in advance, had prettily besought Mrs. Langley's help in the work of arrangement and preparation, and both Hugh and the doctor had spent many not unpleasant odd moments in looking on and tendering valuable criticism and advice. When finally they took themselves off in good time to prevent any possibility of being found in possession by the newly-married pair, both young men felt that, indirectly, the vicar's marriage brought a distinct gain to them. Mrs. Langley was more dubious. She fully intended taking an interest in parochial matters, in spite of all that "Bob" might say, but she would have preferred taking at least the second place. Therefore, Miss Rose Glyn's presence at the Vicarage struck her as being distinctly superfluous.

The first parochial duty that fell to the lot of the young wife was that of presiding over the meeting of lady-workers, convened for the purpose of arranging the details of the annual tea. Mrs. Langley was deferentially asked to attend, and give Mrs. Boyd the benefit of her experience and advice, but laughingly declined. Parochial work under the auspices of an appreciative curate was one thing, meeting for women only under the presidency of the vicar's wife another.

"My experience is lamentable, and my advice, dear Mrs. Boyd, would probably follow suit. Really and truly, I have absolutely no gifts in that direction. Perhaps I ought to be ashamed to confess it, but such is the fact.'

Rose thought that she seemed proud, rather than ashamed, of her ignorance, and something in her way of speaking suggested that she secretly regarded the business of parochial organization as an ignoble pursuit.

"I'm glad, after all, that she isn't coming. I know she suspects us of a tendency to being ridicuously trivial, and it's so dreadfully true," said the girl seriously.

"I don't see it," said Mrs. Boyd staunchly. "If it's necessary, it can't be trivial. Isn't it necessary to organize a parochial tea?"

"Oh, yes; it's necessary," said Rose resignedly.

Nevertheless, before the end of the meeting, both the sisters felt thankful that their invitations had been declined.

When Mrs. Boyd slyly took the chair, supported by Rose, Miss Smith at once appropriated the place of honor as chief counsellor at the young wife's right hand. The position was tacitly yielded to her by virtue of a small independent income, derived from many years of penurious shop-keeping. She it was who explained to the chair the general principles which guided the subscribers to the annual tea.

"The bettermost people generally gives ten shillings. That's a table, and the one that gives a table sits at the head and pours out. A table, I should say, is twelve seats, but our tables is long, so both ends is heads. Then, them that can't give ten shillings, can perhaps give five. That's half a table. The five shilling people can't claim to sit at a table end, but if there's more urns than there are ends, they're put at the sides, and the five shilling subscribers pours out. Most of them that can manage it any way gives ten shillings or five, because, supposin' they gives from two-and-six to four shillings, they just has to sit in the ninepenny seats with the rest, and gets nothing, in a manner of speaking, for their extra money."

"I see," said Mrs. Boyd, taking care not to meet her sister's eye, and preserving a studiously neutral tone. "Now, before we go on, let me quite understand, please. The tables are given in money, not in kind. Doesn't that cost more than it would cost if each of us made our own cakes and bread?"

"Of course it costs more," somewhat hastily interposed a farmer's wife, "but, asking your pardon, miss—ma'am, I should say—the cost isn't altogether the point. To begin with, our way of providin' brings more profit to the parish. Likewise, it makes all the tables equal and does away with comparisons, to say nothing of the help it gives to a deserving woman."

"That's a point, Mrs. Boyd, on which me and Mrs. Dixon hasn't never agreed," firmly remarked Mrs. Smith; "but these meetings is governed by majorities, and at present the majority is for ten-shilling tables. I don't hold with it, but, for all that, I wouldn't be the one to stand out against it if it wasn't for the ninepenny ticket."

The inexperienced Mrs. Boyd looked so completely bewildered that, once more, it was necessary to explain.

"It's this way," said Miss Smith determinedly, taking her grievance in both hands; "every year, as my mother and grandmother did before me, do I give my table, and I don't begrudge the parish a penny that it makes by it. But, three years back, the majority decided that them that gave tables should pay for their tickets the same as the rest. Now, in my poor way, it's little that I begrudge to the parish, and Mrs. Dixon knows that it's the truth I speak."

"Lor', that's true enough, Mary Jane, and I'm the last that would be denyin' it."

"I know it, Mrs. Dixon, for I don't think so badly of you as to suspect that you would; but I don't mind who hears me when I say that that last ninepence is just ninepence more than I can part with freely. Year after year do I sit at the head of that table knowing that every last crumb of it has been paid for with my money, and I declare to you all that I can't relish neither bite nor sup for thinking all the time that in another two or three minutes the plate 'll come round for another ninepence to pay for the little bit I've had time to get."

"Well, Miss Smith," interposed Mrs. Dixon soothingly, "no one here don't deny that it falls a bit hard on the good givers; but no one knows better than yourself that there's another way of looking at it after all, for it's well known to all of us here that there's them that wouldn't put their hands into their pockets for the good of the parish at all, if it wasn't for the annual tea. And once their hands are in, we're bound to make them bring out as much as we can, for the good of the cause. Similarly, it wasn't only because Sarah Byles was a widow, and badly left, that we gave her the providin' of the teas, but because the niggardliness of some of the tables had come to be a matter of general remark; while contrariwise, there was those as took the bread out of their own children's mouth in tryin' to outshine their neighbors. Takin' everything into consideration, there never was any doubt in my mind but that the ten-shilling system was the best."

Rose Glyn gazed straight before her with preternatural gravity, and still the sisters avoided meeting each other's eyes.

"Thank you. I think I understand both sides of the question now," said Mrs. Boyd diplomatically. "Then, for the present, I suppose, it is agreed that we go on as before, unless—unless the majority should consider it reasonable to give a free ticket to those who provide the tables?"

Mrs. Dixon gave Miss Smith no chance to speak.

"I'm against any change, for one," she said firmly. "Once we give way to any such idee, the five-shilling subscribers would expect to take off their fourpence-halfpenny, and the half-crowners would be as like as not to make unpleasantness over the farthings. We're that dreadful just in Pitsmoor that we couldn't hardly help it, once you begin to give way. I say, let things be; and it falls as hard on me, with my eight children all lookin' to go to the annual tea, as anyone. But never mind, it's all for the good of the cause."

The young wife and her sister looked sympathetically at the speaker in her well-preserved garments, cut in the fashion of long ago, and lost all inclination to smile.

"Miss Smith does not wish to put the question to the meeting," said Mrs. Boyd tactfully.

"Certainly not," said Miss Smith, with acidity; "it's the wish of the majority. Let things be."

Subsequent details were discussed with more unanimity of opinion. Ten-shilling tables were promised by all the members present, and the parish was mapped out and apportioned among them for further canvassing.

"You're to put down Mrs. Parsons as usual for a table, and I was to say that she would undertake to canvass a district, as she always does." Thus Miss Smith.

Mrs. Dixon, as honorary secretary, duly recorded these promises, on which she commented to Mrs. Boyd at the close of the meeting.

"That's no more Mrs. Parson's ten shillings than it's mine. Mrs. Parsons, poor soul, can't put bread into her children's mouths, let alone providin' the parish with ten-shillin' tables. She's Mary Jane's sister which married improvident, and was badly left. When the old folks died, she got equal shares with Mary Jane, but she and her husband soon ran through their bit, and Mary Jane Smith is that sort of person that won't let the parish suffer through Mrs. Parson's fault. Elizabeth Parsons will be fair pined for what that ten shillin's would put into her inside, and, poor thing, she'll have to tramp about canvassin' for the annual tea, when she'll be feelin' much more like cravin' a bite and a sup to satisfy her own stummick."

"Oh, Mrs. Dixon, how cruel!" Tears of indignation and pity were in Rose's blue eyes.

"No, Miss; Mary Jane Smith isn't cruel; she's only dreadfully just. The parish must have Elizabeth Parson's ten shillin's because, reckonin' by what her father left, it ought to have had it from Mrs. Parsons. I'm not sayin' that Mary Jane Smith isn't a good religious woman, because she is, and I'm not sayin' that she'll let her sister starve while she can prevent it, but whatever she does afterwards for Mrs. Parsons and her children, that ten shillin's a-year will always have to come first. She's terrible just, is Miss Smith. That's what makes her take on so over the ninepenny ticket. It's not meanness, it's her sense of justice."

"But about them ten-shillin' tables, there's another reason for having them that, now that we're alone, I might as well explain," and Mrs. Dixon dropped her voice to a confidential key. "I was mentioning the unequalness of the tables when everyone found for themselves, but that wasn't all. We tried the plan of havin' everyone send their stuff to us, and sharin' it round the tables, and that led to just as much unpleasantness, especially one day when Mrs. Bryant weighted a seed cake on her hand. 'My word,' she says to the vicar's wife, 'that'll be fillin.' It had best go to the choir boys' table.' And she never knew till afterwards that it had come from the Vicarage."

Rose laughed merrily.

"Oh, poor thing!" exclaimed Mrs. Boyd, "what did she say when she learned the truth?"

"She? She didn't trouble; bless you, no, ma'am. It was Mrs. Withers as felt it. If she thought it, Mrs. Bryant would be bound to say it, whether or not she knew where it came from."

In the Vicarage drawing-room, after a late meeting, Rose gravely reproduced the discussion for the benefit of her brother-in-law and Hugh. The two men had come into supper, tired out from the conflict with Enoch and the rest.

"My dear," and the vicar turned to his wife with a look of mild concern, "don't, I beg of you, admit into your mind any suspicion that the parochial mind is apt to entangle itself in a web of trivialities."

"Now, Chris, if you are going to be sarcastic, I shall conclude that you have indeed had a bad time."

"Oh, not so very bad; just the usual heckling. It is always interesting to hear one's personality and one's achievements discussed by a candid and concientious looker-on."

"Interesting perhaps, but painful too," put in Hugh drily.

"I should think so, indeed," laughed Rose, to whom his eyes had involuntarily turned for sympathy.

"Oh, I don't know. We parsons ought to get used to that sort of thing, and as often as not it does us good. But I think that Enoch was even more captious than usual to-night. We had to arrange the details of the entertainment to follow the tea. For conscientious reasons, my program entirely failed to please him. Such like evenings were not what Pitsmoor wanted. 'Twas foolish work, and what Pitsmoor couldn't do with. Then Brotherton came to my rescue with an amendment, which was adopted with enthusiasm. Poor old Enoch! Every item of the original program is there under a different name. They'll never find it out, but it was a base deception all the same, and, in my extremity, I connived at it."

"What was one to do?" asked Hugh, laughing, but with a swift deprecatory glance at honest Rose Glyn; "we might have stayed there till midnight."

"Or longer; but comic songs have been cast out in favor of humorous recitations, and all is well."

"I don't think that was quite fair,' said Rose stoutly. "If there was really nothing to object to—even from Enoch's point of view—why didn't you fight it out instead of pretending to give in?"

The two men smiled across her at each other.

"I'm ready to do that when I have some hours at my disposal, and a point worth fighting for," said Mr. Boyd. "Meantime we may expect to see Enoch enjoying the fun as much as anyone."

The event failed to justify this prediction. Since Mr. Brotherton approved the proceedings, Enoch listened tolerantly to the melancholy-faced man from Milborough who did the comic business, but at the end of the evening, he candidly confessed that "from first to last" he could make "neither head nor tail of him."

(Continued on page 14.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

Children's Cozy Corner

Mother's Birthday Party.

"DO you know what day to-morrow is?"

"No."

"Well, it's mother's birthday."

"Did she tell you about it?"

"No, but I remembered. She said last year that no one knew when her birthday was any more, and I wrote it down in the back of my reader so I would be sure to remember. Let's have a party for her."

"How can we? It's too late to invite people, and besides we couldn't buy any nice things to eat."

"Oh, I know we are too poor to have an expensive party. But I didn't mean that kind. I meant for you and Nelly and me to make a party for her."

"Why, I don't see how we can," said mystified Benny.

"I'll tell you," said Joan, with a superior air. "You know mother works just dreadful hard. She hardly ever rests, 'cause ever since father was sick last winter she has took in washings to help pay the doctor's bills. Don't you s'pose she must be awful tired?"

Benny nodded sadly. "When I'm a man she shan't work so hard. I will help father earn some money, and I'll buy nice things for you girls, too."

"Yes, but we can let her have a rest to-morrow for her birthday present," said practical Joan, who wisely reflected that it would be a long time before Benny could give that assistance. "We can do all the work, and let her go to visit Aunt Jane. She has wanted to go for ever so long, and hasn't had time. Nelly is too little to help much, but she can go out in the field and get violets and make a big bouquet for mother when she comes home at night. I'm sure mother will like a party like that."

"I think that will be a nice party, and I'll help," said Benny.

So that night Joan begged mother to call her very early, in time to get breakfast ready for father. And mother, smiling, gratefully agreed, and stayed in bed an hour later in the morning. Father, in surprise, asked how Joan happened to be up so early, and she told him about the party.

"You are a good lass," said father heartily, and she felt very happy.

When mother got up, the children begged her to go and see Aunt Jane.

"It's your birthday, you know, mother," said Benny, "and we are going to do every bit of the work for your birthday party."

There were tears in mother's eyes, but she was so happy that she hummed a little tune while she was getting ready. "It's the first party I've had in ten years," she said, as she kissed them good-bye.

The children worked very hard that day, and Nelly gathered an amazing quantity of violets. Joan got the very best supper she could, and put on the best dishes. Then there was a surprise when father came home, for he brought some oranges and cakes for the supper, and a book as a present for mother. When she came home and saw the little feast and the present she cried a little, but declared she had never been so happy in her life. And indeed she looked very happy and quite rested for once.

—ELSIE VERNON.

If You Want to be Happy.

A LITTLE bird sat on the limb of a tree,
Its song was as joyous, as sweet as could be:
It cheerily rang through the dusky old wood,
"If you want to be happy, do good, oh, do good!"
No matter how dark the clouds in the sky,
He never stopped singing to grumble and sigh,
But warbled and chirped just as loud as he could,
"If you want to be happy, do good, oh, do good."

A Few Word Don'ts.

Here is a list of words and phrases in common use that boys and girls should avoid. They may be easily remembered. Don't say:

Guess for suppose or think.
Fix for arrange or prepare.
Ride when you mean drive.
Real good for really good.
Not as I know for not that I know.
Try an experiment for make an experiment.
She don't read well for she doesn't read well.
Party for person.
Posted for informed.
Depot for station.
Stopping for staying.
Like I do for as I do.

AREN'T THEY LOVELY?

Queer Things.

A CLOCK can run but can not walk;
My shoe has a tongue, but can not talk;
A comb has teeth, but has no mouth;
A north wind blows the smoke straight south.

Bottles have necks, but have no heads;
And pins have heads, but have no necks;
And needles have to hold their threads
Right in their eyes—how it must vex!

If I were needle, comb or shoe,
I never should know what to do;
My head is really in a whirl,
I'm glad I am a little girl.

—Selected.

Some Things Animals Teach Us.

THE woodpecker has a powerful little trip hammer.

The jaws of the tortoise and turtle are natural scissors.

The framework of a ship resembles the skeleton of a herring.

The squirrel carries a chisel in his mouth, and the bee the carpenter's plane.

The gnat fashions its eggs in the shape of a lifeboat. You cannot sink them without tearing them to pieces.

A porcupine's bill is strengthened by ribs in the same way that the iron masts of modern ships are strengthened.

The diving bell imitates the water spider. It constructs a small cell under the water, clasps a bubble of air between its legs, dives down into its submarine chamber with the bubble, displacing the water gradually, until its abode contains a large, airy room surrounded by water.—Kind Words.

A Ramble Thro' the Wildwood.

A DAIS'EYE opening in all its Morning Glory looked bright as a Sunflower when I ventured to walk by the Wood Bine. I had not gone far when I met the Man Drake by the Meadow Sweet; he warned me to look out for the Horse Radish and the Horse Chestnut, for they were a Prickly Pear, and to keep clear of the Colt's Foot, or I would Rue it.

I thanked the Old Man and went on my way; soon I was joined by Jon Quil and Mary Gold, who were waiting for Daphne and Sweet William; afterwards we met Lily Primrose and Rose Mary, talking with Betty Bounce and Robin Run-the-Hedge, while close behind were Ragged Robin and Creeping Charley.

Then we decided to make a call upon Columbine and strolled off like a Matrimony Vine or a Wandering Jew, avoiding the Cow Slips in the way. There was some laughing and whispering about Bleeding Hearts and Love Lies Bleeding; I guessed it was only Lad's Love and meant to make Traveller's Joy.

Soon we arrived at the House Leek; we could see Jacob's Ladder by the wall, the Cat's Tail by the door, and the Mare's Tail over the fence. The Dog, Fennel, was in the yard; he did not bark, but we could see the Hound's Tongue by the Water Cress, and Marguerite, Crazy Jane and Black-Eyed Susan feeding the Hen and Chickens that came to them in Phlox. They are so full of London Pride that they don't care a Bachelor's Button who sees them.

Veronica asked us to Wait-a-While, so we stayed to lunch. We had Hart's Tongue, Goose Foot, Lamb's Lettuce and Sweet Peas and for dessert, Partridge Berries, and Codlins-in-Cream served in Butter Cups.

It was all very nice, but we saw by the Shepherd's Clock that it was Four O'Clock and the Canterbury Bells were ringing, so we thought we would hear Jack-in-the-Pulpit preach. We left, saying Forget-Me-Not, and they said, "Speed Well; go thro' the Dog Wood, and avoid the Night Shade."

We found Jack, but he was not preaching; he looked very Sage; he was sitting upon a Toad Stool with a great Box before him; it had a lock like a Snap Dragon and was opened by pulling a Blue Bell. Jack said that it held curiosities that were given him by the Mourning Bride of the Sweet Sultan, who had them from the Emperor of Morocco, who told him that they were Marvels of Peru.

The Box held a Monk's Hood, a Spanish Dagger, a Golden Rod, a Prince's Feather, a Cock's Comb, a Mouse Ear, a Lark's Spur, a Fox Glove stitched with Toad Flax, a Lady's Slipper, a Snake Head, King Solomon's Seal and a giant Cockle; beside there were Bottles of all sorts, with Hen Bane and Leopard's Bane.

They were all very interesting, but we could not stay any longer, the day being yet bright as the Star of Bethlehem, we wished to get home in Thyme.

SARA H. KEARNEY.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1.—*Anagram.

(I can try. Do I?)
Total is a book
Owned by puzzlers all,
In which you often look
For words both large and small.

R. S.

2.—*Numerical.

Those who have 2 3 14 through 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 can 5 6 7 8 in fond remembrance of a splendid book, one that 7 9 10 8 with much pleasure. ALICE.

3.—Beheadings and Transpositions.

1. Behead disinclined and leave poetry.
2. Behead to consume and leave a vessel.
3. Behead a file and leave a poisonous serpent.
4. Behead in time past and leave to move.
5. Behead injury and leave a part of the body.
6. Behead the American century plant and leave a part of a verb meaning to bestow.
7. Behead mud and leave anger.

By transposition of the resulting words and one additional letter make:

1. Carousals.
2. Destruction.
3. A pair.
4. A tooth.
5. To wander.
6. A small mallet.
7. To restrain.

The Christian name of one of our presidents is spelled by the primals of the original words and his surname by the letters added to make the final list.

Answers to Puzzles of April 23.

1. Booklet.
2. It is well.
3. 1, Bear, ear; 2, Drake, rake; 3, Plover, lover; 4, Lark, ark; 5, Gizzard, izzard.
4.

D	A	T	E
A	B	I	B
T	I	R	O
E	B	O	N

(Answers in two weeks.)

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND. The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON. NATIONAL AND WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, May 7, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

A Voiceless Public Sentiment.

SOLOMON THE WISE is recorded as saying: "For everything there is a season, a time to keep silence and a time to speak." The passive virtue of silence undoubtedly has its place in the economy of life, but that place has been unduly exaggerated in the realm of political and social reform. A dumb public sentiment may have power, but there are crises when it needs to be endowed with human faculties, none more vitally necessary than speech. In dealing with highly organized, spiritually discerning organisms, there may be potency in a silent influence, but one comes to realize through experience that such unimpressionable, dense bodies as our legislators are not sensitive to telepathic communications, that they are, indeed, often deaf to whispered protestations of timid reformers, and that no form of public sentiment which does not shriek with a megaphonic voice is audible to their ears.

The liquor interests take this into account, and there is no uncertainty in the sound of their voices. Because of their frequency of utterance, as well as the blustering, noisy fashion of their speech, the average legislator is deceived into thinking that the voice of these interests is the voice of the public. The professional politician of today bows down to one idol—the idol of public opinion, seen through the veil of his imagination. He shapes his virtues and his vices in accordance with its dictates. If public sentiment shouts in his ears with sufficient volume, "We must have license," his easily-adjusted conscience, often working automatically in connection with this imagined public sentiment, goes into action accordingly.

The Local Option Bill, before the present session of the Illinois legislature, will serve as an illustration. The average member of that legislature, it is safe to say, has little conception of the intensity of public sentiment in favor of the bill. The liquor interests, however, have made certain that he should be forcibly reminded of their attitude toward the bill. The moment they discovered there was a possibility of the measure receiving a fair and impartial hearing on its merits, they framed their sentiments in fervid protests, threats and pleadings, and poured them into the ears of every representative in Springfield. They kept telephone and telegraph wires tingling with messages of remonstrance. They burdened the mail with letters from individuals, corporations and associations, and the volume of these expressions could not fail to impress the legislative mind.

What action should be taken to undeceive these legislators? The framers and supporters of this particular bill suggest a method which is equally applicable to anti-saloon legislation throughout the country. They suggest that every clergyman, and more particularly every business and professional man, frame his opinions in clear, unmistakable, forcible English, written upon his business letterhead, stating his profoundest convictions and making his demands as a citizen, these letters to be sent to every representative; that churches evidence their appreciation of temperance organizations by adopting resolutions of indorsement and support; these likewise to be sent to the "powers that be" at the capital.

If all Christian men could be relied upon to act in this matter with the unanimity which characterizes the saloon men, it is highly probable that our legislators would feel called upon to go into private session in order to revise their ideas of public sentiment.

A Menace To Missions.

THE question has been asked, "How can we make our missionaries realize that their greatest foe is intemperance?" That it is a pertinent question is evident by the manner in which the great missionary conventions, meeting to consider the leading problems of the world's evangelization, ignore the obstacles of the liquor and opium traffic.

In attempting to answer the question one can only say that there has been discovered no instantaneous nor even rapid method by which this result can be attained. The process must necessarily be a slow one. One can only suggest, "Keeping everlastingly at it" by agitation and education, making use of the most effective and unanswerable of arguments—well-authenticated facts. These facts, deplorable and outrageous, the liquor traffic is diligent, in season and out of season, in furnishing, sending out its agents in far greater numbers than the churches can send missionaries, supplying the natives with the soul-destroying drink more freely than the mission boards supply them with Bibles, and prejudicing whole tribes against the nobler type of "white man," thus either totally defeating or seriously crippling the efforts of the missionaries.

Strong individual conviction is the stuff public sentiment is made of, and a persistent yet unobtrusive campaign among individuals for the purpose of bringing about right thinking will accomplish much. To start a train of thought in the mind of a live man or woman often means inaugurating a far-reaching moral crusade.

There must be, as well, tactful yet unremitting effort to secure from the churches and their missionary societies such a measure of intellectual hospitality that they will afford themselves the opportunity to be convinced, that they will allow the subject of the liquor traffic in its relation to missions, to have a place in the programs of their meetings and their schedules of study, that they will permit those who are informed upon the subject to appear before them and present it and assure them a fair and impartial hearing. There could be but one result were a thorough ventilation of the subject permitted.

The necessity for the development of a national conscience upon the subject of the liquor traffic in its relation to the uncivilized races can not be too strongly urged. Nor can the existence and growth of such a sense of responsibility on the part of the nation fail to react upon every Christian patriot and prompt him eventually to take a vigorous stand for the abolition of the curse.

The action taken within the past few years by our own government to secure universal protection of uncivilized races against all intoxicants and opium is an earnest of the things we may confidently hope for in the future from the Christian nations of the world, if the churches and missionary boards will insist, as organizations, as churches and as individual citizens of a Christian nation, upon the total prohibition of intoxicants and opium among all the uncivilized nations, and the strict enforcement of such prohibitive measures.

Death of Bishop Foster.

WHITE-RIBBONERS will feel a peculiar sense of loss in the death, May 1, of Bishop Randolph S. Foster, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the beloved father of our National press correspondent, Miss Eva Kilbreth Foster. The life of this godly man has been a living sermon on purity and truth and righteousness, one that reached the hearts of countless numbers who never came under the spell of his personal magnetism and eloquence. His influence was not bounded by a creed or by a church. His uncompromising attitude on the temperance question was set forth in THE UNION SIGNAL several years ago, in the following extract from a sermon delivered before the Centennial Conference of Methodists at Baltimore, Md. Let it ring out again as a call to arms from the soul that now sees the conflict from the heights beyond:

"The church of to-day, much more the church of the future, must take to its heart the duty of combining and massing its forces against the gigantic atrocity, that diabolical conspiracy, that nameless "monstrum horrendum" of Christian civilization, that mothers nine-tenths of the woes and sorrows which blight and curse our modern age, the traffic in intoxicants, which hides its deformity under forms of law. How long shall the face of our Christian age blister with this worse than pagan shame? Has the virtue of our time degenerated so low that we do not even blush at the legislated traffic in the souls of our own children? That by the very doors of our homes, and our temples, an army of miscreants should, by authorization of laws made by Christian lawgivers, prosecute a work of murder and death? Are we reduced to the shame of admitting that a civilization that has grown up about our altars is impotent to cure the evil? How can we go to the heathen with this cancer of worse than heathen infamy festering in our bosom? Our church from the first law has borne testimony against it, but we must renew our protest with louder and more solemn emphasis until our land is secured. The exorcism of this demon, this vampire that has seized and preys on the very vitals of the nation, demands the combined energy of the church and the government."

Temperance and Missions. White ribboners have unusual opportunity in that the May topic in the Methodist Women's Foreign Missionary societies all over the country—perhaps in other denominations also—is the "Relation of Temperance to Missions." Let our women be on hand at all such meetings in their own churches, prepared to present the facts THE UNION SIGNAL has published in Mrs. Crafts' "Round the World Temperance Studies" and in other articles dealing with the subject. It would be well for a white ribboner to ask some woman missionary to address a W. C. T. U. meeting on "Liquors and Opium as Hindrances to Missions," requesting a return invitation to speak on the same subject in a missionary meeting, the members of both societies in both cases being invited to attend. When it is once clearly seen that temperance is a branch of missions, not alone of foreign missions but of home missions and city missions, then we may hope that temperance will be taken up as a regular branch of its work by the Church of God, which alone can carry it to decisive victory.

Gen. Miles on the Canteen. After months of waiting the last report of General Miles on the army in the Philippine Islands has been made public. Our readers will be most interested in what the general has to say in regard to the canteen, which is as follows:

"As a result of my observations it is my judgment that the discontinuance of the liquor feature of the canteen has been beneficial to the army. Now that the temptation has been removed from the immediate presence of the young men of the army they are less likely to indulge in the use of liquor."

So it would seem that all of the adverse testimony on this subject has had no weight with this man of experience and observation. He has covered both points of contention squarely by saying that the absence of the canteen has been "beneficial to the army" and that soldiers are less likely to indulge in the use of liquor when it is remote from them. The latter would seem to be a self-evident truth, but there are those, both in the army and out of it, who still contend that men drink more liquor when it is hard to get than when it is right at home. This renewed testimony and opinion on the part of General Miles ought to go far toward a settled conviction on the part of the public to the effect that the anti-canteen law is all right.

The Optimists' Club. This increasingly popular organization has been obliged to suspend meetings for a month, owing to the illness of its presiding genius, our good friend Dr. Cowan. We however trust that the activity of its members will furnish material for a report at the next meeting that will cheer us all into "Thankful Smyles."

Reception to World's Delegates. Lady Henry Somerset has invited the delegates to the World's Convention to a reception at her country home in Essex (within half an hour of London) for June 3 or 4, the date not being definitely settled. This reception will be a happy introduction to the social courtesies that will be extended to members of the convention at Geneva.

Mother Stewart's Birthday. A correspondent at Springfield, Ohio, sends this note concerning the birthday of Mother Stewart, one of our veteran crusaders: "Mother Stewart's eighty-seventh birthday was celebrated last Saturday with one of the finest private receptions ever given on her natal day. Many distinguished guests were present, letters and telegrams of congratulation from all parts of the world and many beautiful presents were received. An appropriate program was rendered and a superb collation was served by Springfield ladies. Mother Stewart is very frail physically, but bright mentally, and she takes an active interest in all the leading topics of the day."

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Hattie McMath, president of the W. C. T. U. of Alameda county, California, and of the local union at Oakland, made a pleasant call at the editorial rooms last week. Mrs. McMath and her daughter have been enjoying the novelty of an Illinois winter. They will return to their California home in May.

Mrs. Lucia H. F. Additon, National organizer, spent a pleasant hour with the editors last week, while passing through Chicago on her way from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast. Mrs. Additon will spend two months in Massachusetts. Her address during this time will be Abington.

President's Letter

MY DEAR COMRADES:—I hope this beautiful springtime finds you with hearts full of hope and good cheer, for certainly we have reason to be glad for the promising condition of our W. C. T. U. throughout our country, and in other countries as well.

Even in Vermont and New Hampshire the indications are that these states are not to remain in a condition that will enable the liquor fraternity to go on rejoicing. It is suggestive to note how much more is said and written about the repeal of prohibition in these states than about the retention and enforcement of the prohibitory law in Kansas, North Dakota and Maine. Everything possible for the liquor element to concoct was brought to bear in these states, but to no avail.

Most encouraging reports come from Texas, Mississippi and Tennessee—in fact, from all along the line. That righteous sentiment is gaining is shown by the fact that the Governor of Georgia considers it a great honor to be, as he is, an honorary member of the W. C. T. U. Governor Longino, of Mississippi, advocates state prohibition for Mississippi, and Governor Frazier, of Tennessee, has vetoed the dispensary bill passed by the last legislature. Governor Frazier's veto measure is an excellent anti-dispensary document. In it he says in part:

> If it is wrong or immoral or injurious to the public welfare for the individual to engage in the sale of liquor, it is equally so when the state, by its agent, a municipal corporation, engages in it. It seems to me, therefore, that this bill is indefensible either on principle or as a temperance measure.

He also says:

> Whatever may be said as to the extent to which the courts have gone in sustaining legislation of somewhat similar character, there are certain grounds for grave doubt as to the constitutionality of this in the several particulars indicated, but whether we are in direct contravention of the letter of the constitution or not, this bill is, in my judgment, utterly at variance with the spirit of our free institutions and the true conception of the powers and duties of government.

It will be well for the W. C. T. U. in every state where efforts are made to thrust upon the people this subtle form of license (the dispensary or state control system) to be active, as was Mrs. Holman, in agitating and educating in righteous ways. The unconstitutionality of a dispensary law may be a saving quality of which other states should take advantage.

There lies on my desk the current number of "Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular." This journal is published semi-monthly and contains sixty-eight pages (large size). To read even one copy of this paper should be enough to convince any intelligent person that it is right and best to prohibit the sale of liquor if it is desirable to lessen the consumption of alcoholics. This paper is given up to extensive advertising of all kinds of alcoholic liquors and to articles denouncing prohibition, and information in regard to the progress of the liquor trade. The following editorial is like toned with the entire paper:

> Experience has shown that prohibition is a humbug and in no way helps the cause of temperance, while on the other hand it induces hypocrisy and widespread disrespect for general law.

It is passing strange (but not unprecedented in the history of other great reforms) that a few good people should to-day indorse the exact sentiments expressed in this editorial. On page 857 of "The Outlook" for April 11, 1903, is an editorial entitled "Prohibition or Temperance, Which?" and we quote one statement:

> We hope that the day is not far distant when Maine, Kansas and North Dakota will follow the example of Vermont and New Hampshire and abandon the prohibition policy.

Recently Miss Gordon and I went to Cincinnati. We met the local W. C. T. U. committee who have in charge the preparation for the coming National Convention. We carefully considered the selection of the best available convention building and agreed with the committee that the convention would better be held in the Central Christian church. It is well located and its seating capacity is larger than the places in which we have been accustomed to hold our conventions. There are other near churches which we are assured will be open for Devotional Day, Department Conferences and for overflow meetings if necessary. The convention committees have their work well under way and we have every reason to believe that nothing on their part will be left undone to make the convention successful and its members comfortable and happy.

The World's Convention at Geneva promises to be largely attended by representatives from many lands. The W. C. T. U. of the United States will have a goodly number of delegates. Among our National superintendents who will be present we already know of Mrs. Bullock, Mrs. Stuckenberg, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Oberholtzer, and there will be delegates from the Far West, from the South, from the Middle West and New England. Maine is to have its full quota. We hope the same is true of Massachusetts and of many other states, although in the World's Convention we are known not by states, but by countries. Miss Gordon and I sail from New York May 16, on the "Minnehaha," Atlantic Transport Line.

During our absence letters sent to our home addresses, Evanston or Portland, will be promptly forwarded, and our English address will be care of B. W. T. A. headquarters, 47 Victoria street, Westminster, London, S. W. We shall remain on the other side less than a week after the World's Convention closes. These few days will be filled with post-convention work. Returning, we shall sail June 20.

Praying that the Lord may watch between those who remain and those who go while we are separated one from the other, and that our precious cause may continually triumph, I am,

Sincerely and affectionately yours,

Lillian M. N. Stevens

Stroudwater, Portland, Maine, April 22, 1903.

Monthly Bible Reading.

TOPIC: Servants of Christ.

By Rev. Frances E. Townsley.

THESE have peculiar honors: John, 12; 26,—a positive statement of a blessed fact. Somehow, Christ deals in facts, not guesses, in assertions, not maybes, and this one is particularly to be noted: "If any man, high or low, learned or ignorant, rich or poor —"if any man serve me, him will my Father honor."

Again, he has another statement for servants of His: John, 15: 15: "No longer . . . . servants," but "friends." To be a friend of an influential person in art, science, or social life is thought desirable, but – the friend of God and Christ—that is worth while.

There is a nearer relationship still: Matt., 12: 50. O ye Alones of earth, hear this! Ye Childless, listen: "the same is my Mother." Reverent silence is ours as we read it. Are the household ties broken? Are you a waif, a wanderer on the face of the earth? "My sister, my brother" are terms which Jesus Christ offers as expressing your relationship to Himself, if serving and obeying the will of God.

And farther, Christ's servant is an heir with Him. in His last talks with His servant-disciples, He said (Luke, 22: 28-30): "I appoint unto you a Kingdom, and ye shall eat and drink at my table, and sit upon thrones." They do not now. To-day the meek do not inherit the earth, but as sure as Christ is true, they some day shall realize the literal fulfillment of this promise.

CHRIST'S SERVANTS HAVE BRAND-MARKS.

Gal. 6; 17. Paul says, "I bear in my body the brand-marks of the Lord Jesus." It may be that he was thinking of the old Israelitish custom when a man's servant, being offered freedom at a certain time in the Jewish Calendar, refused it because of love for his master and the family, saying, "I will not go out free; I love my master. I will serve him forever." And then the master put his mark of ownership on the willing servant, boring his ear through with a sharp instrument, as in Exodus, 21: 5, 6.

Our ears belong to Jesus. Then what shall we hear? His guiding voice: Psalm 32:8. Luke 8:18. 'Take heed how ye hear."

And obeying that word I think we shall hear better, more hopeful reports than otherwise, and declare these good reports, lest the hearts of men fail.

Have you heard that as a result of the new English Licensing Bill, which prohibits the serving of drunkards with liquor, a certain seller has sent a typewritten letter to a number of his former customers, informing them that he must request the discontinuance of their custom now? Have you heard of that large number of dollars collected in fines of certain men of Bangor, Maine, who thought they would see if prohibition could prohibit? Have you heard how Collinwood, Ohio, ten miles east of Cleveland, had its saloons closed when the Lake Shore railroad promised to spend $1,000,000 in improvements, if the citizens would drive out the rum? Do you know the many counties in Texas lately gone dry? There's much good news to hear. Shut your ears to chit-chat, discouragement, and "I-told-you-so's" and hear the song of hope, the harbinger of the Day to dawn.

Christ's servant has the foot mark also: John, 12:26. They "follow" Him, so they go not where He leads not.

They have the heart-mark, "doing the will of God from the heart." Eph., 6:6.

They have the will-mark: Heb., 10:9, saying with their Master, "I come to do Thy will, O God."

They have the hand-mark: Acts, 3:7. Peter's hand was what? Sixteen muscles, thirty-six movable joints, twenty-seven bones. Yes, and more, for back of it was a full soul, a heart beating in unison with the pulse beats of Jehovah. That is why he could grasp the crippled beggar's hand and say effectively, "Walk!" Organized charities, helpful reforms, will avail little for the real uplift of humanity, unless the hand of the helper has the brand-mark of real union, aye, crucifixion with Christ.

True servants of our Lord have the head-mark: II, Cor., 10:5. Every thought brought into captivity to the obedience of Christ is what few, if any, have yet attained unto. Many are serving for the name of it as praised of men, others for the good salary a Christian or reform office brings them, others, thank God! for love to Him who bought them, called them, empowers and uses them.

After hearing Lyman Beecher preach, Wendell Phillips went to his room and threw himself upon the floor crying, "O God, I belong to Thee! Take what is Thine own."

There's a great demand for servants in the homes of our people. Christ, too, is calling aloud, "If any man will serve me, let him follow me. If any man serve me him will my Father honor." And may there be a mighty response of noble ones, for > "a time like this demands

> Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
> For while the rabble with their thumb-worn creeds,
> Their large professions and their little deeds,
> Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
> Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice sleeps."

Vassar, Mich.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS: Just now I have upon my mind a most attractive weekly paper called THE UNION SIGNAL. Perhaps all who read these Notes think as much of it as I do and if I were to ask, "Where do you go for your information and inspiration for W. C. T. U. work?" you would answer, "To THE UNION SIGNAL." I am persuaded, also, that if I were to ask, "What is the matter with THE UNION SIGNAL?" you would all with one accord reply, "Nothing is the matter with THE UNION SIGNAL," and to my way of thinking you would be about right.

For many years we longed to have THE UNION SIGNAL printed on better paper and we have that now. For long years we said, "Oh if we could only have illustrations," and we have them now in plentiful abundance. More general and temperance news have been introduced, more direct communications from the unions, more personals, and more along many different lines in which we are interested. The paper is bright, crisp and up to date.

But all of these, desirable as they are, are secondary to the fact that it is an indispensable aid to our own especial work. What would we expect of a Christian Endeavor Society without a single copy of its official paper? How could the Epworth Leagues follow the Lessons without the Lessons and the helps given in their official organ? We would no more expect such societies to live and thrive than we would expect an aimless wanderer to reach his destination or indeed to even have a "destination." What inference shall we draw concerning unions which do not take THE UNION SIGNAL? We are not left to inference for our speakers constantly convey the intelligence that, to use Methodist phraseology, they are luke-warm, dead or dying.

As I pause in this dissertation, there comes to my inner sense a pretty strong cry to this effect: "We cannot take THE UNION SIGNAL at one dollar and a half." Doubtless in a few cases this is true and to such the reading of THE UNION SIGNAL ought to be offered free, either by loan, or a subscription presented by the union. As for the others, is it not the case that having had THE UNION SIGNAL for so long for one dollar, they are unwilling rather than unable to pay the price? Is it not pertinent to ask, why unwilling? The writer knows of no church paper published for less than one dollar and fifty cents, although behind most of these papers is a church publishing house from which deficits are made up, except for the young people's societies. In such cases the immense number obliged to have the paper every week for the lessons and helps makes it possible to charge a smaller sum. It should be remembered, also, that the dollar magazines are published but twelve times a year whereas THE UNION SIGNAL is published fifty-two times. The original subscription price was $1.50, and a reduction was made in the belief that a greatly increased circulation would result.

The Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and the present lessees of its business have tried to publish THE UNION SIGNAL for one dollar, and have declared themselves unable to do so. It would seem, therefore, that the thing which remains to be done is to accept the situation and continue to subscribe for our unsurpassed official organ at the present price. Out of our large membership, there is a sufficient number who can pay $1.50 without its being any hardship; and moreover there should be a willingness to sacrifice, if need be, for a help so essential to the life and growth of every local union.

Here are two things which should be borne in mind: The management is offering the paper for $1.25 when ten names are sent in one order. Is it reasonable to suppose that twenty-five cents will often prevent a subscription to our official organ? The second thing to be remembered is that if the paper is ever published at one dollar, it will have to be through an increased circulation. This is worth working for. Is there any reason why THE UNION SIGNAL should not have a subscription list of 80,000?

Let us think on these things and leave no stone unturned to put our beloved paper into the hands of every white ribboner for the highest of all motives, that we may be able to do the best work, and "all other things will be added," or, in other words, the financial part will thereby take care of itself.

Yours cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

With The Treasurer.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Willard Memorial fund since last report are as follows, $2 except as noted:

ILLINOIS: Reddick, Eureka, Bushnell.

MISSOURI: Hopkins, Memphis, Eldon, Wyaconda, Knox City, New Point, St. Joseph, Central, Hannibal, Monroe City, Raymore, Sedalia, Neosho, St. Louis Y, West End, Lafayette, Joplin, Seymour, Adrian, Mrs. McKibbon, Monett, Union Springs, Aurora, Mt. Vernon, Moundville, Ozark, Mt. Grove, Commerce, Campbell.

NEBRASKA: Spring Ranch, Valentine.

VERMONT: Middletown Springs, Wells, Montpelier, Rochester, Woodstock.

KENTUCKY: Lexington Central, Monticello, Madisonville.

MAINE: Brownfield, Wayne, South Windham.

OHIO: Newport, Springboro, Darbyville, Quakertown.

CALIFORNIA: Gilroy.

TENNESSEE: Winchester, Knox, Chattanooga, Lebanon, Park Place, Clarksville, Jonesboro, Tullahoma, Harriman, Mary T. Lathrop Union.

PENNSYLVANIA: Union City, Croton, Connellsville, New Castle, Perryopolis.

MISSISSIPPI: Columbus, Waynesboro.

CONNECTICUT: Hartford, Juliette H. Spencer $3, Plantsville, Unionville, Ansonia.

EAST WASHINGTON: Goldendale $5.

COLORADO: Denver (Jennie Smith Union), Grand Junction, Fort Lupton.

MICHIGAN: London, North Adams, Le Roy, Akron, Pittsfield, Stockbridge.

TEXAS: Houston, San Angelo.

MASSACHUSETTS: Bryantville.

MONTANA: Missoula, Townsend, Billings, Absaroka, Stevensville, Miles City.

FLORIDA: Jacksonville, Apalachicola, Tallahassee, De Lana, Stanford, High Spring.

NEW YORK: Philmont, Alfred Center, Almond, Andover, Belfast $3, Rushford, South Edmeston, South New Berlin, Fairport, Irondeznoit, Rochester Sixth Ward, Rochester Nineteenth Ward, Webster, Newburgh, Groton, West Genoa and Five Corners, La Grange $1, Ferbank $1, Poughkeepsie, Reed Corners, Seneca Castle, Seneca Castle Y $1, Dekalb Junction, Gouverneur, Massena, Ogdensburg, Parishville, Potsdam, Halsey Valley $1, Nicholville, Norwood, Ogdensburg, Parishville, Potsdam, Halsey Valley $1, Newark Valley $1.85, Oswego, Waverly, Lincoln.

KANSAS: Tyro.

INDIANA: Huntington.

WYOMING: Casper.

NORTH DAKOTA: Pembina.

ALABAMA: Prattsville.

RHODE ISLAND: Mt. Pleasant, Phenix.

OKLAHOMA: Okarche.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Center Sandwich.

MINNESOTA: Treasurer $91.17, St. Peter.

ARKANSAS: Clarksville, Prescott, Paragould, Ozark $1, Morrillton, Searey, Van Buren.

Dues have been sent in by Tennessee, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Missouri, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Minnesota and Rhode Island.

HELEN M. BARKER.

Superintendents.

Flower Mission.

DEAR FRIENDS: Three months ago, through the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL, I had the pleasure of addressing my first letter to you. I feel sure you will remember I begged your indulgence and requested the co-operation for the coming year of all interested in the work of the Flower Mission department. How beautifully so many of you have responded to this appeal, in the eagerness to do all possible in your several states and to stand so nobly at my side, I need not here relate, but simply say that your kind, willing, determined spirit is more than appreciated and has been indeed an uplift to my soul. Thank you, dear friends, for this greatly needed helpfulness.

And now, may I call your attention once more to June ninth, the birthday of Jennie Casseday, that pure soul who was the first leader of our Flower Mission department. Let us have a more extensive celebration than ever before of this day, all over the United States. Will each state superintendent do her best to bring this about in her own state, and will all district, county and local unions be ready and anxious to do their part in the beautiful work of this Red-Letter Day?

Two new leaflets, specially fitted to this season of the year, are now ready, "Bee's Flower Mission," described so well and so beautifully by Frances Bennett Callaway, and "Suggestions to Flower Mission Workers," both of which I hope will be very helpful to all our co-workers in this department. It will give me much pleasure if the state superintendents will do all in their power to have these new leaflets widely circulated throughout their constituencies.

I am always glad to hear from district, county and local workers, and hope they will continue their interesting correspondence from time to time. There are some, however, who do not yet know of the resignation of my predecessor, Ethel Austin Shrigley, still addressing letters and orders for literature to her. Please remember to send directly to me, as it will save all delay and prevent unnecessary work for Miss Shrigley. Will each superintendent kindly send a notice to this effect to her state organ as soon as possible. If all members read THE UNION SIGNAL, as they should do, this notice would not be necessary.

One word more to the local workers: do not forget, my good friends, to report all work done, even to the very smallest amount, as this is most important.

Let us do our best, dear comrades, to bring about the "glad day", when we shall see in our blessed department that wonderful growth towards which we are looking and for which we are working. With best wishes to each and every co-worker, believe me

Yours most cordially,
LELLA M. SEWALL.

330 Massachusetts Ave., Boston.

Organizers.

DEAR COMRADES: Although only new among you as a fellow-laborer I desire to give my little "mite" into the King's treasury.

Since my appointment as a National organizer I have spent three months afield in my own state. More than two weeks of that time were given to evangelistic meetings in Sedgwick county, at Goddard, just a few miles from one of the darkest spots on the face of Kansas—Wichita. Two open joints had been doing business in Goddard for years, but God took hold of the hearts of the people and victory perches on the banner of King Immanuel today.

Many found and accepted Christ, and when the spring election came the votes were for "God and Home and Native land."

I have planted eight organizations of W's, Y's, and L. T. L.'s, and enrolled many in our ranks. A four weeks' trip is just finished, most of the work having been in the Sixth district, Kansas. Kansas has redeemed herself in many places at our spring elections. We are hoping for more and more victory. May God bless the work and the workers.

MINNIE JOHNSON-GRINSTEAD.
Larned, Kansas.

IN CONVENTION

Teachers Learn Something Not in the Class Books.

A number of young women attending a teachers' convention at Oklohama City some time ago learned a valuable lesson in hygiene through a sister teacher who says: "About a year ago I had my first attack of poor health and it seemed a terrible thing to me for I had always been so well and strong. My stomach distressed me terribly; it seemed like it was raw, especially after breakfast, and it would burn and hurt me so I could not rest. I was soon convinced that it was caused by coffee drinking and at the request of a friend I gave up coffee and began to use Postum Coffee.

"The change in my condition was something marvellous. I had actually given up teaching because doctors were unable to help my stomach trouble, but since I quit coffee and used Postum my troubles have disappeared and I have gone to teaching again.

"Some time ago I attended a convention at Oklahoma City and determined to have Postum at my boarding-house where there were eight other teachers, four of them suffering from coffee sickness. My landlady did not make the Postum right, but I showed her how and we all found it delicious. We all drank it the rest of the time we were there and the young ladies in question felt much better and declared that their heads were much clearer for study and their general health much improved. I have their names if you care for them." Names furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"That's Meat and Drink To Me."
SHAKESPEARE.

HORLICK'S MALTED MILK

as a luncheon

is delicious, invigorating, nutritious. Prepared instantly in the home, office, or study. Excellent for business and professional people, and those troubled with impaired digestion.

It is pure, rich milk and an extract of choice, malted grain, condensed to powder form, ready in a moment by dissolving in water. No cooking is required.

SAMPLE If you are not using it, let us send you a trial package FREE

Write for Shakespearean Booklet on Horlick's Malted Milk Beverages.

Horlick's Food Co., Racine, Wis., U. S. A.
24 Farringdon Road, London, Eng. 25 St. Peter St., Montreal, Can.

ALLIGATOR PUNCTUREPROOF SELF-HEALING BICYCLE TIRES
NAILS, TACKS AND GLASS WILL NOT LET THE AIR OUT.
ALL SIZES
NO TIRE MADE LIKE IT — FEEL OF IT
REGULAR PRICE $10 NOW ONLY $4.95 PER PAIR EXPRESS PREPAID
Sent C.O.D. subject to examination anywhere. No deposit required. Express paid only when cash accompanies order. Catalog free, with description and key to this illustration.
THE VIM COMPANY COR. STATE & LAKE STS. CHICAGO
SOLE MANUFACTURERS
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

BABY'S DIAPER AND CLOTHES WASHER
LADY AGENTS WANTED
A TERROR TO WASH BLANKETS!!!
NO ALL WEARING APPAREL CLEAN EASILY.
SAMPLE PREPAID 65c J.H. LUDWICK, McCOOK, NEB.

Temperance Helps
FOR Primary Teachers

By L. MABEL FREESE.

Introduction by Mary S. Snow.

A HAND BOOK FOR EDUCATORS AND MOTHERS.

Replete with Suggestions, Outlines and Temperance Information.

Cloth Bound, Price 50 Cents.

"It answers the question often implied: 'How can we teach children temperance without dwelling on vice?' There is no book that mothers and teachers will find more helpful in instructing young children along the lines of health and temperance."

"The stories and poems charm children who can read them for themselves."

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOC'N,
184 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Miss Emma Page spoke three times in Cheney, Washington, recently.

Mrs. M. E. Kuhl, of Illinois, is doing good work in Kings county, California.

The W. C. T. U. of Bloomington, Ill., will present both public schools with portraits of Frances Willard.

The address of Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, National superintendent of the department of Mercy, is Wyneote, Pa.

Miss Eunice E. Cusick gave an address for the New London, Iowa, union not long ago.

Mrs. W. E. Hopkins, of India, lectured for the Willard union of Milwaukee, Wis.

The Kalamazoo, Mich., union gave a program in memory of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, April 24.

The South End Union, of Troy, N. Y., discussed its plans for the summer's work at its last meeting.

"Our Idea of True Beauty" was the topic considered by the Belding, Mich., union at a recent meeting.

The Table Rock, Neb., union recently entertained the state president, Mrs. D. V. Wheelock.

The Hamilton, Canada, union gave a delightful musical and literary program to many guests the evening of April 23.

Miss Mary E. Barbour, National evangelist, gave the principal address at the Fifth district, Mich., annual convention.

The Central W. C. T. U., of Bloomington, Ill., is considering the plan of holding a rummage sale.

The Ithaca, N. Y., union discussed "The Liquor Laws of Our City and How to Enforce Them." Rev. Guy B. Galligher was the chief speaker.

"The Responsibility of Motherhood" was the topic considered by the De Kalb, Ill., union. Many interesting points were brought to bear on the subject.

Bureau county, Ill., has held its first institute at a country church four miles north of Wyanet. Miss Frances Ensign, National lecturer, was the leader.

Miss Mary Staub won the medal in the contest held in connection with the well-attended and interesting institute in Bushnell, Ill.

About 300 children were present at the juvenile rally, with which Mercer county, N. J., closed its spring convention.

Miss Lois Russel, state lecturer, spent several days in Superior, Wis. Her meetings were well attended and productive of good.

The W. C. T. U. was included among the guests at an afternoon tea given by the Philadelphia Flower, Fruit and Ice Mission.

Non-Alcoholic Medication was discussed by the Waterloo, Iowa, union last Saturday. The attendance was large and the interest good.

Sabbath Observance was the subject considered by the East End union, of Pittsburg, Pa., at a special meeting not long ago.

The W. C. T. U. headed the petition of 178 citizens of Fredonia, N. Y., which secured the passing of a curfew ordinance by the village board.

Iroquois county, Ill., held its institute at Watseka, Miss Brehm, state president, presiding. As one result there is a new union in Watseka of fourteen members.

Mrs. Emily U. Burgess, National organizer, was the speaker at the Ontario county, N. Y., institute. Each of the twenty unions in the county was represented.

The Central union, of Bay City, Mich., held a reception for new members April 28. The program given was in memory of Michigan's promoted leader, Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop.

The Central union, of Buffalo, N. Y., attended the anniversary meeting of the South Side union of the same city. Mrs. W. D. Jones, the county president, gave the anniversary address.

The Saratoga county, N. Y., institute met in Ballston, with Mrs. Ella Boole, state president, as the leader. Many interesting and helpful topics were on the program.

Three new members were added to the Troy, N. Y., union at its last meeting. "Flower Mission and Relief Work" was the topic discussed. Much interest was manifested.

At its last meeting the Ashland, Wis., union listened to a paper on "Sociology," by Augusta Kennedy. Child Labor and the Consumers' League were also discussed.

Kent county, Del., held its sixtenth annual convention in Harrington. Mrs. Ella M. Thacher, National superintendent, spoke in the afternoon on the need of young women in W. C. T. U. work and gave the evening address.

McHenry county, Ill., was organized at an institute held at Harvard, April 22 and 23. Miss Brehm was the leader and gave the principal address. Mrs. N. F. Colver, of Morenga, was elected county president.

"Hindrances and Helps to Purity of Life for Boys and Girls," was the topic at the mothers' meeting held by the W. C. T. U. in Oshkosh, Wis., last week. There were about thirty present and the discussion was interesting.

Mrs. Dr. Yeomans addressed a temperance meeting held by the Y. M. C. A. in Winnipeg, Manitoba. She spoke of disfranchisement as hindering the reform work of women, and prophesied ultimate victory for our cause

The Chelsa, Pa., L. T. L. considered "Mercy" and "How the Government Looks at the Liquor Traffic" not long ago. An interesting program of recitations and music was also given and refreshments served.

The Hancock county, Ill., union will give a scholarship in Carthage College each year to the boy or girl who completes the common school course and has the highest grade in physiology at the final examination.

An all-day prayer meeting was held by the Springfield, Ill., union. The theme considered was the better observance of the Sabbath. The crusade against cigarets was urged. Several signed the pledge and some new members were added.

The Eighth Ward union, of Minneapolis, Minn., observed its fourteenth anniversary with a special program. There was a large attendance, among the visitors being Mrs. Bayrell, president of the Fifteenth district and Mrs. Nealy, president of the Hennepin district.

The Loyal Temperance Legion work is well represented in the press despatches from Reading, Pa. The Legions are named Frances Willard, Neal Dow and Anna Gordon. All seem to be having interesting and well attended meetings.

Miss Marie Brehm conducted the Vermilion county, Ill., institute at Georgetown. Delegates from all the local unions were present. Of Miss Brehm's address the press report says: "It surpassed anything in that line we ever heard."

Mrs. Sara Ayres, much to the regret of her associates, was unable to serve longer as a California county president. At the convention, when she retired from office, she was presented with a gold-lined berry spoon, a beautiful bouquet of carnations and ferns and a purse of money.

In an address before the county convention, held in Sacramento, Cal., Rev. S. G. Adams, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, regretted the growing use of stimulants among women. This he ascribed largely to the increasing social duties, which subject women to a continuous strain.

"Willard Day," as it was called, was well arranged by Mrs. L. F. King, of Concord, Cal. The teachers prepared a Willard program in which pupils from all the rooms took part. Life size portraits of Miss Willard were presented by the W. C. T. U. to each of the five rooms.

The March number of the "American Mother," Battle Creek, Mich., contained an article on "School Savings Banks" by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, and that of the "Mother's Journal," New Haven, Conn., an article of "The need of National Economy," by the same author.

The Charm of Perfect Health is one of the greatest gifts that Nature can bestow. It comes to those who obey her laws. Nature's food is grain—and fruit.

Malta-Vita

is whole wheat impregnated with barley malt, seasoned with salt, thoroughly cooked, daintily flaked, toasted to nut-brown crispness. It makes a delightful, appetizing, satisfying meal—morning, noon, night. Delicious when served with fresh luscious fruit.

No Work, no heat;
Just cream—then eat.

See coupon in Malta-Vita packages, telling how to secure a $350.00 Kimball Piano and other valuable articles free.

Malta-Vita Pure Food Company,
Battle Creek, Michigan, U. S. A.

Mrs. Eva Kinney Miller and Miss Wiley conducted a very successful institute at Carthage, Ill., April 20 and 21. Mrs. Miller preached Sabbath morning and gave a chalk talk in the evening. A contest was held Monday evening and Tuesday night Mrs. Miller's lecture topic was "A Woman's Cry.'

Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins, National lecturer, celebrated her seventy-ninth birthday April 23. Many friends called during the day bringing flowers and books and other gifts. Mrs. Perkins is a successful author and also edits a monthly paper, "A True Republic." With all this she finds time to be an active worker in the state and county unions.

Attorney-General Webb, of California, having decided that the use of the Bible in the public schools of that state is unconstitutional, the W. C. T. U. purposes bringing the matter to the attention of religious and educational associations. It is desired that a law may be enacted, which will legalize the use of the Bible in schools.

The Lathrop union of Milwaukee, Wis., has the happy faculty of keeping its work well before the newspaper readers of the city. It has recently commenced work in several new departments, and has taken action disapproving of the bill before the legislature, which proposes to use two per cent of the liquor tax for teachers pensions.

The Bond county, Ill., institute met at Greenville, April 20. Miss Epha Marshall, of Abingdon, state organizer, was the leader. Many papers were read and discussed. A gold medal contest was held the second evening, Miss Mary Staub, of Greenville, being the successful contestant. While the attendance was not so large as hoped, yet the meeting was both pleasant and profitable.

Mrs. Ada W. Unruh, National organizer, scored another success in Eastman, Ga. She had immense audiences and organized a union of 106 members. It starts out with eight subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL, and more to follow. Mrs. Unruh also spoke at Athens, the most scholarly and conservative city in Georgia. A Somerset Y of sixty members was organized at the State Normal School there.

A correspondent sends the following news item: The Licking County Rescue Home was established at Newark, Ohio, March 18, 1903, under the management of our president, Mrs. Jennie P. Sisson, who is state superintendent of rescue work. Collectors were appointed, who made a thorough canvass of the city and met with success. Many of the unions in the county responded liberally. Therefore in a few months a few consecrated, determined women had provided a pleasant home, under the supervision of Mother Prindle, to rescue the fallen. Mother Prindle needs no introduction along this line of work, as she is well known in gathering in the footsore and weary. Three souls have already found a haven of rest in the comfortable quarters which have been so kindly provided for them, largely through the persistent efforts of our beloved president, Mrs. Jennie P. Sisson."

HINTS ON HOME NURSING

By GERTRUDE KELLOGG,

Former Supt. of the Training School for Nurses. Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital.

[Miss Graessle, Superintendent of the Training School for Nurses of the National Temperance Hospital, finds it impossible to prepare this column owing to the many demands upon her time, and the work has, therefore, been placed in the hands of Miss Gertrude Kellogg, a former Superintendent, who is now a student in the Lewis Institute, Chicago, where she is preparing herself for greater usefulness in her profession.—EDITOR.]

Typhoid Fever.

TYPHOID fever is an acute infectious disease, supposed to be caused by a certain organism."

Typhoid occurs generally during the summer and autumn months. Individuals over twelve and under forty years of age are the must susceptible to the disease. The time of incubation lasts from one to two weeks. In normal cases the duration of the fever is about three weeks, the temperature gradually declining and convalescence beginning in the fourth week. In protracted cases convalescence may be delayed until the seventh and even the tenth week.

Symptoms: Headache, backache, aching of the limbs, general malaise, chilly sensations, lessened appetite and in some cases epistaxis (nosebleed).

Temperature is characteristic, commencing at 99 degrees the first night and gradually rising, being about one degree higher each evening than on the previous evening, generally reaching 104-106 degrees. It then remains stationary, with slight variations during the second week. The pulse rate increases proportionately with the rise of temperature and is characteristically small, soft and compressible.

The tongue at first is coated and white, but later it may become dry and dark. The mouth requires constant care and vigilance to prevent the fetid accumulation about the teeth, which is a mixture of food, micro-organisms, saliva, etc. This condition can be prevented by frequent cleansing of the mouth, which may easily be accomplished by winding small squares of old linen or muslin wrapped round the finger, previously dipped in some antiseptic solution, such as listerine, or, still better, a saturate solution of boric acid with glycerine and listerine.

Plenty of water to drink, especially after the patient has had milk or other food, is also beneficial. Finely cracked ice cools and moistens the mouth and is very comforting.

The care of the excreta is very important. The stools are the principal media through which the disease is carried, and should be thoroughly disinfected.

Chloride of lime, Platt's chlorides, bichloride of mercury, 1 to 1,000 in strength, or a 95 per cent solution of carbolic acid may be used. The two latter are very poisonous and should be kept by themselves, plainly labeled.

Always wash your hands and disinfect them thoroughly after cleansing such patients, particular attention being paid to the finger nails.

Sheets and clothing stained with typhoid discharges must be at once washed out and soaked in a disinfectant solution until washed and boiled. They should be laundered separate from other clothing. For expectoration old cloths or paper napkins should be used and immediately burned.

Complications.

I. HEMORRHAGE. Watch carefully for hemorrhage, which may occur at any time after the second week. The first indication is usually a sudden fall of temperature, pulse very rapid and feeble, a pinched, anxious expression of the face, the pupils dilated, patient very restless, extremities are cold and clammy and finger tips and nails blue, or blood appearing suddenly in stools. The hemorrhage comes through the sloughing through the wall of a blood vessel at the base of an ulcer.

TREATMENT. The patient must be kept perfectly quiet; the foot of the bed elevated; an ice bag placed over the abdomen. The extreme cold, acting as an irritant, contracts the blood vessels, sending the supply of blood elsewhere.

II. PERFORATION OF THE INTESTINE.—This is one of the greatest dangers in typhoid fever, and generally ends fatally.

General Treatment.

Where delirium or nervous symptoms are present an ice bag or iced cloth may be applied to the head. Delirious patients should be watched carefully.

The patient should be turned frequently from side to side and his back supported by a pillow. Rub with hamemelis and powder with boric acid to prevent bed sores. If redness occurs, indicating the beginning of a bed sore, apply oxide of zinc ointment or mutton tallow. Pads of cheese cloth and cotton may be used to relieve pressure.

MEANS USED FOR THE REDUCTION OF TEMPERATURE. The most commonly employed methods, the effect in which in general is produced by evaporation, are sponging, packing, tubbing and cold enemata.

SPONGE BATH. The sponge bath is the old and generally applied remedy. Disturb the patient as little as possible. First put flannel blankets under the patient, then cover with a sheet or large towels, or a blanket, if patient is inclined to be chilly. A cold wet compress is kept on the head. Begin with tepid water and reduce by lumps of ice until temperature is 65 degrees. The body is bathed in sections. The sponging begins with the face and neck and proceeds to the arms. It should be done with long, light strokes. After the arms, the chest and abdomen, and then the legs. A cold wet towel is spread over the chest and abdomen. Five minutes' time, at least, should be given to each section, and the cloth or sponge used should often be changed for a fresh one. During the bath plenty of cold, boiled water should be given the patient to drink.

COLD PACK. The wet pack is one of the most practical ways of reducing the temperature. A long rubber sheet or oil cloth is first put on the bed, then a blanket, over this a sheet which has been previously wrung out of cold water is folded lengthwise and placed under the patient. An additional wet sheet covers every surface of the body by being well tucked in at the neck, sides and lower limbs. The feet must be left uncovered and if at all inclined to be cold heat should be applied to them. A cold compress or ice bag must be applied to the head. The sheets should be wet anew and kept at desired temperature.

In extreme cases the most efficient treatment, and that securing the best result, is the cold tub "bath," or tubbing. This need not be described, as it comes under the province of the physician or trained nurse.

The cleansing bath should never be neglected, as no amount of cold water will take its place. A bath with warm water and soap must be given daily.

DIET. Liquid diet is necessary from the first, milk being the principal food; from three to five pints are usually given in the twenty-four hours (from four to six ounces every two hours). Milk may be alternated with chicken broth, beef juice, mutton broth, kumyss, buttermilk or grape juice.

Soft foods, such as eggs, custards and jellies, are ordered after the temperature has been normal for a few days, and then it is necessary to begin with small amounts. Milk or food of any kind should not be allowed to remain in the room. The dishes used for typhoid patients must be kept separate from the dishes used for the family.

VENTILATION AND CARE OF ROOM. Particular attention must be given to the cleanliness and ventilation of the room. All furniture not in use, draperies, carpets, etc., should be discarded. The floor and contents of room should be wiped daily with a damp cloth.

A room with a southern exposure is best, with windows on all sides, to admit all the sunshine and fresh air possible. Foul air must be replaced by pure fresh air without causing a draught. To accomplish this windows are opened from top and on opposite sides of the room, one in the direction from which the wind blows and the other away from it, at the same time being careful that the door is not left open, which would produce an opposite current. If a draught be caused it will be too high to harm the patient. The cold air entering the top will be slightly warmed in its descent.

Another simple way to ventilate the room is to open the lower sash of the window six or eight inches and place a board across the opening below. The air will enter between the two sashes and be directed upwards and diffused.

At least once a day the patient should be covered up for a few moments and the windows all thrown open, allowing the room to be thoroughly flushed with fresh air.

Every sick room should be provided with a thermometer, which in fever should register from 65 to 70 degrees.

Chicago, Ill.

DR. SHOOP'S
Rheumatic Cure
Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH

The great labor-saver. Easily applied with a damp cloth—polishes quickly with a dry one. Makes no dust.

MADE BY PROPRIETORS OF RISING SUN STOVE POLISH.

The Secret of Health.

Don't worry. Don't hurry. "Too swift arrived as tardy as too slow." "Simplify! simplify! simplify" your diet! Don't overeat. Don't starve. "Let your moderation be known unto all men." Court the fresh air day and night. "Oh, if you knew what was in the air!" Sleep and rest abundantly. Spend less nervous energy each day than you make. Be cheerful. "A light heart lives long." Think only healthful thoughts. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." "Seek peace and pursue it." "Work like a man, but don't be worked to death. Avoid passion and excitement. A moment's anger may be fatal." Associate with healthy people. Health is contagious as well as disease. "Don't carry the whole world on your shoulders, far less the universe. Trust the Eternal." Never despair. "Lost hope is a fatal disease." "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."—Journal and Messenger.

Home.

"How many opportunities have we of giving delight to those who live in our domestic circle, which would be lost before we could diffuse it to those who are distant from us! Our love, therefore, our desire of giving happiness, our pleasure in having given it, are stronger within the limits of this sphere of daily and hourly intercourse than beyond it."

PRETTY CHEEKS
A Food That Makes Girls Sweet to Look Upon.

The right food for young ladies is of the greatest importance to their looks, to say nothing of the health. Thin, sallow girls don't get the right food you may be absolutely certain. A Brooklyn girl says: "For a long time in spite of all I could do I was thin, skinny and nervous. My cheeks were so sunken my friends used to remark on how bad I looked. I couldn't seem to get strength from my food—meat, potatoes, bread, etc. So I tried various medicines without help.

"I often read about Grape-Nuts, but never tried the food until one day something impressed me that perhaps if I would eat Grape-Nuts for my nerves and brain I could digest and get the good of my food. So I started in. The food with cream was fascinating to my taste and I went in for it regularly twice a day.

"Well I began to improve and now while on my third package I have changed so my friends congratulate me warmly, ask me what in the world I have taken, &c, &c. My cheeks are plump and rosy and I feel so young and well. I sleep sound and it seems as though I couldn't get enough to eat. Thank you sincerely for making Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason for Grape-Nuts.

Among the New Books

The Story of My Life, by Helen Keller, the most popular girl in America, is a book the title of which awakens the admiration anew and stirs the heart to warmer impulses and exalted ambitions. In turning the pages of her autobiography one recognizes at once that its author, a child of singular misfortune, needs not to beg the critic's grace, but that she can meet him on his own ground and ask neither favor nor quarter. A story of thrilling interest, a psychological revelation, a poetical rhapsody, a work of genuine literary art—all this is not too much to say of the first book of this youthful seer of visions.

The book is in three parts: the first two consist of Miss Keller's story with extracts from her letters, supplemented with reports and letters of her world-renowned teacher, Miss Anne Mansfield Sullivan; the third part is a study by John Albert Macy, the editor.

In speaking of her emancipation from the darkness of ignorance into the marvelous light of intelligence, the gate of the new world opened for her by her teacher, she says:

> Thus I came up out of Egypt and stood before Sinai, and a power divine touched my spirit and gave it sight, so that I beheld many wonders. And from the sacred mountains I heard a voice which said, "Knowledge is love and light and vision."

The part that nature had in giving to her that happy view of things which is reflected in her beautiful face, is seen distinguishes all of her thoughts and in her account of the out-door life in which as a child she worked and studied:

> Seated in the gracious shade of a wild tulip tree, I learned to think that everything has a lesson and a suggestion. The loveliness of things taught me all their use. Indeed, everything that could hum, or buzz, or sing, or bloom, had a part in my education. . . . Few know what joy it is to feel the roses pressing softly into the hand, or the beautiful motion of the lilies as they sway in the morning breeze.

Her tribute to her teacher fully satisfies one that in her heart of hearts there is no lack of appreciation of the boundless sympathy and patience and self-effacement that have distinguished Miss Sullivan in her faithful devotion to her pupil all these years:

> My teacher is so near to me that I scarcely think of myself apart from her. How much of my delight in all beautiful things is innate, and how much is due to her influence, I can never tell. I feel that her being is inseparable from my own, and that the footsteps of my life are in hers. All the best of me belongs to her—there is not a talent, or an aspiration or a joy in me that has not been awakened by her loving touch.

What she says of hand clasps is well worth quoting:

> The hands of those I meet are doubly eloquent to me. The touch of some hands are an impertinence. I have met people so empty of joy, that when I clasped their frosty finger-tips, it seemed as if I were shaking hands with a northeast storm. Others there are whose hands have sunbeams in them, so that their grasp warms the heart. It may be only the clinging touch of a child's hand; but there is as much potential sunshine in it for me as there is in a loving glance for others. A hearty handshake or a friendly letter gives me genuine pleasure.

There is much of value in the bright talks of the noted men and women Miss Keller has met and the friendships she has known and enjoyed, notably Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, to whom the book is lovingly dedicated, Joseph Jefferson, Mark Twain, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Hutton, Phillips Brooks, Dr. Edward Everett Hale, Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Greenleaf Whittier and Mrs. Grover Cleveland.

Her optimistic view of things is seen in this stirring, characteristic remark:

> It is wonderful how much time good people spend fighting the devil. If they would only expend the same amount of energy loving their fellow-men, the devil would die in his own tracks of ennui.

The literary style in which this remarkable book is written is to be highly commended, resting on its own merits alone, and is lovingly attributed to the fact that her mind has been fed on the best that the literary world has provided. The world has never known a more signal example of an education gained through gigantic difficulties than that reached in this absorbing work, "The Story of My Life." Eighteen portraits and views, clear type, sumptuous paper and binding fittingly enshrine this rare volume and make it a book that all must covet. (New York: Doubleday Page & Company, $1.50.)

Irving Bacheller's new story, Darrel of the Blessed Isles, is surely a tale for the lips of the "Old Man of the Hills." Well may the pen hesitate in its attempted characterization. Call it charming, delightful, fascinating, enchanting, or like superlative of expression, and you have yet failed to convey the rarity of its atmosphere, the subtle essence that permeates to the very soul of things. As a tale of humanity it is composite, altogether lovely and of the beautiful simplicity of the great soul and of nature. From the poetry of the dew glistening valleys one is led to the very summit of the hills of philosophy, there to behold what Love hath wrought.

The story has the same idyllic North country setting as have the author's earlier works, and like them it portrays a sympathetic friendship between youth and old age. Although it is in reality a diary of incident, the commanding personality of Darrel, the clock tinker, leaves little realization of the somewhat disjointed plot. Irresistible is this quaint figure of the highway whose tongue has long obeyed the "lilt of classic diction" and whose thought comes easy in "Elizabethan phrase." Verily doth he prove himself a tinker of souls as well as of clocks. One regrets to give but a fleeting glimpse of this man of wit and learning. It was his first meeting with the youth, Sidney Trove, whose life was ever afterwards so fatefully bound to his. As the stranger approaches the little family group, Allen, the father, whispers to the boy:

> "Go and ask what we can do for him."
> Trove went down the drive looking up at him curiously.
> "What can I do for you?" he inquired.
> "Give me thy youth," said the stranger, quickly, his gray eyes twinkling under silvered brows.
> The boy now smiling made no answer.
> "No?" said the man, as he came on slowly. "Well, then, were thy wit as good as thy legs it would be of some use to me."
> The words were spoken with dignity in a deep kindly tone. They were also faintly salted with Irish brogue.

As we follow him in his garret shop and on into the tragic mystery of his life, there is pathetically blended this same ingenious humor and sprightly wit, with the high philosophy that carries him often to the refreshing haunts of the "Blessed Isles."

Roderick Darrell is a character that will live so long as the human soul is striving for its ideal, and it is with affectionate reverence that one steps aside to let him pass on to mingle with the company of the world's greatest in literature. (Boston: Lothrop Publishing Company. $1.50.)

It is claimed that Mrs. Wiggs, of the Cabbage Patch fame, made more friends in the year 1902, than did any other woman in the world of fiction. Certain it is that her biography was the best selling book of the year. That the author, Mrs. Hegan-Rice, has re-introduced Mrs. Wiggs in her latest story, Lovey Mary, is a sufficient index to the character of its entertaining qualities. The same smiling optimism, the same happy blending of humor and pathos, the healthful, helpful faith in human nature, are here reproduced in a new setting. The pathetic love-starved life of Lovey Mary and Tommy, her baby charge, are portrayed with a depth of artistic sympathy which fully recognizes the value of humor in sweetening and brightening the tragic elements of life. While retaining all the characteristic features of the author's former work, "Lovey Mary" shows a growing appreciation of literary values, better perspective, a more pervasive atmosphere and an added sense of unity of plot and logical sequence. "Deserving of a long life in literature, true as any of Dickens' characters," is the pronounced verdict of a knowing critic, who adds: "Nothing could be more helpful to a lot of people who are afraid of all pious talk, than the living but unformed faith of Mrs. Wiggs, and at last, of Lovey Mary." Not to have visited the Cabbage Patch is to have missed much that warms the heart. The philosophy of Mrs. Wiggs is a moral tonic, the flavor of which is at least suggested by the following draughts:

> "I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, then set on the lid an' smile."
>
> "You never kin tell which way any pleasure is a-comin'. Who ever would 'a' thought, when we aimed at the cemetery, that we 'd land up at a first-class fire?"
>
> "I b'lieve in havin' a good time when you start out to have it. If you git knocked out of one plan, you want to git yerself another right quick, before yer sperrits has a chance to fall."
>
> "The way to git cheerful is to smile when you feel bad, to think about somebody else's headache when yer own is 'most bustin', to keep on believin' the sun is a-shinin' when the clouds is thick enough to cut."
>
> "Don't you go an' git sorry fer yerself. That's one thing I can't stand in nobody. There's always lots of other folks you kin be sorry fer 'stid of yerself."

A demonstration of the transforming power of love, is this little book. Slip it among your treasure volumes and send its heartsome message to those who need more of God's sunshine. Eighteen clever illustrations happily emphasize the character features. (New York: The Century Company, $1.)

Are You Going Abroad?

If you are going abroad be sure to select the Lackawanna Railroad as your route East. The terminus of that line is within two blocks of the docks of the ocean liners operated by the Cunard, Hamburg-American, White Star, North German Lloyd, Netherland's American, American, Red Star and French Lines. To the traveler, often encumbered with luggage and accompanied by his family, the advantage of landing so near his point of embarkation is at once apparent. Not only is the Lackawanna Railroad the most convenient line to the piers of the great Trans-Atlantic Steamers, but the comfort of its patrons is the special care of a Steamship Agent, who will be found on the docks of all the principal lines. From Chicago three through trains are run daily in connection with the Nickel Plate, offering a service unsurpassed in luxury and convenience. From St. Louis there is also a through daily service in connection with the Wabash Railroad. For information, rates, etc., write Geo. A. Cullen, G. W. P. A., 103 Adams St., Chicago.

The Nickel Plate Road

is the short line to the East and the service equal to the best. You will save time and money by traveling over this line. It has three through daily express trains, with through vestibuled sleeping-cars, and American Club Meals, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00, are served in Nickel Plate dining-cars; also a la carte service. Try a trip over the Nickel Plate Road and you will find the service equal to any between Chicago and the East.

Chicago depot: Harrison St. and Fifth Ave. City Ticket Offices: 111 Adams St. and Auditorium Annex. John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., Room 298, Chicago. Phone Central 2057.

35 DAYS TREATMENT
FREE TO ALL SUFFERERS.

ARE YOU BILIOUS? If so, do not use drastic mineral poisons, or old-fashioned drugs. Use nature's remedy, the new purely vegetable LIVER FOOD, called BILE BERRIES, a New Discovery. Bile Berries renovates the liver, cures constipation, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, rheumatism, catarrh, bad blood, kidney troubles, and all diseases caused by biliousness. A box of Bile Berries, containing seventy-five days treatment, will be sent to any subscriber or reader of this paper on the following terms:

After using Bile Berries thirty-five days, if you are entirely satisfied with the benefit you have received, you are to send us 50c in postage stamps for the box of Bile Berries, containing seventy-five days treatment. If you are not satisfied, you are to return the balance of the medicine to us by mail, and you do not need to send us a penny. Isn't this fair? Please read this offer again, and understand that we do not ask you to send a penny unless you are perfectly satisfied with Bile Berries. You run no risk. We take all the risk. Send us your address plainly written. Address, Dept. B, THE A. P. SAWYER CO., 11 South Water St., CHICAGO, ILL.

A Monthly Magazine for

YOUNG PEOPLE

Every temperance home in the country should have a copy of

The YOUNG CRUSADER

Attractive Entertaining Instructive

Temperance, anti-cigaret and other live issues of the day; bright stories and illustrated articles by authors of note; puzzles, story and other prize contests make such a magazine as is eagerly welcomed by all young people. Subscription price, 25 cents per year. Write us for sample copy.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

A Lady's Complexion

can be made soft, smooth, and free from pimples, by the daily use of charcoal. It absorbs all gases, and stops fermentation. This causes a rapid clearing of the complexion.

MURRAY'S CHARCOAL TABLETS

are composed of pure Charcoal.

FREE—One full size 25c. box, mailed once only, upon receipt of 2c. stamp.

A. J. Ditman, 34 Astor House, N. Y.

PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS
FOR MAN
AND BEAST

Catalogues mailed on request, and speci l prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED BY
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,
84-90 Beekman St.
NEW YORK.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for May Reading,

Unfermented Sacramental Wine

By Mrs. Lillian F. Lewis.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.

(Continued from page 6.)

On the whole the annual tea was a modified success. Hugh was enthusiastically applauded on every possible pretext and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd were leniently received, but already Pitsmore was conscious of a dim foreboding that the parish was not likely to be much the "gainer" by the vicar's marriage. True, Mrs. Boyd gave evidence of an intention of spending a considerable portion of her time in looking after the sick and aged, and in making acquaintance with the large number of young women who formed her Bible-class, but already those who could boast a first experience were whispering one to another that, as a visitor, she "wasn't a patch upon Miss Milner."

For Miss Milner's reputation rose steadily. To Hugh it seemed a pity that the departed lady visitor should have passed beyond the ken of the belated appreciation of her worth. As for himself, as he readily admitted, Pitsmoor thought far too well of him.

"You are making a great mistake, you know; the vicar is worth a dozen of me," he would say earnestly. But perhaps he was not ill pleased at the invariable reply:

"Mebbe, mebbe; only us doesn't think so, ye see."

Mrs. Langley openly confessed her sympathy.

"I don't wonder at it. I really believe that Mr. Brotherton deserves the love that these dear, narrow-minded people give him. There is much more in him than in most young men of his age. At first one took him to be just a nice, impulsive, well-intentioned boy, whom one could see right through at a glance. But I confess that, sometimes, he astonishes me. Those bursts of eloquence in which he describes the remorse of the wrong-doer, are not entirely claptrap. If he were not so manifestly innocent, I should sometimes suspect that he knew something of what he was talking about. Don't look so shocked, dear Miss Glyn. I believe entirely in his impeccability; but, for that very reason, I am all the more interested."

It was after pondering over these comments in her sober, meditative way, that Mrs. Boyd one day asked of her astonished husband:

"Has Mr. Brotherton always had that weary, hopeless kind of a look upon his face?"

"Hopeless! Brotherton! My dear Mary, where is your usual penetration? Brotherton is of a far more hopeful temperament than I."

"Is he?" said Mrs. Boyd, doubtfully.

"Certainly he is! What can you be thinking of? Did you notice him tonight?"

"Yes; when he had forgotten himself in the excitement of an argument with you. I should have said: 'Look at him when Enoch, or any other of the long-winded ones, is addressing the meeting."

"Ah! under those circumstances, perhaps. I confess to feeling hopeless when Enoch gets upon his legs."

"But Enoch has nothing to do with the look I mean," persisted Mrs. Boyd, laughing. "Mr. Brotherton seldom listens to him."

The subject was dropped for the time; but when the opportunity recurred. Mr. Boyd quietly observed his curate's face, and to his surprise was convinced.

"What's the matter with you? You're looking seedy," he said at the close of the meeting.

Hugh flushed nervously.

"The matter with me? Nothing, I'm all right!"

"Mission-room on the nerves, I should say," rejoined Mr. Boyd, scrutinizing his face. "I'll tell you what will put you right again. Be off on Monday morning for the inside of a week."

At first Hugh strenuously demurred, protesting that nerves were unknown to him; but Mrs. Boyd and Miss Glyn demanded a valid reason why he should not take the proffered holiday, and he yielded with out further protest.

(To be continued.)

If Your Liver Troubles You,

or you are constipated or bilious it will cost you nothing to try the remedy prepared by The A. P. Sawyer Co.—it may be just what you need to make you well again. See their ad on page 13.

Parliamentary Difficulties.

Conducted by

Mrs. A. S. Benjamin

EXECUTIVE committee trouble again prevails. Will all who have written for "information" and for "rulings" please read the columns printed January 1, 1903. I subjoin such questions from the several letters as seem to be general and the exceptional settings forth must be content with the private letters.

QUES.—When the Constitution makes no such provision, can an executive committee transact business concerning which there would be great difference of opinion? For instance, could the committee create an office, vote to the officer a salary and then provide for said salary by assessing the several unions?

ANS.—If the Constitution reads that the executive may, or shall provide for the general interest of the work it might be possible in order to meet an emergency to appoint a woman to fill a place. In the common acceptation of the word an office requires an officer and vice versa, and the constitution of any organization makes provision for the officers. In any case the executive committee has not the right to assess the unions (except by special legislation). The committee may request, or recommend but have no power to compel.

QUES.—In drawing up a constitution, an item of great importance has been overlooked. How can it become incorporated? As a by-law, or an amendment, or how?

ANS.—That would depend entirely on the constitution. An amendment would require a "previous notice" while a by-law (if the constitution so provides) may be enacted by a two-thirds vote in the annual meeting. That usually holds of our ranking organizations, county, district, state, or National union. In a local union power to enact a by-law at "any regular meeting" is a risk. Such a law might seldom be taken unwise advantage of, but it could be. A two-thirds vote of simply a quorum could enact by-laws, but even this would not be past cure, for at the very next meeting a two-thirds vote would repeal the law. The danger would be the unpleasant complications that might occur, and to avoid these it would be preferable to have a clause of limitation—for instance by-laws may be enacted, altered, or amended at the first regular meeting in April, July, or October. The trouble along all these lines comes through the "wrong mindedness" of one or two who are always working for "something else" which means a change of some sort.

I suppose it is quite useless, but once more I implore the unions to send me a copy of constitution, when asking such questions as the above. Within the past month an exchange of three letters, in several instances, has been necessary in order to settle certain difficulties, some of which required immediate action, and yet delay was compelled because of the impossibility of a correct answer without the text of the constitution.

QUES.—What is the proper form for adopting the journal?

ANS.—"Are there any corrections to the minutes? If not they stand approved." If there are corrections they are generally made by common consent; the secretary of course making the record conform to the corrections.

QUES.—Suppose a "privileged question" is referred to a committee, or laid on the table, when it again comes up is it still a privileged question? This must be made clear in "Difficulties."

ANS.—It is not. Referring, or deferring causes it to lose its privileged character. As you see the immediate necessity of disposing of the question was met when referred, or deferred.

QUES.—In nearly all organizations of which I have any knowledge, even those presided over by the "very wise ones" (here follow several names), we hear frequently "I move that the paper, or the report, or the resolutions be received, or accepted, or adopted"; a different term applied nearly every time to the same measure presented. Will you kindly enlighten me as to which is correct?

ANS.—There should never be a motion to "receive" anything after it has been read. If such a motion is made the Chair should not entertain it, but should make clear that it has been received, and then explain that the proper motion is to accept or adopt. "Robert's Rules of Order" makes them synonymous. I much prefer "adopt" for resolutions and "accept" for reports. A resolution, as a rule, embodies a principle; a report is often a mere statement. However, whether the motion be to accept, or adopt, if carried, the resolution or report is endorsed by the body, with all it contains.

QUES: At our last convention one of the superintendents wished her time extended. A large majority were opposed, but a few were determined the motion should carry. After spending a great deal of time in discussion, a member moved the previous question. The woman who happened to be in the chair (not the president) ruled that the motion for the previous question was out of order. Will you please say in THE UNION SIGNAL whether she was correct?

(b) Will you say, too, whether it is right to extend the time of superintendents? One or two of our women always insist on going over the time.

ANS: When the body departed from order was when it began to discuss the question. The motion to extend is never debatable, and, of course, the motion for the previous question is uncalled for on an undebatable motion.

(b) There is no parliamentary law against extending the time, but when a program is so arranged as to apportion almost every moment, to extend the time of one superintendent often crowds entirely out another, which is manifestly unfair and unjust. The trouble, as may easily be seen, was ignorance of the law. The motion to extend cannot be debated, and requires a two-thirds vote to carry it, so by strict adherence to the rules the matter may be quickly settled. The chief hindrance is, that the body sometimes becomes a questioning multitude, and as there is no law against asking questions, even on an undebatable motion, valuable time is lost. Why not enact a by-law that the time of superintendents shall not be extended?

The much desired "Study" on amendments will appear in June number, although much else will thereby be crowded out.

Patience is a great virtue, and many of the questions followed by that imperative command "do not fail to reply in next Difficulties" cannot always be obeyed.

Portland, Mich.

Take a Trip

Over the Nickel Plate Road and be convinced of its superior train service. Solid through daily express trains between Chicago, Ft. Wayne, Findlay, Fostoria, Erie, Buffalo, New York City and Boston. American Club Meals, ranging in price from 35c. to $1.00, served in Nickel Plate dining-cars; also service a la carte. Rates always the lowest. No excess fare charged on any train on the Nickel Plate Road. Chicago depot, Harrison St. and Fifth Ave. City Ticket Offices, 111 Adams St. and Auditorium Annex. John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., Room 298, Chicago. 'Phone Central 2057.

About Your Vacation.

Little journeys to lake resorts and mountain homes will be more popular this summer than ever. Many have already arranged their summer tours via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway aud many more are going to do likewise. Booklets that will help you to plan your vacation trip have just been published, and will be sent on receipt of postage, as follows:

"Colorado-California," six cents.

"In Lakeland" and "Summer Homes," six cents.

"Lakes Okoboji and Spirit Lake," four cents.

F. A. MILLER, Gen. Pass. Ag't, Chicago.

A New and Beautiful Line of Sunday School Cards

Appropriate for use in Loyal Temperance Legions as well as Sunday Schools

Exquisite and Artistic in Every Detail

Redeeming Grace
36 tickets; 10 cents per package.

The Twenty-third Psalm
100 text tickets; 15 cts. per package.

Answers to Prayer
Packages of 10 cards each; size, 4x2¾

In His Steps
Price 10 cents per package.

Day Unto Day
Books of Bible on back of card.

Hope in God
Lord's Prayer on back of card.

The Glory of Israel
Commandments on back of card.

Good Works
Twenty-third Psalm on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 4½x3¾. Price per package, 15 cents.

Christ the Mediator
Commandments on back of card.

The Power of God
The One-hundredth Psalm on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 5¼x4. Price per package, 20 cents.

The Throne of Grace
The Beatitudes on back of card.

God Our Refuge
Lord's Prayer on back of card.

Union with God
Commandments on back of card.

God the Judge
Commandments on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 6x4⅜. Price per package, 25 cts.

Perseverance in Well Doing
Commandments on back of card.

Living Unto Righteousness
The Beatitudes on back of card.

Justice Commanded
Lord's Prayer on back of card. 10 cards in each package; size, 6⅝x5. Price per package, 30 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

Among the Latest Leaflets

National Leaflet, No. 65.
Prohibitory Law. Facts.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 97.
Facts Concerning the Canteen.
Margaret Dye Ellis.

National Leaflet, No. 98.
The Dispensary State Control System of Managing the Liquor Traffic.
Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

National Leaflet, No. 99.
Duties of W. C. T. U. Secretaries.
Susanna M. D. Fry.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 214.
Mission of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion.
Herbert C. Shattuck.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 215.
The Province of the Loyal Temperance Legion.
Charles Wesley Burns.

Price per package of 50, 50 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Department Leaflet, No. 216.
Food Economics, Part I.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 217.
Food Economics, Part II.
Louise C. Purington, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 88.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part I.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 89.
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper, Part II.
Ellis Meredith.

Department Leaflet, No. 134.
How to make Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School Helpful and Interesting.
Mrs. Clare E. Beede.

Department Leaflet, No. 143.
Love's Mission (A True Story.)
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 144.
Work Among Lumbermen.
Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Department Leaflet, No. 182.
A Study in L. T. L. Methods.
Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

Department Leaflet, No. 192.
What Makes a Good Soldier.
Lord Roberts.

Department Leaflet, No. 222.
How School Savings Banks are Run.
Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Department Leaflet, No. 232.
Home Treatment for a Cold.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

Department Leaflet, No. 242.
How to Win.
Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Total Abstinence Leaflet, No. 19.
The Drink Habit Among Women.
Mrs. Leonora M. Lake.

Price per 100, 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
.....CHICAGO.

Practical Talks with Housekeepers.

By Mrs. L. W. Mitchell.

Vegetables.

IT is a wise saying, "Better be off with the old love before you are on with the new," and before treating of the new vegetables, so tempting in their greenness after the winter's restriction, I will speak of one of the old ones, the great standby, the white potato.

New potatos are not wholesome until ripe, and indulgence in them too soon will be regretted. A good old potato is much better. The potato is largely starch, and late in the season this changes to dextrin, giving it, when cooked, a waxy texture and a slightly sweet taste. Soaking potatoes from one to three hours improves them, dissolving the gum. With a potato scoop small balls can be cut out, and after boiling until tender, they may be dressed with butter and parsley or a cream sauce, or they may be browned in hot butter. In boiling very large potatoes, if the outside is soft when pierced with a fork while the center is hard, add to the kettle one pint of cold water. Time your potatoes, as they deteriorate rapidly in standing. Allow at least thirty minutes.

We eat various parts of vegetables: Roots, as the turnip, beet, radish; stems, as celery and asparagus; tubers and bulbs, of underground growth; leaves, such as lettuce, spinach and cabbage, and at least one flower,—cauliflower. Corn, peas, beans, tomatoes, cucumbers and squash, are classed, properly, among fruits.

Most vegetables are best cooked uncovered, in boiling salted water. Corn is an exception; the salt hardens and toughens it. We depend on the mineral salts contained in vegetables for our bone material, and they also regulate the action of the starchy and albuminous foods. They contain a large percentage of water, and the theory has been advanced that a diet made up largely of fresh vegetables would result in diminishing thirst in warm weather, and might therefore, be directly operative in the temperance cause. This subject is worth considering thoughtfully. To retain the valuable mineral salts and the full flavor of the vegetables, cook them in as little water as possible, watch carefully, and remove from the fire as soon as done. Strongly flavored vegetables, such as cabbage, onions, etc., should be cooked in an abundance of water, and the water may be changed once or twice.

It is doubtful if a family gets into a rut more quickly and deeply with anything than with the cooking and serving of vegetables. We follow a few ancient, time-honored ways, over and over, day in and day out, but there are many variations that do not take much time or trouble in the preparation.

Asparagus, when it first comes, is prohibited in large families of moderate incomes unless it can be pieced out in some such way as this: Wash well and break off the tough ends. (These may be peeled and used with the rest.) Boil rapidly until tender, and dispose, with tips all one way, on slices of buttered toast, ready prepared. Cover all with a cream dressing in which you have cut up two hard boiled eggs, and it will "go round" most satisfactorily.

Cream of asparagus soup is delicious, especially on a cool day. Wash two bunches of asparagus and cut in small pieces. Cook till soft, and press in a colander. Thicken a quart of milk with two tablespoonfuls of butter rubbed in two of flour; cook smooth, and season to taste. Add the asparagus, and serve.

Young carrots have a virtue which ought to make them popular, namely, that of complexion-beautifier. They are good dressed with a white sauce or fried in butter after being boiled tender. They combine well with green peas or string beans, in both cases served with the sauce and with a slight flavoring of onion added to the peas.

Young beets will cook in about three-quarters of an hour. Plunge into cold water, and slip off the skins. Send to table sliced. Pour over the following sauce when it boils up once. Three tablespoons butter, four of lemon juice, one-half tablespoon of salt and a dash of red pepper.

Cauliflower after soaking in cold water, may be tied in a piece of white mosquito netting, boiled, and served whole with any preferred sauce, or it may be divided into flowerets, and served in white sauce, sprinkled with parsley. Try it as a garnish for fried chicken, or pack in a baking dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and buttered crumbs and bake.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS.—Lay them for an hour in salted water, drain, and cook in boiling water until tender. The time will depend on the age. Ten minutes in rapidly boiling water should be sufficient for the young sprouts. Serve in a white or a Hollandaise sauce, as the taste of the family decrees.

Cooked cucumbers were a novelty regarded with some suspicion not so very long ago. They contain so many small, sharp seeds that to cook this vegetable has something stronger to recommend it than a mere desire for something "different", which is so apt to haunt the caterer of the household. Cucumbers may be cut in half, lengthwise, the seeds removed, and the space filled with a highly seasoned stuffing of bread crumbs and finely chopped meat. Stew gently in a very little white stock, until tender, lift out, and mask with a Bechamel sauce. Veal and chicken are the meats preferred.

SALSIFY.—Wash, scrape and lay in cold water, boil rapidly in an uncovered pan, drain and serve either with a dressing of salt, pepper and lemon juice, or a cream sauce. Cold boiled salsify may be fried with or without being coated with fritter batter.

SPINACH.—Above all else, see to it that your spinach is thoroughly cleansed. Set over the fire without any water. A very gentle heat is required until the juice flows. When tender, drain and chop fine, season with butter and salt, press in a large bowl, so that turned out on a platter it will keep its shape, and garnish with hard-boiled eggs.

To peel tomatoes, plunge them into boiling water while you count five, then drop at once into cold water. They are good stuffed and baked, scalloped and broiled. Stuff with a mixture of crumbs, rice, or maccaroni, and chopped meat.

Evanston, Ill.

$19.00 To Boston and Return $19.00

With membership fee of $2.00 added, account of annual meeting of National Educational Association. Tickets will be on sale via the Nickel Plate Road July 2d to 5th, inclusive, good returning from July 8th to 12th, inclusive, without being deposited with Joint Agent. Additional limit to return not later than September 1st can be obtained by depositing return portion of ticket with Joint Agent and payment of 50 cents for execution. Superior train service and excellent dining-car meals, on American Club Plan, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00; also a la carte service. Write John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., room 298, Chicago, for time of departure of trains from Chicago and other detailed information.

"NEW TRUTHS FOR A NEW AGE" By Rev. JOHN PRESLAND.
CONTENTS.—Why was a New Church inaugurated a hundred years ago?—The Lord's second coming an accomplished fact.—The Inspiration and Interpretation of the Word of God.—The Tri-Une God: How to understand the Divine Trinity without dividing the Divine Unity.—Man a Spiritual Being ruined by Sin—How did the Lord Jesus Christ save Man?—The Resurrection: How and When do the Dead rise?—The Judgment: When, Where and How is Man Judged!—Heaven and Hell—25 Cents. Call or address
EBEN SUGDEN, New Church Book Rooms, 3 West 29th St., New York City. Send for Catalogue.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing
DRINKING FOUNTAINS
on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.
J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS, 39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

TO INVESTORS.
Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in a few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have Cattle and Sheep on our Ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Mont.

IS YOUR HUSBAND, SON OR FATHER A
Drunkard
If so, send us your name and address with 4 cts. to cover postage, packing, etc., we will send you a package of our "Secret Cure" free, in a plain package with full directions how to give it secretly in tea, coffee, food, etc. It is odorless and tasteless and will cure this dreadful habit, quietly and permanently without the patient's knowledge or consent. It is a positive and permanent "Secret Cure" for the Drink Habit, and will cost you nothing to try it. Good for both sexes.
MILO DRUG CO., Dept. 137 St. Louis, Mo.

Have You Got Rheumatism
You Can Be Cured;
FREE, A Scientific Discovery.

It is now possible to be cured of any form of rheumatism without having your stomach turned upside down or being half choked to death and made to vomit, and every sufferer from rheumatism should welcome this new and marvelous discovery with open arms and give it an honest trial. This new remedy was discovered by John A. Smith, Milwaukee, Wis., who is generous enough to send it free to every sufferer who writes at once. It is a home treatment and will not keep you from your work.

As you know, if you've tried them, every so called rheumatic remedy on the market to-day, except this genuine cure, will cause you violent stomach pains and vomiting, and some of them are so dangerous they will cause heart trouble. And the worst of it is they never cure. When a person has rheumatism the constitution is so run down that he should be very careful what he puts into his stomach.

It therefore gives me pleasure to present a remedy that will cure every form and variety of rheumatism without one single unpleasant feeling.—That remedy is

"GLORIA TONIC."

Before I decided to tell the world about the discovery of "Gloria Tonic" I had it tried on hospital patients, also on old and crippled persons, with perfect success. But some people never will believe anything until they know it from experience. So the best and quickest way is for you to write me that you want to be cured, and I will send you a box of "Gloria Tonic" free of cost. No matter what your form of rheumatism is—acute, chronic, muscular, inflammatory, deformant, sciatic, neuralgia, gout, lumbago, etc., "Gloria Tonic" will surely cure you. Do not mind if other remedies have failed you, nor mind if doctors say you are incurable. Mind no one, but write me to-day sure. "Gloria Tonic" will stop those aches and pains, those inflammations and deformities, and cure you so that life will again be worth living. This offer is not for curiosity seekers, but is made to rheumatics only. To them I will send a trial box of "Gloria Tonic" free.

Never before has a remedy been so highly indorsed as "Gloria Tonic." It has been indorsed by such world-noted men as Dr. Quintero, of the University of Venezuela Hon. E. H. Plumacher, United States Consul, Maracaibo; Prof. Macadam, of Surgeons' Hall, Edinburgh; the famous magazine "Health," London, and a column of others.

If you are a sufferer send your name to-day and by return mail you will receive "Gloria Tonic," and also the most elaborate book ever written on the subject of rheumatism, absolutely free. This book contains many drawings from actual life and will tell you all about your case. You get "Gloria Tonic" and this wonderful book at the same time, both free, so let me hear from you at once and soon you will be cured. Address JOHN A. SMITH, 1164 Germania Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis., U. S. A.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

Signal Notes.

San Francisco, Cal., is considering in its city council the restricting its saloons to 100 in number.

The Grand Rapids, Mich., city council refused licenses to seven saloonkeepers at its last meeting.

Owing to a campaign headed by Dr. J. T. Tidball, the saloons in Grafton, Mo., are closed on Sunday.

Wm. B. Judd, district superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, is holding meetings in Wheeling, W. Va.

The Maryland court of appeals has declared the law unconstitutional which prevents the sale of liquor in Wicomico county.

Even the temperance people were happily surprised at the large majority recorded against the saloon at the recent election in Brownsville, Ore.

Toledo, Ohio, commenced an anti-saloon campaign April 26. Thirty addresses were given in the various churches during that day.

The Anti-Saloon League scored a victory in Amherst, Va., in the conviction and sentencing of one David Jackson for the illegal sale of whisky.

The Protestant Pastors' Association of Memphis, Tenn., is engaging in a campaign against Sunday baseball playing and Sunday opening of saloons.

The New York legislature has passed a bill ordering seven years' imprisonment for a parent or other person who deserts a child under sixteen years of age.

The Single Tax Information Bureau, 1467 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., offers to send free literature explaining the single tax to any one who writes for it.

The New York Press figures that the total drink bill of the city amounts to $35 per month for every man, woman and child, enough to maintain them all in luxury.

The new city administration of Huntsville, Ala., although elected on a "wet" ticket, announce that there will be a strict enforcement of all Sunday closing laws.

The Order of Acorns has established a no-treating tavern in New York. It is the object to eliminate private profit from liquor selling and to separate the traffic from politics.

Tiffin, Ohio, has inaugurated a campaign against the saloons. The recent election of a reform mayor encourages the anti-saloon people to endeavor to secure a local option election.

Over 160 school principals in Wisconsin have gone on record against the use of cigarets by school boys. A determined effort is being made to prohibit the sale of cigarets in the state.

As the result of an order by Mayor Murphy, who has just been elected, every saloon and "nutria" place in Chickasha, I. T., was closed on Sunday, the first dry Sunday for several years.

The press reports that fifty saloons in New York will close because the license has been raised from $800 to $1,200 a year. Two hundred and fifty will be driven out of business in Brooklyn.

The Rev. George K. McDonald, the Baptist minister who resigned his pastorate to open a saloon in Bronx, N. Y., has found the business unprofitable. He has closed the saloon and confessed his sin before a meeting of his own church.

The Temperance Association of Friends, of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, held its annual meeting April 22. The feature of the evening was an address by James Wood, chairman of the committee, to arrange a temperance conference from all the religious denominations. Joshua Rountree and Abram Wilhelm, both of London, were among the distinguished visitors present.

The Catholic Total Abstinence Union, of Boston, held its twenty-seventh annual convention April 20. Fifty-seven societies were represented by 160 delegates, among whom were many women. The resolutions embodied this idea: "That we exert ourselves in conjunction with our non-Catholic fellow-citizens, for the making and enforcing of wise laws to restrict the ravages of liquor and the political power and control of the liquor traffic."

Publishers' Notes.

David Douglas and His Wife.

Glimpses of the very natural home life in a minister's family, very human and lovable children, the white ribbon mother and the evolution by which the father becomes one whose vote is in harmony with his prayers and sermons, with the serious consequences of this stand which he took for conscience' sake—these are found in "David Douglas and His Wife," by Mrs. O. W. Scott. With its pleasing phraseology it is a book well worth reading for the story alone, and the reading will surely give to many the needed arrest of thought. Speaking of those persons who are said to "sit on the fence," it says: "Nowadays this fence is upholstered and has become a fashionable resort. There is so much doubt and uncertainty in the air that one begins to waver before he knows it." Notice the offer of this book to subscribers: Cloth bound 50 cents, paper cover 25 cents.

A Leaflet "Opening."

"Spring openings" have been the fashion of the hour and we wish to announce our "opening" of attractive up-to-date leaflets, prepared to meet general and department needs. National Leaflet, No. 99, "Duties of the W. C. T. U. Secretaries," by Susanna M. D. Fry, National corresponding secretary, outlines carefully the duties of both the corresponding and recording secretaries in local, county, district and state unions. It is invaluable for new organizations, and should be read by the secretaries in old ones, that each may see how she measures up to the standard. Price 75 cents per 100.

Total Abstinence Leaflet No. 19, "The Drink Habit Among Women," by Mrs. Leonora M. Lake, is a valuable addition to our list. Believing that "women themselves have almost unlimited power as regards society and its practices," Mrs. Lake makes an earnest plea for the arousing of women to existing dangerous conditions. Price 25 cents per 100.

In department leaflets there is an embarrassment of riches. For the Franchise work there are numbers 88 and 89, being the two parts of "An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper," by Ellis Meredith. The questions are a searching presentation of all possible effects which might come to the home and society from equal suffrage. The answers are compiled from the practical working of the political equality of the men and women of Colorado.

In No. 134 Mrs. Clara E. Beebe tells clearly "How to Make Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School Helpful and Interesting."

For the Lumberman department we have No. 143, "Love's Mission," a pleasing little flower mission story, and "Work Among Lumbermen," both by Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

The Loyal Temperance Legion work is presented by Mrs. Helen G. Rice in No. 182, "A Study in L. T. L. Methods." A careful reading of this leaflet will show any union how it can take up this very important department.

In No. 192 the Work among Soldiers and Sailors is helped by "What Makes a Good Soldier," by Lord Roberts, of England. Among other facts he says: "My experience tells me that nearly all the crime in the British army in India is directly traceable to drinking to excess."

In Health and Heredity we have Nos. 216 and 217, the two parts of "Food Economics," by Louise C. Purington, M. D. These are both practical and interesting, the "convention menus" being especially pertinent at this season.

"How School Savings Banks are Run," by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, No. 222, is at its name implies an invaluable compendium.

For a nation like ours, often afflicted with colds, nothing could be of more practical value than No. 232, "Home Treatment for a Cold," by Cordelia A. Greene, M. D., issued in the interest of Non-Alcoholic Medication.

No. 242, "How to Win," by Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, tells "just how" Social Meetings should be arranged to be effective.

Many of these leaflets are what you need to distribute at your public meetings. Prices are 25 cents per 100.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Assn.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8977—Shirt Waist with Tucked Yoke. 32 to 42 in. bust.

8989—Shirt Waist
8681—Skirt.
Waist, 32 to 42 in. bust.
Skirt, 22 to 36 in. waist.

8983—Coat. 4 to 12 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, Chicago, Ill.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....,

Waist measure....., Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Until June 1st

YOU MAY SECURE THE UNION SIGNAL AND YOUR CHOICE OF ONE OF THIS LIST OF VALUABLE BOOKS FOR THE REGULAR SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $1.50.

DAVID DOUGLAS AND HIS WIFE By Mrs. O. W. Scott. A striking temperance story telling of the work and methods of a clergyman and his family.

A SINGULAR LIFE By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. A vivid portrayal in the author's inimitable style of a life "singular" only in its devotion to the work of the Master among the lowly folk of a sea coast town.

BLACK ROCK By Ralph Connor. A tale of the Selkirks and a story so interesting that to begin it means to complete the reading before laying the book aside.

NINETEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS By Frances E. Willard. A sweet and tender record of the beautiful life of "sister Mary."

HOW TO WIN By Frances E. Willard. A book for girls and one which no girl can read without having higher ideals.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

These books are all CLOTH BOUND and the offer is extended to OLD SUBSCRIBERS as well as NEW

All Orders Must Reach Us Not Later Than JUNE 1st

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 20. Issued Weekly.

CHICAGO, MAY 14, 1903.

Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

DEVELOPING THE FIGHTING QUALITIES.

In training for the cruel sport of Cock Fighting, popularly practiced in the Philippine Islands, and lately made a source of revenue to the United States Government. See page 5.

CONTENTS

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2-3

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH 4

CONTRIBUTED:

Some Phases of Life in the Philippine Islands. By Mrs. Carrie C. Faxon 5

The Time to Trust Him. By Adelbert F. Caldwell.—Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 6

CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:

When Grandpa Plays With Me. By Ida B. Cole—Jack's Queer Dream—A Horse That Can Write—A Mother's Lullaby—Some Pie Conundrums—Puzzler's Packet 7

EDITORIAL:

A People Favored of God—Out of Politics—Moral Sanitation—A Forward Movement 8

Mr. Carnegie as a Peace Maker—The Hayes Sideboard—We Want the Best—American Organizer Wanted—Personal Mention—W. C. T. U. Storiette—Toward The Sunrising 9

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 11

W. C. T. U. NOTES 11

ABOUT WOMEN 12

THE LOCAL UNION 13

MAY MAGAZINES 14

GENEVAN MEMORIES 15

Reform Legislation in Nebraska.

A Successful State Superintendent—Executive Committee Meeting.

Medora D. Nickell, Correspondent.

BEATRICE, Neb., May 11.—The spring executive meeting in Pawnee City, April 14-17, was marked for intensity rather than numbers. Organization, local forcefulness, institute work evolved to suit our state conditions from the Illinois plan and financial glorification were some strong points forwarded. Special privileges and remuneration were accorded to Miss Harriett Montgomery, our efficient Y secretary, to enable her to prosecute her plans more successfully. There is an increased recognition of the necessity of enlisting young women and girls in this great school of purity and righteousness. "Consciously or unconsciously the world is living for the child," and the beginnings of things—of helpfulness—of how—cannot be too early.

MRS. ZARA A. WILSON.

The consideration of Mrs. Zara A. Wilson's legislative work was a source of much satisfaction. At the just closed legislature laws were passed providing for matrons in the states prison, also amending the compulsory education law. Other laws passed with penalty attached to the violation were as follows: An amendment to the tobacco and cigaret law so that now the selling to minors under eighteen years of age is prohibited; defining the crime of desertion of wife or child; prohibiting the shooting of live birds from traps; prohibiting the docking of horses' tails.

A decedent bill providing equal property rights to women, presented by the Nebraska suffragists was endorsed by the W. C. T. U. Fortunately it did not pass, as the amendments to which it was subjected more than killed the original intent. Mrs. Wilson was instructed by the executive to present to the next legislature a very clear-cut and admirably defined decedent bill, prepared by herself, but withheld out of courtesy to the suffragists.

Being a graduate of law, Mrs. Wilson is well fitted to forward our legislative needs, indeed it was that she might be able to prosecute the interests of this department that she made a specialty of the law. Through her efforts our larger cities have police matrons and her ability and wisdom in the conduct of her work are each year more fully recognized.

One of the most interesting evening's addresses, "Does Prohibition Prohibit," was by our president, Mrs. Dora V. Wheelock. The recount of Mrs. Wheelock's personal observation and study of this great subject was encouraging and incited to good deeds.

Nebraska may not be a marvel of good morals, but she is getting plenty of strong teaching and the Chinese say that "Patience and perseverance change mulberry leaves into satin."

Temperance Notes From Portland, Ore.

(Special Correspondence.)

PORTLAND, Oregon, May 11:—The cause of temperance is not dead in Portland and vicinity. Recently one of the city's suburbs, a few miles out, was incorporated under the name of St. John's. At a special meeting of the town council, held a few weeks ago, two applications were received, one to "conduct a saloon," and the other to conduct "an orderly saloon" (?). The council promptly postponed indefinitely action on both these applications, and it is said that no application for a saloon license will receive favorable notice from this council. Long live such a council.

At Montavilla, another one of Portland's suburbs, a mass meeting was held a short time ago, at which an Anti-Saloon League of sixty-five members was organized for the purpose of eliminating the two saloons of the town. Officers were elected, a committee on by-laws was appointed, and two petitions were presented to the meeting—one for the men and one for the women to sign—asking the county court to revoke the license of one of the saloon keepers, on the ground that it is illegal because the law requires a majority of the legal voters' names to be affixed to a petition for a saloon license, while thirty-three of the persons whose names the saloon keeper has on his petition are said to be non-residents of the precinct. If these names be thrown out he will not then have a majority of the voters, and the Anti-Saloon League hopes to have the license revoked on this ground. One of the saloons has been running a great deal of the time without a license. The league is trying to deprive both saloons of licenses.

One of the saloon keepers was present at the mass meeting, and both saloons were in full blast during the whole time of the meeting. The whole town is greatly excited over the matter and another meeting is to be held in a few days. So by little and little the great work goes on.

Local Activities in Louisiana.

Ministers Speak on Needed Reforms.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, La., May 11.—Following the plans of the Ministerial Association of New Orleans, Rev. Dr. Dobbs, of the Coliseum Baptist Church, lectured before the Y. M. C. A. on "The Drinking Habit."

Rev. Dr. La Prade, presiding elder of the New Orleans district, preached at the Carondelet Methodist Church on "Gambling." Dr. La Prade denounced the progressive euchre craze among women, and said: "Not alone men, but women, are to blame for this increasing demand for excitement, gambling and betting—the gambling fever that undermines business honesty." These sermons were fully reported in the city papers. "The Times Democrat" gave three columns to the report.

At the mothers' meeting in Morgan City, Mrs. Crone read a paper on "Heredity" and Mrs. H. C. Pharr, state superintendent, talked on "Purity." Short speeches were called for and every one present expressed their views on the subjects.

The Morgan City and Berwick L. T. L.'s presented Miss May C. Walker a wreath of beautiful roses, at their meeting in Morgan City. Mrs. McArthur is the superintendent of the Morgan City L. T. L.

A white ribbon reception was recently held at the hospitable home of Mrs. C. K. Brownell, in Berwick.

The correspondent from Hammond says: "We are trying to do all the good we can, in all the ways we can and to all the people we can."

The Work Advanced in Iowa.

A Hard Working District President—Local Activities.

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

VOLGA, Ia., May 11.—Mrs. Sallie R. Ferris, of Waterloo, is the president of the Thirteenth district W. C. T. U. and is blessed with the "grace, grit and gumption," essential to the advancement of our work. She is also president of the Waterloo union, which ranks second in numbers, though not in influence for good, to any in the state. This union recently sent two hundred and fifty invitations to a delightful social, where, after refreshments and a program, money was raised towards opening W. C. T. U. headquarters in the central part of the city.

MRS. SALLIE R. FERRIS.

Waterloo union will have the management of four forenoon meetings at our summer Chautauqua. County school superintendents have promised Mrs. Ferris to arrange for lectures on Scientific Temperance Instruction at teachers' institutes in her district. She also sent postals, with return cards attached to every pastor in her territory, asking them to preach on Sabbath Observance on April 19. She received most cheering answers, invoking blessings on the W. C. T. U.

Vinton union, in Thirteenth district, gave a fine reception in honor of its forty new members. This union in connection with other temperance forces, has succeeded in thwarting a petition for a saloon in Benton county.

Hudson W. C. T. U. has recently doubled its membership.

Edgewood union, always up and doing, celebrated its twentieth anniversary this month.

Earnest prayers are asked for the noble crusaders of Council Bluffs W. C. T. U., who have been stirring up the wrath of the adversary by aggressive and apparently unsuccessful work against Sunday theaters. The end is not yet.

Mrs. Anna M. Palmer recently visited Temple union, of Des Moines, of which she is a member, and presented the theme, "The World's W. C. T. U. and Its Organizers," making the meeting one of rare interest.

Oklahoma Remembers Miss Willard.

Sue Uhl Brown, Correspondent.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 11.—Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland, territorial president, has been invited by the officers of the Winfield, Kansas, Chatauqua to speak at their annual assembly in June. Mrs. Cleveland has chosen for her subject "The Children's Heritage." Her constituency are sure the address will be a good one and do honor to the Oklahoma W.C.T.U.

Oklahoma City is erecting some very fine public school buildings. The city unions appeared before the council and asked that one of the buildings be named for Frances Willard, which request was granted. Other school buildings in the city bear such honored names as Webster, Washington, Emerson, Irving and Bryant. Oklahoma City union is also asking for a police matron.

R. Foster Stone has just completed an itinerary of eighteen days, lecturing and organizing for the Oklahoma county W. C. T. U. He organized five new unions, with a total of sixty-six members and honoraries. He spoke in several country school houses where the people were pleased, and much was done for the temperance cause.

Annual W. C. T. U. Convention in Florida.

Notable Visitors—Interest in Scientific Temperance Instruction.

Mrs. Neva C. Child, Correspondent.

ARCADIA, Fla., May 4.—The twentieth annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. of Florida was held April 21-24, at Kissimmee, Over forty delegates were present, as well as most of the state officials, several prominent workers from out the state and a good share of the citizens. The day meetings were full of interest in a business way and the evening sessions devoted to lectures on temperance topics. The Welcome Night addresses were from prominent Kissimmee people, the superintendent of schools, the Kissimmee unions and Y's, with response by Mrs. McCormick of Lake City, the music for the occasion being appropriate and well rendered by home talent.

The reports of the officers show the temperance work to be in a hopeful condition. The treasurer had money to meet all bills and some left for paying for the printing of the minutes of the convention. The convention voted to pay hereafter the bills incurred by the president and corresponding secretary in organization or other state work. The corresponding secretary reported over forty unions now working, eight of these being new ones organized last winter and this spring by Mrs. Bailey, National organizer, who also reports more than 300 new paid-up members as a result of her efforts. The president's address was an able paper, dealing with the questions of the day in a comprehensive, clear-minded way.

The presence of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Comings at the convention, their addresses and other assistance was much appreciated. They are located in Tampa, coming from Michigan to settle in this summer land. Mr. Comings gave a short address on "Industrial Education," a subject that is in line with our work, and gave new and valuable suggestions to the workers. Mrs. Comings, better known as Lydia J. Newcomb-Comings, gave an illustrated address on "Physical Education" Mrs. Comings has accepted the Y department of the W. C. T. U. in Florida, and will, we believe, find no difficulty in enlisting our best young women under her leadership.

Dr. E. O. Taylor, of Boston, gave several splendid lectures on temperance topics that should result in great good. Our state president, realizing that it is through the temperance education of our youth that the hope of our country lies, has done arduous work the past year to bring our state and county officials up to the point of keeping the laws we have in regard to temperance instruction in our public schools. She emphasized the duty of each union to recall to the attention of school boards the fact that we have such a school law, though many of them seem to have forgotten it, if they ever knew it. It was through our president's zeal in this direction that we have been able to secure Dr. Taylor for this tour of the state he is now making.

The Florida W. C. T. U. numbers among its workers three of the original Ohio crusaders, Mrs. Alice C. Brown, Mrs. E. Springer Oliver and Mrs. M. J. Sullivan. They were all present and by their wise counsels added much to the value of the convention. The delegates were also pleased to meet once more Mrs. L. E. Bailey, National organizer, whose efficient work will be a lasting memorial of her usefulness in Florida. She conducted the question box and at times talked, and always acceptably. She will remain only a month in Florida before going north, but promises to return next winter. Aside from recalling the county school boards to their duty, the W. C. T. U. in convention voted to ask the legislature, now in session, to repeal the present license law which permits liquor dealers to get a license in wet counties by securing the recommendation of three respectable citizens and a month's advertisement in a country paper, and to give us back the former law, which requires a petition signed by a majority of the voters.

The state officers were all re-elected. They are President, Mrs. Alice C. Brown, Fort Reed; vice-president, Miss Minnie E. Neal, De Land; recording secretary, Mrs. Sarah J. Glenn, Tampa; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Neva C. Child, Arcadia; treasurer, Mrs. M. J. Crippin, Fort Reed; delegates to the National convention, Mrs. E. Springer Oliver and Nealie Miller.

A Supreme Moment in Kansas W. C. T. U. History.

Laying the Corner Stone of Willard Memorial Hall.

Mrs. L. B. Smith, Correspondent.

OTTAWA, Kan., May 11.—May 1 was the twenty-third anniversary of the day when the prohibitory law of Kansas went into effect. It has been the custom of the W. C. T. U. to celebrate the day with appropriate exercises, that the younger generation, as well as ourselves, may keep in memory our emancipation from the thrall of the legalized liquor traffic.

MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON.

The building committee closed the contract for the erection of the Frances E. Willard Memorial Hall, in Forest Park—the Ottawa Chautauqua Grounds—April 21, and bent their energies toward laying the corner-stone on May 1. The morning dawned in a flood of sunshine; Forest Park never looked more lovely, with the stars and stripes floating from the top-mast arches of the massive granite gateway. Visitors from different sections of the state and county were in attendance. The public schools of the city closed at 2:30 p. m., and over 1,000 school children, under the direction of the superintendent and teachers, marched with music and flags to participate in the exercises.

Mrs. E. P. Hutchinson, state president, presided and after an appropriate opening service the children sang "America" and gave the impressive flag salute. Rev. Mary Sibbitt greatly pleased her young auditors with a short address, and then to the sound of the drum the children marched away. The officers of the Ottawa Chautauqua, the Ministerial Association and the city government were all represented on the program. Each spoke appreciative words of the principles and methods of the W. C. T. U. and paid a tender tribute to Frances E. Willard.

Mrs. Hutchinson and Rev. Sibbitt each gave a short address concerning the lines of W. C. T. U. work, and especially that in the Ottawa Assembly, speaking of what the proposed building will stand for in these grounds.

The contractors placed the handsome corner-stone in position, deposited the box containing records, THE UNION SIGNAL of April 23, etc., in the niche prepared, handed the decorated trowel to Mrs. Hutchinson, who packed the mortar firmly about its base, while the assembled crowd sang "There are bands of ribbon white around the world." The benediction was pronounced and thus closed one of the supreme moments in the history of the Kansas Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

GENERAL NEWS.

The principal jointists in Topeka, our capital city, are folding their tents and quietly stealing away. The ultimatim of the people is law enforcement and the jointists seem to be willing to abide by it. The people of Kansas, except in the cities of Wichita and Leavenworth, are thoroughly aroused to the danger of permitting the trampling under foot of laws of the state and have said it would be no longer permitted. The danger in Kansas is apathy.

Mrs. E. T. Scott, of California, and Rev. Mary Sibbitt, state organizer, have been holding immensely large meetings in the south and west parts of the state. Mrs. Jennie Kinmore, Rev. Lucy Dodge and Sena H. Wallace are in the east and south. All this work is bearing fruit in new unions and an increase in membership. Five W's, three Y's and two L. T. L.'s have been organized within a few weeks. County institutes are now being held and more than the usual interest is manifested in the general work of the state.

The plans for work in four summer assemblies is now being pushed, and the programs for each are nearly ready for the public. Truly this is a year for progress in Kansas.

Advance in Indian Territory.

Headquarters Will Be Established at Chautauqua, August 2-16

Martha Gilmore, Correspondent.

MUSCOGEE, I. T., May 11.—We are rejoicing that the statehood question was not settled last winter in such a way as to give us open saloons, and we intend to put forth every effort in our power to prevent such a catastrophe.

Special work is being done to strengthen our organization. Mrs. Lila Carlin Moore, of Kentucky, is helping us for six weeks and is adding strength and numbers in various places. Mrs. A. C. Zehner, of Texas, has recently given two weeks of work in the Fourth or Chickasaw district, filling appointments at Vinita and South McAlester. She reorganized or strengthened the unions at Wynnewood, Sulphur and Paul's Valley. The good influence of her work is felt wherever she goes. Mrs. A. P. McDonald, of Missouri, comes to us the first of May for four months' work. She is acquainted with the field and knows how to adapt herself to its needs. We are hoping for great things from this campaign. We also expect to have Mrs. Weed one week in May, to work in the interests of the Anti-Polygamy amendment.

A Loyal Temperance Legion in every union is one of the objects held in view this year. The exceptionally bad weather has hindered the work during the winter, but it will be pushed more vigorously this summer. A Zobo Band is a marked feature in a number of the Legions, and is found to be quite an inspiration and help.

A Chautauqua assembly is to be held August 2-16 at Sulphur. The association has set aside two lots for the use of the W. C. T. U. and its branch organizations. A temporary building will be erected this summer, and W. C. T. U. headquarters established at the very beginning of the assembly. We expect to be well represented on the program.

Dividing the territory into districts is proving very helpful. We now have three good district presidents, but are still in search of the right woman for the Second district. The district conventions will be held in July and August.

A PART OF THE ZOBO BAND AT WETUMKA, INDIAN TERRITORY.

Chelsea union, organized only last fall, has opened a rest and reading room, and is making itself felt in that community. This union is already furnishing the territory a most excellent district president, Mrs. Mabel Sutherland, of the First, or Cherokee district.

Chickasha union, together with the women's clubs, is maintaining a library and rest room.

South McAlester union keeps a matron at the depot, holds weekly services at the jail, and has a public meeting almost every month. This union has seventy-three active and thirty-nine honorary members.

The Muscogee union, Y. and L. T. L. are alive and active. A series of calendar socials is being held. These increase the interest and numbers as well as add funds to the treasury. A successful bonnet and apron bazaar, just closed, supplied money to purchase temperance charts for the public schools. The union is preparing a temperance cook-book and a beginning has been made toward a circulating library. The Y members are becoming much interested in the study of the Senior L. T. L. lessons. They are preparing for a contest, April 24, and are invited to Tahlequah the following week, to hold a contest and assist in organizing a Y.

A Somerset Y of fifty members is doing good work at the Indian University, three miles from Muscogee.

Tahlequah has an earnest, wide awake union and a flourishing Legion. At the last regular L. T. L. meeting, over one hundred were present.

"Our Helper" is succeeding well. The merchants of Muskogee are assisting us financially, the subscription list is growing steadily, and we believe the paper is proving a real help. The August number is to be of especial interest. It will be increased in size, will give a history of the W. C. T. U. work in the territory, and much interesting information about Tahlequah, the Cherokee capitol, where the next territorial convention is to be held in September.

The Nutmeg State Accepts the Challenge.

Advertising Our Work—The Oldest White Ribboner.

M. Josephine Lockrow, Correspondent.

MERIDEN Conn., May 11.—Liquor firms flaunt their advertisements in the face of all, and quack medicines are advertised, not only in the street cars but on fences, rocks and buildings. Why should we not call the attention of a long suffering public to the temperance side of the question? A plan to this end was formulated by two unions of Middlesex county, and in the trolley cars running between Middletown and Portland, offsetting the advertisements of the liquor dealers and saloon-keepers, may be read such notices as the following: "Drama—First act, Bar of the Saloon. Second, Court Room. Third, Jail. Fourth, Before the Bar of God." Another: "Alcohol is a good thing to let alone." These notices are varied from time to time, hoping to arrest the attention of those who might be led to patronize the saloons. The expense of placing the placards is borne by the Portland and Middletown unions. Cannot the same thing be done in other cities?

MRS. LISA K. FULLER.

The Middletown union held a very interesting press meeting at the Baptist Church April 13. Local press superintendents from the other unions in the county were present and contributed much to the interest of the program. Among the addresses was one by Mrs. Lisa K. Fuller, president of Windham county, and also editor of "The White Ribbon Banner," our state W. C. T. U. paper. Miss H. E. Culver gave a most comprehensive paper, comparing the press of the present with that of "ye olden time."

Mrs. Susan S. Fessenden, of Boston, has been in the state this month and Willimantic and Meriden unions were among those who enjoyed hearing her. She also gave the evening addresses at the spring conference of New London county, which was held at New London, April 9. The meeting was very enjoyable to all present. It is the intention to have Mrs. Fessenden come to New London again at some early date, to address a mass meeting.

Branford union had a very fine UNION SIGNAL and press meeting, with a good attendance and much interest. Wallingford union held two public meetings and gained sixteen new members. A newly organized L. T. L. in the village of Galesville now numbers over eighty members. Meriden has a new L. T. L. with about thirty members.

New Haven union, No. 1, has met with a great loss in the death of its president, Mrs. R. A. Morrill. Few women were more beloved. Her life has been a benediction to many, and she will be greatly missed.

Connecticut has a white ribboner now living who was born May 7, 1806. She joined the first temperance society organized in her native town, Lisbon, and was a member of the Crusade W. C. T. U. in Jewett City. She is Miss Caroline Brown, and is as careful to wear the white ribbon as in her earlier days.

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

Do Not Neglect State Reports.

My Dear Young Women: I want to share with you—partly for your encouragement and partly for your example—some of the letters that have recently come to my desk. Think of a state president sending out three messages in less than three months' time to all the young women of her state! Such a thing was unheard of a few years ago, and yet this is what Mrs. Hoge, of Virginia, has taken delight in doing. Miss Page's letter reveals conditions in hundreds of local unions. There are many, many very young women in the W. C. T. U., especially in the West, who are to form the nucleus for a good Y by and by when the motherhearts and the daughters "understand." The letter sent out by Mrs. Terrill I should like for all of you—who can neither get into the field nor send some one in your place—to pattern after.

I wish to call special attention to the plan of the Bangor, Me., Y's (See Gleanings) for aiding the National Temperance Hospital. This is a most worthy department, and something so very real and tangible. A few dollars expended here may be the means of nursing some homeless young woman back to life. Please consider the matter of using your honorary membership dues, dear other Y's, in this way.

We cannot tell yet how much money has been raised for the World's Missionary Fund, to aid Miss Smart, because all meetings have not yet been held; but a sufficient number of reports are at hand to prove that the day has been very much more generally observed than it ever was before, and I am happy in thinking that it is now pretty well established.

The largest number of Y's reported by any state comes from New York again—twenty-five since the Portland convention! The most wonderful part of it is that ten of these have been formed in one county, Suffolk, on Long Island, seven being organized by Mrs. Effie M. Lambert, state secretary, and three by the enterprising county secretary, Mrs. Eva Horton. Illinois comes next with about twenty new societies. Do you know, dear comrades, that such reports as these make me sad as well as glad? If it is possible to organize ten Y's in one county, it is possible to organize the same number in a thousand counties in these United States, and my heart is saddened because, by our failure to reach our possibilities, a multitude of young women may never know the blessed, broadening, uplifting influence, of our world-wide band. Isn't it something to make us think? I wish this plea, for an effort to reach the young women by counties, might come to the notice of every county Y secretary in the land, and fill them with the determination to try to attain the ideal of Mrs. Horton, of Suffolk county, New York. I feel impelled to again recommend that state secretaries adopt Miss Anna E. Chase's plan, and offer a banner to the county organizing the largest number of Y's.

As I have said to you in personal letters, I purpose printing a detailed report of the work of each state, for distribution in the Cincinnati convention just prior to the reading of the General Secretary's summary. I tell you early in order to give you time to make the fine showing I am sure each will be ambitious to make for her state. Be careful to return the reports with every blank filled in.

Have you noticed the number of times the Y's receive honorable mention on The Union Signal pages—I mean aside from our special department? We are becoming more and more a dignified part of the working force of the W. C. T. U. Let us be brave and true.

Yours for the highest attainment along all lines,

Clara Parrish-Wright.

Paris, Ill.

Helpful Letters.

Dear Girls of the Y. W. C. T. U.: I am glad to tell you that Miss Smith is steadily improving, but I fear it will be a long time before she is able to walk or to do active service. The last time I saw her she told me to give her love to you.

I am enclosing you a letter from the National Y Secretary. It will not reach you in time to have the proposed meeting on April 14, but it will reach you in time to have the meeting and to help on in the world's work.

This fund is now known as the Y Missionary fund, formerly the Clara Parrish fund; for the past three years the Virginia Y's have sent the largest contributions to this fund.

I am proud of the interest our young women take in extending the work. Of course we want no backward steps, therefore I am sure each Y union will try and send something for this fund.

Please send this month or in May, and send all contributions direct to state treasurer, Mrs. E. B. Clement, who will forward the same. Since Mrs. Parrish-Wright wrote this letter, she has written me that Miss Smart's interpreter will probably cost $40 per month, instead of $30; so let the young women of Virginia give as liberally as they can.

Let us remember, "Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters." I hope that you are doing your best to make your business meeting times of profit and helpfulness, and that in every possible way you are sowing seed for total abstinence and prohibition. Regular systematic work is sure to count. "Weary not in well doing."

Lovingly, your state president,

Mrs. Howard M. Hoge.

Dear Mrs. Parrish-Wright: I have four unions that have several young women in them wishing to take up the study of the Y branch for several of their regular programs. They not only want to develop the Y members they now have, but want to win others, and so educate them that they may be organized separately by and by. The W's. want to understand this branch thoroughly that they may help it on. Each union has subscribed fifty cents for Y literature.

They are made up of warm-hearted, earnest women, alive to the need of work among the young people and children and anxious to learn how to do it.

Emma E. Page,
National Lecturer Mercy Dept.

Acting upon the suggestion of the national secretary the secretary of Arkansas sent the following letter to every W. C. T. U. in the state:

My Dear Sisters: You know how my heart is with the Y's, and how very much I desired to bring an organizer into our state earlier in the year, but could not get sufficient response from the unions to make a route for a lecturer. I do not blame any one, they simply could not do it. But if we cannot have an organizer we must do the work ourselves, and we can, I am sure.

Mrs. Pittman has reorganized a good Y at Prescott. I have a letter from one of the dear girls to-day, stating that they are starting out with a great deal of enthusiasm, and, dear sisters, what has been done in one place can be done in another. Young girls are alike the world over, and they will have just as much love for the work in your town as they have here or at Prescott.

We have a splendid Y here. It only needs that some one take hold. Will you do it?. Please make the trial, and I am sure you will succeed. Let me hear from you, dear sisters, as soon as convenient, saying that you will do this for the sake of the young people who need it.

In His name,

(Mrs.) Nellie C. Terrill.
State Secretary Y. W. C. T. U.

A Young Woman s Influence.

Has she any? She has, for good or evil, and it reaches far. No angel in heaven can influence man as woman can.

Upon what does that influence depend? It cannot be measured by length of tongue, for great talkers are not often listened to. It is not independent of and yet is not rightly gauged by dress, for tailors' dummies and dressmakers' models are usually wooden-headed. It does not attach to beauty alone, for the attractiveness of beauty is weak compared with that of cultured kindness. Brain power is not a true index for it alone inspires awe rather than esteem and creates admirers rather than disciples.

Influence depends on many things—the subtle magnetism of kindness, the persuasive force of a soft and gentle voice, the witchery of smile and song and laugh and the thousand nameless things that speak the lady. These are possible to all. In thinking of your influence, worry not over the powers God forgot to give, but use his gifts. Find your sphere. The lichen loves the rock, the trillium the woods, the fern the mossy, shady nook; each has her sphere. So, sister, God meant thee for some special nook. Find it.

Some girls have no influence with girls, because they keep all their smiles and kind words for men. Don't forget your sisters; they need you. Your influence should reach both men and women.

Speak kindly. A censorious tongue is a perpetual scourge, but kind words heal wounds. Goodness is greater than smartness.

Let dress and speech, song and prayer, clasp of hand and glance of eye be all expressions of your sincere desire to please your God and serve your brother. Leave the rest to God. —Rev. W. McMullen, in the Canadian Epworth.

Gleanings.

Missouri reports a new Y at Blue Ridge. It will be known as the Alta Stevens Y.

Chrisman, Illinois, has a new Y, organized by the state secretary, Miss Kathryn Sawyer.

Miss Louise Hollister reports a Y at Monterano, Washington. Her next work will be in Idaho.

All the clergymen of Dexter, Mo., gave way to the Y's for the observance of Mrs. Barnes' birthday.

The local papers speak in most complimentary terms of the April 14th program of the Richmond, Va., Y's.

Miss Elizabeth Thomas, state secretary of Pennsylvania, has organized another Y in the city of Philadelphia.

At Seymour, Mo., Mrs. Alta Stevens organized a Y of twenty members, who seem quite anxious to go to work.

Mrs. Nelle Burger, on April 8, organized at Marionville, Mo., a Somerset Y of twelve active and two honorary members.

A large number of Y's observed Mrs. Barnes' birthday. Many that could not get ready on April 14, will observe a later date.

During her institute work in southern Illinois Miss Mary Kennedy, assistant state Y secretary, organized two new Y's, and greatly encouraged and built up other societies.

The president of the Gettysburg, Pa., Y, Miss Elizabeth McClean, attributes their success to the fact that one meeting a month has always been for Bible study, and that they maintain an L. T. L. "Pointers for other Y's."

Miss Belle Kearney organized at Tionesta, Pa., what she calls "a beautiful Y. W. C. T. U." She is having marvelous success in Pennsylvania, adding many new members to old unions as well as organizing new societies.

Miss Olive M. Blunt, the new Y secretary of Morgan county, Illinois, reports two new Y's organized, and a third one partially. Miss Blunt is a returned missionary from Japan, and a worker. We congratulate ourselves that she has so actively espoused our cause.

The various Y's of Newark, N. J., will have a union meeting and listen to an address by Mrs. Thacher on her work among soldiers and sailors. One of the April programs was a "Model Meeting," using Mrs. Stevenson's outline. These are given as "pointers" for other Y's.

The Bangor, Maine, Y, of which the author, Miss Mabel Freese, is president, has furnished the linen for a bed in The Frances E. Willard Hospital. The honorary membership dues are put to this use, and large efforts are made to secure the names of young men. Still another "pointer."

Miss Anna E. Chase, our Northern California secretary, is a fraternal delegate to the state conference of the Y. W. C. A., which convenes May 20, and is in session ten days. Here she will meet young women from every part of California. Let us pray that she may get in some "entering wedges" for the Y branch.

Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh is one of the staunch friends of the young woman's cause. Last month she organized a Y of sixty regulars and ten honorary members at the State Normal school at Athens, Georgia. Since they are to be teachers they will make a special study of scientific temperance. Mrs. Unruh is soon to bring out a new booklet: "A Rosebud Garden of Girls." Photographs of some of the Y's will probably be in it, and she hopes it will be very helpful to the cause.

The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union is to be congratulated that they have so able and energetic a representative in Japan as Miss K. G. Smart, and the several temperance societies of this country have much cause for thankfulness that her coming to this country was at such an auspicious time.

Soon after her arrival last year, a reception was given her at Tsunohazu in the suburbs of Tokyo. At that first meeting with the friends of temperance in the capital she urged the immediate publication of the temperance text-book, "Health for Little Folks." She recommended also that the temperance organizations take steps to inaugurate a temperance movement at the coming Osaka Exposition. The first of these recommendations was greatly accelerated by her influence, and it is quite certain that the Osaka work could not have been organized and carried on in the successful manner that is being done, without her leadership.—From the Kuni-no-Hikara, organ of the Japan Temperance League.

Some Phases of Life in the Philippine Islands

By

Mrs. Carrie C. Faxon

A COUNTRY RESTAURANT.

Proposed Industrial School.

OWING to a knowledge of the general immoral conditions here, gained chiefly through instances brought to our immediate attention, the Manila union recently appointed a committee consisting of Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. Burtner, Mrs. Stuntz and myself, to interview Governor Taft with reference to establishing an institution for incorrigible girls, which should be similar to those in the United States.

We were most graciously received by Governor Taft, who promised to recommend, before the Commission, the establishing of such an institution as we outlined. The Commission will hold its meetings at Benguet during the hot months.

In our regular meetings at the Leper Hospital we pass through San Lazare Hospital where the girls from the Sampaloc district are sent. The driveway is directly through the building. We have visited the patients twice, but could do nothing for them, for lack of a woman interpreter. Dr. De Mey called our attention to the youthfulness of some of the girls, one of twelve years and two of fourteen. Commissioner Worcester, and Dr. De Mey agreed with us all that something should be done to rescue and reform these girls, but we disagreed as to the kind of institution; Commissioner Worcester believing a charitable home would best meet the need.

Again, in visiting Bilbid (the prison) which now contains more than 2,100, and is to be enlarged to accommodate 6,500 prisoners, mostly insurrectos, we found sixty-four women prisoners, fourteen of whom were practically life prisoners sentenced for murder.

In the department of the short-term prisoners was a girl of fourteen. Something should be done for this class of girls, and it should be done without delay.

Traffic in Japanese Girls.

I had planned to embark for home, by way of Singapore, March 29, but on application for transportation, I providentially found every berth taken, and was compelled to delay going until the 12th of April. The delay gave opportunity to begin work against the traffic in Japanese girls. The girls in the cities of Japan are too wise to be caught by the procurers, but many of them are lured from the interior of Japan by the promises of large wages in tailor shops.

They are brought from their homes and kept at some hotel, either in Japan or China until a board bill has accumulated, then shipped here, and kept at a Japanese hotel where the board bill increases beyond hope of paying; then the girls are told there is no work for them, and there is no other alternative but to go into the notorious Sampaloc district. They have no friends and cannot speak the language, and are obliged to accept the alternative.

Many of these girls, we are told by the assistant superintendent of the hospital, beg him to help them find some way to leave the life they lead, protesting against their return to the despised district when they are discharged from the hospital.

Our interview with the Japanese consul proved rather unsatisfactory. He expressed himself as not desiring to interfere with the American government; it required a personal application to him from the girls themselves, which they are afraid to make. But the matter will not rest here. With Miss Smart in Japan it may be possible to work both ends of the line.

Civil Commission Issues Order.

The increase in crime among the civil employes (Americans) has led the Civil Commission a step further in the effort of good government. Believing that extravagance, as well as licentiousness, has much to do with the employes absconding with public funds, an order has been issued notifying civil employes to marry their queridas at once or leave them. In consequence there have been many marriages and many desertions of the women. The penalty of not obeying instructions is loss of position. But this rule does not apply to the military.

In the Cockpit.

Some wit has styled the rooster "The Filipine God." He is in evidence everywhere. One cannot pass the length of Calle San Marceline after five o'clock without seeing groups of men, and sometimes women, gathered round a few cocks which are being trained for a fight.

The legs of the bird (it is in fighting vocabulary called a bird) have been rubbed and manipulated until the muscles are hardened. The combatants are selected and are set down opposite each other, their owners keeping hold of a string attached to one leg. The birds are first pushed towards each other, then pulled back until they are sufficiently teased into flying at each other in earnest. This process is kept up until the fighting qualities have been sufficiently tested. Systematic training of this kind is practised until the bird is ready for business in the pit. Before he is taken there, however, steel spurs, as sharp as razors, enclosed in a sheath, have been fastened on, and the cock is taught to use them. When he is taken into the arena, and before the battle begins, the sheath is removed.

The sport has been so popular with the Filipinos that it was found to interfere with the laboring class, insomuch that no matter how important might be the work on hand, the hombre would fail to appear when a cock fight was billed, and government work was often at a standstill until the fight was over.

To "regulate" this evil a law was passed that cockpits should be open only on Sundays and legal holidays, and heavy penalties were attached for violation of the law. In regulating it by license, it has been made a source of income to the government.

The cockpit at Caleocan, which is the largest one in the vicinty of Manila, has a standing capacity of possibly 2,500. The buildings are made of bamboo and thatched with long grass. The Caleocan pit is within four miles of Manila, and is largely patronized by residents of the city. Malaben pit is somewhat further out, and is quite as well patronized from the opposite direction.

On Sundays the public which does not patronize that kind of institution, is handicapped for the want of vehicles, for all available carts are moving in a procession out to the pits. Every third conveyance, at least, is filled with natives, and contains, as well, a few roosters. The hombre who cannot afford to ride is trudging along in the dust, barefooted and bareheaded with his fighter under his arm.

The path leading from the road to the entrance of the pit is lined with venders of all kinds of eatables, including fruits of the season, cooked chicken, fish, rice and vegetables. Some of the dishes are so prettily arranged that they look appetizing even to an American, but the surroundings take away the desire to eat.

A fee of ten cents is taken at the door. At the rear of the building a large space is enclosed by a wire netting, where the fighting takes place. A platform is built above from which the spectator can have a direct view. Between the aisles leading from the door to rear are more eatables; two or three hundred birds, the "booted and spurred" in care of their keepers, and scattered along the side of the building are a dozen or more dead combatants.

At the side of the enclosed space an American runs a roulette wheel, and conspicuous among the gamblers are two Filipino girls not more than twelve years old. At the close of the day, the feast will begin. This kind of sport(?) sometimes lasts all night as well as all day.

When Buencamine gave a Sunday picnic in honor of General Miles, the guests were entertained by dancing, in which Governor Taft led, and a special feature of the picinc was a cockfight planned for the diversion of the "Americanos." In a building outside, there were fifteen monte tables, at which two women and five Americans were dealing. The money in sight on each table would run from fifty to two hundred pesos.

Civic Reform.

A stringent law against gambling was passed some three months previous, and this from the "Cable News" is a sample of its enforcement:

"Some of the prisoners, the most of whom were released on cash bond, feel sore about the occurrence and claim that they will contest the case on the grounds that it is one that comes within the jurisdiction of the province of Rizal, and not within the authority of the secret service or any other branch of the municipality of Manila. The last raid of the country club on similar grounds was made by the constabulary and the offenders were punished at the provincial seat at Pasig; the present offenders will have a chance to explain matters in the court of First Instance this morning.

"Notwithstanding the injured feelings of those taken in, with about seven hundred dollars of good coin of the realm, it is exceedingly doubtful whether the case will be contested at all, as prominent among those present were two army officers of rank and several of almost equal standing."

General Mention.

A pleasant surprise last week was a call by four soldier boys, members of the Burnham union of Portland, Me., among which was vice president Wilson and corresponding secretary Willett. They brought the list of membership in the 108th Coast Artillery, twenty-eight in number; a good beginning. We are to meet at the Y. M. C. A. to plan a meeting, the last before I am homeward bound. Mrs. Mitchell will be their Philippine president. She is a host among young people.

A box of comfort bags has been in the custom house for two months, and I have not yet succeeded in getting it through. Collector Shuster informs me that hereafter duty must be paid on everything sent to soldiers which does not come through military channels. One dozen bags came by mail. The wrappings were badly torn and there was no way of telling who were the senders.

Several letters have been received, saying bags have been sent. Mrs. Dunn, of Maine, sent six bags of mail, which were received in good condition. With the three boxes sent to the American library, make the sum total of bags received since Mrs. Moots went away.

Manila, P. I.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

The Time to Trust Him. By Adelbert F. Caldwell.

WHEN I meet no opposition
In my way,
When no threatening cloud of doubt
Obscures my day,
When I feel my Master's presence
By my side,
When I hear His whisper, "Here,
My child, abide!"
When I feel temptation has no
Power to sting—
It is easy—easy then to trust
My King!

WHEN there's only opposition,
When I'm tempted so it seems
I cannot pray,
When I grope amid the darkness
For His hand,
When I fail His mysteries
To understand,
When to faith I feel I can no
Longer cling—
Then it is I need—I need to trust
My King!

Bloomington, Ill.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter XI.

THE Friday in that week was memorable in Pitsmoor as a day which provided the parish with a unique experience.

Long ago, Enoch had promised that "some day" he would take Hugh into the pit of which he was "deputy," and when this promise had reached the ears of the adventurous Rose, there had been no peace for Enoch until he had promised to take her and Mrs. Boyd as well. Whereupon, Mrs. Langley insisted upon being included in the party. Dr. Mann denounced the proposed expedition as a piece of feminine foolhardiness, while Mr. Boyd resignedly joined it in pursuance of his duty towards his wife and Rose. Ever afterwards he accused them both of having revelled that day in a debauch of sensations. Even the tremors she suffered were delightful to Rose, not excepting the fearsome joy of that irrevocable step from the bleak hillside into the "cage," and the swift glide down, down, down into the bowels of the earth. Hugh was on one side of her, smiling reassurance, and Enoch, grimly protective, on the other. As the cage touched the bottom, the girl stepped out on to the beaten ground, and looked eagerly about her with a strange sense of entering another world. As if to carry out the illusion, the first object on which her eyes rested was the reprobate, Sellers. In the grime incidental to his calling, Billy stood blinking his bleared eyes and grinning horribly at the startled young creature, who gazed as if fascinated into his blackened face. The girl even shrank a little, for, in this weird place, the old rascal looked more like a satyr than over. At a little distance, Sam Widgery the younger openly gaffawed at the young lady's shrinking gesture, and Hugh, at one masterful glance, took in the fact that here the odd dozen felt themselves at home. His manner towards Rose became protective.

"Come into the cabin. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd are there," he said, with the coaxing sort of authority we use towards a frightened child, and an unexpected thrill ran through his veins when, in passing close by Sellers, Rose pressed perceptibly closer to his own side. But notwithstanding her momentary shrinking, the girl was no coward, and as Enoch served round a candle to each member of the expedition, her eyes sparkled with anticipation. The reason for the use of naked lights having been duly explained, Enoch and one or two others, who were to accompany the party into the workings, fastened their candles, by means of a lump of clay, to the front of theirs caps, and declared themselves ready to start. Having donned the rough garments provided to protect their clothing from the drippings of the roof, the visitors set off merrily. A halt was called at the terminus of the miniature railway, which, starting from a small clearing, was quickly lost to sight in the blacker regions beyond the wider space in which the little party stood.

"What are we waiting for?" asked Mrs. Langley of Rose's protector. Enoch had just finished an explanation to which she had not taken the trouble to listen.

"For the trucks that are coming up from the workings. You see, it is only a single line," said Hugh.

As he spoke, the train of trucks appeared with their load of iron-stone drawn by two of the pit-horses. Sam, and other young colliers who were waiting, fell to work forthwith, and as soon as the trucks were unladen and swept out, they proceeded to prepare them for a new freight. Placing inverted packing-cases in each of the foremost trucks, they roughly covered these and the floor with empty sacks, the strangers looking on the while with dawning intelligence.

Mrs. Langley uttered a little cry of dismay, causing Mrs. Boyd and her sister to laugh outright.

"You don't mean to say that we are to go down in the trucks that have just been used for the coal?"

"Certainly we are. You see, they don't profess to carry passengers. Allow me to help you in," and Mr. Boyd offered his hand.

With her usual readiness, Mrs. Langley accepted the situation, and laughed as merrily as the two girls.

"What fun!" she exclaimed, as she seated herself precariously on her packing-case, with a mental thanksgiving for the forethought that had prompted her to put on a black dress.

"Now, look 'ee here," said Enoch, confronting the cavalcade, "I'm a-goin' in this here front truck, and so fur as they went, I've put these ladies and you gentlemen turn about."

Hugh wondered whether it was by accident that he and Enoch had Rose between them.

"Now ye mun all keep your eyes on me, and do as I do. I knows the pit, every turn of un, and ye'll be right as long as ye follows your leader. If ye don't—well the road's only narrer, like another we've heard tell on; and, here and there, there's nasty projections of this here iron-stone that'll happen make ye remember the day when, choose what, ye'd see the pit."

For Enoch did not approve of the complaisance that permitted women wilfully to run into danger.

Thus admonished, they started slowly, and a weird procession it was, every dimly-lighted form swaying, now to this side, now to that, in abject obedience to Enoch's lead, a fantastically grotesque spectacle in the light of the thin line of candle flame.

Presently, perhaps in some spirit of mockery, Sam Widgery, who occupied the two last trucks—his feet in one and the bulk of his person in the other—broke lustily into one of the Sankey hymns used by Hugh in his open-air meetings.

"Down in the valley with my Saviour I will go—"

"Reet, lad, so us will!' shouted Enoch out of the gloom ahead, and soon along the line of trucks the words were taken up, heightening tenfold the effect of the strange scene. No West Riding lad can withstand the allurements of concerted singing, and, led by Sam, they were drawing to the close of the second hymn when the train stopped in the far workings. Here were more men at work, elders of the church, and members of the odd dozen, hardly distinguishable the one from the other in their covering of grime. While the wonders of the pit were being explained, a group of miners gathered round the unusual visitors, and when his duty as guide had been amply accomplished, Enoch whispered eagerly to Hugh. The young man looked alarmed, but, without waiting for a reply, Enoch had turned decisively to the group of men in the background.

"Mates," said he, "it isn't often that we get a chance of praising God out of the pit, so we're a-goin to do it now, and when we've done a-praisin' God, Mr. Brotherton here'll give us a word o' good counsel. Let us now priase God by singin' hymn No. 7, 'Dare to be a Daniel.'" He promptly struck the first note as he finished speaking, and half derisively, half in earnest, it was as promptly taken up by the men who had lounged around. After the first line or two Mrs. Boyd and her sister added their sweet girlish voices, but Mrs. Langley looked about helplessly. It was Sam Widgery who, divining her need, gallantly stepped forward with a tattered and grimy book which he had snatched from a better lad. She thanked him with a radiant smile that sent him blushing to the rear, and in another moment her rich, full notes were echoing through the narrow roadways, and bringing scattered miners hurrying, pick in hand, to the spot.

The last note died away, but Hugh stood motionless.

"Let us further praise God by singing, 'I have a Saviour'—the first two verses of 'I have a Saviour,'" said Enoch, with determination. He meant to be master of the situation, and having started the first line, stepped aside and peremptorily motioned Hugh toward the first truck. "The Lord have mercy on your backwardness! Mount it, lad! He has delivered them helpless into your hands this day, and gi'en you a chance wi' 'em as ye've never had afore, and may never have again. It's temperance teachin' as they wants, but they won't come to you for it. Here they are; gi'e it to hot and strong!"

Hugh flushed and paled, then cast a distracted glance at Mr. Boyd, who, by one slight contortion of the eyebrows, conveyed his emphatic renunciation of all responsibility.

"Get in, lad, and the Lord help you," commanded Enoch sternly.

Slowly Hugh stepped into the truck, and faced the oddly mingled group, with a secret feeling of sympathy for the hunted animal at bay. Enoch was right. Many of those to whom he had never yet had an opportunity of speaking were before him now, and, taken unawares as he was, he had not a word to say. He saw the expectant grin on the faces of each of the Widgerys—father and son; he noted the sly exchange of glances between the scattered members of the odd dozen, and his tongue grew parched within his mouth.

"The last verse," he said, as the second verse came to an end. But the last verse came to an end, all eyes were fixed with varying expressions upon him, and something he must say.

"Men," he began, "perhaps you are wondering why I have kept you from your work to sing that last verse—well, it was to gain time."

That was adroit in Hugh. He admitted the fact because his observation told him that both Mrs. Langley and Sam Widgery the younger had seen through his device, and were amused by it.

"When Enoch asked me to say something on the subject that he—that some of us—have so much at heart—the subject of temperance—a certain thing came to my mind. It came naturally enough, for it is a thing that has troubled me much of late. But, at the first blush, it seemed to me not at all the sort of thing to say to you men here today. So I asked for that last verse, and waited to see if there was no other thing for me to say, and still that one fact—that one man of whom I have been thinking—thinking most sorrowfully—holds possession of my mind. What if, through him, God would have me give a word of warning to you. To all of you, whether you are abstainers or no."

Unconscious of blasphemy, and fully master of himself at last, he paused and ran his eyes once more over the intently listening group, reassuring the odd dozen, and confirming Enoch's confidence in his being led to say the right thing.

"I am speaking now to men who have different ways of thinking on this subject. Some of you who take intoxicating drink do so in what is said to be strict moderation. Others, perhaps, do not," (Sam Widgery nudged his neighbor slily, and for a moment Hugh's eyes rested upon him in a somewhat disconcerting way.) "Others, again, abstain altogether, and think themselves safe."

"Ay, lad, and none safe no other way," commented Enoch; but Hugh paid no heed.

"Safe?" he echoed, with sudden fire, that startled not Enoch alone, but the most desultory of his hearers, into amazed attention. "Which of us on this side of the grave can dare to say that he is safe?"

Exulting in his rebuked condition, Enoch planted himself squarely on his honest feet and prepared for a treat.

"It seems strange," said Hugh, "that, with all you men before me, my thoughts turn persistently to another man whom, as a boy, as a lad at school, and again at Cambridge, I knew well. Quite recently certain facts concerning him have come to my knowledge, and I am not breaking any confidence in giving an outline of his terrible case to you. This man is little—very little, if any—more than my own age, a fellow-townsman of my own, and well known, as I have already said, to me. So much I may tell you without betraying his identity. He is not at all 'a bad sort,' as they say; quite the contrary," said Hugh feeling his way carefully. "There is, or at any rate was, much that was manly and genuine about him. Without forgetting anything that one cannot but condemn, I can admit it fully; and mark this," said Hugh, with sudden energy, "he was a man of sincere religious conviction and principle, but—but—" and he paused significantly on the repeated word. "unfortunately for him, and unsuspected by himself, he had inherited a taste for strong drink." The tension of his hearers was unmistakable, and again he paused impressively. "Unsuspected by himself until the knowledge came—too late to save him."

Enoch frowned involuntarily, and even Mrs. Langley stood pale and still.

"Don't forget that his has been lifelong abstinence, and, half an hour before he got drunk for the first time, he had no more suspicion that he was capable of doing it than has any one of you abstainers here before me. But, through circumstances into which we need not enter, his curiosity was aroused, and he determined to test for himself the power of this temptation. Only to test it, you understand. The love of drink meant damnation to thousands of his fellow-creatures. He knew that, ay!" and as Hugh paused his eyes darkened, "and it meant damnation to him no less; but that, as yet, he did not know. He burned to find out in what consisted the charm of that accursed stuff, and he got a lesson that might have satisfied him. Yet do you suppose that he was satisfied?" demanded Hugh passionately of Sam Widgery, and as Sam fidgeted under the burning gaze, himself answered the question with scorn. "Not he! Little by little, little by little, he yielded up his manhood, for the soul-destroying craving that hitherto had lain dormant awoke and fastened upon him, growing in its damnable power as the strength of his will weakened, until to-day he stands before the

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

(Continued on page 15.)

Children's Cozy Corner

"GRANDPA IS THE FUNNIEST MAN."

When Grandpa Plays With Me.

By Ida B. Cole.

GRANDPA is the funniest man,
And he loves little boys,
And he can do the mostest things
And aint afraid of noise.
You ought to see him playing bear,
The way he growls and kicks;
But I stick tight upon his back,
For I just know his tricks.
And then I laugh so very loud
That mamma runs to see
Just what the noise is all about,
And then she smiles at me
And says, "Oh Robert, such a laugh,
What will the neighbors think!"
Then Grandpa says, "Now, let's be good;"
He says it with a wink
That makes me laugh so loud again,
And fairly shout with glee,
Oh, I do have the bestest fun
When Grandpa plays with me.

Chicago.

Jack's Queer Dream.

"I WANT somebody to come and button my shoes," called Harold down the stairs.

He wanted, but no one went to his help, for the reason that Aunt Amy had told Emma, the girl who cared for the children, not to go.

"I can't find my brush," came another call. "Emma, you come here."

Emma did not go.

"I think you're mean, Emma," in a fretful tone. "You can leave Harry as well as not. Bring some warm water with you;" but Emma still played with little Harry.

"Emma," called another voice, "won't you please" —Emma jumped up, and was half way upstairs before Jessie had finished saying—"tell me where my slippers are?"

That was it. The mother of the children had been ill for a long time. Now she had gone away for help, and Aunt Amy had come to take charge of them. She found them pleasant and well-disposed children, but sadly lacking in the small graces of speech which takes all the care of a strong mother to form into a habit.

"I suppose it's because they're the 'little things,'" said Jessie, when they finally gathered at the table and Aunt Amy talked to them about it, assuring them that no children could ever hope to get along agreeably in the world without a good supply of nice small change as , "If you please," "Thank you," "Excuse me," and the like. "You see," she went on, "we wouldn't any of us tell a lie, or steal, or slap Harry, or say bad words, because they're big things. But 'please' is so little we always forget."

"And so poor Aunt Amy has to keep dinging away at us," said Harold.

"Oh!" said Jack, bursting into a laugh, "I had the funniest dream last night. I dreamed there was a garden—oh! beautiful. All flowers and grass and trees. And you never, never could guess what grew on those trees."

"Apples, pears?"

"Peaches, cherries? Or chestnuts?"

"Oranges, bananas?"

"Now, I knew you couldn't. It was all sorts of toys. You can't think of a thing that wasn't there. There was a top-tree and a bat and ball-tree, a doll-tree and a balloon-tree. There was a jumping-jack-tree and a tree full of dogs and cats and elephants, and monkeys that would wind up and go. There was a candy-tree and a lemonade-creek. And then there were boys and girls running about and picking things —all they wanted."

"Did you get any?"

"No, I didn't. I was outside. Lots of other boys and girls were outside, and we all wanted to get in."

"I guess so!"

"I saw some of them going up and asking if they could go in. And they came back and said that the man said that the man at the gate—he looked fierce and grim—said no one could go in without a golden key, and any one could easily find one. So we all hunted and hunted, but we couldn't find any golden keys. Then I saw a boy go up and ask to go in, and the man looked as pleasant as anything, and let him right in. But I hadn't seen that he had any key. And as I looked after him I saw a tree full of cars and steamboats, and I was wild to try it again, and I went right up and said to the man, 'Oh, please, mister, let me go in. I've hunted and hunted for the key, and I can't find it.' And he smiled like everything, and he said, 'Please is all the key you need to get in here.' And I was just going in when the rising-bell woke me up."

All laughed at the dream.

"I think," said Aunt Amy, "that my dinging and dinging must have done some good if I have made you dream about the golden key. You will keep it for every day use, I am sure; not only for dreams."

"That's what I'm going to do," said Jack.—Selected.

A Horse That Can Write.

GERMINAL is the property of Dr. M. Roubet, and among the many tricks for which the animal already has more than local celebrity, Dr. Roubet prides himself upon the beast's ability to write the doctor's name in a manner to satisfy the most exacting of primary teachers.

By means of a penholder of special design the horse prints the name "Roubet" with the greatest ease and facility. More than this, the animal learned the trick in about twenty days.

The doctor began to teach the horse, guiding it by the reins. The first results were of a nature to have discouraged any one but a horse lover and enthusiast. Gradually, however, the animal began to see design in the task to which he had been set, and as he progressed his willingness grew until with the evolved writing staff the plainest lettering was obtained.

The penholder used by the horse is a long, light staff of wood, with a roll of cloth wound round the end. This carries the pigment with which the letters are made, and in making them Germinal now does so without the least direction from his trainer.

A Mother's Lullaby.

THE winds kiss the tree-tops and murmur "good-night,"
Sleep, little one, sleep;
The sun bathes the mountain in warm mellow light,
Sleep, little one, sleep;
The birds hush their songs, the lambs cease their play,
The darkness of night steals the fast-fading day,
And fairy lamps twinkle in skies far away,
Sleep, little one, sleep.
The tired eyes close with their lashes so long,
Sleep, little one, sleep;
While mother sits rocking and crooning her song,
Sleep, little one, sleep;
The little hand loosens its hold from the toy,
And now for the land of sweet slumber and joy,
Where angels keep watch o'er my bright bonny boy,
Sleep, little one, sleep.

—Thomas H. Wilson.

Some Pie Conundrums.

What pies are very conducive to sleepiness?—Poppies.

What pies were considered very annoying in olden times?—Harpies.

What pies do school-boys usually dislike?—Copies.

What pies consider themselves quite swell?—Chappies.

What pies might bite you?—Puppies.

What pies might we sit under?—Canopies.

What pies are noisy and mischievous?—Magpies.

What pies prance around the water?—Kelpies.

What pies are placed on the table but never eaten?—Nappies.—Elizabeth R. Burns.

Teacher: Bessie, name one bird that is now extinct.

Little Bessie: Dick!

Teacher: Dick? What sort of a bird is that?

Little Bessie: Our canary—the cat extincted him!

Little Girl: If I was teacher I'd make everybody behave.

Auntie: How would you accomplish that?

Little Girl: Very easy. When girls was bad I'd tell them they didn't look pretty; and when little boys was bad I'd make them sit with the girls, and when big boys was bad I wouldn't let them sit with the girls.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1.—Charade.

Is my FIRST the cup you're drinking?
Heaven speed you fair or foul,
Like the fabled stream of Marah
May it give you health of soul,
And at last you find my SECOND
Take the tiresome taste away,
While my WHOLE in balmy autumn
Blooms beside the dusty way.

C. A. A.

2.—*Acrostic.

1. The name of a city in Italy.
2. An almost extinct race of people.
3. Another Italian city.
4. The ancient name of one of the great powers of Europe.
5. A disbeliever.
6. A French gold coin.
7. That branch of Zoology that treats of fishes.
8. A soldier and statesman who lived at Athens in the 4th century B. C., and was called "The Just."

The initial letters of the answers is one of the original thirteen states. GRACE.

3.—Word Building.

Begin with one letter, and add one letter at a time, forming a new word each time, changing the order if necessary.

1. An article.
2. A preposition.
3. A rodent.
4. A snare.
5. Divisions.
6. Articles made from leather.

E. W. B. F.

4.—*Names of Books.

1. As I daily go to my work I see a portion of a shoe lying in the street.
2. Opposite my window I see some newly-caged birds, which are constantly trying the bars and watching the door in the hope of escape.
3. During a walk in the woods I saw a hawk catch a mother bird as she was feeding her young. I also saw a fox as he caught for his dinner a plump young duck.
4. A magnificent bird, emblematical of freedom, soaring upward, was lost to view in the fleecy clouds.
5. A little boy, not being allowed to blow his tin horn, was content for the time to know that it was his and to hold it in his hand.
6. While I was observing some children playing, one of them secured the coveted ball, retreated to the barn lot, shut and barred the gates, leaving his playmates out. W. L.

Answers to Puzzles of April 30.

1. Motherhood.
2. Syntax. 1. S(cant)y. 2. N(ices)t. 3. Ax.
3. 1. Dance, caned. 2. Paled, pedal. 3. Despair. praised. 4. Roved, drove.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to

The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, May 14, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

A People Favored of God.

SAID former President Cleveland, at the conclusion of his noble oration in St. Louis at the dedication of the buildings of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition:

"We are all proud of our American citizenship. Let us appreciate more keenly than ever how vitally necessary it is to our country's weal that every one within its citizenship should be clean minded in political aim and aspiration, sincere and honest in his conception of our country's mission, and aroused to higher and more responsive patriotism by the reflection that it is a solemn thing to belong to a people favored of God."

In the equally noble and befitting address of President Roosevelt on the same occasion there was the same pervading thought of what it means for us to "belong to a people favored of God," and of that purer and higher life which this great thought is fitted to inspire, said Mr. Roosevelt:

"The old days were great because the men who lived in them had mighty qualities; and we must make the new days great by showing these same qualities. We must insist upon courage and resolution, upon hardihood, tenacity, and fertility in resource; we must insist upon the strong virile virtues; and we must insist no less upon the virtues of self-restraint, self-mastery, regard for the rights of others; we must show our abhorrence of cruelty, brutality, and corruption in public and in private life alike."

Those who love to trace the hand of God in history see in the history of our own country—notably and most impressively, in the peaceful acquisition of the Louisiana Purchase, out of which fourteen of our now free states in our American Union have been created—that graciously guiding Hand as plainly as ever it appeared in any pillar of cloud by day or pillar of fire by night. And this latest world's fair at St. Louis, to be opened one year from now, will have a significance of the utmost interest and moral value, reminding the country, reminding the world, what it is to belong to a people so favored of God.

"Out of Politics."

THE Mayor of Owosso, Michigan, finding that the environment of political life—which has led to his dissipation—was more powerful than his own will, has withdrawn from office and from public life. The world respects the individual who courageously accepts his mental and moral limitations and does not try to go beyond them. Without looking too closely into the motives of the mayor, one recognizes a certain dignity in his withdrawal.

Resignation from public office, however, does not always indicate wisdom. Oftentimes it is another term for cowardice. In explaining his course the Michigan mayor says, "In politics all men have their weaknesses; mine you know." Entering politics is not unlike going into a miasma-infected region. It severely tests a man's moral health, and the individuals who dare risk it are few. They fear its contamination to reputation and honor. They are willing to be the "salt of the earth" were it not for the unpleasant necessity of contact with that which is corrupt in order to test their preservative qualities. They fear to lose the fine savour of their integrity by such contact, and to them the retention of that savour is paramount.

The individual whose sole aim is to keep himself unspotted from the world will never lift the world a single inch out of the mire of degradation. Such pettiness of motive undoubtedly keeps many men clean of hand and pure of heart, out of politics. The only way in which to eliminate the evil from politics is to fill it to overflowing with a wealth of sanity, honor and integrity, and these elements must be furnished by the strongest and most virtuous of our citizens.

Such an enterprise requires a fine type of heroism, yet to most men the council chambers and city halls of our great cities offer no attractions comparable with the battlefield. To be maligned, to have one's motives misunderstood and distorted, to have one's every thought, word and act subjected to unfriendly criticism is to the average man far more to be dreaded than the impact of cannon balls, bullets or sabre strokes. The possibility of being compelled to drag about a mutilated popularity, as the result of a year of honest, plain speech and righteous action in the city council chamber, is far more repugnant than the thought of an empty coat sleeve.

The fact remains, however, that war must be waged in these places of political power, or society must accept the alternate and permit the white flag of surrender to vice and depravity to float over the cities of our land. Somewhere there must be found men whose characters are of such heroic material that they will unflinchingly face battalions of criticism and misrepresentation in order that politics may be freed from corruption.

To Loyal Temperance Legion Superintendents:

We desire the name and post office address of every member of your L. T. L., that we may send to each a sample copy of The Crusader Monthly. Please send immediately the roster of your Legion to Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Dept. L., 184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Moral Sanitation.

THE Hull House has started what seems about to prove a vigorous sanitation crusade. Miss Jane Addams and others associated with her have some theories, but first of all, they believe in facts. When, as in their own own Nineteenth ward, they find themselves confronted with a condition, a condition that ought to be changed, they appreciate the importance of getting at the exact facts in the case. The unsanitary character of the conditions in their ward have been found and shown to be atrocious. All manner of diseases lurk in unclean alleys and backyards and abominably neglected tenements. Had the Health Department of the city government been vigilant and faithful in using the power committed to it for the purpose, the state of things might have been immensely more wholesome.

In this fine and brave sanitary crusade, the newspapers of the city are strongly with those who are moving in the matter. Even the mayor, who has not been any too quick to act, is reported as being determined that the official investigation shall be earnest and thorough with hints that some of the officials are liable to lose their heads if the case is proved to be as bad as reported.

All this is good, and is of good omen, so far as it goes. A startled sense of safety in a community is something. An aroused sense of civic cleanliness and civic decency is next thing to an awakened civic conscience. The one suggests the other, if it does not also lead to the other. In all our large cities, as also in the smaller ones, and in not a few country villages, there is need of a general clearing-up crusade. Dangerous conditions, nuisances, evils of many sorts, are tolerated because they have been tolerated, and nobody brave and wise enough has offered to arouse public interest and start the determined movement.

In efforts to promote moral sanitation in communities, many kinds of arguments may have place. Some persons are influenced by one kind of motive, others by another. There is use for tact as well as for courage. Then, what it would not be possible for any one person to do alone, may perhaps be readily accomplished when a number can be got to see eye to eye and join hands in the common undertaking.

The direct cost of crime to the public in the United States amounts to over $200,000,000 every year. This is an enormous burden and drag on the common prosperity. If there were prevalent in the cities, towns and villages all over the country a duly enlightened and awakened passion for preventive efforts, in the way of material and moral sanitation, such as might be entirely practicable, what swift reductions there might be in the horrible costs and miseries of crime!

A Forward Movement.

"NINETEEN centuries of Christ—what of the twentieth?" This was the stirring topic of discussion on "Bishops' Night" at the Methodist Union in Boston recently.

Federation was the key-note of the meeting. The twentieth century will, it was declared, witness the federation of the Christian churches of the world, and this will prepare the way for a world evangelization.

"Let the great Methodist church announce this plan as a purpose," said President Washburn, "and it would thrill to magnificent co-operation every sister denomination."

Said Bishop Mallalieu: "We are marching on to victory, and the nineteen centuries that are past justify me in this statement. It took 1,000 years to number 50,000,000 Christians, 1,500 years to number 100,000,000, but tonight the Christian population of the planet number 475,000,000. We have gained more in the last century than in all the eighteen centuries that preceded. That tells us indirectly what the twentieth century is to be. Before it closes the world will be evangelized."

Bishop McCabe, introduced as leader of the great American University at Washington, said: "We are going to win. We are going to take the world for Christ. We are going to do some things, and among them we will put the infernal rum traffic in its grave."

Bishop Hamilton, presented as the exponent of chivalry and as the "plumed knight of Methodist Episcopacy," emphasized the progress of the centuries as shown especially in the emancipation of the slave and the emancipation of woman.

Letters were read from Bishop Potter, of New York, Bishop Fallows, of Chicago, from bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church north and south, bishops of the Protestant Episcopal, and bishops of the Reformed Episcopal, all breathing the same spirit of amity and unity and victory.

This movement for a closer union, for co-operative effort on the part of the Christian churches, is significant as a sign of the times and deserves a place in the records of THE UNION SIGNAL'S "Optimists' Club."

Mr. Carnegie as a Peace Promoter.

IN his munificent gift of $1,500,000 for the erection of a Temple of Peace at The Hague, Mr. Carnegie indicates his peace sentiments in a most convincing and practical manner. He has taken a deep personal interest in the Hague tribunal ever since the first international conference met at the call of the Czar.

In his letter to the representative of Queen Wilhelmina's government at Washington he expresses the belief that "the creation of the permanent court for the settlement of international disputes is the most important step forward of world-wide character which has ever been taken by the joint powers, since it must ultimately banish war, our foulest stain."

The proposed building will be erected upon an estate which formerly belonged to the grand ducal family of Saxe-Weimar, and will consist of a court-house and library, the government assuming responsibility for the disbursement of the fund. It is intended not only as a meeting place for the arbitration board, but as a monument symbolizing world-wide peace.

This is not the first time that Mr. Carnegie's sympathies with the peace movement has taken practical form. At the close of the Spanish-American war, realizing that the policy of the United States in the Philippines meant bloodshed, he offered $20,000,000 for the freedom of the Filipinos. Again, in order to insure peace and tranquility in South America, he offered to pay to the allied powers the debt of Venezuela, and on many occasions he has raised his voice in indignant protest against war.

The Hayes Sideboard.

The White House sideboard, which has been advertised through the public press as given to Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes by the W. C. T. U., is to go into a bar-room fashioned after the East Parlor of the White House, at the World's Fair in St. Louis. The latest effort to connect this sideboard with the W. C. T. U. is to the effect that it was given by the Cincinnati women of the organization. A letter of inquiry to that city discloses the fact that there is no information extant to the effect that any such present ever was made by the W. C. T. U. of Cincinnati to Mrs. Hayes. This is evidently only one more effort to make money out of the old side-board, which was disposed of according to law when the White House was lately renovated. If the owner has an offer, as he affirms, of from $5,000 to $10,000 for his entire collection of White House furniture he would better let the sideboard go with the rest of it, as the W. C. T. U. will take pains to have it known that his history of it is spurious, and he will not be able to bolster up his bar business by connecting it in any way with the W. C. T. U. We are, however, bound to acknowledge the indirect compliment which is paid us by the liquor element, who now wish to join the almost innumerable throng seeking to use the mystic letters, W. C. T. U., in order to promote their own financial enterprises.

We Want the Best.

A writer in an English paper, "The Pall Mall Gazette," gives some interesting details concerning the Turkish army. The disciplinary methods of this semi-barbaric nation are, it appears, in certain respects far ahead of those of more civilized countries, and its army has of late rapidly increased in efficiency. Among other things which make for the strength, endurance and general ability of officers and men, is strict teetotalism. The soldiers are not allowed to drink even coffee. The barracks are supplied with Turkish baths, the men are provided with wholesome food and are watched over by an efficient medical staff. So long as we must have soldiers—or think we must—let us give them, while in barracks, plenty of nourishing food, baths, medical care, reading-rooms, entertainment, but no beer. If we must have fighters, let us have the highest grade of fighters which an intelligant civilization can produce.

American Organizers Wanted.

Alarmed at the trend of public sentiment as exhibited in recent elections, the liquor dealers of South Australia and New Zealand are making strenuous efforts for the "protection" of the trade. Having in mind the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and its enormous power as an organizing and missionary force, they urge the "meeting of opponents with their own weapons," and among the recommendations of the leaders is the "organization of the moderate women from one end of the colony to the other." For this purpose they propose to import American women!

Personal Mention.

THE UNION SIGNAL editors were favored with a pleasant call from Levi B. Salmans, a missionary from Guanajuato, Mexico, accompanied by Miss Effa M. Dunmore and a Mexican friend. Miss Dunmore is president of the local union at Guanajuato. This union has held seven silver medal contests and one gold medal contest, the latter being the first gold medal for temperance declamation ever given in any of the Spanish speaking countries. The union has also prepared a thirty-two page book of temperance songs, entitled "Caucionero Escolar de Temperancia," the first ever issued in the Spanish language. Miss Dunmore is on her way east to visit friends. Mr. Salmans will remain in Chicago for several weeks.

W. C. T. U. Storiette.

ONCE, in the good old days down south, "befo' de wah," in a town famed for its culture and learning, dwelt a happy young woman. Surrounded by a loving husband, bright-faced children, with sisters, brothers and cousins galore, the dearest and truest, and trusted servants who served their mistress gladly because they loved her, she spent many happy, useful years.

Then there came a time of separation, when the family removed to another state westward. Many were the friends they found and pleasant was the home established, but they did not forget the old home. The mother's heart, especially, turned back to the old, familiar place, and she longed for the church where she made her first vow to serve the Lord, and the old friends, whose names, so oft-repeated, became household words, familiar to the children that were born into the new home.

Years passed. War came with its cruelty and desolation. The town was sacked and burned, homes were pillaged and destroyed; families, both white and black, were scattered—its glory had departed. At last a spark of hope revived in the breasts of the few that remained, and though the march of progress had carried trade and enterprise to the railroads, that had left the old town slumbering along its country road, the "Square" (once closely built on every side and the scene of much activity) saw scattering rows of houses rebuilt, while the college once more called the students to their studies.

With tender memories of the past, but with hope and faith in the future, the mother, after long years, sent her youngest daughter forth as a worker in the white-ribbon army, to which she herself is true and loyal. Thus it chanced that in early springtime, the daughter, in her journeying, came to the old town, of which she had so often heard. She trod the streets and entered houses which she recognized at sight. All, all were gone—the friends and relatives of the aged mother, many of them sleeping on the quiet hill, where with reverent feet her daughter lingered.

It was indeed a precious privilege to speak in the church which her parents attended and next day to organize in the parlor of her mother's old home a little company of earnest women, as the "Lou V. Carter W. C. T. U.," of McLemoresville, Tennessee—thus perpetuating, amid the scenes so dear, the name and good works of one who dwelt there long ago.

CARRIE LEE CARTER,
National Organizer.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

If it is true that knowledge is power, it is doubly true that knowledge of God is spiritual power.—Rev. J. Hudson Taylor.

***

God hides himself within the love
Of those we love the best;
The smiles and tones that makes our homes
Are shrines by Him possessed.
—W. C. Gannett.

***

Ah, they are these bits of struggles, in which we learn to fight the great ones; perhaps these bits of struggles, more than the great ones, make up life.—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

***

I do not know when or how it may please God to give you the quiet of mind that you need; but I tell you that I believe it is to be had; and in the meantime you must go on doing your share, trusting in God even for this.—George Macdonald.

***

Ideals must ever lie a very great way off, and we will right thankfully content ourselves with any not intolerable approximation thereto! Let no man, as Schiller says, too querulously "measure by a scale of perfection the meager product of reality" in this poor world of ours—Thomas Carlyle.

***

Looking back from the next world, how shall we desire to have made the most of the Bible, our best guide to it. How shall we grudge the hours we have wasted on any—be they thoughts or books or teachers—which belong only to the things of time!—Canon Liddon.

***

We are not sent into this world to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts. We have certain work to do for our daily bread and that is to be done strenuously; other work to do for our delight and that is to be done heartily; neither is to be done by halves and shifts, but with a will, and what is not worth this effort is not to be done at all—Carlyle.

***

Come joy, come sorrow,
'T will be better to-morrow.
Come pain, disaster,
Relief but comes the faster.
The love that feels
Also heals.
The Christ who keeps
Never sleeps.
Do not yield; God is thy shield.
Do not fear; God is thy cheer.
All perils past,
Then home at last.

***

The promise of God in James v: 14-15, has been remarkably verified in my experience, and it may encourage and cheer our comrades to know of it. Stripped of health and all the blessings that must leave with it I have been laid aside for two years. Rest and change of climate failed to restore the shattered nerves and heal the broken body. But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ, by obedience and faith, I am permitted to buckle on the armor again to begin a service which I trust, by His grace, will be more joyous, calm, wise and effective than heretofore.—Edith Hill-Booker, National Evangelist.

***

Evening has come. The day's work is done or undone. Hast thou lifted up holy hands, or unclean ones, or empty ones, at thy evening sacrifice? What! nothing done, nothing wrought, through the precious moments of the day, now gone forever, to glorify thy Lord, to honor His promises, and to extend His kingdom of love? His grace is so full and free! Hast thou come empty-handed? O, come closer to thy Father God, and, hungering for the spirit of His Son, pray that thou mayest be a better worker on the morrow, if the light of earth dawns for thee in the morning.—C. E. Eberman.

***

The world judges a man by his past, and is always flinging it in his face. But Christ judges a man by what he is, not by what he was.

No one can be sure himself that he is a true Christian, still less make others sure, except by doing what a Christian should do.

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul;
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates unroll;
And when He comes to call thee, arise and follow fast;
His way may lie through darkness, but it leads to life at last.
—Henry Van Dyke.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS: It is an indication of life in the Manila union that its corresponding secretary, Mrs. Jennie Light Burtner, sent me a report of that new and far-away union to be incorporated in my general report for the World's W. C. T. U. Among other things, she says about 430 comfort bags and 1,500 pounds of literature have been distributed among the soldiers. The union holds regular meetings twice a month at the Leper Hospital and the pitiful, hopeless lives of the leper children and the slowly dying older inmates are brightened thereby. At Christmas time there was a special service and distribution of gifts. A hygienic reader has been introduced into the public schools; also mercy books and leaflets. The flower mission work has been much appreciated in hospitals and sick rooms and other departments are making headway.

Mrs. Faxon expects to be present at the World's Convention and from there to return to America. The Manila union has petitioned Governor Taft and the Civil Commission of the Philippines to establish an industrial school for incorrigible girls. Mrs. Faxon also expects something to be brought to pass in regard to the Japanese girls who are brought to Manila for immoral purposes. Mrs. Mitchell, the president of the union, was about to leave for Japan and would interview our American representative there and secure the co-operation of Miss Smart.

A new liquor law has just been passed by the Philippine Commission. A few months ago the National Officers asked the various states to move as rapidly as possible toward securing state laws against the sale of liquor within four miles of military camps, posts, et cetera and we have advocated from time to time that the military commanders be held to a stricter account for the deportment of their men. It would seem now that the initiative is being taken in these far-away islands. Here are some of the points of the new law: "No license shall be granted by a municipal council or other municipal authority or provincial authority for the sale of any intoxicating liquors, beer or wine, at any place, or on any premises situated within a distance of two miles now used or hereafter to be used by the United States for military purposes." Thereafter are enumerated the various camps, with, however, some exceptions to the two mile limit, making it in some cases, one mile. The punishment for each offense of selling, furnishing or giving away any intoxicating liquors, wine or beer within the boundaries prohibited, is a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars in money of the United States, or by imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding six months, or by both such punishments. Those holding unexpired licenses are to be reimbursed from the treasury into which their license fees have been paid, in proportion to the time yet to run, but are subject to all the penalties as soon as the Act comes into force, which was to take effect May 1.

But here is the most remarkable part of the entire provision: It is made the duty of the commanding officer of the United States troops, stationed at each of the places named, to notify the municipal authorities of all the provisions of the new law, and the commanding officers are to have the powers of justices of the peace and prosecutions are to be before such officers. Any order for arrest issued by authority of this Act may be executed by a military officer or soldier designated for that purpose by the officer commanding as justice of the peace; the imprisonment of those convicted is to be in the civil jail of the province or the city of Manila; neither the commanding officers nor the soldiers making arrests will be entitled to fees for said service and all fines and costs imposed are to be paid into the treasury of the municipality in which the offense was committed or into the insular treasury for the benefit of the city of Manila.

If the Philippine Islands can inaugurate such a system as this, is there anything to hinder the same provision in the states? If our saloons could be removed from two to five miles from the posts, camps and homes, and the military authorities made responsible for the enforcement of the law, the present anti-canteen provision would be made doubly effective and the whole question of drunkenness among the soldiers be solved.

Yours, cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

With The Treasurer.

I AM hearing cheering reports from some of the states that promise good gains, and am hoping that we shall come up to Cincinnati, in November, with the largest gain reported in many years.

There are many encouraging signs of the times. There has been much agitation in legislative halls that has shown an awakening of temperance sentiment. Now comes the news that the Knight Templars of California have decided that wine shall not be served at their banquets in future. They give as reasons that they wish to keep abreast of the eastern spirit on this line, and because they believe the practice is contrary to the helpful teachings and spirit of the principles of masonry. Other large societies have taken similar action, and we think that these straws indicate an increase in temperance sentiment that is very encouraging.

Willard memorial fund received, as follows—$2.00 except as noted:

MAINE: China, Greene, East Steuben.
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: Hamline, Le Droit, F. E. Willard union and South West, Anacosta, Capitol Hill.
VIRGINIA: Richmond.
VERMONT: Greensboro.
WISCONSIN: Centreville.
WYOMING: Manville.
NEW JERSEY: Lumberton, Burlington, Bridgeboro, Cookstown, Florence, Mrs. E. M. Thacher, Jacobtown, Moorestown $5.00, Mt. Holly, Palmyra and Riverton, Pemberton $4.00, Riverside, Absecon, Atlantic City $3.00, Madison, Morristown, Morristown Y, Morristown L. T. L., 25 cents, Chatham, Denville, Pitman Grove, Woodbury, Hancock Bridge $1.75, L. T. L. 25 cents, Elmer, Daretown, Toms River, Manahawkin $2.50, Bound Brook, South Bound Brook, Millstone, Somersville, Gladstone and Peapack, Crawford, Dunellen, Elizabeth No. 1, Elizabeth No. 2, Stanhope, Newton.
SOUTH DAKOTA: Willow Lakes.
MASSACHUSETTS: Baldwinville.
KENTUCKY: Chilesburg.
MICHIGAN: Ganges, Mason.
DELAWARE: Wilmington, New Castle.
NORTH CAROLINA: (Thurman) Salisbury, Livingstone College Y, Bennett College Y.
OHIO: Cincinnati Central.
ILLINOIS: Pittsfield, Joliet, Griggsville, Olney (German), La Moile, Elgin, Champaign, Sycamore, Genoa, Elva, $1.10.
TEXAS: Cisco.
Arkansas, District of Columbia, Illinois and North Carolina, Thurman, have sent dues. HELEN M. BARKER.

If Your Physician

prescribes a milk diet, for its easy digestibility it will be well to use Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream to get a rich, deliciously flavored milk food, perfectly sterilized, according to latest sanitary methods. For general household uses. Prepared by Borden's Condensed Milk Co.

Superintendents. School Savings Banks.

THE School Savings Banks system has been taken up in public schools in thirteen different states during the present school year. These schools are in four towns in Maine, in four towns of Pennsylvania and in each of the other eleven states in the schools of from one to three places. This is very encouraging, because some effort of the W. C. T. U. is always required to arouse sufficient interest on the part of the school authorities and patrons to have the work adopted.

The first step to be taken by a local union to introduce this popular and excellent method of saving the children's pennies for them, and making the saving an object lesson in good habits, self-responsibility and thrift, is to send for literature on the subject and give it to the teachers, school directors and editors (twenty-five cents worth of leaflets is usually enough for this initial purpose). Then hold a School Savings Banks meeting, for which a printed program will be mailed you with the literature, get the teachers and those interested in education to attend the meeting. Have the subject discussed after the program is rendered, and a resolution passed favoring the introduction of the system into your public schools. Ask those present to aid in gaining the co-operation of a reliable bank near at hand, to take care of the scholars' deposits.

The circular, "How to Institute School Savings Banks," makes the system very clear. If there is any point you do not fully understand, write for information to your state or National superintendent. The plan is simply calling the roll in the schools every Monday morning for the collection of the pupils' savings and placing them in the bank to their credit. The cards on which the deposits are credited, the special roll books, and the few other forms used in the administration of the system, are shipped to order anywhere, by the National superintendent, at printer's prices.

The blanks for national reports of the department are forwarded at this date to each state superintendent. Please dear superintendents, use these for your own reports next fall, ordering duplicates for your county and local superintendents, at 50 cents per 100.

I expect to sail May 16 for the World's Convention at Geneva, but if your orders are not in before that date they will be duly filled by members of my family during my two months' absence. All orders for literature, School Savings Banks supplies, W. C. T. U. music and recitations will also be promptly filled. There must be no pause in the good work. Let me find report of much active service on my return, please. Address as usual Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, 1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Faithfully in this great branch of the temperance work,
SARA LOUISA OBERHOLTZER.

Promoted.

After a long life of faithful service for the Master, Mrs. Lydia E. Moorman, of Windfall, Indiana, passed away April 8. She was a valued member of Phlox union and superintendent of Mothers' Meetings. While Mrs. Moorman had known sorrow, yet she was always cheerful and ready to give an encouraging word. She will be greatly missed, but the good she has done lives on.

Mr. Thomas Quinby, the father of Miss Anna Quinby, Edenton, Ohio, died April 17, 1903, aged seventy-three years. Mr. Quinby was an honorary member of the Burger W. C. T. U., of Edenton, and was much interested in the flower mission work. His funeral was conducted by a white ribbon minister, Rev. G. F. Callon, and a very impressive W. C. T. U. burial service was read by Mrs. Matella Doughman, president of Clermont county, Ohio, union, assisted by the members of several unions. Miss Quinby was doing institute work in Illinois at the time of her father's illness, but arrived at home a few hours previous to his death.

Convention Calendar.

WORLD'S: Geneva, Switzerland, June 9-11.
NATIONAL: Cincinnati, Ohio, November 13-18.
SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA: San Diego, May 18-22.
MICHIGAN: Adrian, May 26-29.

A LAST RESORT

Pure Food Should Be the First

When the human machine goes wrong it's ten to one that the trouble began with the stomach and can therefore be removed by the use of proper food. A lady well known in Bristol, Ontario County, N. Y., tells of the experience she had curing her only child by the use of scientific food: "My little daughter, the only child and for that reason doubly dear, inherited nervous dyspepsia. We tried all kinds of remedies and soft foods. At last, when patience was about exhausted and the child's condition had grown so bad the whole family was aroused, we tried Grape-Nuts.

"A friend recommended the food as one which her own delicate children had grown strong upon, so I purchased a box—as a last resort. In a very short time a marked change in both health and disposition was seen. What made our case easy was that she liked it at once and its crisp, nutty flavor has made it an immediate favorite with the most fastidious in our family.

"It's use seems to be thoroughly established in western New York, where many friends use it regularly. I have noticed its fine effects upon the intellects as well as the bodies of those who use it. We owe it much." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BIOGRAPHY OF A NOTED OCULIST

BY DAVID LEE TAYLOR.

From the good old Scotch-Irish stock which has been such a factor in the history of the world's progress, Dr. Oren Oneal, the noted oculist of Chicago, undoubtedly inherited much of the initiative and spirit which has enabled him to break the bonds of the old school practitioners and develop along lines in his chosen profession which has made him a peer among his fellows. Inbred has been the spirit of the Revolutionary days in Virginia, where his forefathers played a prominent part in that history-making period, and later in Kentucky, where they mingled with the adventurous heroes who fought out the salvation of that great state. It is to the blood of such as these that the world is indebted, in a great degree, for a man of such remarkable achievements.

It was not the result of chance that Dr. Oneal was enabled to give to the world what he has. It is due solely to his rare intellect and knowledge of anatomy, particularly that of the eye; his human desire to save his fellow beings from the cruel tortures of surgery, and the indomitable will which obliged him to relentlessly pursue his experiments until he had established the treatment for which he is now honored.

When Dr. Oneal graduated with the highest honors from his medical college he had not yet attained his majority. The subsequent years until he was 25 years of age were spent in post-graduate work, both in the United States and Europe, and this was followed by a few years of general practice. During this time he devoted every moment of his leisure to experimenting with a treatment for eye diseases which would not include the knife, a method that he believed to be both barbarous and needlessly cruel. In his clinic work he had expounded the theory that a majority of eye diseases were caused primarily by an obstruction to a perfect circulation of the blood in the eye. Taking this for his premise, he believed that in restoring the circulation he could counteract the effect of any disease, and it was along these lines that he worked. The result has been told in the history of thousands of people who have been benefited, many of them almost miraculously, by the Oneal Dissolvent Method, which absorbs and dissolves all diseased conditions in the eye without the possibility of injury, recreating a perfect circulation and restoring the eye to its normal functions.

It is needless for the writer to discourse upon the many people he has talked with in the course of his acquaintance with Dr. Oneal who have been cured by him. He has read letters that at first were absolutely astounding, but which now are accepted as a matter of course, they are so numerous and the instances so universally similar.

Dr. Oneal once told the writer that so great was his confidence in his method that in no case where any sight remained and the treatment was given a fair trial did he believe it would fail in performing its marvelous work. So much for the professional man.

The father of Dr. Oneal's mother, Rev. John P. Thompson, removed from Kentucky to Indiana, and for half a century expounded the doctrine of Alexander Campbell, the founder of the Christian Church. His grandfather fought in the Revolutionary war and had a brother killed at Bunker Hill. Dr. Oneal's father, still living, has been practicing medicine continuously for over 50 years, and has just retired. One brother of the latter was quite a renowned surgeon, and another brother was a noted physician. It can be readily understood that his tendencies in this direction are by right of birth, and accounts in a degree for his wonderful skill and superior knowledge, which has placed him in the front ranks of the world's benefactors.

A long personal acquaintance has given respect and a high regard for this man of letters. He is erudite, cultured to a degree, quite unassuming and studious, with all the tenderness of a high bred woman in his association with his patients. In his home life he is happiest, save when engaged in the work to which he has devoted his life. He has a charming family, and every little pleasure or recreation in which he indulges is invariably in the society of his wife and son, to whom his devotion is remarked by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.

Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.

Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.

General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.

General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A Great Britain.

THE National executive committee of the British Women's Temperance Association met in London, on April 27, with Mrs. Price Hughes, acting vice president, in the chair. A telegram was sent to Sir Wilfrid Lawson at Camborne wishing him success in his arduous campaign, and letters of condolence were sent to Mrs. Canie and Mrs. Farrar on the death of their beloved husbands. Mrs. Atkey proposed and Miss Swankie Cameron seconded the following resolution as a recommendation to be brought before the council meeting with regard to the management of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union:

"That this executive of the N. B. W. T. A. desires to express the earnest hope that the international representative character of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union may be maintained by continuing to give the executive committee control over all matters affecting the constitution, thus giving the various countries comprising the World's W. C. T. U. power and control. Unless this is agreed to one country alone would have full control, as the delegates from one W. C. T. U. considerably outnumber those of all other countries combined. The National B. W. T. A. emphasises the necessity for special rules to regulate an international society, which would be quite inadequate for a national W. C. T. U."

References were made to the forthcoming World's Convention at Geneva, June 9-11. It was reported that over 200 had already undertaken to join the British party, America sending over 100 delegates, including the leaders of the American W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. Stevens, of Portland, Me., is president. A telegram of loving greeting was dispatched to Lady Henry Somerset. The speech of Lord Salisbury and the prime minister to representatives of the liquor trade, and also the compensation proposals, were freely discussed and the following resolution adopted:

"That this meeting of the National Executive of the B. W. T. A. has learned with deep regret the opinion expressed to the representatives of the Licensed Victuallers' National Defense League by the prime minister re the action of the Licensing Justices in the matter of the reduction of licenses, as they feel that this places the interests of a private trade before the public welfare."

References were made to the annual meetings to be held in London, May 25-28, when Lady Henry Somerset is to deliver her farewell address as president, in the Queen's Hall on May 28. The next National Executive Committee will meet in London on Tuesday, May 26, at 9:30 a. m.

At the conclusion a reception was given to the Misses Vincent and Cummins, the successful white ribbon missionaries who are shortly leaving for South Africa. On behalf of the National Executive Miss Agnes Slack presented two beautifully silver-mounted umbrellas, Lady Henry Somerset sent a special gift, and silver-mounted purses were also given by Miss Slack.

AGNES E. SLACK,
Hon. Cor. Sec. N. B. W. T. A.
Ripley, Derbyshire, England.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

A gold medal contest will be held at the Yamhill county, Oregon, convention, May 26.

Rev. J. W. Pierce, a temperance evangelist, will address the next meeting of the Mt. Ayr, Ia., union.

Mrs. Mary E. Teats, National evangelist, is in Omaha, Neb., for two weeks. She is speaking in various churches and before different organizations.

Mrs. Helen G. Rice, National L. T. L. secretary, spoke at the last meeting of the Springfield, Mass., Central union. Mrs. Rice dwelt upon the work of the Legions in Springfield and vicinity.

The Y's of Baltimore, Md., held an all day conference April 23. Interesting addresses were given, a basket lunch enjoyed, and in the evening Col George W. Bain, of Kentucky, spoke on "The Safe Side of Life for Young Men."

Rev. Frances E. Townsley, National evangelist, was in attendance at the Saginaw county, Mich., convention, April 21-22. She presented the gold medal, preached the convention sermon and lectured on "Visions and Visionaries."

Mrs. Lucia H. F. Additon, National organizer, is now in Massachusetts where she will remain for two months. Unions desiring her services can secure one of the few dates which are open, by addressing Mrs. Additon at Abington, Mass.

Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, National organizer, is busily engaged in holding institutes in New York state. She sails for London May 16, enroute to the World's Convention at Geneva, where she will have charge of the Purity conferences arranged by Dr. Mary Wood Allen.

The Eleventh Ward union of Rochester, N. Y., is holding a series of parlor meetings. The attendance is excellent and includes many who are not members of this union. At the last meeting Mrs. Effie Lambert, state Y secretary, gave a practical talk on why every woman should be a member of the wihte ribbon army.

The second annual institute of Tazewell county, Ill., met at Tremont, April 16 and 17. The sunny personality of Miss Frances Ensign, National lecturer, who was the leader, gave pleasure to all. Many instructive papers were read, $17 was raised for a county organizing fund and the following county motto chosen: "In the name of our God we will set up our banners."

Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, National superintendent of Legislation, spoke in Philadelphia, April 29. The various unions of this city are just entering upon a new year of activity. North Philadelphia union closed its seventeenth year of work with a public anniversary meeting, at which Dr. Henrietta Payne Westbrook spoke on "Will the Coming Man Use Cigarets?" The Northwest union will entertain the county convention June 2. This Union had a large audience at its annual meeting and added several new members.

Miss Belle Kearney, National lecturer, is engaged in a very successful campaign in Pennsylvania. She finds a marked and very encouraging revival of temperance interest in the state. During April Miss Kearney visited nineteen places, gave twenty-seven addresses, organized two W's and two Y's and secured 458 new members and 204 pledge signers. April 30 she spoke at Sunbury for the Y, which numbers 145 members and May 1 addressed the faculty and student body of the Evangelical college at Myerstown. Miss Kearney's present address is 812 North 20th street, Philadelphia, Pa.

$19.00 To Boston and Return $19.00

With membership fee of $2.00 added, account of annual meeting of National Educational Association. Tickets will be on sale via the Nickel Plate Road July 2d to 5th, inclusive, good returning from July 8th to 12th, inclusive, without being deposited with Joint Agent. Additional limit to return not later than September 1st can be obtained by depositing return portion of ticket with Joint Agent and payment of 50 cents for execution. Superior train service and excellent dining-car meals, on American Club Plan, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00; also a la carte service. Write John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St., room 298, Chicago, for time of departure of trains from Chicago and other detailed information.

Fat Folks

BEFORE—267 lbs. AFTER—180 lbs.

Mrs. E. Williams, 55 Chatham St., Rochester, N. Y., lost 87 pounds, 8 in. bust, 10 in. waist, 20 in. in abdominal measure, on a 6 months' course of the Dr. Snyder Obesity Treatment.

DR. SNYDER guarantees his treatment to be perfectly harmless in every particular. No starving, no detention from business, no wrinkles or discomfort. A 40-page booklet, telling all about it, free. Call or write to-day.

O. W. F. SNYDER, M. D.,
21 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.
or 156 Fifth Avenue, New York

PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR

MAN AND BEAST.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED BY

THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,
84-90 Beekman Street,
NEW YORK.

"NEW TRUTHS FOR A NEW AGE" By Rev. JOHN PRESLAND.

CONTENTS.—Why was a New Church inaugurated a hundred years ago?—The Lord's second coming an accomplished fact.—The Inspiration and Interpretation of the Word of God.—The Tri-Une God: How to understand the Divine Trinity without dividing the Divine Unity.—Man a Spiritual Being ruined by Sin—How did the Lord Jesus Christ save Man?—The Resurrection: How and When do the Dead rise?—The Judgment: When, Where and How is Man Judged!—Heaven and Hell—25 Cents. Call or address

EBEN SUGDEN, New Church Book Rooms, 3 West 29th St., New York City. Send for Catalogue.

Every Local W. C. T. U.

Whether newly organized or many years in the work, should possess and study

Do Everything,

By Frances E. Willard,

An invaluable hand book for ALL WHITE RIBBONERS Containing full information of the work in all departments

Price, 35 Cents

AND

The Helping Hand

By Caroline B. Buell

Which tells HOW to organize, and assists ORGANIZED unions to conduct their meetings in the most orderly manner . . . . . .

Price, 10 Cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
CHICAGO

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

ABOUT WOMEN.

Orange blossoms are no longer used by fashionable brides, lilies of the valley being now in favor.

Mrs. Ellen Sulley Fray, a woman suffragist of national repute, died at her home in Toledo, Ohio, April 24.

Mrs. Mary Shenck Woolman has been named as professor of domestic art at the Teachers' College in New York.

Mrs. J. E. Scott, of Evanston, Ill., has been re-elected president of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Association.

Mrs. Clementine M. Leroy, the first woman student of Harvard, is dead. Mrs. Leroy was a member of one of the well-known families in Chicago.

An American bed in the Victoria Hospital at Conners, France, will be endowed by Mrs. Robert Goelet, of New York, in memory of her daughter.

By imperial decree Prussian women are allowed to belong to political organizations during elections. After the election the club must be immediately dissolved.

Mrs. Elizabeth Millbank Anderson, of New York, has given land valued at one million dollars to Barnard college. The property is to be called "Millbank Quadrangle."

Mrs. Thomas Hastings, of New York, is the best woman four-in-hand driver in America. She learned of Hewlett, in Paris, and won the commendation of her instructor.

Among the most treasured possessions of Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay are her books of clippings. They contain all the pleasant notices given her by the newspapers.

Emma Talbot Odell, of Chicago, has published a book on palmistry. In the introduction she mentions Balzac, Montaigne and Aristotle as all having been believers in the art.

Miss Kathryne E. Lamb is said to be the only woman in Indiana who owns, edits and operates a newspaper. It is a weekly, seven column folio, called the "Bloomingdale World."

The Home and Foreign branches of the Baptist Missionary Society have been united in Chicago. At the annual meeting the need of work among the Mormons was discussed.

Wenonah Stevens Abbott, National president of the Women's Socialist union, spoke to a large audience in Plattsmouth, Neb., on the social conditions of women and children.

Don't Stay Sick

When a Postal Will Bring You Help.

Write me today, for each day's delay means a day more of ill-health. Just tell me which book to send.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

While you are waiting, thousands of others are cured. Out of each 40 who make this month's test, there are 39 who pay for it gladly, because they get well. I willingly pay for the rest.

You don't need to have faith in me. I have the faith, for I know the remedy; and I take the risk. Won't you simply try to get well?

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to strengthen weak inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that power which alone operates the vital organs. I treat a weak organ as I would a weak engine, by giving it the power to act. My way always succeeds, save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. And most of these chronic diseases cannot be cured without it.

You'll know this when you read my book.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed)
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Mrs. James M'Kay, of Chicago, is gaining fame as a sculptor. She is a society woman, much given to entertaining, who yet finds time to do some remarkable work in her studio.

Miss Blanche Booth, a niece of Edwin Booth, has established a dramatic school at Minneapolis. She was formerly a member of her uncle's company and played Ophelia to his Hamlet.

The Pioneer Club, of London, is considering the establishment of a Croly memorial fund, to be devoted to some charitable or useful purpose, in memory of the late Mrs. Jenny June Croly.

Miss Anna Morgan, the daughter of J. P. Morgan, is an indefatigable worker along charitable lines. She is eminently practical and not easily imposed upon by the professional beggars.

The women of English universities are engaging in more varied occupations than formerly. For the first time the reports show a diminished proportion entering the teaching profession.

The Woman's Union Labor League of America has been organized. It is to be a union of housewives, whose duty it will be to promote and encourage the trades union movement of the country.

In an address before the Ohio University, Senator Hanna said he hired girl stenographers in preference to men, because they were "more industrious, more efficient and a good deal safer."

The expenses of Dr. W. H. Tolman's visit to Europe, to study conditions in the principal cities and collect material illustrating municipal progress in economics, will be met by Miss Helen Gould.

The $1,000 prize for the best thesis of individual research in biology, physics, zoology and chemistry, has been awarded to Miss Florence Sabin, of Denver, Colo., of Johns Hopkins University.

The American women are said to excel in cultivation, elegance in dress, fine carriage and in individuality. This praise comes from Count Robert de Montesquion, the "French Apostle of Beauty."

An interesting equal suffrage convention was held at San Jose, Cal., recently. Mrs. Abigail Scott Dunniway, of Oregon, sometimes called "the Susan B. Anthony of the Northwest," was in attendance.

Miss Celeste J. Miller has just returned to Chicago from her third trip around the world. She goes alone and unattended, finding that courage and determination invariably secure her good treatment.

Excessive smoking of cigarettes is given by Mrs. Annie Hoffman, of Chicago, as the reason for the strange disappearance of her seventeen-year-old daughter, who dressed herself as a boy and ran away.

Mrs. Eliza Rallings, for fifty years a fashionable dressmaker in New York, is dead. The tremendous Easter rush of work and the preparations for the Vanderbilt-Neilson wedding are said to be the cause of her death.

Mrs. Mabel Corey, of Chicago, spends two hours each day in looking about the streets that she may save horses from cruel treatment. She is not a member of any humane society, but is a great lover of horses.

By a recent ruling of the board of education, of Chicago, married women, whose husbands are incapacitated by physical or mental disease from earning a livelihood, may be employed as teachers in the public schools.

Mrs. C. W. Leffingwell, principal of the school, and Mrs. Anna E. Rudd, a teacher, were the guests of honor at the meeting of the alumnae of St. Mary's Episcopal school for girls, at Knoxville, Ill. Fifty girls were present.

The Indo-American Woman's Restoration League of Chicago, will petition the King and Parliament of England to protect by special law the girls of India, under sixteen years of age, from the horrors of child marriage.

In a recent book Kasem Ameen, a learned Moslem jurist, discusses the present condition of Mohammedan women. He considers ignorance the cause of their degradation and admits that education is the only panacea.

Mrs. Elizabeth Budd Gallandet, of Manhattan, N. Y., the widow of the late Rev. Dr. Gallandet, famous the world over as an instructor of deaf mutes and a charity worker, is dead. Mrs. Gallandet was seventy-nine years old.

The latest development of the scheme for providing rational and healthy exercise for the working girls of Paris, is a class for fencing. After singing, dancing and declamation, "Mimi Pinson" is now being taught to handle the foils.

"Resolved, That economically it is not advantageous for the United States to possess territory in the tropics." This was the question discussed at the Wellesley-Vassar debate. The affirmative, supported by Vassar, was victorious.

Because Mrs. Margaret Hannigan Emmet, of South Bronxville, N. Y., by her timely action prevented a serious railway accident, all the engineers on the Harlem railroad salute her with three blasts of the whistle, while passing her home.

Mrs. Mary E. Holmes of the Traveler's Aid Society, of Chicago, spoke recently of the dangers which threaten young women in the cities. She affirmed that the "traffic in girls" was as strongly organized as any business interest.

Mrs. Hannah Southwick, of Pawtucket, R. I., who died recently, was an original Daughter of the Revolution. She was born in 1815. Her father was of the party which crossed the Delaware with Washington and was the first man to land.

The Women's Federation of Clubs, of Saginaw, Mich., created consternation among law breakers by presenting a well-signed petition to the grand jury asking that the action of the city officials in condoning law violation be inquired into.

Many and varied are the openings for women in South Africa. The range of employments is wide. Laundresses are scarce and few women are willing to face the social ostracism, even though the occupation would bring large remuneration.

Eliza Boyle O'Reilly, second daughter of John Boyle O'Reilly, will publish a book of poems next fall. She is said to have inherited much poetic fire from her distinguished father, who is generally regarded as the best Irish poet of the last half century.

Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, of Cleveland, will shortly make a tour of the largest cities to plead the cause of the waif cat and tramp dog. It was largely through Mrs. Bolton's efforts that a home for four-footed outcasts was established in Chicago.

Justice Mayer, of New York, has been telling the women of a local political association "how women can do good in politics." It is his frank opinion that the men of the present day have their minds made up, and that women should seek to influence the coming generation.

Holland has a national society for working women. This society has an insurance feature which allows the premium to be enlarged, diminished or suspended, according to the wish or need of the holder of the policy, without any change in value of what has already been paid.

Recent statistics show a pitiable condition among the woman wage-earners in Ohio. The average wages paid them is only $4.83 a week, while the average cost of living is $5.24 a week. The low average wage is said to be due to the absence of labor organizations among women.

Miss Anna Danielson, who is principal of the Stockholm Athenaeum, the largest school for girls in Sweden, has reached Chicago in her tour of the United States. Miss Danielson came to this country, as her government's representative, to make an investigation of American colleges and universities.

The Wellesley committee for establishing a memorial for Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer announces the foundation of a fellowship of $25,000, the gift of Mrs. D. P. Kimball, of Boston. The scholarship provides for study, either in this or a foreign country, for not more than two years, and is open to any graduate of Wellesley or any woman graduate of any college of high standing.

The only woman in the United States to receive the degree of chivalry from the I. O. O. F. is Mrs. Sarah Miles Hanna, of Kansas City. Mrs. Hanna was one of the first women initiated into the Daughters of Rebekah, and has devoted her life to work "for the good of the order."

Dr. Yamei Kin, a Chinese woman of the Manchu, or ruling, class, is lecturing before Chicago women on things China and Japanese. Dr. Kin is a graduate of the New York Woman's Medical College. She thinks the wrong ideals of women are responsible for much of the corruption in public life.

The Council of Jewish women, in New York, is preparing to establish a Jewish protectory. The need has been realized for some years as Hebrew children, arrested for slight offenses, are now sent to a common institution. It is hoped to sort out the hopeful cases and give opportunity for reformation.

The Warren Goddard House, which is the Settlement Home of the Friendly Aid Society in New York, has just received a generous gift toward the kindergarten branch of its work from Mrs. Frances Hackley. She has given $35,000 for an endowment fund, in memory of her little daughter who died many years ago.

Rev. W. H. Ramsey, pastor of the Unitarian church in Louisville, Ky., in his Easter morning sermon said: "The new woman of the highest culture will no more wear a bird's wing on her head than she would wear a human scalp. The Easter bonnet of to-day is too often the symbol of cruelty and thoughtlessness. Fashion makes barbarians of beautiful women."

Miss Elizabeth L. Banks, a western newspaper woman, by her thorough work has made a great success in London. When the servant question was an all-absorbing topic Miss Banks filled the position of general domestic that she might write of the subject from the servant's standpoint. She has also sold flowers and newspapers on the street, writing up her experiences.

Miss Julia M. Bracken, whose decorative work in the woman's building at the World's Fair won her recognition as a sculptor of decided ability, has received a commission from the art committee of the St. Louis Exposition. She is asked to model a statue of President Monroe, which will be one of the few statues erected on the grounds, representing the men of history who were identified with the Louisiana Purchase.

POOR DOMINIE

Between the Devil and the Deep Sea

A clergyman of Gresham, Neb., who drank coffee for many years suffered from chronic insomnia and from terrific headaches when he quit coffee. He says: "I have been a very heavy user of coffee for so long and have seen its effects so clearly that there is now no doubt in my mind concerning its injurious effects upon the nervous system.

"While a coffee user I was unable to sleep for hours after retiring at night and on the other hand terrific headaches resulted if the regular hour for drinking coffee passed and I did not get it, so I was in a miserable position.

"But I found a firm friend in Postum Cereal Coffee and from the very time that I adopted Postum all these evil effects vanished. I now enjoy sound sleep and improved appetite and a decidedly clearer complexion and I am convinced that better health and a longer life would be the result of its general use. I have a friend who has been a user of Postum for several years and the story of her recovery from neuralgia of the stomach simply by using Postum in place of coffee seems almost too wonderful to be true. Many times she was near death's door and the doctors had frequently given her case up as hopeless, but she was entirely healed by leaving off coffee and using Postum. It is a pleasure to say these good things about Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Local Union

A Flower Mission Program

By Lella M. Sewall.

Singing, "O God, our help in ages past."

Scripture Reading, Psalm, XXIII; XXXVII, 1-11; Matt., VI, 25-34; John, XIV.

Prayer.

Singing, "By Cool Siloam's Shady Rill."

Recitation, "Forest Hymn," Bryant; "Song to a Violet," Lowell; "Chaplet of Flowers," "In the Wood," Adelaide Proctor; "A Wreath of Flowers," given on this page.

Singing, "While the days are going by," page 133, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Address, Origin of the Flower Mission Department, the Meaning of the Day, the Life and Influence of Jennie Casseday.

Singing, Doxology, page 40, White Ribbon Hymnal.

Benediction.

Note: All flowers used in decorations should be sent to the hospitals or to the shut-in.

A Brief Sketch of Our Flower Mission.

By Lella M. Sewall.

So many times has this story, this beautiful story of the origin and growth of the Flower Mission, been told that it might now be almost called an old story, and yet the sweetness, the simplicity, the wonder of it all is refreshing even though it be repeated over and over again.

It was a Boston school teacher, whose heart prompted her "to carry some of the beauty and freshness of the green world into the stifled lives she saw about her," as she went each day from her home in the midst of beautiful trees, flowers and green lawns to her duties in the heart of the hot city. This noble thoughtful woman made such an impression in this busy, noisy, active world of ours, that some one was moved to tell the story, hoping others might be influenced by the portrayal of the Divine Love in the heart of one of God's children.

The story was told in one of the religious papers of the day and thus, in a city many miles away in the sunny southland, in her sick chamber, the eyes of another of God's children fell upon it and the words seemed to burn through her very soul. In the midst of her terrible affliction and intense pain (the result of an accident long before this time making her an invalid for life) as she was carrying her heavy cross with resignation and true nobleness, this story came as a sweet message direct from God. It was a ray of His bright sunlight, piercing the dark clouds about her and seemed like an uplift to her already pure soul.

She at once thought of others like herself, lying weary upon sick beds, of sorrow-stricken ones everywhere and of those behind prison bars in jails and almshouses. Immediately the idea flashed upon her mind that she might form a mission of flowers, get others to gather and distribute while she pointed out the way, and that some of God's words might go with the flowers of His creation in this mission of love. She instituted the text cards which were attached to each and every greeting; and so this beautiful work began and under her wise leadership grew far beyond her expectations.

In the midst of this wonderful work, our sainted leader, Frances E. Willard, at that time our National president, while visiting Louisville, Kentucky, to speak for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, called upon Jennie Casseday. Miss Willard was so impressed with it all, the work and the pale, sweet worker that, always quick to grasp anything for the advancement of the W. C. T. U., she at once suggested a Flower Mission department, and Jennie Casseday was made its first superintendent. This was the beginning, many years ago, of our work on this line.

Since then the Flower Mission has so extended its activities, that few are the local unions which do not take up the work, while many other charities have been added to the mission of the flowers. Truly any comfort or helpfulness that can be shown those who need a hand stretched out to them in His name, might be and is included in this blessed Flower Mission department. The number of earnest unselfish consecrated lives devoted to this work is scarcely to be counted.

A Wreath of Flowers.

By Six Girls and Leader.

LEADER: Hepaticas, emblems of hope. Reads, Song Sol. ii, 11, 12; Psalm xlii, 11.

No. 1. (With bouquet of hepaticas.)

"Ere the snow has all departed from the shaded hollow,
Ere the first glad piping of the robins
and the swallows,
Ere the brook has fairly riven all its crystal chains,
Or the south winds whisper of the advent of the Spring,
Heralding her coming over sunny hill
and plains,
Peep these welcome messengers,— what joy to us they bring.

"What a glorious mission theirs — with their 'witching graces
Lighting up the lonely woods! Bless their winsome faces!
Not Spring's harbingers alone, heaven-
sent spirits they;
Oh, to fearful hearts, to souls en-
wrapt in gloom and sorrow,
Just to be like them, the heralds of a brighter day.
Messengers of hope divine of a blissful morrow."

LEADER: Anemones, emblems of grace. Reads, II Peter, iii, 18.

No. 2. (With bouquet of anemones.)

"Reflected in the dreaming brook
I saw their winsome faces;
They brightened many a quiet nook
With artless wiles and graces.

"O daintiest blossoms of the spring
So sweetly shy and tender,
The happy birds their carols sing
Tribute to you to render.

"Fragrant and fair anemones
Haunting the lonely places,
Would I your pleasant arts could seize
And make my own your graces!"

LEADER: Mayflower, emblem of lowliness. Reads, Matt. xi, 29; I Peter iii, 3, 4; Phil. ii, 3.

No. 3. (With bouquet of mayflowers.)

"My little darling, have I not won thee
From thy safe covert on bleakest hillside
Where in thine innocence, humble and lonely,
Thou wast content mid the storms to abide.

"Give me, I pray, of thy heaven born beauty,
Beauty that blossoms in life and in heart,—
Blossoms in sweet words of blessing and duty,
Wearing a charm all unequalled by art."

LEADER: Apple blossoms, emblems of fruitfulness. Reads, John xv, 4, 8.

No. 4. (With handful of appleblossoms.)

"Dainty blossoms, appleblossoms,
Fair and fresh and pure and sweet
Gathered from the sunny orchard,
Where below on fairy feet

"Swing the pearly clover blossoms,
O'er the meadows green and lush,
Where is heard the spring birds' praises,
Song of robin and of thrush.

"Do you wonder that these blossoms
Are so sweet and fresh and bright?
Ah, they draw their rarest beauty
From the sun's rich warmth and light.

"There rich fruit will grow and ripen
All the summer through,
'Neath those heavenly influences—
Kindly sunshine, rain and dew."

LEADER: The Columbine, emblem of courage. Reads, Joshua i, 9. Psalm xxvii, 14.

No. 5. (With cluster of wild columbine.)

"Among the bleak and lonely hills
Her tender seeds were cast
Where 'neath the sun all day she thrills,
Or bends before the blast.

"Which here with fiercer might prevails;
Yet firmly rooted in
A deep rock-cleft she never quails;
She is 'resolved to win.'

"My soul, take courage when oppressed
By trials, grief or sin;
Firm in thy Rock-cleft thou are blest—
Thou, too, resolved to win."

LEADER: The Pansy, emblem of thoughts. Reads, Is. lv, 9. Psalms xl, 5; cxxxix, 17.

No. 6. (With handful of pansies.)

"Only a delicate blossom just peeping above the earth,
And thrilling with tender joy too solemn and deep for mirth;
One of God's beautiful thoughts that He strews the wide world through,
Beyond all man's designing, yet common as rain and dew.

"One of God's precious thoughts! O, what a joy to be
Hid in His sacred mind from boundless eternity!
A joy too sweet for woods,—to be sent from His hand above.
A herald of infinite hope, a thought of divinest love!

"This is your heritage, O children of the King!
Since He so cares for them, you in His love may sing.
They look up with trustful eye though
nestling in the sod;
But you, his human thoughts, are close to the heart of God."

The group unite in singing, "Jesus bids us shine."

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a retur of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek Mich.

Municipal & Government Bonds
The SAFEST SECURITIES obtainable. Write for List today.
HARRY B. POWELL & CO.,
WOODSTOCK - VERMONT.

TEACHERS WANTED.
WE ARE COMPELLED to have a few more qualified Teachers at once. More calls this year than ever before. SALARIES range from $300 to $3,000. Write at once. Schools supplied with teachers free of cost. Address with stamp, American Teachers' Association,
J. L. Graham, LL.D., Mgr., Memphis, Tenn.

MOTHERS Zemeto cures Bed Wetting; trial free ZEMETO CO., Sta. B, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

"SOCIAL PURITY" The Great Mothers' Book, $1.75

By PROF. & MRS. J. W. GIBSON in colaboration with DR. W. J. TRUITT, M. D., and other Noted Specialists.

GOOD ROAD

THE TWO PATHS

MORE COMMON SENSE HELP FOR PARENTS IN "SOCIAL PURITY" THAN ANY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.

What Will the Boy Become?

IT TELLS ALL ABOUT PROPER INFLUENCES BEFORE AND AFTER BIRTH. EVERY HOME SHOULD HAVE IT.

BAD ROAD

THE BEST ADVICE EVER GIVEN ON MATERNITY.

This is the volume endorsed by the Clergy and the Medical fraternity. Demanded everywhere by the best authorities.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S IDEAS

about matrimony are identical with the contents of this valuable work. Every library should contain a volume. There are about 450 large 7x9¾ inch pages, durably bound in cloth, and one of the important features is the Splendid Array of Practical and Original Illustrations.

Postpaid, $1.75. We send "SOCIAL PURITY" everywhere for $1.75 postpaid, and if after reading it you do not want it send it back and your money will be promptly refunded. You will keep it and recommend it to all your friends.

AGENTS WANTED. We never offered agents a better chance. Agents now are COINING MONEY. Many without experience make $10 a day. YOU CAN. Write for free outfit. Get request in early and hold territory. First come, first served. Write today.

J. L. NICHOLS & COMPANY
122 Main Street, NAPERVILLE, ILL.

We have more Good Books for Agents than any House in America.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson

The thrilling anti-cigaret story which has been running through our columns as a serial, will shortly be issued in Book form, illustrated

PRICE $1.00

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, CHICAGO

If You Desire

Authentic Information

...READ...

The Mormon Menace

BY

SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D., LL.D.

AND

HELEN FALLOWS, A.M.

Most Conclusive and Convincing

Price, postpaid, 25 cents

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION

CHICAGO.

May Magazines

The CENTURY gives first place to Arthur Schneider's story of his sixteen months' close connection with the Sultan of Morocco. The American artist was the instructor and daily companion of the sultan for more than a year, an intimacy never before permitted between an eastern despot and an American citizen. Following an introduction by Talcott Williams, Mr. Schneider tells of his arrival and reception in Morocco, his first meeting with and impression of the sultan, and the often laughable experiences with his odd pupil. Some of the many illustrations are reproductions of the royal student's work. Henry Loomis Nelson, in writing of "The Hampered Executive" says, "It is difficult for the ordinary citizen to understand why the President cannot accomplish any desire or affect any purpose which he may feel or upon which he may determine." From this text Mr. Nelson explains and defines the probabilities and limitations of the presidency. The second installment of Hermann Klein's modern musical celebrities includes delightfully intimate glimpses of Adelina Patti. Alice Katharine Fallows gives some excellent reasons why college girls should have the stimulus of athletic training. There is a Pa Gladen story among the fine fiction of the month.

The ATLANTIC commemorates the coming centenary of the poet Emerson with the illuminating article, "Emerson as a Religious Influence, by Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon. In presenting "The Evolution of a Trained Nurse," Mary Mass points out the rapid development of this so recent profession, traces the rise and progress of modern methods in handling disease, and discusses the duties, privileges, qualifications (and sometimes disqualifications) of the trained nurse. Discussing "The Mulatto Factor in Race Problem," Alfred H. Stone declares the existence and power of the mulatto already responsible and an accountable element in this troublesome problem. Prof. Hugo Munsterberg contributes an enlightening paper on the "St. Louis Congress of Arts and Sciences" as representing the serious thought of the twentieth century. J. T. Trowbridge gives delightful recollections of the latter days of Holmes, Longfellow and other Boston notables.

"Pittsburg; A City Ashamed," by Lincoln Steffens, author of "The Shame of Minneapolis," and "The Shamelessness of St. Louis," is given a prominent place in MCCLURE'S. It is the story of a citizens' party that broke through one ring into another, and shows a hopeful outcome, with the promise that something will be tried in Pittsburg to accomplish good government. "Waifs of the Street," by Ernest Poole, is a sad picture of the condition and character of street boys, whom the author pronounces "the most illiterate, the most dishonest, the most impure" of the juvenile class. Professor Simon Newcomb, of Johns Hopkins university, writes a powerful story, "The End of the World," which seems a plausible scientific prediction. It is strikingly illustrated by Henri Lanat, the famous French artist. Six well known authors maintain the reputation of this excellent magazine for bright, witty and refreshing short stories.

The REVIEW OF REVIEWS is primarily an exposition number. Frederick M. Crunden gives a history of the Louisiana Purchase as the world's greatest real estate speculation, and outlines the special features of the coming exposition. There are twenty accompanying illustrations. "St. Louis—A Strong Western City," is exhaustively presented in a well illustrated paper by William Flewellyn Saunders, and "The Significance of the Louisiana Purchase" is presented by Prof. Frederick J. Turner. George E. Hooker writes of "The German Municipal Exposition" to be held in Dresden from May 20 to September of the present year. Eight pages of this valuable magazine are given to "A Forecast of Great Gatherings," including the world's celebrations and anniversaries, foreign expositions and congresses, religious gatherings, conferences for social betterment, educational and professional meetings, summer schools and musical festivals.

ST NICHOLAS adds to its old English literature a bright, graphic account of a May day in 1359, entitled "In Chaucer's Youth." "A Family Measure Board," to record the heights of growing children, and their elders as well, will doubtless serve as a practical hint to scores of families, the tabulated evidence furnished by one of these boards is curious and interesting. The board shows that the daughter of the family grew more during one year of illness than during any other year; that between twelve and thirteen years of age, the girls grew faster than at any other time except during their first, second and third years; that boys shoot up most rapidly between fifteen and sixteen; that girls make a halt when fifteen; and that the little ones at one year old measure twenty-nine inches in height. Any ingenious boy by following the directions given can make one of these boards. The magazine is profusely illustrated and is brimful, as ever, with happy heartiness and entertainment.

A leading feature of SUCCESS is "Great Magazines and their Editors," by David Graham Phillips, presenting an interesting collection of pen pictures accompanied with numerous fine half-tone portraits. The editorial by Dr. Orison Swett Marsden, under the heading, "Gray Hairs Seeking Work," gives thoughtful consideration to a subject of widespread interest.

Among the good stories which PEARSON'S provides is one by Julia F. Deane, a frequent contributor to THE UNION SIGNAL. The subject, "A Modern Joan of Arc," deals with the recent strike among the children of one of Chicago's public schools. The fact that the author was personally acquainted with the youthful "ringleader", has given an added life and vim to her spirited recital of the occurrence.

LIPPINCOTT'S, in addition to its complete novel, publishes eight lively and varied short stories, also five poems of the springtime, by Bliss Carman. There are no heavy or instructive articles, a new departure of this magazine being to present only the amusing and enjoyable.

The usual departments of the HOUSEHOLD are of a high order, and its editorials are timely and pertinent. The Memorial Day season is given especial prominence. Hezekiah Butterworth contributes "In the Pilgrim Country," in which he emphasizes the need of another day to commemorate those devoted souls whose enterprise made this country possible. The article is beautifully illustrated.

The HOME SCIENCE MAGAZINE as a composite of "Motherhood" and the "American Kitchen Magazine" is a success. Its varied and beautifully illustrated pages are devoted to up-to-date solutions of the everyday knotty problems of practical and ethical import to housekeepers and to mothers.

Take a Trip

Over the Nickel Plate Road and be convinced of its superior train service. Solid through daily express trains between Chicago, Ft. Wayne, Findlay, Fostoria, Erie, Buffalo, New York City and Boston. American Club Meals, ranging in price from 35c. to $1.00, served in Nickel Plate dining-cars; also service a la carte. Rates always the lowest. No excess fare charged on any train on the Nickel Plate Road. Chicago depot, Harrison St. and Fifth Ave. City Ticket Offices, 111 Adams St. and Auditorium Annex. John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams St Room 298, Chicago. 'Phone Central 2057.

Doesn't Soil A White Vest.

The Lackawanna route from Chicago to New York has been making the announcement that one might travel the whole length of its road and not soil a white vest. The writer tried this the other day, and sure enough the trip on the Lackawanna Limited left his linen in better condition than it would have been after a day's running about in the city. The value of such service to ladies is obvious. This unique service is made possible because hard coal is used exclusively in the passenger service. It is useless to speak of the scenery of the mountains as we traverse them all day—such a relief from the dull monotony of the flat country and its wearisome sameness. It's the luxury of travel.—The Evangelist.

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 13.

A Rich Woman

If you had the value of the clothes rubbed to pieces yearly in the wash, you'd roll in wealth. Millions worth of clothing are thrown away yearly, worn out by washing. Save your part anyway. Wash with Pearline; it does away with the rubbing; everything washed with Pearline lasts much longer. PEARLINE washing is easy, quick, economical. 695

Don't Drudge—Use Pearline

Why Suffer Longer

with superfluous flesh since the problem of its scientific treatment and cure has been solved by the leading and original Obesity Specialist of America, Dr. O. W. F. Snyder, of Chicago? See advertisement on page 11.

Have you ever attended a

National W.C.T.U. Convention

Here is YOUR opportunity to be present at the next one, which will be held in CINCINNATI, November 13-20, 1903.

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure New subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once. When writing be sure to mention the name of your nearest railroad station.

Circulation Department

Union Signal

184 La Salle Street

CHICAGO

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year ..... $ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address 1.00
100 of this issue ..... .50

Subject for May Reading,

Unfermented Sacramental Wine

By Mrs. Lillian F. Lewis.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.

(Continued from page 6.)

world that utterly despicable and hopeless thing—a secret drinker, in the guise of an advocate of total abstinence. Despise him if you will. Despise him as I do," said Hugh, in the midst of manifest sensation, "but abstainers and non-abstainers alike, let us take warning by his fate."

He quickly stepped from the truck as he spoke, and in the hush that accompanied Enoch's fervent prayer, his first conscious thought was an agonized cry to God for that unhappy victim of drink; his second the conviction that he, Hugh Brotherton, had once more made his mark; his third a suspicion that he had, very considerably, overstated his case. For the man of whom he spoke was a weak, presumptuous fool—ay, and a liar as well—but, as yet, he was by no means given over hopelessly to drink. However, he left the story upon the minds of his hearers as it stood. The men returned to their work obviously impressed, and even Sam Widgery went out of his way to be civil to Hugh.

"That is the sort of thing that tells with these men," said the vicar to his wife. "The humanity of it appeals to them; and rightly, too. I shouldn't wonder if that is what has been weighing upon Brotherton of late."

"I feel sure of it," said Mrs. Boyd softly.

Before they started, Mrs. Langley took an opportunity of thanking the curate warmly, while Rose Glyn stood by with tears very near to her eyes.

"I can sympathize with that poor fellow; I can, indeed," said Mrs. Langley earnestly. "Even in his present hypocrisy, I can feel for him. It is so dreadfully easy to live two different lives, and, to a certain extent, to mean them both. I hope that, if you should ever have the opportunity, and feel disposed to use it, you will tell that man that there was one who, when she heard the facts of his sad story, felt chiefly sorry for him."

"Should the opportunity arise, I will certainly tell him," said Hugh, much moved.

"He will be glad to know."

On the way home Mrs. Langley recovered her usual tone so far as to rally Miss Glyn on what she was pleased to style her "awe-stricken demeanor," but she was herself still under the spell of Hugh's impassioned eloquence when she gave a graphic description of the scene to her brother the next morning.

"Where does that entirely admirable young man get his experience? The manner in which he described—no, he didn't describe it—the manner in which he conveyed to one's mind the remorse of the—the wrongdoer was realistic in the extreme."

"Perhaps there's a drunkard in the family," said the doctor brutally. "Another cup of tea, please."

Was it possible that, after some touching up, the young ass had been making clerical "copy" out of his own little accident? It was worse than he would have expected, even of him.

There was a distinct pause before Mrs. Langley replied to the spoken comment.

"How nice of you to suggest that explanation!" She spoke with a dangerous sweetness, but Dr. Mann proceeded with his breakfast unmoved.

(To be Continued.)

"Social Purity."

A new book entitled "Social Purity, or the Life of the Home and Nation," just issued from the press of J. L. Nichols & Co., Naperville, Ill., discusses the above and many other similar questions. To say that the book is intensely interesting and instructive is putting it in a mild form.

President Roosevelt recently sounded the alarm in speaking of race suicide, and it is to be hoped that our people will begin to think seriously along these lines. Such books as these should be widely read, and we hope "Social Purity" will find its way into the hands of thousands of parents.

The chapters on Heredity and Prenatal Influences are especially valuable. "Every child has a right to be well born" seems to be the keynote in chapters like the following: Family Traits, Inheritance of Noted People, Blood-Marks of Crime, Heredity versus Environment, Prenatal Influences, Like Parents Like Children, Blood Will Tell, Preparation for Parenthood, etc. That too much ignorance exists on subjects like these cannot be denied. The appearance of the book is a hopeful sign—it is proof that there are those who are making a deep study of these most vital social problems, and certainly the authors of "Social Purity" are to be commended for the noble task they have here undertaken. The book is written by Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Gibson, Dr. M. J. Truitt and other noted specialists. Retail price in cloth, postpaid, $1.75.

Genevan Memories.

By Sarah A. McClees.

DURING the month of September, 1872, after five months' travel in European countries, it was an unspeakable pleasure to arrive at the famous city of Geneva, for here in Switzerland, was a sister republic with hosts of American visitors, all breathing an atmosphere of political liberty.

The acme of this spirit of exultation was reached, when, under guidance of our American consul, we were escorted to a beautiful home on the lake, from the roof of which floated in the breeze a large flag of our beloved land.

The ladies who presided over this attractive pension were French-Swiss. Their highest ambition was to entertain American families, that they might become familiar with the English language. Their guest of honor at that time,it was proudly stated, was no less a distinguished personage than the Hon. Caleb Cushing. This gentleman belonged to the tribunal of arbitration for the settlement of the "Alabama Claims." This great controversy, which had been pending, for so many years, between Great Britain and the United States, had just reached its final settlement through the splendid diplomacy and wise actions of this board of arbitrators, who had been assembled in Geneva, and had received such welcome hospitality from its citizens. We were glad to share in the joy on that notable day, the 14th of September, when their labors were closed at the Hotel de Ville by shouts of the people and salvos of artillery.

Says the historian of this grand spectacle: "It is impossible that any one of the persons present on that occasion should ever lose the impression of the moral grandeur of the scene, where the actual rendition of arbitral judgment on the controverted claims bore witness to the generous magnanimity of two of the nations of the world, in resorting to peaceful reason as the arbiter of grave national differences, in the place of indulging in baneful resentments or vulgar ambitions of war."

Is it not significant and appropriate that the greatest body of women in the world who are devoted to the sacred principles of peace and arbitration, should find in this neutral European city, a place to expand its lofty sentiments of good-will to all mankind?

Another memorable coincidence is the fact of the organization, in Geneva, of a society for "Succor of the Wounded," by the great General Dufour, who led the Swiss forces in the war between Germany and France. "Men could not fail to note the coincidence when they saw this great tribunal of arbitration organized under the auspices of the victorious commander of our own Union forces (General Grant), as the International Commission for the Succor of the Wounded had been under the auspices of the veteran General Defour. Its symbol of the Red Cross had been the harbinger of relief to many a suffering victim of battle."

We white-ribboners must take heart, therefore, in all our strenuous efforts to cause wars to cease on the earth, by these illustrious examples put forth by our military and civil authorities, not only to lighten the evils of war, but to overcome the necessity for such conflicts among nations by amicable treaties on the part of governments.

My reminiscences of Geneva would be incomplete without notice of the historian of the reformation, Rev. Merle d'Aubigrne, who closed his eventful life there, during our stay, at the ripe age of eighty-four years. He was owner of the beautiful residence occupied by our hostesses, and he wrote his famous book in the room where we spent two happy months. This room overlooked a spacious flower garden, where flourished a magnificent elm tree, under whose shade the reverend gentleman enjoyed his literary pursuits.

The delights of a sojourn in the most beautiful city of Switzerland can scarcely be realized by those who are not familiar with its picturesque scenery, the sublimity of its mountains and the indescribable beauty of its rivers and lakes.

Oakland, Cal.

A Slumber Robe.

SHE was a dear, quaint old lady, whose days were full of kindness and whose hands were seldom idle. She was showing some treasures of handiwork, and among other things brought out a soft, silken quilt, daintly stitched and finished. We exclaimed at its beauty, and then began slowly to recognize its component parts.

"Why, auntie, you did not make this whole pretty slumber-robe out of just those odds and ends of silk you were gathering?"

She nodded and laughed.

"There are bits enough in the world, child, to make almost any thing we want,if only we are willing to put them together," she said. "The reason for most of our doings-without is, that we want our material all in one piece—yards and yards of it—so that we can lay on what pattern we like, and cut it out easily. But it doesn't come that way usually. Strength, leisure, money, education—we seldom get any of them in the lengths we want, but putting the bits together will work wonders, if only we learn how to do it. 'Slumber-robe?' Is that the new name for this kind of quilt? Well, the 'happiness-robe' is made in the same way, out of the bright little odds and ends which come to us daily."—Forward.

THERE seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance and carry out the work of your Society than by placing on the streets of our cities and towns. By so doing you furnish water not only to man, but to horse and dog as well. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES furnished gratis upon application, and SPECIAL PRICES given to all branches of temperance work.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

J. W. FISKE IRON WORKS, 39-41 Park pl., N. Y.

ENLARGED AND ILLUSTRATED

The Crusader Monthly

Formerly the Young Crusader.

A Delightful Magazine for Young People

ATTRACTIVE
ENTERTAINING
INSTRUCTIVE

Temperance, anti-cigaret and other live issues of the day; bright stories and illustrated articles by authors of note; puzzles, story and other prize contests make such a magazine as is eagerly welcomed by all young people.

Subscription price, 25 cents per year. Write us for sample copy.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Ass'n
CHICAGO

THE NORTH-WESTERN LINE

Colorado

is easily reached by the fast train service of the Chicago, Union Pacific and North-Western Line.

The Colorado Special

fast daily train, one night to Denver from Chicago and the Central States (only two nights en route from the Atlantic seaboard), leaves Chicago daily 6.30 p. m. Buffet-library cars, drawing-room sleeping cars, dining cars (a la carte service), free chair cars and day coaches through without change.

A second daily train, similarly equipped, leaves Chicago 11.30 p. m. Personally conducted excursions in tourist sleeping cars.

All agents sell tickets via this route.
Write for particulars to W. B. KNISKERN, Passenger Traffic Manager, C. & N.-W. Ry., Chicago.

Chicago, Union Pacific and North-Western Line

CSS

UNION PACIFIC THE OVERLAND ROUTE WORLD'S PICTORIAL LINE.

"Omittance is No Quittance."—Shakespeare.
'Tis Quittance of hair if Omittance of

CRANITONIC HAIR AND SCALP FOOD

PRICES.
Three Sizes, One, Two, and Five Dollar Bottles, Sent on Order, Express Prepaid, Six One Dollar Bottles for Five Dollars, Express Prepaid.

Trial Bottle 10c. By Mail Only Stamps Or Silver

Non-Alcoholic and Absolutely Pure

Remember It

Makes Hair Grow, Prevents and Stops Hair Falling, Prevents and Cures Dandruff, Prevents and Cures Itching, and ALL Scalp Irritation and Itching, Is Free from Grease and Sediment, Non-Alcoholic, No "Shake the Bottle," The Modern Scientific Hair Dressing, Absolutely Pure and Non-Alcoholic.

Free Hair-Food

To Enable the Public to Observe its Absolute Purity and Learn of its Possibilities, a Free Sample Size Bottle will be sent by mail, postpaid, to all who send name and complete address, and Ten Cents in stamps or silver to pay postage.

HAIR that is Falling, Turning Gray, Losing its Lustre, or in other ways changing its appearance from the way nature first made it, IS DYING. Prevent the Death of your Hair by giving it and Feeding it into Life and Strength. Sold by Dealers. $1, $2, and $5 bottle.

CRANITONIC HAIR AND SCALP FOOD

Are You in Trouble?

All who may have Neglected their hair, or have any Serious hair or scalp Trouble, and are Alarmed or Worried Because They have Used or Done the Wrong Thing and Do Not Know What To Do, are Recomended to Write our MEDICAL AND SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT, Conducted by a Board of Hair and Scalp Specialists.

Please Send by Mail a few hairs pulled from the head, or a sample from the daily combings, for Microscopical Examination, and our Medical Board will Diagnose your case and send you by mail a full Report, FREE. Consultation, Microscopic Examination, and Diagnosis ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Please call on or write to

CRANITONIC HAIR-FOOD CO.

(Incorporated under the Laws of the State of New York.)

526 West Broadway, New York City.

OZOMULSION is NOT a BIRD—it's a BOTTLE—yet, upon silent wings it carries the Olive Branch of PEACE to suffering humanity. Furthermore, OZOMULSION is making an earnest ENDEAVOR to persuade all who are ill to accept a FREE BOTTLE for their OWN great good.

Work Without Resting

is the gigantic feat performed by every American man, woman, and child. An inevitable penalty follows work with overexertion.

Nerve Force Exhaustion

This is the keynote of all disease, and is best repaired by OZOMULSION. Force and energy are required by every one. Physical force and mental energy. The deficient are spurned, or, equally depressing, pitied by society. The only real king is the man with perfect health—the envy of every one, the pride of all. What is this energy and this force that gives us the power to live? How can this mysterious force be obtained? These are the vital questions. Force is the transference of energy from one source to some other body, and the only agent capable of transferring inexhaustible energy is OZOMULSION.

You need it. We all need it. Energy to be appreciated by the body must be capable of absorption by the individual tissue cell. Professor Hueppe, of Germany, states: "To have perfect bodily health one must have perfect cell life." This is the duty of OZOMULSION.

The man who buys tonics and elixirs pours good money into unfathomable wells.

The only tonic a man needs to resist disease is food.

The only concentrated food capable of combating disease is OZOMULSION.

Irritate the sensitive cells which absorb food and you irritate the complex mechanism of bodily strength. The requirement of health is preservation of the small unseen cells which are so closely associated with absorption of nutrition from the intestinal canal. OZOMULSION is THE emulsion "Par Excellence" and peculiarly prepared for speedy absorption by the individual cells of the mucous membrane of the stomach and bowels. Energy is quickly transferred from pure cod liver oil. Power is maintained and re-enforced more quickly through Ozomulsion than by any other food medium. Reduction of power in the human system means liability to

Consumption

This is the inevitable reward of the toiler who

Works Without Resting

Store up resistance in the tissues, that invasion of the body by disease germs will be impossible.

The Food from Fats for the Body in Need.

OZOMULSION

Is the Cod Liver Oil Emulsion "Par Excellence" that Physicians Use in their families and Prescribe in their Hospital and Private Practice, and Druggists sell in Large Bottles, Weighing Over Two Pounds, for One Dollar.

For Free SAMPLE by Mail write, giving your name and complete address (with street and number), and inclose Ten Cents in Stamps or Silver to Pay Postage.

OZOMULSION-FOOD CO.
LABORATORIES,
96 and 98 Pine Street, New York.

Mention The Union Signal.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 21. Issued Weekly.

CHICAGO, MAY 21, 1903.

Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Headquarters and Public Rest Room of the Small Union at Boulder Creek, California. Recently Dedicated with the "Burning of the Mortgage." See Page 3.

CONTENTS

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS.....2-3

CONTRIBUTED:

The Wealth of Health. By David Paulson, M. D.—The Attitude of Capital. By Mrs. Isabella Webb Parks..... 4

Ohio, the Crusade State—Greetings from Mother Thompson to the National Convention..... 5

Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By France: Home.. 6

THE SENIOR L. T. L.:

Notes—Convention Calendar—Suggested Program for June Meetings—How Senior L.T.L.'s Can Gather Miner's Ghildren into the L. T. L. and the Sunday Schools—Timely Hints—Introduction of L. T. L. County Presidents..... 7

EDITORIAL:

The Double Standard—British or American Workman—A Bill of Particulars—Kansas Women and Resubmission..... 8

Personal Mention—Toward the Sunrising..... 9

EXPERIENCE CORNER..... 9

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS..... 10

W. C. T. U. NOTES.....11-12

THE LOCAL UNION..... 13

AN APPRECIATION..... 14

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS..... 15

SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES..... 16

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

Anti-Cigaret Legislation in Canada.

Aroused Public Sentiment—A Problem Presented.

Elizabeth Griswold Waycott, Correspondent.

MONTREAL, Canada, May 18.—The bill introduced by Mr. Robert Bickerdike in Parliament to prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarets, was given on April 30 its first reading. All credit to the women of the W. C. T. U. who have fought the battle so far, and can be counted on to pursue the agitation until some effective legislation is adopted.

In 1900 the sale of cigarets in Canada was 110,000,000; last year, 132,000,000. Many prominent Canadian physicians have condemned the cigarets as injurious; among the list of names are some of the best known medical men in the Dominion. The Ontario school inspectors have all protested against the cigaret habit, and the increase of sales is viewed with alarm.

One member said: "I would like it made easy for our boys to do right and harder for them to do wrong. The women of Canada deserve all praise for the attention they have drawn to the cigaret habit." Another member expressed his opinion "that the existing provincial laws against juvenile cigaret smoking are ineffective. I will support this resolution because it seems to me the only possible way of arresting the evil."

Another member, a physician of national fame, said: "Parliament is indebted to Mr. Bickerdike for bringing this matter up. The injury to youths from cigaret smoking is indisputable. It checks physical development and has an injurious effect on mind and memory." The future readings of the bill are awaited with interest.

The temperance people of Ontario are very much in earnest just now. If anybody allowed himself to believe that they would be heard from no more after failing to accomplish the task set in the matter of the referendum of last December, such an one has probably by this time been thoroughly undeceived. So far from being discouraged and quiescent, the temperance people are actually most hopeful and more insistent than ever. They have with practical unanimity agreed to present to the political parties for solution a politico-socio-mathematical problem that might be expressed thus: If 212,000 votes would have entitled us to a prohibitory enactment, what are we entitled to on a vote of 195,000? They consider, on their own calculation, that they are entitled to have treating stopped at bars, an end of drinking at the clubs, and approximately no more sale of liquor under shop license.

A new city charter for Montreal was threatened with a disgraceful amendment which would regulate vice. The first protest came from the County W. C. T. U. who waited on the Ministerial Association. A deputation of these gentlemen went to Quebec and did grand work. The amendment was eliminated.

A member of the city council of Montreal has a motion that "Council shall confer with Federal authorities with the object of inserting a clause in the Criminal Code of Canada, prohibiting boys and girls, apparently under sixteen years of age, to enter any theater, circus, museum, dancing or concert hall, or any part of said building or ground, considered morally dangerous, unless accompanied by one of their parents, or authorized guardians, the latter not to be, himself, under 21 years of age; and to enact that any proprietor, lessee, or employe of any of the above-named places, contravening the same, shall be liable to a penalty fixed by the said Federal authorities." The W. C. T. U. will give its heartiest support to this measure.

Arkansas Celebrates Its Silver Anniversary.

An Enthusiastic Convention—Miss Willard's Picture in the Public School.

Mrs. Jennie Carr Pittman, Correspondent.

PRESCOTT, Ark., May 11.—The silver convention of the Arkansas W. C. T. U. has just closed its sessions in Camden. There seemed to be unbounded enthusiasm in the heart of every delegate and each member of the local union. We had with us that sweet-spirited soul, Mrs. Mary Jewett Telford, of Tennessee, who was indeed very helpful.

The report of the corresponding secretary indicated an increase in the work along many lines, and the treasurer's report showed that we know how to work within our bounds, but oh! how we need more money to prosecute the work. Searcy union won the state banner for the greatest per cent gain in membership. Morvillton won the L. T. L. banner for best work done in this department.

There was a gold and grand gold medal contest held in the opera house, with a fine attendance. The winners of the medals were Miss Eunice Gardenhire, of Camden, and little Elsie Bowman, of Little Rock. This last named girl won the gold medal at last convention.

There are only two Y organizations in the state, and yet we greatly need the help of the bright girls all over Arkansas who are so willing and anxious to work. All of the officers were re-elected, and some changes were made in the superintendents of departments.

Camden union is blessed with having the prayers, the love and the sympathy of one long in the warfare, dear Mother Marshall, who has passed her ninetieth birthday. Her mind is clear and her judgment excellent. It was delightful to see how she appreciated the greetings tendered her by the convention, and hear her say: "Oh! I am so glad you women are taking up this blessed work. God bless you."

We left, in the public school, as an enduring remembrance of our convention, a handsome picture of Miss Willard. The principal of the school received it with a very appreciative speech.

Maine Answers the Challenge from Illinois.

Has a White Ribboner 102 Years Old—Rev. Bisbee in the Field.

Special Correspondence.

PORTLAND, Me., May 18.—Hancock county, Maine, has a member 102 years old. She takes an active interest in the work and is more intelligent concerning it than many of our younger women.

Rev. A. S. Bisbee, who has been prominently connected with prohibitory law enforcement in Cumberland county, has recently been giving some very effective addresses on "Prohibition and Law Enforcement," in various sections of Maine.

Hon. Frank L. Dingley, editor of "The Lewiston Journal," a leading paper in Maine, in speaking of Mr. Bisbee says: "Republicans, Democrats, third party men, scholars, students, all who believe in good government have recognized in Deputy Bisbee a stalwart friend of the statutes whose back could not be broken by silver mines nor by gold of standard fineness."

Mr. Bisbee is to make some addresses in the West and wherever he goes he will advance the interests of the temperance cause.

Pennsylvania's Efficient County Presidents—Sucessful Meetings—Department Work.

H. Frances Jones, Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 18.—We count ourselves favored in having a corps of up-to-date county presidents. Mifflin county, with Mrs. Emma B. Foster and her efficient staff, has recently completed a series of successful meetings. They opened with a parlor meeting, where an interesting program was carried out, members secured and money added to the treasury.

The parlor meeting was followed by several public meetings, at which our dear Syrian sister, Madame Layyah Barakat, was the speaker. Success crowned each service, appreciative audiences greeted her, seventeen new members were gained and another meeting will follow for organization in another place, the outcome of Madame Barakat's efforts.

Bucks county held its semi-annual convention at New Hope, April 11, with a fine program. Mrs. Emma D. Eyre, the county president, and her staunch co-workers are "zealous in every good word and work." The reports were encouraging, and the address of the president was received with appreciation. Among the many pleasing features was the presentation of the Temperance Light Bearer banner by the publisher of "The Bulletin," Mrs. Hauck, in the name of Mrs. Henton, state superintendent of T. L. B.'s. Mrs. Hauck was delighted to receive so many subscriptions to "The Bulletin," and we are sure THE UNION SIGNAL had a share also in this part of the program.

The workers were all glad to have Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis with them. An appreciative audience greeted her and each carried away food for thought.

We are proud to count two state superintendents from Bucks county, Miss Elizabeth Lloyd, S. T. I. department, and Mrs. Esther Linton Graham, Flower Mission department. Both are busy in promoting the interests of their departments.

Special attention has been given recently to work in the S. T. I. department. A reply to the criticisms in the "Pennsylvania Medical Journal" upon the indorsed physiologies, entitled "Science the Arbiter," has been sent to the physicians, editors and school officials, as well as our unions and superintendents, to the number of 10,500 copies. A very instructive and entertaining program has been arranged by Miss Lloyd for a meeting to bring this subject before the people.

The Y's Rally in West Washington.

Margaret B. Platt, Correspondent.

COLUMBIA CITY Wash., May 11.—Miss Hollister closes her tour in our state this week. I think her work has been eminently satisfactory. She spoke to the Seattle High School, and two other Seattle schools last Monday and, to use the words of the one who accompanied her, "she captured all, including the principals." Her addresses have been very highly spoken of and every one has been charmed with her personally.

Monday night we had a Y rally at the First Baptist Church in Seattle. There was quite a large attendance from Ballard, Fremont, Columbia and Rainier Y's. The state Y secretary, Miss Ansorge, and the county Y secretary, Miss Stella Tyler, presided jointly and Miss Hollister gave the principal address. The meeting was a pronounced success.

Tuesday afternoon the W's had a rally at the same place, addressed by Miss Hollister and Miss Ansorge. A good attendance, refreshments, a social hour, to meet Miss Hollister, and an informal discussion of W. C. T. U. matters made it a most pleasant and helpful occasion.

Union Signal Day in Greencastle, Indiana—Pleasant Social Functions—University Students Addressed.

Rev. A. T. Riley, Correspondent.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., May 18.—The past week was one of great interest and profit to the members and friends of our local union. We had the great pleasure of having with us Mrs. Cornelia T. Jewett, the managing editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, who, on learning that we were to observe "UNION SIGNAL Day" at our regular meeting, kindly consented to leave her office duties and spend a few days with us.

Our meeting was held on Tuesday evening at Elmwood Place, the beautiful and spacious home of Professor and Mrs. J. B. DeMotte. Mrs. Jewett gave a very interesting talk on "The Active Management of the Official Organ," and Mrs. Florence Martin read an excellent paper on "The Woman's Temperance Publishing Association." Sketches of Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Fry and Mrs. Stevenson, of the editorial staff, were given by Mesdames Riley, Doddridge and Brady. Miss Elsie Wood, a returned missionary, spoke on the subject, "How THE UNION SIGNAL Sets Ideals for the Women of the World," illustrating her talk by some of her experiences in Peru, South America. At the close of the program refreshments were served by several young folks, comprising the entertainment committee of the W. C. T. U.

A trip of ten miles to Mt. Meridian, a popular local resort, was made on Wednesday evening, in honor of Mrs. Jewett. Quite a number of white-ribboners went, and also provided a hay ride to the same place for the boys and girls of the entertainment committee. Thirty-six people sat down to a bountiful supper at the Half-Way House. After supper there was a "feast of reason and flow of soul."

Many of the white-ribboners and their friends called on Mrs. Jewett at "Rosabower," the beautiful home of Mrs. McWhirter, on Thursday afternoon.

By invitation of President Gobin, of De Pauw University, Mrs. Jewett made a short address to the students on Friday. She spoke beautifully to the young women concerning their influence and the standard they set in society, and her address was an inspiration to all. Mrs. Jewett, by her attractive personality and the fine distinctions made in the presentation of her subjects, made a most pleasing impression upon the university students and the people of the classic town of Greencastle.

Mississippi Holds a Special Convention.

Co-Operation for Law Against Child Labor—Officers Re-Elected.

Miss M. L. Montgomery, Correspondent.

MERIDIAN, Miss., May 18.—A special session of the Mississippi W. C. T. U. Convention was held May 5, in Jackson, the state capital. The attendance for a special session was good. Every officer was present and the interest was greatly heightened by the aid and inspiration which came from the presence of the National recording secretary, Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman.

The most important business of the convention was a change in the constitution, providing that the annual convention shall be held in October or November, as determined by the convention or by the general officers. It was voted unanimously to invite the National W. C. T. U. to hold the annual convention of 1904 on Mississippi soil.

Mrs. Mary Howe, secretary of the King's Daughters of Mississippi, and daughter of the lamented Bishop Thompson of the Protestant Episcopal church of this state, was presented. Mrs. Howe spoke in behalf of the co-operation of the W. C. T. U. and other woman's organizations in introducing at the next legislature a bill prohibiting child labor in factories in the state. To this end she urged that a delegate be sent to the annual meeting of the King's Daughters, convening in Vicksburg May 13. The convention had already resolved to work for such a measure, fixing the prohibitory age at fourteen years, and Mrs. Howe's invitation was accepted and the president, Mrs. H. B. Kells, appointed to represent the Mississippi W. C. T. U.

A resolution was passed appealing to the legislature to submit an amendment to the constitution providing for constitutional prohibition.

The following delegates to the National convention were elected: Mesdames M. B. Curlee, Corinth; M. B. Longino and L. F. Ware, of Jackson; Annie E. Harper, Fayette.

The officers of the union were re-elected as follows: Mrs. H. B. Kells, president; Mrs. M. B. Longino, vice-president; Mrs. Clara C. Cox, recording secretary; Mrs. E. W. Featherston, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ella Stanley, treasurer.

Mrs. S. F. Clarke, the Mississippi delegate to the World's W. C. T. U. convention, sailed from New York with the official party.

The short session of the convention closed with an eloquent address by Mrs. Hoffman. The hospitality of the Jackson people was unfailing, as it ever has been.

An Anniversary Social.

Silver Milestone of the First Virginia Union—Notable Members.

Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, Correspondent.

LINCOLN, Va., May 18.—May 4 the Lincoln W. C. T. U., the first union organized in the Old Dominion, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. The union was organized by Mother Stewart and has done much in these twenty-five years to advance the work of the state.

The social was held at the home of the local president, with about seventy members and friends present. One feature of the program was a most interesting letter of reminiscences, written by Mrs. Phineas Janney, who was president for nine years. She has recently returned to the neighborhood after an absence of several years, and the union is expecting to be benefited by her presence. Greetings were read from Mrs. Stevens, Miss Anna Gordon, Miss Elizabeth Gordon, the editor of the state paper, and from the county president. A most enjoyable evening was spent and the union is more determined than ever to press on and on though its members now live in a "dry" county.

There was but seven or eight charter members. Of these but two are now with us. Nearly all have passed from works to reward. The only one of these present last evening was Mrs. Daniel Hoge, who conducted the devotional exercises. She has been the Evangelistic superintendent for many years. The other charter member who still is spared to us is Mrs. Ellen J. Smith, the Literature superintendent. Mrs. R. Alice Brown has long been the faithful treasurer. She is also state and county superintendent of Non-Alcoholic Medication. In this department she is arousing interest in different sections of the state. The membership of the union is now over forty, and it is a country W. C. T. U.

MRS. R. ALICE BROWN.

MRS. HOWARD M. HOGE
State President.

MRS. DANIEL J. HOGE.

Encouraging Outlook in Illinois.

Successful Institutes—The Local Option Bill.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 18.—Illinois is highly favored in having as institute workers Mrs. Hattie Brand, corresponding secretary of Indiana, and Miss Frances Ensign, who occupies the same official position in Ohio. These workers are much appreciated. The reciprocity practiced by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is to our advantage, as it has given us the brightest and best from these states.

Local elections are now over and the results very encouraging. Our prohibition area has been increased, and in some cases where the issue was not the license question, a better officiary, looking to the enforcement of law, has been secured.

There never was a time when the outlook in the state was better than today. A larger number of unions have been organized than any previous year, and members are continually being added. While all this is true, our law-makers at the state capital have not given us the best satisfaction. Bills in which we were interested have been voted down regardless of home interests. The local option bill was favorably reported from the committee, but was kept back on the calendar until too late for action.

While it is true that women cannot by vote induce these men who have so disappointed us to remain at home in future, we can and will keep them in memory. There is an ever-increasing number of independent voters. Many of them are members of churches that petitioned for the passage of the local option bill, and these will be heard from later.

Mrs. Hoffman in Mississippi.

Mrs. Harriet B. Kells, Correspondent.

JACKSON, Miss., May 19.—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman has just completed a four-weeks' engagement in Mississippi. She filled two evenings in Jackson, and had a great Sunday at Hermonville under the direction of the Baptist church. Rev. E. S. P'Pool, the pastor, a remarkably fine, progressive young man, of whom the world will hear more. She had another notable Sunday at Hattiesburg, where she made a profound impression, and spoke with such effect at a Sunday school convention of 300 delegates that the presiding elder of the Sea-shore district, which covers nine counties, urged every minister under his charge to open his church to her. Mrs. Hoffman has agreed to return in October to help in the constitutional amendment campaign. She organized two new unions and reorganized one. She has a great brain, a great soul and a fire-tipped tongue, with a transforming energy that moves to conquer. She is now at Yazoo City by the invitation of the Civic Order League, that a few days ago turned one thousand gallons of blind-tiger liquors into the streets.

MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN.

Good News From California.

Convention Happenings—A Dramatic Incident.

Mrs. Dorcas J. Spencer, Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 18.—Mrs. Franc Lee, of Oakland, is our state superintendent of School Savings Banks. By way of bringing the subject before an appreciative audience she arranged for its discussion by the Human Interest Club, and had it so well worked up that nearly all the members were ready with some contribution on the subject of "Economy and thrift." Mrs. Dorcas Spencer opened the subject and was followed by several educators, aggregating a considerable fund of information on the subject. The city board of education was invited to be present.

MRS. FRANC LEE.

Santa Clara county has just held a brilliant convention. Morgan Hill is a very small town and the members of the union are scattered on the farms for miles around, so the problem of entertaining a convention called for special plans. One of the churches was in use for the convention, and another kindly lent its rooms for entertainment. Beds were placed in the parlor and the Sunday-school room and lunches served in another room; and all agreed that a convention in a little town was a big thing. This one closed with a diamond medal contest, in the best of style.

